Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

NOV -9 1949
©CIB 218375

My Plans for Gable" by CLARK GABLE

modern screen

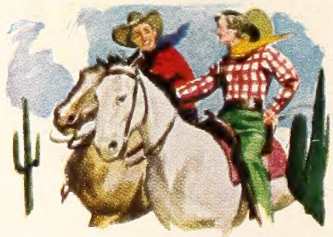
MAGAZINE • A BELL MAGAZINE • MAGAZINE

Dec 15¢

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SERIAL RECORD
NOV 23 1949

Jane Powell

True! Your First Cake of Camay brings a Softer, Lovelier Skin!



MRS. B. MARSHALL WOMAC
the former Carolyn Lucretia Moore of New York Portrait painted by Warwick

Beauty's a lovely complexion! Good looks are a soft, clear skin! Yes, and your first cake of Camay can make your skin smoother and lovelier—if you'll give up careless cleansing—go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay care on a large group of women with different types of skin. Almost all these women won lovelier complexions, each with her first cake of Camay. Follow directions on the wrapper—you'll be more attractive, too!

TEXAN TAKES CAMAY BRIDE!

Carolyn had a host of admirers before Bill took charge. But from their first dancing date together, no one else counted. Carolyn fell for Bill's easy Texas drawl—and he couldn't resist her Camay complexion!

The eyes of Texas were all on Carolyn, as she and Bill honeymooned in the Lone Star State. A skin that's soft and glamorous is a magnet for admiring glances! Go on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet and see how much lovelier your complexion can be.

Camay THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

When I was filming "Mrs. Mike", we actually used real snow on the sets. While the rest of the country was sweltering in summer heat, I spent day after frostbitten day working in machine-made snow drifts at sub-freezing temperatures...

In scenes like this, with Dick Powell, my hands froze...

In another scene, they were in soapy water for hours...

But Jergens Lotion kept my hands from chapping...

Made them soft and lovely for romantic close-ups...

A liquid, Jergens is quickly absorbed by thirsty skin...

CAN YOUR HAND LOTION PASS THIS FILM TEST?

To soften, a lotion should be absorbed by the upper layers of the skin. Water won't "bead" on hand smoothed with Jergens Lotion (left hand). It contains quickly-absorbed ingredients doctors recommend, no heavy oils that merely coat skin with oily film (right hand).

Prove it yourself by making the test described above...

Discover why Jergens Lotion is my beauty secret...

Jergens Lotion

used by more women than any other hand care in the world

still 10¢ to $1 plus tax

And is used in Hollywood 7 to 1 over other hand cares.

NOW! PROOF THAT BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

NOW! Proof that always brushing teeth with Colgate's right after eating helps stop tooth decay before it starts! Proof—based on hundreds of case histories, two years of continuous research at leading universities—the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay.

Under the direction of eminent dental authorities, one group of college men and women always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating—while another group followed their usual dental care. The group using Colgate's as directed showed a startling reduction in average number of cavities—far less tooth decay! The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst after meals or snacks. When you brush your teeth with Colgate's right after eating, you help remove acids before they can harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices in teeth where food particles often lodge.

Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation to tissues and gums! And no change in flavor, foam, or cleansing action. No claim is made that using Colgate's can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating is the proved way to help stop tooth decay with Colgate Dental Cream.

Always Use Colgate's* to Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth —and HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY!
Right after eating*

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF THESE RESULTS

DECEMBER, 1949

modern screen

the friendly magazine

stories

SO PROUDLY SHE HAILS (Gregory and Greta Peck)....by Louis Pollock 14
RAGE IN HEAVEN (Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy)....by Cynthia Miller 24
TROUBLE AHEAD FOR MITCHUM?....by Arthur L. Charles 28
STARS ON A SPREE ABROAD (Fontaine, Power, Bergman, etc.) by Hedda Hopper 30
TWO LOVES HAVE WE (Roy Rogers-Dale Evans)....by Dale Evans 32
I LIVE ON THE RIM OF HEAVEN....by Jeanne Crain 34
THIS LOVE OF OURS (Dana and Mary Andrews)....by Mary Andrews 37
I WON'T GO STEADY....by Janet Leigh 38
MY SNEAK PARTY (Lund, Wilson, DeFore, etc.)....by Diana Lynn 40
GARY COOPER'S MOUNTAIN HIDEAWAY....by Tom Carlile 42
ANNIE, GET YOUR GUY (Ann Sheridan)....by Sheilah Graham 46
HE'S NOT MY BABY ANYMORE (Farley Granger)....by Mrs. Eva Granger 48
SHE WANTS TO DO HOMEWORK (Jane Powell)....by Ida Zeitlin 50
MY PLANS FOR GABLE....by Clark Gable 52
TOO YOUNG TO DIE (Crosby, Hope, Sinatra)....by Frank Sinatra and Bob Hope 54
HEY, LOOK! WE'RE DANCIN'! (Freeman, Ladd, Fleming, etc.) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 56
MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED....by Doris Day 59

features

THE INSIDE STORY.... 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS.... 6
EDITORIAL: The True Beauty (Esther Williams).... 27
PICTURE OF THE MONTH: Battleground.... 61

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS....by Christopher Kane 16
ALSO SHOWING (Films Previously Reviewed).... 22
NEW FACES.... 25
FASHION.... 64
BEAUTY: Make A Pretty Face....by Carol Carter 80
THE FANS....by Gloria Lampert 92

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Jane Powell by Nickolas Muray
Other picture credits, page 23

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
JUDITH G. FIELD, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
ROMA BURTON, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
BEVERLY OTT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 1, December, 1949. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

M·G·M

hands you the biggest laugh in 10 years!

It's the hilarious answer to WHO WEARS THE PANTS!

Spencer TRACY

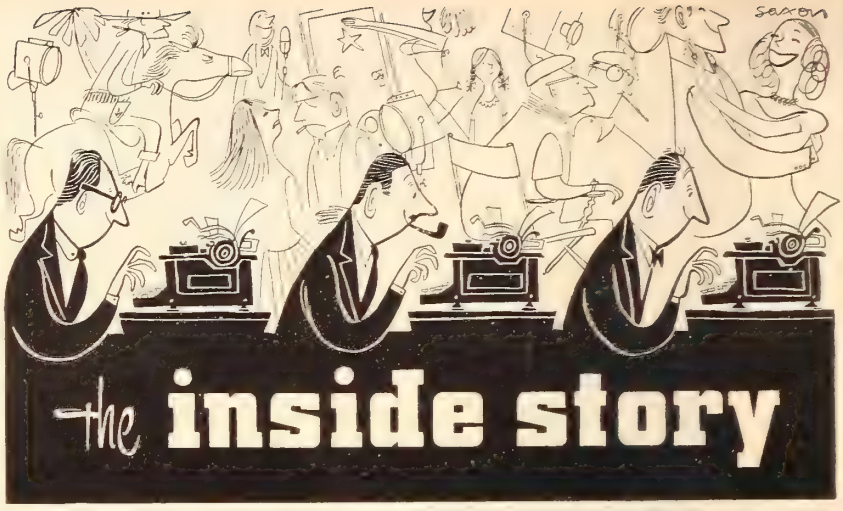
Katharine HEPBURN

Adam's Rib

JUDY HOLLIDAY
TOM EWELL
DAVID WAYNE · JEAN HAGEN

Screen Play by RUTH GORDON and GARSON KANIN • Directed by GEORGE CUKOR • Produced by LAWRENCE WEINGARTEN • A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Your loveliness is Doubly Safe



because

Veto gives you Double Protection!

So effective . . . Veto guards your loveliness night and day—safely protects your clothes and you. For Veto not only neutralizes perspiration odor, it checks perspiration, too! Yes, Veto gives you Double Protection! And Veto disappears instantly to protect you from the moment you apply it!

So gentle . . . Always creamy and smooth, Veto is lovely to use and keeps you lovely. And Veto is gentle, safe for normal skin, safe for clothes. Doubly Safe! Veto alone contains Duratex, Colgate's exclusive ingredient to make Veto safer. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto lasts and lasts from bath to bath!

WE WERE VERY FORTUNATE in being allowed to publish in last month's issue, under the title "Baby Talk," a personal letter Linda Christian Power had written to her close friend, Maya Van Horn. It told of the hopes and plans she and Tyrone had for their coming baby. Then, too late to make any changes, we heard the tragic news that Linda had lost her unborn child. The story will never be more heartbreakingly told than in the telegram Tyrone sent Maya from Paris. It read: LINDA IN AMERICAN HOSPITAL STOP DOING WELL STOP BUT ONLY TWO OF US NOW.

ON MORNINGS when we're feeling well, we often feel like crushing the world to our bosom. Then we come into close contact with the world on the jammed busses as we rush to work. There, we invariably find the world in a snarling mood and we arrive at our desk pretty badly crushed ourselves. We don't enjoy it. Clark Gable, on the other hand, takes another view of the matter. It seems there's nothing he'd rather do than wander through crowded department stores or rub elbows with hordes of sightseers. We have the story in his own words on page 52. It's called "My Plans for Gable."

WHEN WE WERE younger, sometimes in a fit of pique, we'd tell our mother we were leaving home. This usually happened when, after insisting we finish all our darned oatmeal, and making us put on a giant muffler, she'd further insist we wear our rubbers. Clapping hand to brow, we'd shout, "This is too much, we're going." Our mother was helpful and would offer to aid us pack. Which is exactly what Farley Granger's mother did for him when he decided to leave home. She'll tell you, however, "He's Not My Baby Anymore" on page 48, and that he's practically a model boy. (Guess we weren't, come to think of it.) Doesn't complain about her cooking and even brings flowers when he comes to call. But she never mentions oatmeal.

"ROMANCE, PAH!" we said to Jane Powell not long ago. "You must learn to be practical in these matters!" "Pah, yourself," she replied. "Geary is very practical. Why, the other day he even bought a can opener for my hope chest." It seems Geary was insisting on supporting her in some style after they got married. He wanted a promising job that would allow him to give her not only a can opener, but a deep freeze. Meanwhile, Jane filled her hope chest and collected her trousseau. She was waiting impatiently because "She Wants to do Homework"—on page 50.

LIVING LIKE KINGS and hobnobbing with foreign potentates—that's what our Hollywood stars are doing in Europe. Hedda Hopper flew over there just recently to check on their activities and then told all in a story called "Stars on a Spree Abroad." You'll find late news on Joan Fontaine and Ingrid Bergman in it on page 30.

GHOST TOWNS seem to have a strange fascination for Gary Cooper. He's always finding them on movie lots. And recently he ran across a real one in Aspen, Colorado. But this one is very much alive nowadays—as a year round resort, mostly for skiing. It's the most beautiful place in America, Gary swears. So he's decided to live as much as possible of his home life there, from now on. You'll find "Gary Cooper's Mountain Hideaway" on page 42.

YOU WILL BE READING our January issue around Christmas time—and if we do say so ourselves, it makes a very handsome present—from us to you. There are all sorts of good things in store for you in the shape of Burt Lancaster, Barbara Stanwyck, June Allyson—and some nice Christmas surprises, as well.

A SAGA OF SCOUNDRELS IN A CENTURY OF INFAMY!

Three Years in the Making! Filmed Amid the Splendor of its Original Locale! A Spectacular Cast of 50,000!

SEE!

The Seven Cinematic Wonders of the World!

King of Romantic Epics... From the pen of the Greatest Romance writer of our time!

Samuel Shellabarger's

PRINCE of FOXES

Starring

TYRONE POWER · ORSON WELLES · WANDA HENDRIX

Marina Berti · Everett Sloane · Katina Paxinou · Felix Aylmer

Screen Play by Milton Krims · From the Novel by Samuel Shellabarger

Directed by HENRY KING

Produced by SOL C. SIEGEL

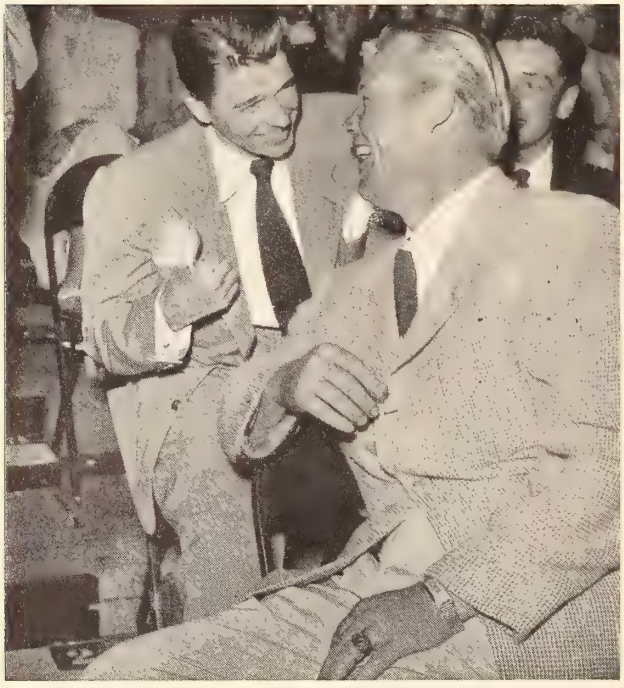
20th CENTURY-FOX



HOLLYWOOD TURNED OUT IN GALA MOOD FOR THE OPENING OF THE "ICE FOLLIES."

Evie and Van Johnson arrived early, looking tanned, trim and high-spirited. Van had bravely dieted 15 pounds away.

Elizabeth Taylor's handsome escort at the Ice Follies bore a noticeable resemblance to her. He was her brother, Howard.

Ronald Reagan was overjoyed to find old pal Wayne Morris in front of him. Reagan still wore braces for his leg injury.

Ginger Rogers and Greg Bautzer were a twosome again at the ice-skating spectacle. They've been seen together constantly.

Shirley Temple seemed happier than John Agar as she took a flower from the skater-clown. The Agars are trying to live down rumors.

June Allyson and Dick Powell were hilarious as David Niven prepared to show how he skates. Irene Dunne and husband watched with alarm.

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

■ The "incident" that really broke up Elizabeth Taylor's engagement to William Pawley, Jr., is this:

Elizabeth, her mother and father and millionaire Howard Hughes were dining at the Beverly Hills Hotel and Elizabeth danced number after number with the tall Texan.

Suddenly, Hughes sent for the press agent of the hotel and said that absolutely nothing must be said about the fact that he and Elizabeth had been dancing together. In fact, he stated, nothing should be said about the dinner party at all.

But news travels fast, even when it has to go 3,000 miles to Florida—where young Pawley heard it almost the next day. He was terribly upset, not so much because Elizabeth and her parents had dined with Howard but because of the "big secrecy."

That date brought on the telephone call which resulted in Elizabeth and Bill calling everything off. Well, pardon my cynicism, but at no time would I have bet a wooden nickel that the 17-year-old Elizabeth and Pawley would ever make it "Mr. and Mrs."

A girl as young as the lovely Lizzie will be much happier if she takes her time about getting married. She is so beautiful that she will be courted by many attractive men. It would not be natural if she did not like attention and flattery from many beaux. What girl doesn't?

P.S. Several fans asked me, "How come the man announced the broken engagement [as young Pawley did]? We thought that was always done by the girl." I asked Mrs. Taylor, Elizabeth's mother, the same question. She explained, "I think Bill was afraid people would think that the same thing happened to him as happened to Glenn Davis. Boys have their pride as well as girls."

P.P.S. And amazingly enough, Mrs. Taylor thinks Bill and Elizabeth are still in love and will one day marry—but it will be when they are both more mature!

* * *

Another example of young love having headaches—Audie Murphy and Wanda Hendrix. Audie, our most-decorated war hero, is nervous, restless, and highly strung. He and Wanda have announced that they're trying to work things out, but he seems to be holding little hope that they can save their marriage. "I love Wanda too much to see her unhappy and crying all the time because of me," he told a close friend.

But you have to hand it to that Wanda. She's got her chin up and she's fighting hard to keep her man and her marriage.

Both the kids were on the set of Sierra, the movie they are making together at Universal-International, when a newspaper came out with the story that they are separating as soon as they complete their picture.

Wanda read it, and stifled a little sob. She bit her lip hard to keep from crying.

Audie saw this—and suddenly, right out in front of the camera and the cast and crew, he picked up his tiny wife in his arms and gave her a big hug and a kiss!

"Take it easy, baby," he whispered in her ear. And a lot of people who had been Date tonight?

GIVE IT THE BRUSH-OFF!

Listerine Tooth Paste attacks tobacco stain, off-color breath.

Perhaps it seems a petty little thing. Perhaps you think it couldn't make a difference.

Well, don't fool yourself! That tinge of yellow film can spoil the softest smile . . . that over-laden breath can sour the sweetest words. So why take chances? Why risk "Tobacco Mouth"?

It's so easy to make sure you're not offending. If you smoke a lot, just play safe and use the new Listerine Tooth Paste . . . especially before a date.

There's a reason: Listerine Tooth Paste is made with Lusterfoam—a wonderful new-type cleansing ingredient that literally foams cleaning and polishing agents over tooth surfaces. It removes yellow tobacco stain while it's still fresh . . . whisks away odor-producing bacteria and tobacco debris.

Use it regularly, and know they'll never say "Tobacco Mouth" about you!
Lambert Pharmacal
Company, St. Louis, Mo.

Two Hollywood neighbors—Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Stack—run into each other at the Stork Club in New York and, naturally, talk of home.

Louella Parsons, while covering the town in her search for column material, drops in to see Clark Gable on the set of Key to the City.

watching, couldn't—because of that old misty feeling around the heart.

(For another viewpoint on the Hendrix-Murphy difficulties, see page 24.—Ed.)

* * *

Thinking Out Loud: I'm sorry I lost my temper at Betty Hutton at a party. But I boiled when I read that Betty said the press was responsible for the temporary break-up of her marriage to Ted Briskin. So I gave her a piece of my mind. Betty broke into tears and a rousing time was had by all. Later, she told me she never said anything so wrong, so we made up over the telephone the next morning.

I'm not sure I like the new raspberry color so many of our blonde belles are wearing. Supposed to be quite new and chic. I saw Lana Turner in a raspberry-red satin dress with lipstick the exact shade of her gown—all very startling, but I can think of more becoming colors for Lana.

Nora Flynn Haymes (Mrs. Dick Haymes) has lost eight pounds, but she is still a mite buxom. At one time, I thought she was the prettiest girl in Hollywood, but she should lose some of that poundage.

Larry Parks says he will drop dead before he makes another Jolson movie. "I've played Al up to the point where he's old enough to play himself," Larry told me.

* * *

Handsome enough to be a movie star is Prince Mahmoud Pahlavi, brother of the Shah of Persia. He gave many of our stars a flutter at Joan Crawford's party when he came in with the Jack Warners.

The amusing thing is that this darkly-handsome young man has been living in town for some time, studying at the University of California at Los Angeles.

I must say he is a serious-minded young man with seemingly little interest in the flutter-brains. I noticed him at a party the very next night, in a corner, talking seriously to Irene Dunne. He speaks perfect English and his manners are of the Old World.

Joan's party might have been taken from the pages of one of the "Arabian Nights." A balmy night, unusually warm for California made it possible for Joan to seat her guests in a beautifully-decorated pavilion in front of the garden and the swimming pool.

Joan's two oldest children, Christina and Christopher, were allowed to stay up long enough to greet her friends—and the youngsters were so sweet and formal.

La Crawford's favorite boy friend at this writing (goodness knows who it will be when this reaches print) is William O'Connor, handsome lawyer. That gal seems to go for lawyers—but the other lawyer in her life, Greg Bautzer, is now showering attentions on Ginger Rogers.

So, I was a bit surprised to see Jackie Briggs, Ginger's ex-husband, among Joan's guests in the stag line. In spite of all the gossip that Jackie is in love with Ann Miller he was alone. I don't believe he has fallen for anyone. He is obviously torching for Ginger.

Speaking of stags—leave it to Joan to round up sixteen extra men! And most hostesses wail that they can't get a spare dancing-partner!

But looky who Joan corraled for extra dancing-partners—Mel Ferrer, John Hodiak (Anne Baxter was out of town and so was Mrs. Ferrer), Cesar Romero, Mel Dinelli, Clifton Webb and John Steinbeck!

* * *

Got a funny card from Greer Garson in Scotland. She and Buddy Fogelson were honeymooning in Scotland at the time and Greer wrote:

"Dear Louella: The tartan blood of the MacGregors is pulsing ardently through me veins as we visit the haunts of me ancestor (no kidding), Rob Roy. Buddy insists on regarding him as a sort of kilted Billy the Kid! But I notice he is wearing a tartan tie himself today. Loads of bonny wishes from—the MacFogels."

* * *

I had the chance to see what a charming escort Farley Granger is when he brought Patricia Neal to my home to a cocktail party. This time I was entertaining two charming teen-agers from the East and their parents and I asked the girls whom they would particularly like to meet among the younger players.

"Farley Granger," both answered promptly. Later they told me he was everything they had expected—and more.

Farley certainly has delightful "date" manners. I noticed he seated the pretty blonde Pat at a cocktail table and then went to the buffet and made up a plate of hors d'oeuvres for her, himself. He never left her side and made sure that she met everyone—at least all the people he knew.

When I invited Shirley Temple to the same party, she said, "Gee, willigans! I don't know where we will get a baby sitter—we lost the good girl we had. But John and I will get there by some hook or crook!"

And they did—Shirley looking very chic and sophisticated in a black cocktail suit and cocktail hat and veil.

WE'VE GOT BERLE! BERLE'S ON THE SCREEN!

THE NATION'S NO.1 FUNNY-MAN!

BERLE'S HERE! HE'LL BERLE YOU OVER!

WARNER BROS.
FILL THE SCREEN
WITH ALL THE ROARS
AND GUFFAWS
HE'S FAMOUS FOR!

MILTON BERLE

GETS VERY FUNNY WITH

VIRGINIA MAYO

"ALWAYS LEAVE THEM LAUGHING"

Oh what a story!

EVERYONE FALLS FOR HIS GAGS—HE FALLS FOR EVERYONE'S GAL!

Stop laughing -and listen!
8 NEW HIT SONGS TOO!

WITH
RUTH ROMAN · BERT LAHR

DIRECTED BY ROY DEL RUTH PRODUCED BY JERRY WALD

SCREEN PLAY BY MELVILLE SHAVELSON AND JACK ROSE FROM A STORY BY MAX SHULMAN AND RICHARD MEALAND
MUSICAL DIRECTION BY RAY HEINDORF

Enjoy the FREEDOM of Gossar-DEB

The Gossar-DEB pantie will give your figure plenty of freedom.

Take it in your hands . . . feel how light, how soft, how pliable it is. Just 3 ounces of supple, soothing tissuenet! Now, slip it on . . . instantly you'll feel its caressing action . . . its smooth, subtle control—molding your figure without boning.

Gossar-DEB gives you all the extra features of Gossard quality. Ask for "730". Detachable garters, dainty ruffle edge, white.

At all good stores and shops

Gossar-DEB Girdles, Panties, $3.50 to $10.00. Brassieres, $1.25 to $3.50.

Gossard—the most complete line for all ages and figure types.

the Gossard line of beauty

The H. W. GOSSARD CO., 111 N. Canal St., Chicago 6

My young guests of honor were also mightily impressed with Louis Jourdan and his beautiful wife. Her Paris clothes were much admired. This same party was also the first cocktail appearance of Stewart Granger, the British Jimmy Stewart.

Stewart must have quite a sense of humor because I spotted him in a corner telling stories to Bob Hope and Danny Kaye and he had these two top comedians in stitches. Takes a bit of doing, you must admit.

* * *

Princess Margaret Rose is coming to Hollywood next year and she has obtained the King's permission to be the house guest of the Douglas Fairbanks.

Douglas was recently knighted, as you know, and even before that, he has been host to British royalty in Hollywood. He entertained the Earl of Mountbatten when he was here two years ago.

But, me oh my!—what a hassle will go on behind the scenes to get on the coveted invitation list to meet the merry, madcap Princess. There will be plenty of heartaches.

* * *

I stopped by to pick up Ronald Reagan to take him to a party at the beach. Ronnie has been living in Jane Wyman's lovely house in Holmby Hills ever since his accident. (Janie has been in England, of course). The children came to the door and called to me. "Take good care of Daddy."

I hadn't realized how serious was Ronnie's injury until I saw him on his steel braces and how hard it was for him to get into the car without bending his leg. He is encased in a steel brace from his hip to his ankle—and if he should accidentally make the least bend at the knee, the whole terrible thing might have to be reset.

Believe me, this has been an ordeal for Ronnie—but he is such a lamb, he never complains.

I wish to heaven I could think that he and Janie might get back together again. "But that isn't possible. It really isn't, Louella," he told me.

1949 was a year of much unhappiness in Ronnie's life. First, Jane filed for divorce and then he had his leg-bone shattered in a charity baseball game. But, I've got my fingers

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

We don't know how you feel about it, but we're in the mood for Christmas presents. And we'd like to give them to you, too. So, to the first 500 people who fill out and return the questionnaire below, will go a free three-month subscription. All you have to do is tell us which stories you liked best in this issue and which ones you liked the least. If you have any favorite stars, tell us about that, too. We'll try and have stories on them in the near future. Remember—to the first 500, we'll be sending the January, February and March issues—absolutely free!!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories did you enjoy the most in our December issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT of your 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

So Proudly She Hails (Gregory Peck) ☐
Rage In Heaven (Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy) ☐
Trouble Ahead For Mitchum? ☐
Stars On a Spree (Bergman, Fontaine, Cotten) by Hedda Hopper ☐
Two Loves Have We (Roy Rogers-Dale Evans) ☐
I Live on the Rim of Heaven (Jeanne Crain) ☐
This Love of Ours (Dana Andrews) ☐
I Won't Go Steady (Janet Leigh) ☐
My Sneak Party (Diana Lynn, John Lund, Marie Wilson) ☐
Gary Cooper's Mountain Hideaway ☐
Annie, Get Your Guy (Ann Sheridan) ☐
He's Not My Baby Anymore (Farley Granger) ☐
She Wants To Do Homework (Jane Powell) ☐
My Plans for Gable ☐
Too Young to Die (Frank Sinatra-Bing Crosby-Bob Hope) ☐
Hey, Look! We're Dancin'! (Alan Ladd, Mona Freeman) ☐
My Prayer Was Answered (Doris Day) ☐
Picture of the Month (Battleground) ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

.....

.....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

Monty Clift pauses for a smoke between scenes at Templehof Airdrome in Berlin, while making Two Corridors East. It's about the airlift.

crossed for him that things will be brighter in 1950—and somehow I have a feeling that they will.

I told him and he laughed, "They couldn't get much worse."

* * *

I never saw Esther Williams, our brand-new mother, look as pretty as she did at the Charlie Feldman-Jerry Wald party at the Chanteclair. Feldman and Wald had taken over the Sunset Strip café to introduce the famous playwright, Tennessee Williams, and to announce officially that Gertrude Lawrence plays the mother role in their production of the Glass Menagerie.

But getting back to Esther—she was in a simple white dress trimmed with pearls and it was most becoming.

"You just have to see our baby," Esther said. "Everyone says he is the most beautiful child they've ever seen."

I thought Ben Gage, her husband, would catch the humor of that remark, but he just nodded in assent. "That's right," he said seriously, "he's a very unusual baby."

"We are going to make a swimmer of him," said Esther. "Already he has two dozen bathing suits—some sent by fans and others made up specially by the best-known bathing suit manufacturers.

"But I can tell you he is not going to be an only child and be spoiled. We want to have four children. I plan to make one more picture and then have another baby."

So, I suppose there will be stork rumors about Esther before long!

* * *

Roddy McDowall's mother had hoped to keep plans for his 21st birthday party a surprise. But the guests, invited to the Dells café, added up to too big a list—and the surprise went a-glimmering. But Mrs. McDowall says she is glad because, "My boy was so sweet about the people with whom he wanted to share that most important birthday—people I would have forgotten."

For instance, Roddy wanted to have three of his public-school teachers and the first publicity man ever to get Roddy's name in print. And he wanted the "still" photographer who made up his first batch of pictures.

Ann Blyth was Ronnie's girl at the party and I would like to say that these two wonderful, good-looking young people are really becoming serious about each other. There aren't two nicer kids in our town. True, they

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

✓ Not a soap, not a cream—cannot leave dulling film!

✓ Quickly, effectively removes dandruff from both hair and scalp!

✓ Gives fragrant, soft-water lather even in hardest water!

✓ Leaves hair lustrously soft, easy to manage—with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or cream shampoos hides its natural lustre with dulling soap film ✓ Halo—not a soap, not a cream—contains no sticky oils, nothing to hide your hair's natural lustre with dulling film. Made with a new patented ingredient, Halo brings out glossy, shimmering highlights the very first time you use it! Its delightfully fragrant lather rinses away quickly, completely in any kind of water—needs no lemon or vinegar rinse. For hair that's naturally colorful, lustrously soft, easy to manage—use Halo Shampoo! At any drug or cosmetic counter.

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Does your nail polish CHIP? PEEL? FLAKE OFF?

New miracle-wear ingredient discovered!

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN who've put up with polish which chips soon after manicuring are making a thrilling discovery . . .

It's the new Cutex polish . . . the new miracle-wear polish! Now it contains Enamelon, a Cutex-exclusive ingredient designed to give incredible wear!

Cutex with Enamelon stays lovely day after day after day! Resists chipping, flaking, peeling as no polish ever did before!

Today, try this new, miracle-wear Cutex! So pure . . . even women with skins so sensitive they cannot use other polishes state that they can use new Cutex with perfect safety!

Many fashion-styled colors. Get new Cutex today...at your favorite cosmetic counter.

If you don't find that New Cutex wears longer than you ever dreamed possible, send the bottle to Northam Warren, Box 1355, Stamford, Conn., and your money will be refunded.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S SHATTERED LOVE

WHEN Shirley Temple announced on October 13 that she and John Agar had separated and that she was filing suit for divorce, charging "mental cruelty," it came as no surprise to Hollywood insiders. For weeks there had been reports of a domestic rift.

A week after her fourth wedding anniversary, Shirley went to Palm Springs with baby Linda Susan to be with her parents and "to decide what to do about the future." A week later she announced the divorce plans. "There's no use going on this way," she said. "For two and a half years we have been trying to make this marriage work. We have both tried hard—we really have. . . . If, as I'm told, millions of people are disturbed about this divorce, they're not as disturbed as I am. . . . I start to cry every time I think about raising the baby without her father. Susie's just crazy about Jack." Shirley will ask for custody of the child.

John stated that he still loved Shirley—"the only girl in my heart since we first met"—but would not contest the divorce suit.

Though Shirley denied that "career trouble" was the cause of this tragic break-up, most observers believe it was a large factor. Friends say that John, now well launched on his own screen career, was bitter over being still in the position of "Mr. Temple." It is also said that there were times when he and Shirley quarreled over his drinking. And there was gossip, heatedly denied by the Agars and crooner Johnnie Johnston, that Johnston and Shirley were romantically interested in each other. Several months ago, when Johnston and his wife, Kathryn Grayson, had a quarrel, Johnston stayed with the Agars for three days, occupying the chauffeur's quarters. But, said Shirley, her husband was present the entire time that Johnston was with them. Johnston blamed his friend Joe Kirkwood, Jr.—who recently married Cathy Downs—for spreading gossip about the situation. Kirkwood, for his part, defended himself by saying, "I was just trying to be a good fellow and straighten things out for certain people."—Jack Wade are young to be thinking about marriage but if they ever decide to take the step, I think they would be very happy. They have the same religious faith, and the same high standard of conduct.

For complete details, read "Why Shirley's Marriage Failed" in the January Modern Screen.

Among the movie star guests were Elizabeth Taylor with Arthur Loew, Jr.—and they seemed very interested in each other. (It was Lizzie's first social appearance since she and Bill Pawley broke their engagement. Liz seemed very poised and unruffled and if she was upset, she certainly did not show it.)

Maureen O'Hara was there with Will Price and little Janie Powell was with her fiancé, Geary Steffen. All in all, Roddy got off to a rousing 22d year of life!

* * *

What goes with Robert Stack and Irene Wrightsman McAvoy? Are they going to marry? Or aren't they?

Here is the way I figure out this romance that has equally puzzled the "soxers" who adore Bob and the gossip-writers. I believe this is a case of "can't get along without each other."

Several times they have made an attempt to break up because they do not think marriage is right for them. But each time they make up and certainly no one else comes along to take the place of Bob with Irene or Irene with Bob.

I personally believe they are far more in love than they realize. "Puppy," as Irene is called by Bob and their pals, is almost as good an athlete as Bob—and that's saying something. As a team, they have won skeet-shooting national contests, amateur tennis tournaments, ditto golf. And Puppy shoots and hunts and swims like a champ.

Their social backgrounds are similar. Puppy comes from the enormously wealthy Wrightsman family; Bob comes from one of the oldest California families—and he, too, has a fortune.

Puppy was once married to playboy Freddie McAvoy and is the mother of a little girl who lives with her father in France. Bob has never married.

They are sensationally attractive and attracted to each other. But I guess we will just have to wait to see what happens with these long-term romancers.

* * *

In this month's Mail Box:

John Derek leads the list with more queries and comments than any other actor! It isn't all praise for young Derek—but he has certainly stirred up interest.

Elizabeth Taylor hits her third month straight as the most talked-about girl in my mail. Well, I've had plenty to say about Lizzie in this issue.

Thanks for your letters and tips. Keep them rolling.

See you next month.

Produced by ROBERT FELLOWS · Directed by LEWIS ALLEN · Screenplay by Warren Duff · Based on a Story by Tiffany Thayer

SO PROUDLY SHE HAILS

Greta Peck knows all about it now— the terror of having your freedom endangered, and the blessings of being an American

BY LOUIS POLLOCK

At a time when millions of U. S. citizens have recently cast their votes in free elections, the following heartwarming and inspiring story is of unusual appropriateness. By showing what the achievement of American citizenship has meant to one woman—Mrs. Gregory Peck—it may serve as a reminder of just how precious are those hard-won rights and privileges which we, as Americans, so often tend to take for granted.—THE EDITORS.

■ Back in 1941, a small attractive blonde named Greta Rice was among the applicants interviewed in New York for the job of hairdresser to Katharine Cornell on a road tour of The Doctor's Dilemma. Miss Cornell liked the friendly, cheerful Finnish-American girl at once—and she was hired.

Before the company left New York, Greta caught sight once of a lean young actor at a rehearsal—and wondered a bit about him. . . . It was only when the play opened in Philadelphia and she read the actor list on the bulletin board backstage that she learned his name was Gregory Peck.

A nodding acquaintance began then, but not until they played St. Louis did any real conversation pass between them. It was a very interesting, if brief, one.

"Would you go to lunch with me?" asked Gregory one day, after a morning rehearsal.

"I'd love to," said Greta.

After lunch Gregory said, "What would you like to do now?".

Greta remembered a talk she had had with her (Continued on page 83)

The Gregory Pecks. They ran into trouble outside the U. S. before she was a citizen.

In so many married women's lives there's . . .

The Reckless Moment

with GERALDINE BROOKS

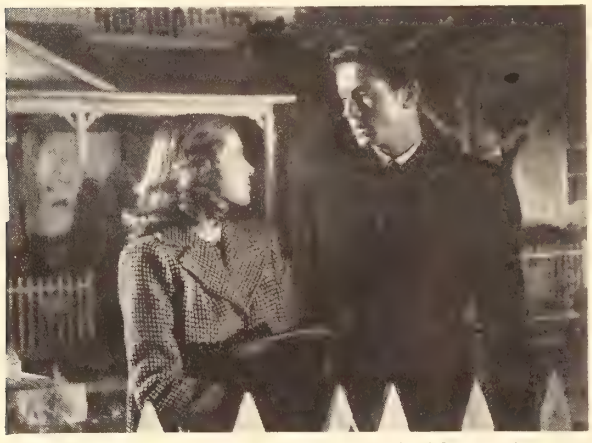
Screen Play by Henry Garson and Robert W. Soderberg • Based upon a Ladies' Home Journal story by Elisabeth Sanxay Holding

Directed by MAX OPULS • Produced by WALTER WANGER



MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

Farley Granger, one of the jail-breaking trio in They Live By Night, discovers Cathy O'Donnell at their hideout.

After robbing a bank for funds to fight the life term he was unjustly serving, Farley, pledging a new life, weds Cathy.

Trapped by circumstances and hunted by the police, he realizes there's no escape—and bids her a poignant farewell.

THEY LIVE BY NIGHT

Cast: Cathy O'Donnell, Farley Granger, Howard Da Silva, Jay C. Flippen.
RKO

Great is a word reserved chiefly for outsize movies. Big productions. The ones like Joan of Arc, with a thousand extras, the ones like Hamlet and Henry the Fifth, by William Shakespeare. But when Shakespeare's good, it's nothing you couldn't have expected of him. For me, it's the occasional picture that takes you unawares, the unballyhooed treasure you stumble over in the dark, that really puts the thrill into movie-going. They Live By Night is an example. It's the story of a boy and a girl who never had a chance, but whose love was a very remarkable thing, for all that. The boy, Bowie (Farley Granger), serving a life term in prison for an accidental killing, breaks jail with two older men, Chicamaw (Howard Da Silva) and T-Dub (Jay C. Flippen). The trio's planning a series of bank robberies (the boy wants his share of the money so he can get himself a lawyer and clear up the old murder case). They hole up at a gas station run by Chicamaw's drunken brother, and the brother's daughter, a thin, neglected little girl called Keechie (Cathy O'Donnell). Neither Bowie nor Keechie has ever had any human affection; they're shy, lonely kids, strange with each other, yet clinging together. Keechie is frightened for Bowie. She knows he's playing with killers. He promises her everything will be all right. The first robbery's successful, Chicamaw, T-Dub and Bowie divide the money and split up, to lie low for a while. Keechie and Bowie go away together, get married in a sordid open-all-night kind of wedding parlor, have a honeymoon at a tourist cabin. Bowie plans to get a lawyer, go straight, make a new life for himself and Keechie, but he knows too much about his two old partners, and they need him; he can't escape. Keechie's going to have a baby; Bowie goes to the man who'd married them, a man who'll do anything for money. "Fix it for us to get to Mexico," Bowie begs. The man can't help him. "Then there's no place we can go?" Bowie says. "No place for her and me?" And that's the answer. Bowie is betrayed to the police, and killed, finally, but you know he's lost, long before that. . . . The calibre of the acting in They Live By Night is enough to make your breath catch in your throat. Farley Granger and Cathy O'Donnell as the lovers who have to crowd their whole pitiful lives into a couple of enchanted weeks; Da Silva and Flippen as the two seasoned crooks—they're incredibly good, and so is everybody else, too. This is a picture so honest and real and unphony it's hard to find words that are simple and honest enough to describe it. Those big Technicolored adjectives—terrific, gigantic, stupendous—they just won't do.

THE DOCTOR AND THE GIRL

Cast: Glenn Ford, Charles Coburn, Gloria De Haven, Janet Leigh.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

The credits for The Doctor and the Girl state that the screen play was "based on a literary work." The literary work may have been a novel or a short story, but I'm betting on a soap opera until I learn different. In fact, I'm betting on five or six soap operas. Call one "Young Doctor Corday." That's Glenn Ford. Papa Corday (Charles Coburn) is a famous doctor. Rich, respected, etc. Glenn's following in his footsteps (believes in a clinical approach to patients; no human feelings toward them). Glenn's clinical toward a girl (Janet Leigh) who's dying of tuberculosis, until she makes him feel like a dog, and then he marries her. This necessitates his cutting himself off from his old man (or vice versa), going to share Janet's slum life, and building up a practice among the under-privileged. Next chapter: "Fabienne Faces Life." Fabienne's Gloria De Haven, another of Coburn's children. She's tired of papa's running her life, wants an apartment for herself. She finds one in Greenwich Village, complete with skylight, and there she paints (and sings and dances the nights away, most likely). She comes to the family home for dinner once a week (so she can pick up her allowance, I presume) and whenever Papa asks what she's been doing with herself, she gives him a piece of her lip, as the saying goes. He continues to support her, despite her haughty airs, and she finally jogs off on a cruise with a married man, only to return home pregnant. Afraid to tell anybody, she attemps a self-inflicted abortion, and dies in agony. Chapter Three: "Backstage Daughter." Coburn has still another child, a jellyfish named Mariette (Nancy Davis). She's the one who keeps his home running smoothly, marries the man he tells her to marry, and is always right there behind the scenes with a glass of milk and a kiss for the old duffer. Now, I'm not knocking milk, but with the kind of troubles that man has, he could have used something stronger under his belt. The Doctor and the Girl has a few nice moments, and these are largely due to the taste and skill of Glenn Ford and Janet Leigh, whose love story is far superior to the rest of the picture. (There's a diphtheria operation somewhere in there too, if you like that sort of thing.)

I MARRIED A COMMUNIST

Cast: Laraine Day, Robert Ryan, John Agar, Thomas Gomez, Janis Carter.
RKO

According to RKO, the Communists are running around San Francisco like a bunch of Al Capone's boys. Bang bang bang, and another loyal American chews the pavement. Since the party hasn't even taken a shot at Whittaker Chambers yet, RKO's case is undoubtedly somewhat overstated, but they believe in being prepared. Still, if the Communists are as incautious and generally goofy as the comrades in this picture, the country has nothing to worry about. Hero Robert Ryan was a Communist for a while, back in the Depression. He saw the light, rose from stevedore to vice-president of a shipping company, married Laraine Day. He now gets new SPIN curler cuts winding time in half—makes it double-easy!

Which Twin has the Toni? (See answer below)

New exclusive Toni SPIN Curler grips . . . spins . . . locks with a flick of the finger. No rubber bands! All plastic, patented! Nothing to tangle up in your hair! Tiny teeth firmly grip hair-tips so even the shortest ends become easy to manage! Easy-spin action—built right in—rolls each curl up in one quick motion! Snaps shut! Assures a better, longer-lasting curl. Winds more hair on each curler. Makes winding twice as easy—twice as fast! Now it's easier than ever before for any woman to wind perfect curls.

gentle TONI lotion gives you the most natural-looking wave ever!

It's the same gentle creme lotion that has given more than 67 million lovely permanents. So gentle—so fast. No other home permanent waves hair faster yet leaves it so soft and lustrous, so easy to set and style. Try this exciting Toni with new SPIN Curlers and see how quickly . . . how easily . . . you give yourself the most natural-looking wave you've ever had!

SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER

Toni Refill Kit. Guaranteed to give the most natural-looking wave ever—or money back! $1.00

Complete Set of new Toni SPIN Curlers. No more rubber bands! Makes every wave from now on twice as easy! Reg. Value. $2.00

Included in this offer—Toni Creme Rinse to give your Toni wave romantic softness!

$3.00 VALUE

ONLY $2.29

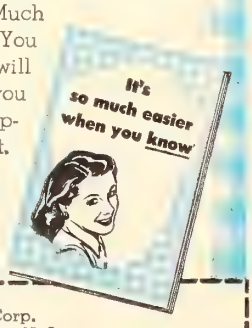
"Now we're both Toni Twins," says lovely Lila Wigren at the left. "When I saw how easy it was for Ella to give herself a Toni with the new SPIN Curlers I decided on a Toni Home Permanent, too!"

RIGHT? WRONG?

Unmarried girls can use tampons

RIGHT! Any normal woman can use tampons as soon as she is fully grown. And why not? Meds, the Modess tampons, were designed by a doctor, and are worn by thousands of nurses who are in a position to know.

No swimming on "those days."



WRONG! It's safe to swim, shower, bathe any day of the month if you wear Meds. Meds are worn internally . . . no need for pads, pins, belts.

Tampons are so comfortable you'll forget you are wearing them.

RIGHT! Meds put an end to chafing, odor . . . to bulging, uncomfortable external protection.

There's a book that tells more.

RIGHT! Send for your free copy of "It's so Much Easier When You Know." It will be mailed to you in a plain wrapper. Read it. Then . . .

Go Meds... Go Merrier

Personal Products Corp.
Dept. MS-12, Milltown, N. J.

Please send me a FREE copy of your new Meds booklet, "It's So Much Easier When You Know." (U.S.A. only)

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

I Married A Communist: John Agar swallows alluring Janis Carter's Marxist sweet-talk. Robert Ryan and Laraine Day are also involved.

Oh, You Beautiful Doll: June Haver fancies song-plugger Mark Stevens, who's helped to make hit songs from her father's serious music.

along fine with the laboring classes, and appears to be in clover. But the party never forgets. It sends Christine Norman (Janis Carter), Ryan's old flame, to tell Ryan he can still be useful. "Don't come to terms with the union," the party orders. "We want San Francisco shipping tied up for a couple of months." Ryan says nuts. The Communists obligingly bump off a traitor before his very eyes. See? "I'm going to the police," Ryan says, "and make a clean confession of my past." The party reminds him that his past includes murdering a shop steward during a strike some years back, and the electric chair looms in front of him. He's licked. He'll foment the strike. Now Christine goes to work on Laraine's young brother (John Agar). Soon brother's standing up and spouting Communist philosophy. The party kills him, spout or no spout (he finds Christine made a fool of him) and then the party kills Christine because she appears to be going soft (she really loved Agar). And then the party kills Ryan (but first he kills the party, or at least Thomas Gomez and William Bailey, the party representatives in San Francisco). You should see the three of them all dying on the warehouse floor! Before he expires, Ryan leaves Laraine in the loving protection of labor leader Richard Rober, who's always wanted her. "You were meant for each other," Ryan says, or some such thing. And the shipping strike in San Francisco is over. Amen.

FATHER WAS A FULLBACK

Cast: Fred MacMurray, Maureen O'Hara, Betty Lynn, Natalie Wood.
20th Century-Fox

There was never a man so plagued as Fred MacMurray. He's the coach of a college football team which can't win a game. They're willing; they're just not able. He's the father of two daughters, Betty Lynn and Natalie Wood, and one of them (Betty) has a fixation about her own ugliness. Thinks she's poison to the boys. Asks for dinner on a tray in her room, because she wants to be alone with her great sorrow. Even the maid (Thelma Ritter) bets against Fred's football team, and the only comfort in his life is his wife, Maureen O'Hara. Rudy Vallee, the head of the alumni association, keeps making threatening noises about Fred's job, the U. S. government sends pamphlets to Fred's house about the care and feeding of babies (this leads Fred and Maureen to think Betty's an unmarried mother) and to complete Fred's misery, he gets hold of a confessions magazine in which there appears a story by-lined by Betty. (Since she can't get a man, she's decided to be a career woman.) "I Was a Child Bubble Dancer," the article is called. Besides being a child bubble dancer, Betty has other talents. She saves her father's job, anyway, and in a most unusual fashion. This picture's good-natured fun.

OH, YOU BEAUTIFUL DOLL

Cast: June Haver, Mark Stevens, S. Z. Sakall, Charlotte Greenwood.
20th Century-Fox

Fade in to a self-conscious beginning. Bartender J. C. Flippen is looking nostalgically through his pictures of old-time song writers. "So-and-so and so-and-so and so-and-so," he says. "And then there was Fred Fisher. Ah, yes, a guy named Breitenbach wrote all his music." "Whaaat?" cries a nearby blonde. "Shut up," snarls an earnest reporter to the blonde. "I wanta hear this." You wanta hear it too? Okay. Seems this Breitenbach (S. Z. Sakall) is a great composer. Opera. Long hair. His wife takes in sewing. His daughter (June Haver) studies violin and piano. And they're starving to death. (The family, not the violin and piano.) Breitenbach meets a song-plugger named Larry Kelly (Mark Stevens) who explains the facts of life. Take the good melodies out of your fusty old opera, jazz up the rhythms, collect royalties. The melodies he takes from Breitenbach's opera are transformed into songs called "Peg O' My Heart," "Come, Josephine, in My Flying Machine," "I Want You To Want Me," etc., and published under the made-up name of Fred Fisher. (Breitenbach-Fisher didn't write "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," the title tune. Some other great composer must have beat him to it.) Well, soon Fisher-Breitenbach is rich, but unhappy. He wants to be known as a serious artist. Daughter Junie is unhappy too. She loves song-plugger Kelly, who appears to love singer Gale Robbins. Kelly doesn't really love Robbins, though. He's just waiting for Haver to grow up so he can marry her. Breitenbach-Fisher finally runs away from home to escape from popular music, but famous conductor Eduard Franz helps the family get him back. Franz announces all over town that he's conducting a program of Bach, Beethoven and Breitenbach at Aeolian Hall. This flushes the fugitive out, only it's a dirty trick. The conductor doesn't play Breitenbach's opera score at all; instead he leads an orchestra and chorus in a bunch of Fisher's popular songs. Instead of driving Fisher-Breitenbach to suicide, this puts him on top of the world. Geniuses are unpredictable, and especially in Technicolor.

Chicago Deadline: Alan Ladd finds himself up to his self-reliant neck in murders as he tries to find out about a dead woman's life.

CHICAGO DEADLINE

Cast: Alan Ladd, Donna Reed, June Havoc, Irene Hervey, Arthur Kennedy.
Paramount

Reporter Alan Ladd finds a girl dead of tuberculosis in a cheap hotel room, and her once-lovely young face stirs his pity. He filches her address book before the police arrive, and goes off to get himself a human-interest story. He gets more than he bargains for. There are 54 names in the address book, but no two of the people Ladd contacts seem to agree about the dead girl. As Ladd's investigation progresses, so does his curiosity. There's the girl's brother (Arthur Kennedy) who loved her, and who tells of her early marriage, and its failure. There's a blonde (June Havoc) who was once the dead girl's roommate, and who saw her through an ill-fated love affair with a handsome gambler. There's the big-shot head of the Iroquois Trust Company, who threatens to sue if his name is connected in any way with that of the dead girl's. "She was a cheap, grasping little thing who tried to blackmail me," he says. There's a man named Spingler who owns a bar and who offers to pay for the girl's funeral—"If you keep it quiet." So many clues to what must have been her story, yet the big chunks are still missing, and suddenly Ladd finds himself in the midst of a rash of murders, all involving people connected with the dead girl, and this story becomes more important to him than eating or sleeping or remembering to be cautious when his life is threatened. Chicago Deadline is quite a fascinating picture, but unbelievably complicated.

For the skin that doesn't like heavy foundation

New loveliness for the skin that doesn't like a "made-up" look. Here is a lighter, greaseless foundation cream, that takes powder beautifully—without coating your face!

A sheerer powder base—more natural!
No "smothered" feeling—it's greaseless!

Make-up looks more natural, lasts hours longer with this greaseless base! Before powder, just smooth on a thin, protective film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Snowy-white in the jar, translucent on your skin, it suits every complexion. Can't streak or discolor. Leaves no oily shine, no "stifled" feeling. Pond's Vanishing Cream gives a smooth finish that holds make-up.

"Before make-up" facial—1-Minute Mask for instant glamour!

Whenever it's important to look especially attractive—"re-style" your complexion with Pond's Vanishing Cream smoothed on for a 1-Minute Mask. So quick! Just slip Pond's Vanishing Cream lavishly over whole face, except eyes. After one minute, tissue off clean. "Keratolytic" action of the cream loosens and dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles. Your skin looks clearer, silkier right away! Make-up stays fresh all evening!

Mrs. John A. Roosevelt ..."I like my make-up to look very soft...very casual...but perfect," says charming Mrs. Roosevelt. "After a Pond's 1-Minute Mask I can count on make-up going on perfectly."

(Advertisement)

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

WHAT'S COOKING? This time I don't pose this culinary question carelessly, because the slightly staggering sum of $153,985 is being whipped into this beautiful batch of batter. Our philosopher friend GALEN DRAKE is awarding this luscious loot to lucky housewives skilled and (if you're like me) unskilled with the skillet. It's all part of Pillsbury's "Grand National Recipe and Baking Contest" with 109 cash prizes. There's certainly nothing skimpy about the Pillsbury measure being dished out in this super contest. First prize can reach $50,000 (what a windfall!!!) and 100 other winners will demonstrate their kitchen concoctions at New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel during a 2-day, all-expense trip. Rig up those recipes you're always complimented upon (it can be for pies, cakes, breads, cookies, entrees or desserts) and maybe get in on this frankly fabulous fiesta. There's gold in that dough, ma'am! GALEN DRAKE, the mellifluous man who makes 4:00 PM (EST) on your local ABC station such good listening every weekday afternoon, adds more contest "happy talk" to his usual delivery of home-fed philosophy.

O.K., Lucy, drop the phone, time to listen to TED MALONE!* It may not be good poetry, but I want you to know-etry that the terrific Ted, sponsored by Westinghouse, makes 3:55 PM (EST) a high spot on the American Broadcasting Company day-time dial for me.

MORE FOOD-FOR-THOUGHT-DEPT. . . . How to look lovely and live lively is the duty of a real expert, Serutan's VICTOR H. LINDLAHR. With his diet tips and food advice, Victor has beautified more women than the combined efforts of the great Ziegfeld and Earl Carroll . . . and makes it easy as ABC—which just happens to be the network bringing you Lindlahr Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10:45 AM (EST), Sunday at 11:00 AM (EST). Anyway you spell it Serutan's VHL leads the ladies to loveliness.

* SOCIAL NOTES: Think I'll accept ART LINKLETTER's hep and happy "House Party" invitation to join him weekdays at 12:00 noon (EST). He's such good company . . . and he's presented by Pillsbury.

* LATE NEWS: It runs in the family! Mother's "mad about him," my 15-year old sister, Sue, finds him "divine" and I'm faintly a-flutter myself after a session with handsome, versatile CHARLES "BUDDY" ROGERS. The "Dream Boy" is back . . . and ABC's got him as M.C. on the new program sensation "Pick A Date," 11:30 AM (EST) daily.

Joan Lansing

Song of Surrender: Wanda Hendrix, lovely wife of puritanical Claude Rains, finds solace in music and the arms of young Macdonald Carey.

Thieves' Highway: Valentina Cortesa has been hired by a gang of trucking thieves to divert Richard Conte, who plans to avenge his father.

SONG OF SURRENDER

Cast: Wanda Hendrix, Claude Rains, Macdonald Carey, Andrea King.
Paramount

New England, in 1905, is awful puritanical. So is Claude Rains (a New England gentleman, scholar and curator of a small war museum) who is wed to a young lady (Wanda Hendrix) one-third his age. She's the daughter of a local farmer, and she admires Claude's culture. She works like a team of oxen, and Claude finds her a very obedient wife—until the day she goes to an auction and returns home with a phonograph and a collection of Caruso records. Claude contends the noise is sinful and frivolous. Furthermore, if Wanda sits mooning over that machine, who'll do the chores? Worse still, a bunch of city slickers has come to spend a while at a nearby colonial mansion Claude's family used to own. Among the city folk is Macdonald Carey, handsome young man-about-town, and fiancé of the big colonial mansion's present owner. Wanda takes to sneaking off to a cave in the hills to listen to Caruso, Carey takes to following Wanda, and whoosh! you got young love. Wanda, being a New Englander, fights valiantly for her respectability, but Claude's a suspicious fellow. He turns her away from his bed and board. ("If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out," he says sternly.) Quite a bit more happens, all moderately interesting. The acting of the major roles is excellent. Wanda Hendrix here shows promise of real dramatic fire, Macdonald Carey blends authority with intelligence, Claude Rains is as elegantly expert as ever.

THIEVES' HIGHWAY

Cast: Richard Conte, Valentina Cortesa, Lee J. Cobb, Barbara Lawrence.
20th Century-Fox

Another story from the author of They Drive By Night about the men who jockey the big trucks cross-country, hauling produce to the great markets. Veteran Richard Conte comes home from the service, discovers his father (Morris Carnovsky), a trucker, has lost both legs. He's sold a load of tomatoes to a crooked San Francisco marketeer named Figlia (Lee J. Cobb). Supposedly, Figlia'd paid him off, they'd had several drinks, and the old man had started home. That was all he remembered until he woke up in a ditch—with no money. Probability is that Figlia's men were responsible for the tragedy. Conte swears revenge, hooks up with another trucker, Ed (Millard Mitchell) who knows where the first crop of golden delicious apples in the state can be found. They buy a load (Conte's driving a surplus Army truck, Mitchell's got Conte's father's wreck, held together with chewing gum) and start for San Francisco. Conte arrives first, goes to see Figlia. Figlia hires a girl (Valentina Cortesa) to lure Conte up to her room, and then Figlia proceeds to steal and sell Conte's apples. Conte gets out of the girl's room in time to see what's going on, and he forces Figlia to pay him for his crop. Figlia pays, but later, his henchmen roll Conte, and that's that. Conte's been paid off in front of witnesses. If he can't hang on to his money, that's his business. He's lucky they don't release his brake and send him into a ditch, the way they did his old man. Now tragedy is piled on tragedy. Partner Ed's truck falls apart, and he burns up with it, never reaching San Francisco. Conte's fiancee (Barbara Lawrence) gives him the air when she finds he's been rolled. You know there's going to be a walloping climax, and there is. This is a thriller—the way only Fox seems to make 'em—and the acting is superb. Conte, Mitchell, Cobb, Carnovsky—none's better than the other. About the Italian star, Valentina Cortesa, in her first American role, it's harder to be sure. I thought her vamping was a trifle corny, but then it was a ludicrous part she had to play. Sort of the Mata Hari of the Fulton Fish Market. Aside from one or two over-theatrical moments, she was certainly worth watching. She has a communicable warmth (a virtue not shared by many American actresses), and you don't forget her easily.

Everybody Does It: Linda Darnell is the opera star who, with hilarious results, encourages Paul Douglas to embrace an operatic career.

EVERYBODY DOES IT

Cast: Paul Douglas, Linda Darnell, Celeste Holm, Charles Coburn.
20th Century-Fox

Here's one of the funniest movies of the year. Celeste Holm is a socialite who's always wanted an opera career. Her mother (Lucille Watson) encourages her, her father (Charles Coburn) goes and hides in the liquor closet the minute she lets out a mi-mi-mi, and her husband, Paul Douglas (a man from the other side of the tracks), is confused but gallant. He simply hires a concert hall for $3,000 for an afternoon, and then he and his business partner (Millard Mitchell) force all their friends and customers to take tickets, so that Celeste will have a good debut. Paul thinks Celeste will get the whole thing out of her system, and settle down. But the friends clap so loudly at the debut that Celeste decides to go on a concert tour. Paul's desolate. He wouldn't mind if she were a good singer, but she's lousy. He's told this by a real opera star (Linda Darnell) who takes a fancy to him. Linda's intentions are anything but honorable, yet he likes her. She's a straightforward sort of girl. Linda discovers, furthermore, that Paul himself has a remarkable baritone voice, and coaxes him to go on a concert tour with her. ("If you develop into a better singer than she is, she'll have to give up singing.") Paul tells Celeste he's off on a business trip, takes an assumed name, and departs with Linda. He does marvelously well on the concert stage, but in his absence, Celeste has come a cropper. Got the bird, from a Saturday afternoon movie crowd. ("Real high-class vaudeville," her agent had assured her. "Bill you as a 'society thrush.'") There's a bust-up between Celeste and Paul, there's Paul's ultimate appearance in opera, hilarious and horrible; the whole picture's a delight. Millard Mitchell pleased me more than anybody, though. Take the time Linda's talking to Paul over the phone. Mitchell leans back in his chair and sighs. "I made one of them blind dates once," he says. "In walked a girl who looked like an old third-baseman."

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use...Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Send 10¢ to cover handling charges to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for a jar.

"PAIN" DAYS
CAN BE
PLAY DAYS

MIDOL

RELIEVES FUNCTIONAL
PERIODIC PAIN
CRAMPS-HEADACHE-"BLUES"

"What a difference Midol makes"

MIDOL
RELIEVES CRAMPS
EASES HEADACHE
CHASES "BLUES"

The Red Danube: Soviet dancer Janet Leigh hates Russia. Peter Lawford, British officer in Vienna, doesn't want her to be sent back.

THE RED DANUBE

Cast: Walter Pidgeon, Ethel Barrymore, Peter Lawford, Angela Lansbury, Janet Leigh, Louis Calhern.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

The movies certainly aren't treating the Russians diplomatically anymore. Here we have MGM joining enthusiastically in the "cold war" with the Soviets. Story takes place in the British sector of Vienna, after the war. Forcible repatriation of Russian nationals is in full swing, and British cooperation has been asked. A whole lot of Russians don't want to go home. Janet Leigh is one of them. Once a prima ballerina in Russia, she's now a political refugee. British officer Walter Pidgeon turns her over to the Russian authorities; he's a soldier, and knows his duty. Other British officer Peter Lawford hates him for it; he (Peter) loves little Janet. The Mother Superior (Ethel Barrymore) of the convent where Pidgeon and Lawford are billeted discusses the godlessness of Communists at great length. Janet escapes from the Russians; by this time Pidgeon's convinced that repatriation is wicked, and he helps the Mother Superior and Lawford hide Janet out. The repatriation question is coming up before the UN in a few days; maybe the entire matter will be settled in favor of the refugees. Which is, of course, what happens, only Janet has leaped out of a window before then. There are many things wrong with this picture. Janet Leigh's accent is neither consistent enough nor good enough to warrant using it at all, and the same applies to her ballet dancing. And while the picture's indignation is justifiable (that forcible repatriation was pretty horrible), some of the cracks at Russia are as childish as the pokes the Russians take at us—and we're supposed to be more civilized than that. At one point, for instance, Ethel Barrymore says Merry Christmas to a Russian soldier, and then smiles wryly. "Oh, I forgot," she says. "You Communists don't believe in Christmas." Since the Russians, whatever else their faults, celebrate Christmas for three days running, this remark is gratuitous and absurd. Louis Calhern does a remarkable job of acting as Colonel Piniev, the Russian officer, and the picture has more stars than you could shake a sturgeon at.

also showing . . .

capsule criticism of films previously reviewed

THE ADVENTURES OF ICHABOD AND MR. TOAD (RKO)— This wonderful Walt Disney cartoon consists of two separate stories—Ichabod, based on "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," and Mr. Toad, based on Kenneth Grahame's classic, "The Wind in the Willows." Bing Crosby narrates for Ichabod, Basil Rathbone for Mr. Toad. Ichabod is a good, sound job; Mr. Toad is a pure, sparkling masterpiece.

COME TO THE STABLE (20th-Fox)—Loretta Young and Celeste Holm as French nuns who come to New England to establish a children's hospital and, sweeping all problems before them with faith and charm, do so. Some may find this one a mite sticky, but it does have its engaging moments. With Hugh Marlowe, Elsa Lanchester and Thomas Gomez.

THE HEIRESS (Para.)—As an abashed young heiress lacking in social grace, Olivia de Havilland gets rugged treatment from fortune-hunter Montgomery Clift and her sternly disapproving father, Ralph Richardson, before she has her bitter triumph. A magnificent drama, brilliantly performed—except perhaps by Montgomery Clift, about whose comparative showing in such fast company you may have doubts. With Miriam Hopkins.

I WAS A MALE WAR BRIDE (20th-Fox)— French Army captain Cary Grant and American Wac Ann Sheridan battle each other through assorted hilarities in postwar Germany before they wed and try to get to the States together through a web of red tape. Finally, Cary impersonates a Wac, complete with a horsetail wig. It's not subtle, but who cares? You'll laugh yourself silly.

IT'S A GREAT FEELING (Warners)—Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson, playing a pair of Warners actors named Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson, in a movie concerned with their baffled efforts to make a serious movie. Doris Day, singing like a lark, is involved in the proceedings as a waitress they try to "discover." It's all bright and gay.

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN (Col.)—Further Technicolored adventures of Al Jolson, resuming from the point at which we left our hero in The Jolson Story. Larry Parks again plays Al, and very well, too, while Al sings all the wonderful songs offscreen. Barbara Hale is excellent as Al's wife. Great entertainment.

LOVE HAPPY (U. A.)—The Marx Brothers having their usual field day, assisted by Ilona Massey, who doesn't sing here, Marion Hutton, who does, and Vera-Ellen, who dances with vast skill. A fine and dandy show.

MADAME BOVARY (MGM)—Jennifer Jones is highly effective as the unhappy heroine of Flaubert's classic novel, restlessly seeking the impossible romance of her youthful daydreams. Van Heflin and Louis Jourdan, the main men in her life, are superb. James Mason does well as novelist Flaubert in a prologue and an epilogue. All in all, a beautiful job.

MY FRIEND IRMA (Para.)— Marie Wilson plays the nitwit character of her celebrated radio program in a very funny movie. John Lund is her beau, Diana Lynn her roommate, Don DeFore her boss. Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin, the well-known night-club and radio team, make a successful film debut in this.

ROPE OF SAND (Para.)—Rough stuff in an African diamond field, with Burt Lancaster taking a fearful beating before being declared the winner over villains Paul Henreid and Claude Rains. French newcomer Corinne Calvet, flinging her tresses and torso, supplies the female lure and Peter Lorre, looking as if he'd been slept in, operates shadily. Well, it's diverting.

ROSEANNA McCOY (Goldwyn)—Farley Granger and Joan Evans prove love to be more potent than family hatred in a strange and beautiful drama of the Hatfield-McCoy mountain-country feud. With Charles Bickford, Raymond Massey and Richard Basehart.

THE SECRET GARDEN (MGM)—A fine version, partly in Technicolor, of the famous novel. Margaret O'Brien and Brian Roper are the children who bring an overgrown garden back to flourishing activity and also manage to do much the same for its melancholy owner, Herbert Marshall, and his invalid son, Dean Stockwell.

SLATTERY'S HURRICANE (20th-Fox)—A good cast—Richard Widmark, Linda Darnell, Veronica Lake and John Russell—in a not-so-good drama, the leading feature of which is the work of Navy flyers in keeping tabs on hurricanes off Florida.

SWORD IN THE DESERT (Univ.-Int.)—An exciting and moving story, splendidly performed, of British-Jewish warfare in Palestine. With Dana Andrews, Marta Toren and Stephen McNally.

TASK FORCE (Warners)—The history of U. S. naval aviation, as told through the story of a Navy flyer (Gary Cooper). While parts of the scenario seem written by a 12-year-old boy, there are many terrific scenes of actual Pacific aerial-naval combat, in Technicolor, taken from official Navy files, that make this well worth seeing. With Walter Brennan, Wayne Morris and Jane Wyatt.

THAT MIDNIGHT KISS (MGM)—Kathryn Grayson and Mario Lanza in a comedy with a grand-opera background. The situations and lines are bright, the singing excellent—especially that of newcomer Mario Lanza, who combines a first-rate tenor with a very engaging personality. With Ethel Barrymore and José Iturbi.

TOP O' THE MORNING (Para.)—Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald. Bing's an American insurance company investigator who goes to Ireland to help find the culprit who stole the Blarney Stone. Barry's an all-thumbs village constable. Ann Blyth is the girl. A delightful picture.

UNDER CAPRICORN (Warners)—Ingrid Bergman suffers through alcoholism, domestic unhappiness and social ostracism in 19th Century Australia. A lurid, absorbing drama, smoothly directed by Alfred Hitchcock. With Joseph Cotten and Michael Wilding. Technicolor.

WHITE HEAT (Warners)—James Cagney in one of the most brutal and exciting gangster films ever made. With Virginia Mayo, Edmond O'Brien and Steve Cochran.

YES SIR, THAT'S MY BABY (Univ.-Int.)—A mildish little Technicolor musical—something about the difficulties a college football team runs into when the wives of the GI students decide not to let them play. With Donald O'Connor, Gloria DeHaven and Charles Coburn.

PHOTO CREDITS

Below are page by page credits for photographs appearing in this issue.

6, 7 Bob Beerman—8 T. Lt., Stork Club News Service, T. Rt., M. S. Staff—11 Ted Weisbarth—12 T. Lt., Stork Club, T. Rt., Marty Crail, Bot. Lt., Bert Parry, Bot. Rt., Acme 14 Bert Parry—24 Bob Beerman—27 M.G.M. —28 Bert Parry—29 M. S. Staff—30 Lt. and Cen., Wide World, Rt., Keystone—31 Keystone —32, 33 Bob Beerman—34 Bert Parry—35 T., Bert Parry, Cen. and Bot., 20th Century-Fox—36 20th Century-Fox—37 Bob Beerman—38, 39 Bert Parry—40, 41 Bob Beerman—42-45 Bob Beerman—46 T. Lt., Wide World. T. Cen., M. S. Staff, T. Rt., Globe, Bot. Lt. and Bot. Cen., Globe, Bot. Rt., M. S. Staff—47 T. Lt., M. S. Staff, Bot. Lt., Bob Beerman, Rt., M. S. Staff—48, 49 Bob Beerman—50 Globe—51 Bob Beerman—53 M. S. Staff—56-58 Bob Beerman and Bert Parry—59 Warner Bros.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

Amazing lotion gives new beauty protection to your WHOLE HAND!

1 BEAUTIFIES SKIN. New Hinds is enriched with lanolin to make your hands feel softer instantly—protect them longer. Works wonders on rough, dry skin!

2 SATINIZES PALMS. Even rough palms are soothed and smoothed. New Hinds' "skin-affinity" ingredients actually help to soften calluses.

3 SMOOTHS KNUCKLES. Dry knuckles yield to the smoothing action of New Hinds. Effective emollients "sink in." Hinds dries fast—never feels sticky!

4 SOFTENS CUTICLE. Nails look neater with New Hinds helping to keep cuticle pliable. No ragged edges to "catch." Your manicures stay lovely longer!

WORKS WONDERS! Lanolin-enriched for extra effectiveness, New Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream keeps your whole hand feeling soft in spite of ravages of work and water. Use it to smooth elbows, arms and legs...try it as a powder base. Use Hinds to help protect babies' and children's tender skin from chapping! 4 sizes, 10¢ to $1.00.

Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

NOW IN NEW LARGER BEAUTY BOTTLE

This torn picture of Audie and Wanda symbolizes their current unhappiness.

Rage in Heaven

Wanda Hendrix and Audie Murphy now face the desperate question: Must conflicts between them tear their bright dreams apart?

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

■ A little wisp of a girl, Wanda came into the room looking as crisp and cool as if she had slept on a bed of mint leaves.

Audie, on the other hand, seemed wan and melancholy as he sat on the sofa watching his young wife make an entrance. It seemed apparent that the marriage of Wanda Hendrix and Audie Murphy had changed from poetry to pose.

But Wanda, every inch the actress, didn't show it. She let a smile flit across her lips, and her green eyes sparkled brilliantly, and she played the picture of divine domestic bliss to the hilt. She had been married only 10 months but, magazine deadlines being what they are, she and Audie were posing in advance for first anniversary photographs—and Wanda was determined to show the world that her marriage to the most-decorated U. S. infantryman of World War II was a tremendous success.

However, you could look in Audie's eyes—eyes incapable of deception or (Continued on page 93)

new faces

JEFF CHANDLER had been at work in Universal-International's Sword in the Desert for exactly one day, when studio execs signed him to a long term contract. He'd been signed for the role chiefly because of his vibrant voice (he's Michael Shayne of radio fame) but his 6' 4", 210 lb. frame was also a distinct asset. Jeff was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. on December 15, 1918 and tried out for little theater work directly after graduating from high school. Progressing slowly from bit parts to star billing, Jeff later formed his own stock company. He's married to Marjorie Hoshelle; there are two kids.

VALENTINA CORTESA may be a new face to Hollywood, but she's already an outstanding actress in Italy. She was born in Milan, Italy, January 1, 1925, and spent most of her childhood in a small fishing village on Lake Maggiore. During a village feast, she took part in the dramatic offering and was promptly discovered by two critics. Valentina became the toast of Italy and was re-discovered by Zanuck. She's made Black Magic in Rome with Orson Welles and you will see her soon in Thieves' Highway with Dick Conte.

CHRISTOPHER KENT tried out for Sweden's Royal Dramatic Theater when he was 17 but the directors thought he was a little young. So Chris (who was born Alf Kjellin) tried out for a movie contract instead. He worked at the studio three days a week and at the theater three days a week. Appearing in 26 movies in ten years, Chris first came to the attention of the American public and David Selznick, in the Swedish movie, Torment. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 170 lbs. and has blond hair and blue eyes. His latest is Madame Bovary for MGM.

SUSAN DOUGLAS' real name used to be Zuska Zenta, but she changed it because she felt people would think she was a character actress. She was born in Vienna in 1926 and studied ballet and singing in Prague and Switzerland. Her family fled from Nazi rule in 1939 and Susan came here, quickly learned the language and went into summer stock in Connecticut. She's done lots of radio work (Theater Guild, Mr. District Attorney) and made her movie debut in The Private Affairs of Bel Ami. You've recently seen her as Shelley in Lost Boundaries. Susan's got grey eyes, ash-blonde hair and is 5' 2" tall.

Tallulah the Tube says:

"Your Hair can be Radiant and Dandruff-free —all you've got to do is take me home and squeeze me!"

Doctors' examinations proved Prell Shampoo removes dandruff in as little as 3 minutes!

Light-meter tests prove Prell leaves your hair more radiant!

Wonderful, emerald-clear Prell —with its exclusive formula and patented cleansing ingredient— removes embarrassing dandruff fast! And Prell leaves hair gloriously radiant! More radiant than any soap shampoo . . . more radiant—in hardest water!—than leading cream shampoos. Prell is economical too—goes farther than any other known shampoo because it's more concentrated. For smooth, radiant hair—start shampooing with Prell today!

THERE'S NO OTHER SHAMPOO LIKE EMERALD & CLEAR PRELL!

Prell SHAMPOO

CREATED BY PROCTER & GAMBLE

An Orchid*
to
VITA·FLUFF
"THE WORLD'S FINEST SHAMPOO"
by Duon
*CATTLEYA . . . A. M. NICHOLAS

the true beauty

an open letter to esther williams

Dear Miss Williams:

When you recently donated your time to appear at a benefit for the blind children of Hollywood, you were simply doing what so many in your profession do week in and week out. Motion picture people are among the most generous of American citizens in their support of charitable causes.

But in this case, you have gone beyond making a reasonable financial donation and promising to give a little more of your time again when you could. For as you saw those youngsters groping sadly in their fumbling attempts at play, it struck you, as a mother-to-be, with an especially tragic impact—and you decided to do something far-reaching about it.

As a result, those who care for blind children now have a new concept in training their little charges to adapt themselves to future life. Before, for lack of sight, these youngsters never knew the joy and confidence that comes with energetic, violent play. You, Miss Williams, had the imagination to realize that swimming could be a tremendous aid as therapy to help them toward normal living. So you brought as many of them as possible to your swimming pool, and taught them to splash in abandon without fear.

And as soon as you had proved its value, you began a campaign to spread the use of this new type of physical education for blind children everywhere. There are now indications that it will be adopted widely.

Thus, in addition to having accomplished the good in life of bringing wholesome entertainment to millions of people through your work in pictures, you have now been the moving force in an achievement that can mean the difference between dark despair and happy, useful living for thousands of unfortunates.

Obviously, you have physical beauty, Miss Williams. And you've proved you also have beauty of another sort—the only sort that, after all, is really important.

And that, of course, is beauty of the spirit.

William B. Hartley

EDITOR

Six-year-old Chris and eight-year-old Josh match muscles with their parents. At home, the friendly, humorous side of Mitchum shows clearly.

■ It was Christmas Eve, 1935. It would be nice to paint a picture of snow and jingle-bells and fat fellows with white beards and good-will-on-earth—but it wasn't like that at all. It was hot. Very hot. The place was the California-Arizona border, not far from Yuma, and the scene was nightfall, a rambling border patrol station with a dozen uniformed guards.

Out of the dusk, down the dusty road, three men appeared, walking toward the bright star in the distance that was the floodlight above the patrol station. One of them was tall and white-haired, a distinguished-looking gentleman, if you didn't take into account his well-worn clothes and scuffed shoes. The second was a leather-skinned man in his middle fifties in overalls and a broad-brimmed hat. He had the walk of a man following a plow. The third was a youngster, tall, lean and hard. He was wearing a cowhide jacket and levis. His name was Robert Mitchum.

This was in the days of the Depression, and the guards were there to keep the derelict wanderers of the country from overrunning California.

Each of the three men had a story and a reason for wanting to enter the state. The elder man was a banker, temporarily without a bank. The plowman was a Texan, recently ousted from his hog ranch near Fort Worth. Mitchum was a boy who wanted to see the land and meet its people.

The banker said he wanted to enter California for the climate. The Texan, to look over the pig situation. And when they asked Bob Mitchum his reason, he squinted up his eyes into cold slits.

"I live in this country," he said, "and I want to get a look at my Pacific Ocean."

The cops thought he was just another smart guy. At any rate, the three were turned back, and they walked a mile off into the desert and built a fire against the chill the night was to bring, and bedded down among the dunes. It was there that Christmas found them. Three men alone, unwanted while the world rejoiced, an open fire of mesquite their hearth and a spindly Yucca their tree.

As Robert Mitchum lay there and watched the Great Dipper trouble ahead for Mitchum?

Molded by bitter experience, scornful of sham and double dealing, this strange and violent man will always go his own proud way.

BY ARTHUR L. CHARLES

Bob Mitchum did lots of dishwashing in the days when any job looked good. But don't let that apron he's got on fool you—he very definitely wears the trousers in the Mitchum household.

traverse the sky, his thoughts were violent and his anger sure. He knew that night that a man must have rage and strength and money to get his own heritage, and he vowed he'd never be without them.

Time has flavored the personality of Robert Mitchum since that night, but he is still a violent man. You don't have to look very closely at Robert Mitchum's face today to know that he still thinks much the way he did that Christmas years ago. It is evident in the contour of his features—the way they set during his formative years. There is evidence, too, in the belligerence that tinges his soft drawl, and in the quick temper which can flare in the midst of his hearty laugh.

Yet there is one thing you must understand: Robert Mitchum is not a hard man. A hard man has no heart. For instance, in Bob's roving days, pre-marriage and pre-Hollywood, there was a girl he'd just met who, after a few nips from a community bottle, thought he was in a fair condition to rob. Bob caught her in the act. He grasped her wrist. Wide-eyed, she waited for his angry reaction. He held her (Continued on page 97)

EUROPE TODAY HAS BECOME THE SCENE OF ANOTHER AMERICAN INVASION—THIS TIME BY THE HOLLYWOOD STARS,

stars on a spree abroad

by hedda hopper

■ The good-looking pilot flashed me a wide American grin. "Hello there, Miss Hopper," he said. "This is a little different from our last trip together, hey?"

We were roaring high over the Alps on the way to Italy, and below in the frosty moonlight the mountains looked like huge, unreal peaks of vanilla ice-cream. Inside, the plane was packed with a cosmopolitan crew. A big blond Swede, a chilly Briton, swarthy Armenian merchants, animated Italians and three silent, brown Arabians wrapped in white turbans and burnooses—millionaire oil kings from the Near East, for this fast plane to Rome would continue on to Cairo.

"I'll say it's different," I answered as I recognized the skipper. "The last time I saw you was when you flew some movie stars and me out of Hollywood on a big ballyhoo junket, wasn't it?"

He nodded. "Yeah, but now, all roads lead to Rome. Everybody's got something crazy to do over here—or if they haven't," he laughed, "they're hoping like anything to find it!"

I couldn't have tagged it better myself—the rainbow-chasing rush to Europe that's seized the Hollywood movie world. For personal proof, here was I, deserting my desk, hopping across America and the Atlantic and hundreds of miles more to hunt up Hollywood stories and track down straying screen stars caught in the Continental craze. Chasing pots of gold, all of them, of one kind or another—fun, excitement, escape, new romances, new glamor, new careers. And finding—what? The gleaming precious stuff of their dreams—or just fool's gold? (Continued on page 90)

Greta Garbo, unable to escape an alert Parisian photographer despite her mannish disguise, adds her amused friend's hat to it.

Myrna Loy, wearing a plunging-neck Dior evening gown, sits in London for Cathleen Mann. Like other stars, Myrna stocked up on new Parisian finery.

Mrs. Edward G. Robinson outfits Ed with a ga number at a party in San Remo. He took th family to Italy where he's been making a movie

WHO HAVE BEEN FINDING IT A PERFECTLY WONDERFUL PLACE FOR HARD WORK AND JUST PLAIN FOOLISHNESS.

Sheik Sadec of French Morocco entertained the Tyrone Powers lavishly. Linda, unfortunately, has lost her expected baby.

uglas Fairbanks, with his wife and daughters, s out for Buckingham Palace to be made Knight of the British Empire by the King.

Joan Fontaine and Joseph Cotten see the sights of Florence, Italy, where they made scenes for September. In Rome, Joan was squired by a new beau.

Orson Welles catches up on the latest Italian gossip. While having his financial ups and downs, he's still Orson the Great.

On the set, they're Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, carrying on an open romance for the camera, but keeping their own attachment under cover.

Two Loves Have We

by Dale Evans

Dale and Roy Rogers are both involved in a secret romance—with each other.

■ Roy Rogers and I both lead "double lives." We both have another love outside our home.

We get up in the morning, kiss each other goodbye (we leave at different times because it takes a woman hours to get ready for the camera, and a man—or Roy, anyway—only minutes) and then, at the studio, we meet other loves.

His other love is Dale Evans—not his wife. My other love is Roy Rogers—not my husband.

Of course, this romance at the studio can't be carried on openly. In the best tradition of such affairs it is clandestine. It lives only in the "little things" that go on, and no one without an eye for these would ever suspect there was anything between us.

The little things . . .

When it is still quite early in the morning and I am under the hairdresser's hands on the set, Roy may drop by and—what do you know!—he'll just happen to be carrying two nice, steaming cups of coffee. Would I like to have one?

Or if he is getting nowhere studying a lyric in Spanish (he manages to sing at least one Spanish chorus in each picture) I can "feel" his puzzlement no matter where I am and I'll chance along to help him in his problem of pronouncing the words so they'll have a reasonably accurate Latin ring to them. Not that I'm a language scholar or anything—but I was brought up near many Spanish people in Texas and grew familiar long ago with their accents.

If I am making some scenes in which he does not appear, I may not see him for hours, perhaps—unless the scenes require that I do anything that might be even remotely hazardous. Then, without fail, Roy will show up, talk to the director, study the planned action and, I know, estimate whether there might be any overlooked element of danger involved for me.

At times like that he gets a wary (Continued on page 87)

At home, they're Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, a very domestic couple who enjoy roughhousing with Roy's children—Cheryl, Linda Lou and Dusty.

Jeanne Crain and Paul Brinkman, on a rise near their house, look toward the hill from where they chose the beautiful site.

I live on the rim of heaven

BY JEANNE CRAIN

We live on a hill where the clouds drift, but our home has roots—like our love.

■ "Let's go on a picnic," Paul said and, because he was my brand-new husband, he kissed me on the tip of my nose.

"Not me," I retorted. "You go on the picnic. I may be a bride, but I have to be at the studio tomorrow for a test. I don't want to show up all sunburned and ant-bitten."

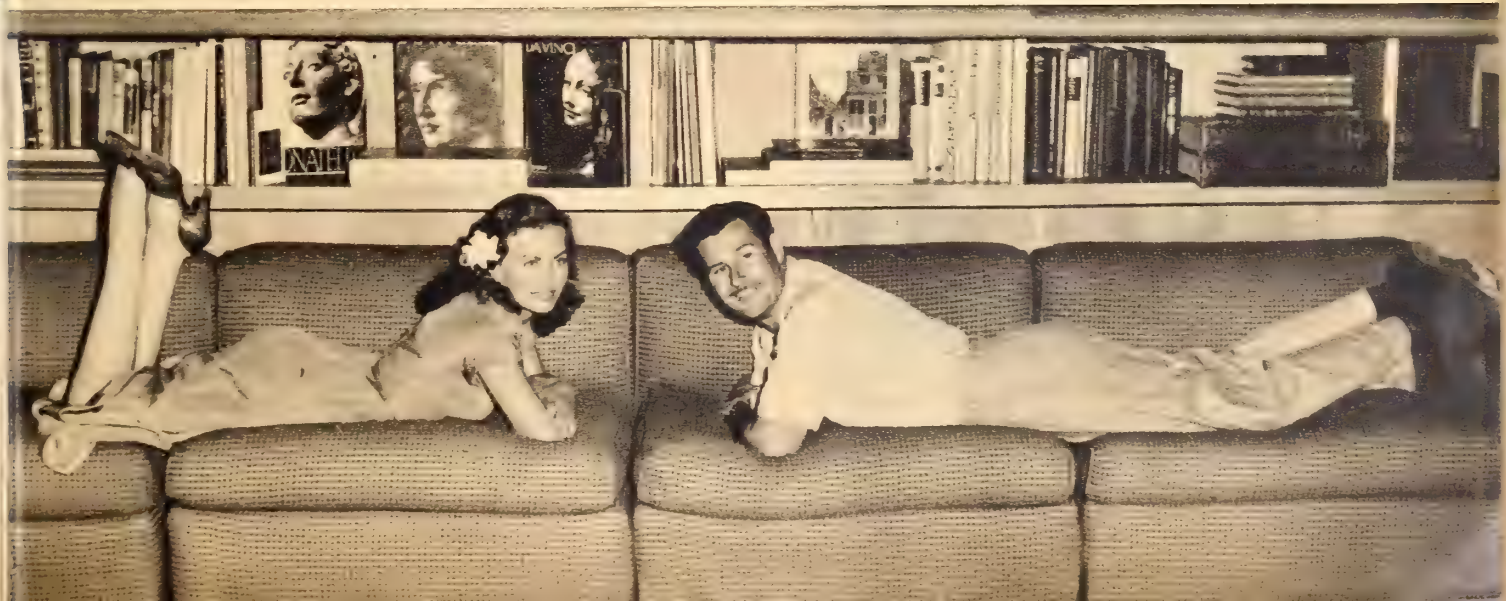
Paul snorted. "My dear Mrs. Brinkman," he scolded, "what's more important to you—one little test or our dream house?"

"Well," I said, "the dream house, naturally. But what's that got to do with a picnic?"

Paul smiled secretively. "You'll see," he assured me. And I did.

I'd forgotten all about the ants and the sunburn by the time we sat down to our picnic luncheon of fried chicken amid the brush and wild flowers of the Hollywood hills. We looked out across the panorama of those hills and Paul said, "Darling, see those six knolls overlooking the city? They're ours—I own them. Seven acres of heaven's rim. Now, I want you to tell me—where shall we put our house?"

It was a difficult decision. There were five more picnics before we agreed on the exact knoll on which to build. We knew one thing—our dream house was to be a streamlined structure of redwood, fieldstone and lots of sparkling glass. No old-fashioned castles for us. None of that wedding-cake stuff in vivid pink stucco. All we wanted was a simple, solid, low-lying structure, something beautifully permanent.



So we had picnics with a purpose on those golden sunny days, those high windy days, those misty days when clouds drift (Continued on next page)

The living room, with the dining alcove and the foyer set off by a vine-covered glass partition, is given a cool, rustic effect by the natural-wood walls and the green-stained ceiling.

Paul and Jeanne have lunch in the dining alcove, with the swimming pool in view outside. Below: The living-room bookshelves feature an assortment of art books, ceramics and old magazines.

I live on the rim of heaven

continued

Jeanne Crain and family at their favorite picnic spot—their swimming pool at home. Paul Brinkman, Jr., riding his dad, is becoming a skilled merman. Michael loves splashing, too.

Jeanne and Paul take the balmy autumn California sun near their curving, flagstone pool. The built-in barbecue hearth makes it an ideal place for their outdoor entertaining.

around the throats of the mountains. Then, one day when it was so wet that we had to eat our lunch in the car, we saw a glowing rainbow spin against the sky. Below, where the scrub and oaks jutted on a sort of rounded shelf, we saw our house—just the way it would be, just as it is.

We love our house because it's not a showplace. It's a house in which every corner has that lived-in feeling. Our two-year-old, Paul, has the run of the place. Visitors sometimes are startled to see him staggering through the living room with a set of light aluminum steps in his small arms. With great determination he heads for the bookshelves or the kitchen to get what he wants. He's a self-reliant youngster who, instead of tugging at my skirts when he wants a set of jungle books or a glass of water, just gets his steps and lives his life.

Our way of living is very informal. In our orchard we now have 70 young trees, just beginning to bear fruit—oranges, lemons, limes, loquots, sapotes and Tangolas—and when friends drop in they are more than likely going to find me bending over a stove ladelling a sweet-smelling mass of marmalade. And if they're properly respectful of my art, I'll give them some to take home!

Painting I love. And so does Paul. Skeet-shooting he loves. And so do I. I find myself out on the shooting range with Paul at least one afternoon a week. The next afternoon, he'll be daubing away on an oil portrait of little Michael. It's really funny how two people can grow alike in their interests. Every now and then I discover Paul loaded with an armful of my art books, carrying them off to study at his corner of our bedroom desk. Perhaps he was inspired by the portrait Henry Clive did of me—the one we have hanging in our entrance hall. Whatever it was that started him painting, we'll probably soon be adding an extra wing for a painting workshop.

I'm not sure about that, though. We always manage to center our activities in our living room and it always seems to have room enough for our expanding ideas. I'm mad about clipping recipes and home furnishing ideas out of women's magazines. Even after I get the magazines chopped to ribbons I still refuse to throw them away. I'm so afraid that I may have missed something, they all find a place in the book shelves for possible future reference—along with Baby Paul's animal books, ceramic pixies and no one knows what else.

The other day I said to Paul, "Let's go on a picnic."

"Sorry, not me," he answered. "I've got work to do. You go on a picnic."

So, out by the swimming pool, little Paul, tiny Michael and I sat down to our picnic lunch. You can guess what happened. In a little while that husband of mine joined us, grinning.

I caught him looking out over the hills from which we once searched for just this spot. "Hmmmm," he mused. "Who would have thought it would all turn out as wonderfully as this?"

"Who?" I repeated, indignantly. "Why, we did, that's who!"

Paul smiled—then put his big arms around all three of us.

THE END

This love of ours

by Mary Andrews

Dana and I have shared everything—struggle, success, and much happy living.

■ In just a few days, Dana and I will be celebrating our 10th wedding anniversary. Dancing at Ciro's? . . . Sipping champagne at the Mocambo? . . .

Hardly!

See that sun-baked, wind-blown couple in faded dungarees, snoozing peacefully on the deck of that beautiful boat anchored off Catalina? Oops! Simultaneously they spring to life, just in time to retrieve a small boy dangling head-down over the starboard side.

That will be Mr. and Mrs. Andrews, heading into their second decade of married life—and having a wonderful time.

Our first 10 years have been smooth sailing, with only the usual minor squalls encountered by any normal family. And I'm proud to say that we are a normal family—as normal as mumps, mortgages, (Continued on page 88)

sixth in a series

by Janet Leigh

There'll be only one man in my life who really matters— and I know my heart will tell me when it finds that lasting love. But until it does . . .

I WON'T GO STEADY

Janet Leigh's favorite Hollywood escort these days is Arthur Loew, Jr. He's a bright young MGM executive and rapidly rising.

■ There's an expression that I wish they wouldn't apply to me. It's "going steady." The way I look at it, the term should be used about a girl only when she's so serious about a man that she's seeing him exclusively.

Yet, since I've been free, there have been only two boys I've dated constantly. This may sound like a contradiction, but I'll try to explain, as I go along, why it isn't.

At 18, I married a boy in my home town of Stockton. We were divorced a year or so ago, and it's just been made final. Hollywood had nothing to do with our separation. I'd like to make a point of that, because Hollywood's been blamed for so many things. We were simply both too young for marriage. We hadn't taken time to learn enough about each other. What broke us up was incompatibility—which, trite though it may be to say so, I still think is responsible for nine out of 10 unhappy marriages. The point is, we'd have found ourselves just as incompatible in Stockton as in Hollywood.

Since then, as I said, there are just two boys I've dated constantly—Barry Nelson and Arthur Loew, Jr. But constantly isn't the same as exclusively. I've never tied myself down to any pattern. I've always left myself free to date as I choose. And I'm the kind of person who enjoys going out a lot with one boy. I find it less confusing. You don't have to keep adjusting yourself to new personalities. When you know someone well, you build up a common background of jokes and fun, you fall into an easy, comfortable routine, you can be more natural. (Continued on page 75)

MY SNEAK PARTY

by Diana Lynn

Entertaining our guests is no problem now—we invite them to sit in the dark, make them stay quiet and watch their own movies. It keeps them happy!

■ Somehow, I know in my heart I'll never be the perfect hostess. I try, but things just never seem to come off the way I've planned.

For example, recently John and I wanted to give a dinner party. We set the date—and then, what with one thing or another, I had to call our guests and invite them not to come.

Well, postponing things once wasn't too bad. But I was forced to do it three more times!

Finally I was determined not to suffer this embarrassment any longer. I called the studio and said very firmly that under no circumstances would I work on Friday evening. (Luckily, they had no such plans anyhow!) I called my agent and told him that I positively refused to take this particular Friday to read a script, even if it meant losing a role I'd give half my life for.

At three o'clock I telephoned John at his office and said gleefully, "We've finally done it! All the guests are coming. The dinner will be wonderful, and don't forget to come home real early."

At 5:30 I called John again, breathlessly. "John, our plans are changed—the dinner at home is off and I'll pick you up in a half-hour."

This husband of mine is an amazing man. "Well, okay," he calmly agreed. "But just as a matter of curiosity—what happened this time? Did the house burn down? Did you fight with all our friends? Or are you flying to Timbuctu on location?"

"No, but something really important has come up—a sneak preview of My Friend Irma!"

"Wonderful," said John. "But—what about our guests?"

"The guests? Oh, don't worry about them," I said lightly. "They're all coming with us. We're just putting the party on wheels, that's all!"

And that's just what we did. Perhaps I should explain that movie players are very rarely admitted to sneak previews. These events are usually so secret that only a few people in the entire studio know beforehand at what theater a picture will be shown for its first test reaction before a regular audience. The actors are not invited, not only because they get underfoot, but also because they're likely to begin calling up in the morning and complaining about having had their favorite (Continued on page 93)

Marie Wilson reacts modestly after the preview of My Friend Irma, as Diana Lynn's party accuses her of having stolen the show.

RARE INFRA-RED PICTURES CATCH DIANA LYNN UNAWARES AS, WITH HUSBAND JOHN LINDSAY, SHE WATCHES HERSELF PERFORM IN "MY FRIEND IRMA."

"Can that be me . . . ?"

"What a delirious scene!"

"I guess I wasn't too bad, there."

"You really like me, John?"

John Lund whispers furtively to Marie Wilson, "You're a hit, honey!" In so doing, he awakens a less enthusiastic movie-goer—Marie's dog, Hobbs.

gary cooper's mountain hideaway

The three Coopers watch the skiing from the Sundeck, a glass-enclosed building at the summit of the ski slope at Aspen, Colorado.

The scenery takes their breath away . . . the skiing goes to their heads. The Coopers have found the place where they belong.

BY TOM CARLILE

■ While attending the press preview of The Fountainhead in Hollywood last Summer, I ran into Gary Cooper. That night he looked about 15 years younger than the character he plays in the film; he's one actor who always looks younger in person than on the screen. After greetings were exchanged, I asked him how he does it.

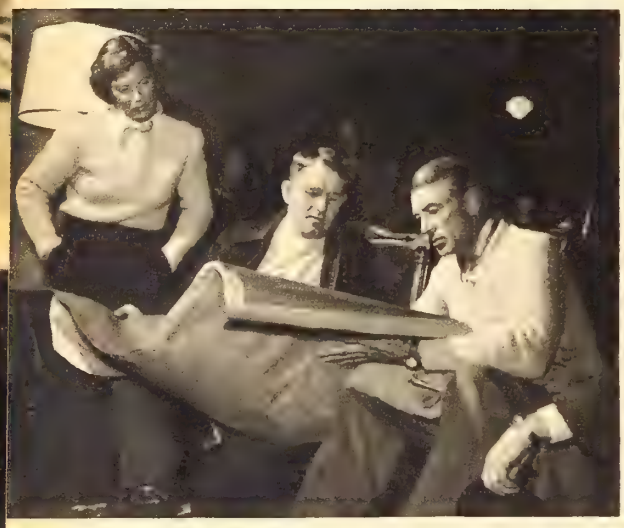
"Well," he said with a grin, "maybe it's the healthy life I lead. I've just been up to Aspen, Colorado. Caught some of the biggest trout you ever saw. Prettiest place in western America."

My information about Aspen was limited, but Gary told me more about it. Surrounded by 14,000-foot mountains, Aspen was, in the 1880's and early 1890's, one of the world's greatest silver-mining centers, with a population of 15,000. But in 1893, when the price of silver collapsed, it became virtually a ghost town.

About three years ago, however, Chicago industrialist Walter Paepcke, struck by the majestic beauty of the place, determined to establish it as a year-round resort. He formed the Aspen (Continued on page 44)

Twelve-year-old Maria Cooper skeptically looks over the selection of gay stocking-caps at the Aspen Country Store, as her father waits patiently. Maria agreed on one only when her mother said she'd buy a cap to match it.

Back in town after a day on the ski slopes, Gary and Rocky pause to greet a friend on their way to the historic old hotel (background, left) where they stayed until their house was finished.



Gary and Rocky have a cigarette before going their separate ways. Gary is left to his own devices much of the day, while his wife and daughter take special instruction. They're the real skiers of the family, he says.

Gary picks up his mail at the Jerome Hotel. Built in 1889 when Aspen was a silver-mining center, the hotel was restored three years ago when the ghost town was revived as a year-round resort.

After shopping, Gary Cooper with his wife, Rocky, and daughter, Maria, head out for more skiing on the beautiful slopes which have drawn them to Aspen.

Gary and Rocky confer with Horace Hendricks, the Aspen contractor who built their lakeside home, which looks across the full sweep of the celebrated ski runs.

By 5 o'clock, the Coopers are ready to join other skiers at the hotel for tea, dancing and, of course, much enthusiastic talk about the day's skiing.

Company and got to work building ski runs, and bringing in small businesses and cultural facilities. Today, Aspen is a skier's paradise in winter and a fisherman's heaven in the spring and summer—there are 1,000 well-stocked streams in the vicinity.

"It's a great place," said Gary. "From now on Mrs. Cooper and I are going to spend as much time in Aspen as we possibly can, winter and summer. We're building a house there, you know. We bought 15 acres. The house won't be too fancy, but comfortable enough. It'll be right by a lake, a frame house with an aluminum roof. Five bedrooms, four baths, kitchen, an 18-by-38 living room."

We talked some more about the house, and fishing, and the Colorado scenery. And before we said goodbye, he'd invited me to come up to Aspen for a weekend.

Thus it was that, a few weeks later, your correspondent and photographer Bob Beerman pulled up in a bus before the Jerome Hotel in Aspen. It was 10 degrees below zero, but the Aspen inhabitants didn't seem to mind a bit as, skis over shoulders, they plodded along in the deep, crusty snow, happily blowing up clouds of warm breath as if they had lots of it to waste.

The Jerome Hotel is a big rambling structure that was built during the town's mining boom days. Now restored, it still looks exactly like those false-fronted Victorian buildings you see in every Western movie, and is the sort of place you'd expect to find Gary Cooper. And that's where we did find him—lounging against a weathered column on the veranda, in his shirt-sleeves.

As we shivered out of the bus, Cooper ambled over with a warm smile on his face. "Glad you boys could make it," he said pleasantly. "It snowed last night. And the weather is just perfect for skiing."

"How can you stand to walk around in just that shirt?" I had to ask, pulling my overcoat collar tighter.

"Oh, I've been up on a ski run all afternoon," he said. "Got overheated."

We followed him into the hotel and sat down in the cocktail lounge, in front of a big window which offered a view of the whole snow-covered mountain across the valley. It seemed busier than an excited ant-hill. Dozens of skiers were plummeting down its slopes, and I suppose I shivered again rather noticeably.

"Cold?" Cooper asked. "They have a fine cure for that here in Aspen." He called over the waitress and said something to her. When she came back, she had three milk-shakes on her tray.

"Aspen Specials" explained Cooper. "Drink them and I'll show you around." We did, and the cold disappeared almost magically. It must have been the stout portion of rum in the drinks. It was still working fine five minutes later when we found ourselves pacing eagerly through the snow at Cooper's side.

Walking around Aspen with Cooper, you feel that the history of the colorful town has a deep meaning for him. When we came to the 58-year-old Wheeler Opera House, Cooper stopped before the three-story brick structure and said, "An amazing building. In the old days, Lillian (Continued on page 98)

▲ Rocky and Maria join Gary for a downhill run. They usually do it together at least once a day.

➤ Gary investigates some skis at the shop, run by one of the new Aspen's very earliest settlers.

▼ Cooper relaxes at Aspen. He and his family plan to spend all of .their free time at the place.

The men in Ann Sheridan's life come and go. Does she realize that laughs aren't enough to DISK-JOCKEY JOHNNY GRANT and Ann Sheridan made the rounds together last summer, but Ann soon insisted it was only a casual friendship.

RADIO ANNOUNCER JOHN CONTE shared a lot of laughs with Ann once. They did the night spots, were hailed the "town's newest romance."

MAN-ABOUT-TOWN PAT DI CICCO is one of Ann's frequent escorts in Hollywood. They have the same happy-go-lucky attitude on dating.

BILL CAGNEY, who works with brother Jimmy as a producer, has been Ann's partner-in-fun recently. Irish wit has always intrigued her.

SERIOUS-MINDED FRANCHOT TONE is the exception to the rule about the men Ann Sheridan sees. Their current dates have people puzzled.

PLAYBOY BRUCE CABOT goes on the town with Ann often. The two have picked up their merry-making where they left off pre-Steve Hannagan.

Annie, get your guy

by sheilah graham

■ All the boys love Annie Sheridan. All of them will always tell you, "Annie's a great girl." And she is a great girl. That's why it seems so strange that the boys love her—and leave her.

So I went to work to find out why men meander in and out of the Sheridan life. And I came up with some very surprising explanations. One: Ann is, emotionally, just about the laziest gal in town. Two: All she wants from a man is that he make her laugh.

I remember when Jimmy Stewart, talking of Myrna Dell, said, "We go together for laughs." Myrna was reportedly furious. She knew, it was said, that if Jimmy went with her for laughs only, his intentions were strictly boffo—that she was a bust make a romance last, that in order to hold a guy you have to work at it?

DIRECTOR JEAN NEGULESCO, like the other men who have interested Ann, rated high in her chief requirement—a good sense of humor.

CESAR ROMERO has long found Ann the ideal party companion. Both love to dance and ask nothing from each other but a gay evening.

PUBLICITY MAN STEVE HANNAGAN was Ann Sheridan's steady beau for five years. They never married, however, and Ann broke off the romance when she felt he had become too possessive—he wanted her to live in Connecticut, safely away from the rival males of New York.

romantically. Could it be that Annie's love-life is jinxed by the jokes, too?

One of Ann's current loves is Jacques Mapes, the set designer. She adores Jacques because he's always thinking up gags to amuse her. Ann still roars over the stunt he pulled when she left for Europe to star with Cary Grant in I Was A Male War Bride. Jacques called a group of the boys together, put mourning bands on their sleeves, and that's how they went to the station to see Ann off. She couldn't have appreciated Jacques more if he had given her a million roses. And she called him from Germany twice a week sometimes, just to yak all over again at the joke.

You can imagine what a delight Ann's free-and-easiness is for a man like Clark Gable. Clark hates "problem" girls—that is, girls who want to fall in love with him or get married. Ann wants neither. She merely wants a good time with him. They've known each other for years and when Ann and Steve Hannagan broke up after five years of close companionship, Clark called her, they had a few dates, a few laughs and started a few rumors.

I wonder if Ann was really in love with Steve Hannagan. Even after they called it quits, they were still good friends. (When he came to Hollywood "on business," as he said, she dined with him nearly every night—out of habit?) When you have loved someone madly, you usually hate them just as intensely—for a period, anyway—when it's all over. I think Annie kept going with Stevie all that time because she just didn't want to bother breaking things up.

Ann had been grateful to Steve, of course, when he unofficially took over the management of her career. He fought with her studio for two years while Annie waited complacently in New York for him to win her career battles. It was only when he finally became too possessive and insisted on where she should live (he wanted her to live in Connecticut and not in New York because, I'm told, he was jealous of the New York playboys), that Annie finally found the necessary energy to come back to Hollywood and lead her own happy-go-lucky, carefree, easygoing life here.

And no one was (Continued on page 74)

Mrs. Eva Granger and her son, Farley. He now has his own apartment, but still brings friends to the old homestead for dinner.

He's not my baby anymore!

by Mrs. Eva Granger

Seen through his mother's eyes, Farley Granger's a boy who finds joy in a rainstorm, who brings her flowers—and his socks to darn.

■ Anything written about Farley Granger, I'm likely to read. Sometimes I love the stories—but sometimes they puzzle me, and I hand the magazine to my husband.

"That's Farley?" I ask unbelievingly.

He reads it. Then he says, "Hmmmm. . . . Well, I suppose all of us look different to different people. Question of viewpoint. Whoever wrote this—well, that's Farley to him."

"Fair enough. I've got a viewpoint too. Why don't they ask me about Farley?"

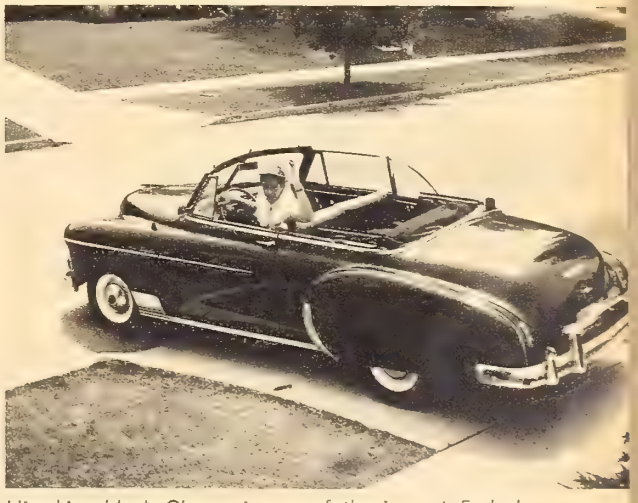
But when MODERN SCREEN asked me, I didn't feel quite so brash. It's one thing to babble about your child in private, and another to make sense about him in print. "Where'll I start?" I asked Dad, slightly panicky.

"Just dive in," he grinned. "You'll come up with something."

I'm taking his advice. If this is a hodgepodge, blame it on both of us. . .

To me, what makes Farley tick more than anything else is his tremendous zest for life. There's no limit to his enjoyment of the world and its magic. For instance, I remember when he came home from New York where they went to make Side Street. He'd seen all the shows. Well, everyone sees the shows, though maybe they don't get as excited as Farley. But that was the least of it. What really steamed him up were the things a lot of us take for granted.

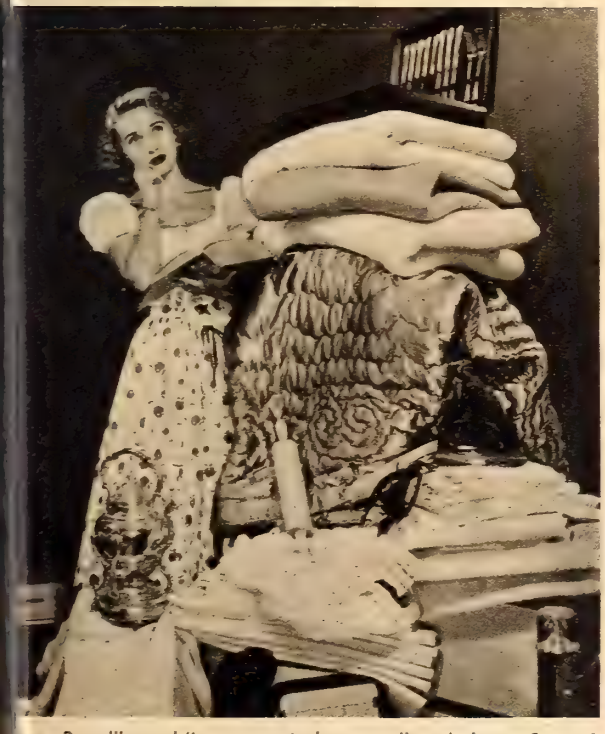
"I walked around town in the rain and saw those fantastic buildings under lightning and thunder. Boy, what a beautiful sight!" He talks quietly enough, but his eyes blaze and he's like a high-tension wire, giving off sparks. "I got a horse and rode in Central Park. I stood on Brooklyn Bridge, and looked down at the water. I talked to cops. In New York, even the cops are wonderful."



There's another story I'd like to stick in here, for no reason except that it's just as characteristic. You can imagine how he felt—how we all felt—the day Joan Evans' arm was badly burned when Farley accidently discharged a blank cartridge while on location for Roseanna McCoy. It was 8:30 before the doctors said Joan's arm would be all right. After the first burst of relief, Farley thought, "Flowers. She can't wake up in that bare hospital room tomorrow, and not have any flowers!" (Continued on page 96)

When Farley Granger makes the bed in his bachelor quarters it may not be thorough, but it's fast. His rooms are filled with books—one of his major passions.

Even before he could afford it, Farley was an avid record-collector—he began with modern music and is now gathering classics. He still sings off key, though.



His shiny black Chevvy is one of the joys of Farley's life. He's a few minutes away from his parents' home, no time at all from dates with—say—Shelley Winters.

The hope chest was filling up and the piggy bank was getting heavy. So Jane Powell and Geary Steffen thought it was about time. . . .

BY IDA ZEITLIN

she wants to do Homework

ne Powell's wedding presents have really piled up. One of e most thoroughly used will be a cook book—she loves cook- g and plans to do it all herself as Mrs. Geary Steffen.

■ By the time you read this—unless something completely unforeseen happens—Jane Powell will have become Mrs. Geary Steffen. When I saw her, the wedding date—November 5—had been set, she had a rapidly-filling hope chest, a honeymoon piggy bank and there was a shower coming up. She and Geary didn't yet have a house to live in, but that was a mere detail.

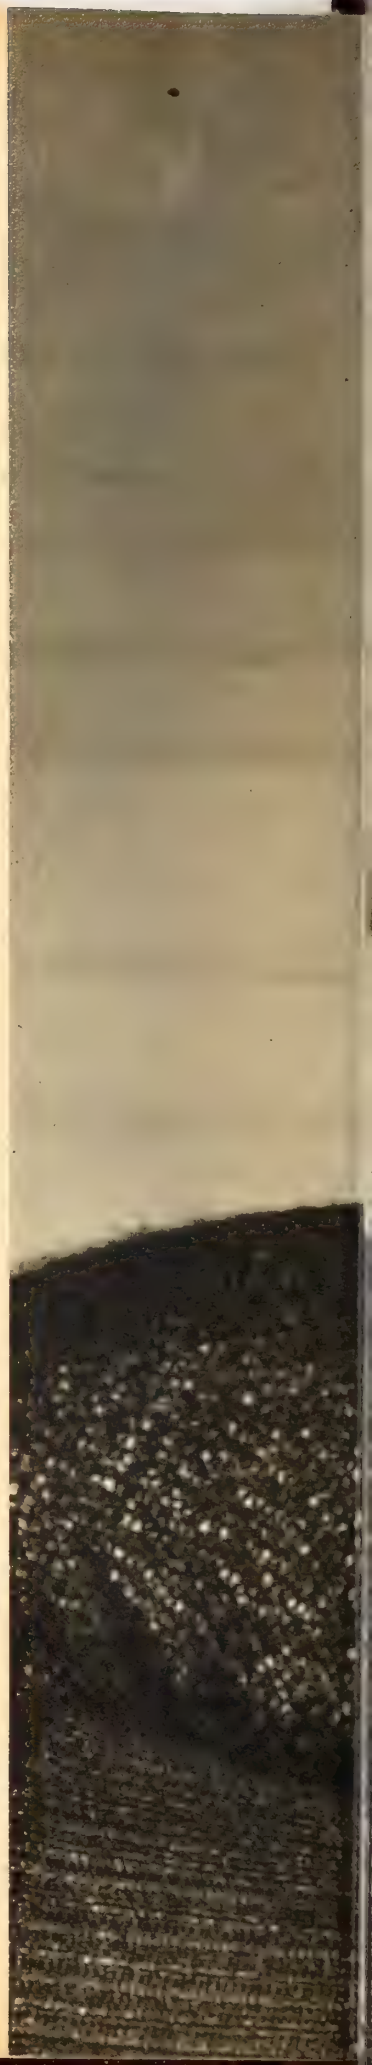
"Fields have suddenly opened," said Janie, and her eyes gave off stars.

The fields are for Geary, naturally. She and he have been engaged since January 5th, and he's the one who's held up the wedding. As Sonja Henie's skating partner, he was doing fine. But in Geary's book, you don't get married and leave your wife for weeks while you're on the road. In any case, he'd never intended to make a career of skating.

"You can't," he says. "Ten years from now, your legs won't be so good, and you'll be left with a bunch of nothing."

Strictly speaking, Jane's been ready for marriage almost any time since January 5th. Not Geary. "I won't marry you until I can take care of you."

"But I hate long engagements."



"So do I, honey. Only that's how it's got to be."

It was their one bone of contention. Not that Jane didn't understand his (Continued on page 85)

This remarkable self-portrait is one of the very few stories ever to be published, in any magazine, under Clark Gable's own by-line. Modern Screen considers it an honor to be able to present such intimate revelations of a great star—by the one who knows him best.

my plans for GABLE

by clark gable

■ There is an extra-sized mountain lion which roams pretty generally through the Sierra Madres in Mexico and is called "La Tigre" by the natives. Some years ago I went hunting for this cat along the border between the states of Sonora and Chihuahua. It is rough country and one evening, weary and hungry, but mostly weary, our party reached a little village that wasn't even named on our map.

It was dark, there was no inn and all the inhabitants had long since gone to bed in the few rude huts that make up the place. I was too tired to take another step and was standing there wondering what to do next when my sleeping bag slipped to the ground from my shoulder. That was all the hint I needed. Kicking the bag up against a dobe wall, I climbed inside and went to sleep right there and then on the street. I learned later that the rest of the group did the same after milling about a little and trying vainly to stir somebody up.

In the morning I was awakened by sharp, cuppy sounds. Barely peeking through my eyelashes in the bright sunlight, I saw that I was surrounded by a ring of Mexican children, all wide-eyed, but all perfectly still and respectful of my sleep. What had aroused me was the clippety-clop of heavily-loaded burros trotting past on the hard, cement-like dirt. Their owners, with hardly a glance for me, were already driving their burros out for the day's work. I looked back at the kids and smiled. Instantly they broke into smiles, like a team. (Continued on page 81)

Crosby and Sinatra, poor guys, are washed up. At least, that's what has been printed abou

TOO YOUNG

by Frank Sinatra and Bob Hope

m lately. Here, in their own dialogue, is how Sinatra and Bob Hope view the matter.

TIME: Winter of 1949.

PLACE: North Hollywood: the living room of Bob Hope's rambling Tudor residence. As the curtain rises, Bob is sitting on a sofa with Linda, nine, his oldest daughter. He is in his favorite position, counting money. There's a knock at the door. As Linda rises to answer it, Bob, unmindful of the disturbance, keeps arranging hundred dollar bills into nice, neat piles. Linda opens the door, and Frank Sinatra enters.

LINDA: (Extending her hand) Hi!

SINATRA: Hi, Linda! (He picks the child up and kisses her cheek, then puts her down.) Your old man around?

LINDA: He sure is. He got a rush call from the White House this morning.

SINATRA: You mean. . . ?

LINDA: Exactly. The Treasury is short on cash.

SINATRA: Do you think he can spare me a few minutes?

LINDA: I think so—if you don't want to borrow any money. . . . Do you?

SINATRA: Not today. You see, Linda, I want to talk to your daddy about Bing Crosby.

LINDA: Well, that's not exactly Daddy's favorite subject, you know.

SINATRA: Yeah, but I'm sort of involved, too.

LINDA: Then, why don't you just go in? I'm on my way out to play. (She steps out the door.) So long!

SINATRA: So long, Linda. (Frank approaches Hope, whose face is barely visible behind three piles of greenbacks.)

HOPE: (Without looking up.) Sounds like Sinatra.

SINATRA: It sure ain't Jane Russell. (Hope rises, and they shake hands warmly.)

HOPE: Glad you could drop in, Frank. Things must be slow for you.

SINATRA: Oh, not too slow. I'm up to my ears in radio work.

HOPE: Still in radio, eh?

SINATRA: You sound surprised.

HOPE: Frankly, thin-boy, I am.

SINATRA: On the level?

HOPE: Sure. After all, Frank, you've been around 10 years. That's a long time.

SINATRA: And you, I guess, are what they call a newcomer?

HOPE: Don't feel hurt. After all, I'm just quoting.

SINATRA: Quoting who, Crosby?

HOPE: No! Crosby and you are in the same boat.

SINATRA: What do you mean, same boat?

HOPE: Do you—do you read the magazines?

SINATRA: Sure, I read. (Continued on page 77)

hey, look! we're

by reba and bonnie churchill

Rhonda Fleming and Mona Freeman join dancers Marge and Gower Champion in a gag routine.

dancin'!

We all dropped around just to watch those sensational Champions rehearse— and before we knew it we were making like gazelles, ourselves.

THE FINE ART OF DANCING WITH A DUMMY

lady dummy helps Richard Haydn display s ballroom skill. Mona Freeman tries it, too.

Haydn, with his dummy in the palm of his hand, is a study in grace. Mona finds the maneuvering harder.

Mona ends up by sitting the whole thing out. Richard, still going strong, is disdainful.

■ As we were scurrying about the Paramount lot gathering news items, we heard a sound of musical festivity coming from a dance-rehearsal hall. We went right over and looked in.

There in the center of the barn-like room lined with long mirrors and exercise bars, were Marge and Gower Champion, dancing spectacularly to the accompaniment of pianist Dick Pribor. The Champions, Mr. and Mrs. in private life, have recently become the newest dance-team sensation in night-club circles. And following their smash opening at the Mocambo, they had every studio in town pressing fountain pens on them. They signed with Paramount, and had just checked into the lot to start prepping for their appearance with Bing Crosby in Mr. Music.

Now they were being observed with awe by a small but select audience consisting of Mona Freeman, Billy De Wolfe, Don and Marion DeFore, Rhonda Fleming and Nancy Olson. All had been lured by the chance to watch this million-dollar entertainment for free.

Naturally, we joined them. Then, every spectator seemed seized with the same idea simultaneously. The Champions were making it seem so simple to swoop and dart with incredible grace about the polished floor that everyone else decided to get in the act.

(Continued on next page)

Bob Hope dreams while the young lady . . . (Turn page.)

Marge and Gower Champion captivate (from extreme left of circle) Billy De Wolfe, Mona Freeman, Bonnie, Rhonda Fleming, Reba, Nancy Olson, Don and Marion DeFore.

Alan Ladd and Mona Freeman catch on quickly when the sparkling Champions take them in hand. Marge and Gower, who are Mr. and Mrs., will be with Crosby in Mr. Music.

Rhonda Fleming quietly reads as Bob yearns. (See preceding page.)

hey, look! we're dancin'! (continued)

Billy De Wolfe grabbed both of us for partners. "Can't leave one of you sitting while I waltz with the other," explained the gallant fellow, "so I'll just dance with the two of you."

The skill with which he managed to step on all four of our feet at once was remarkable. So we remarked on it. He modestly attributed this talent to the fact that he'd first learned to dance wearing snowshoes. We immediately looked down and were rather surprised to find he wasn't still wearing them.

At this point, in came Richard Haydn, the English comedian-character actor who achieved his ambition to be a director with Miss Tatlock's Millions and Dear Wife—and now is to direct Mr. Music. He looked distastefully about him at some of the unskilled contortions going on and his directorial genius started coming to the fore.

"No, no, no, no!" he admonished. "No! You're all much too stiff. Put your imaginations to work. Let your feet dramatize what your faces are saying, and vice versa."

He darted over to a corner where a pair of dummies, a lady and a gentleman, lay sprawled. Lifting the lady dummy, he embraced her and began to demonstrate. His facial expressions ran a hilarious gamut from super-sophisticated boredom to passionate amour, and his feet always seemed to be in the appropriate mood, though don't ask us to describe exactly how.

Mona Freeman then attempted the Haydn technique. She picked up the gentleman dummy and piloted him across the floor. She wound up by hurling him to the floor and sitting lovingly on his lap. "Splendid," said Haydn, "but do try to bear in mind you're not in a wrestling ring."

"My emotions just ran away with me," explained Mona—whose emotions, and those of Billy De Wolfe, will shortly be on view in Dear Wife.

Alan Ladd now popped in from the United States Mail set. He gazed keenly at Mona's dummy—then went over for a closer look. "I thought so!" he said triumphantly. "This is the fella I drilled in my last picture. See?" And he pointed to a bullet hole in the side of the wooden head.

"Eek!" cried Mona. "I've been dancing with a dead man!"

"That's what girls usually say to me," said Haydn bitterly.

Alan, a dreamy dancer, needed no coaching. While we really do love Billy De Wolfe, we did turn slightly green with envy when Alan twirled across the room in perfect step with Marge Champion.

Nancy Olson, after a mad samba with Gower Champion, decided to sit the next one out. Thanking Billy prettily for his attentions, we plopped down beside her. (Continued on page 79)

Her world had come to an end . . . Then, out of pain and anguish, Doris Day found a deeper happiness.

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

by Doris Day

THIRD in a series

■ It was a sunny spring afternoon about 10 years ago. I felt as frisky as a colt. My home in Cincinnati, Ohio, was filled with my chums.

My mother was visiting a friend in the nearby town of Hamilton. One of my gang suggested, "Why don't we drive over there, pick up your mother and drive her home?"

We started out very gaily—another girl, two boys and myself. It didn't take us long to get to the heart of Hamilton, where railroad tracks cross the main street. Buildings block a view of the tracks on both sides—and none of us saw the train coming.

Suddenly it loomed dead ahead—and our car crashed into it.

I was sitting in back. Instinctively I put out my legs to brace myself. As we struck, the front seat was thrown back and came down on my right shin-bone, smashing it.

My companions, none of whom, miraculously, had been badly hurt, carried me out. A policeman got in touch with my mother. She arrived on the scene just as the ambulance came. She got in beside me—then my consciousness was mercifully blotted out for about 12 hours.

I awoke in a hospital bed with my leg in a cast. (Continued on next page)

And for the next few months, I was in a nightmare of pain. I was taken in and out of the hospital several times. One day the doctor said, "Come back on June 19th. We'll take some X-ray pictures to see how your leg is healing."

As the time for the X-ray verdict approached, everyone around me became more and more nervous. I was too young and too optimistic to understand their fears. And then the doctor said, "Doris—I might as well be frank. The leg is not healing properly. Of course, there's still hope that everything will be all right—but there's always the possibility that you'll never be able to walk again."

I looked at him aghast. For a moment, it seemed worse than a death sentence. All my life I had trained to be a professional dancer. At the time of the accident, having just finished a vaudeville tour, I seemed well on the way toward success.

My mother's hand was warm in mine. My mind formed a prayer: "Please, God—don't let me be a cripple."

Then, for more than a year, I was unable to walk. At first I felt bitter about it. But, as I continued my prayers, my mind was flooded with a strange peace. Until this time I'd had only the most childish philosophy. Now groping for an answer to my problem, I came to have the feeling that there must be a deep purpose behind everything that happens.

Prayer has many facets. Without it, we are apt to think that we ourselves have to bear the entire burden of tragic events. Prayer is not only a reaching out toward a greater force than ourselves; it reminds us that what happens to us in life is planned by a greater Power, a Power that is able to help us bear our burdens.

So I continued to pray that I would be able to adjust myself to whatever happened. I realized that I must accept what had happened and find a way to make this experience mean something in my life.

One way was to do something useful with my time. I'd always sung, but never taken singing lessons. Someone told me of Grace Raine, who'd taught Jane Froman and other famous singers. Now I arranged to take lessons from her.

Fifteen months elapsed between the time of my accident and the day I took my first step. That was the day when my prayer that I might be saved from becoming a cripple was answered. Meanwhile, those 15 months had seen a change in me from complete bewilderment to a calm acceptance of whatever God had in store for me.

But it was not until several months later that I understood the possible purpose behind what had happened. When I could walk again, I started to sing on a local radio station. One day Barney Rapp, the bandleader, heard me and offered me a job with his band. I was on my way to Hollywood.

Out of pain and anguish came the career which has brought me so much happiness and which has, I hope, brought pleasure to others, too. I never would have thought of developing my voice if it had not been for that near-fatal crash.

It may sound Pollyannish to say everything happens for the best, but I believe that from each experience, however difficult and cruel it may seem, we gain something. Always, our fate is in greater hands than our own. In answering my prayer, God gave me not only the power to walk again, but the strength to face whatever might happen to me and a philosophy which has comforted me along the way. THE END

"BATTLEGROUND"

VAN JOHNSON STARS IN A GREAT FILM. FOR DETAILS, SEE NEXT PAGES. ▶

Picture of the Month

BATTLEGROUND (continued)

Having hidden beneath a wrecked jeep when badly wounded in a skirmish, Rodriguez, the Mexican-American GI who loved snow, is found there by his buddies, frozen to death.

■ MGM'S Battleground is a film that should be of absorbing interest to every woman whose husband, fiancé, friend or son served in World War II. It is a deeply moving account of men in battle—grim, humorous, honest and inspiring.

The story of an outfit in the famous 101st Airborne Division during its defense of Bastogne, Belgium, Battleground succeeds in presenting a wide variety of combat GI types while keeping each one a credible individual. Prominent among the dozen-odd main characters are Holley (Van Johnson), wisecracking "wolf" whose irresponsible surface covers a hard competence; Jarvess (John Hodiak), former small-town newspaper columnist who now looks back cynically on the idealism that led him to enlist; Rodriguez (Ricardo Montalban), Mexican-American from California, cheerful but lonely; Pop (George Murphy), 35-year-old father of five, sweating out final headquarters approval of discharge papers to send him home to his seriously-ill wife; Kinnie (James Kenmore), tough,

Van Johnson, who has had his roving eye on the fulsome charms of Bastogne mademoiselle Denise Darcel, finds Marshall Thompson beating his time art platoon sergeant; Abner (Jerome urtland), lanky young hill-billy, child- nded, lovable, endlessly loquacious; yton (Marshall Thompson), green re- cement ignored by the close-knit unit il he proves himself; Kippton (Douglas wley), a wise guy with a weakness for dling his buddies; Hansan (Guy Ander- n), quiet, bespectacled, analytical Middle- sterner, who keeps his thoughts on his fe and baby.

Through its characters—portrayed by a nt that is first-rate down to the smallest e—Battleground manages to touch on a l, realistic range of Army experience—in- ed, of experience common to all branches the service.

Here we have the boredom; the hilarity; cynicism; the idealism; the fear; the urage; the constant griping; the laziness; dull, hard manual labor; the wild mors; the baffled ignorance of the overall ture, of just what in Hell headquarters nks it's doing; the deep companionship; loneliness; the terrible passion and the cold anger of combat; the stereotyped wisecracks; the inspired witticisms; the colorful obscenities of speech—here, of course, only indicated in half-phrases, but unmistakably; the dark deals with quarter- masters for unauthorized gear and chow; the self-conscious posturing; the modest self-deprecation; the bitterness; the good humor—in brief, life in the service.

The siege of Bastogne, a vital Allied rail center, was the turning point of the last great enemy counter-offensive on the West- ern front—the Battle of the Bulge—late in 1944. Reaching Bastogne, the Germans sent a surrender ultimatum to General Mc- Auliffe. His reply, which has become immortal, was "Nuts!" Then, with supplies almost gone, with even the wounded on the firing lines, the 101st heroically held out.

The story of Battleground begins when, with German resistance supposedly crum- bling on all fronts, "E" Company of the 101st is about to go on long-awaited leave after months of hard fighting. Suddenly, orders come to go forward again. Disgusted and grumbling, they arrive after a long haul in trucks ("Thought we were *Air*borne!") at Bastogne. This doesn't look too bad at first—the house where they're billeted be- longs to a very good-looking and amiable dame. But almost immediately they're sent up to foxholes in the woods. Soon fog settles down and it begins to snow. The enemy starts to infiltrate. There are a number of fierce fights and casualties. Suf- fering from the cold grows intense. The surrender demand is served and rejected. The shelling grows heavier. As the de- fenders dig in grimly, determined to delay the German advance until the last possible moment in a desperate, hopeless stand, there are shadows on the snow. The fog has lifted, the shadows are those of massed C-47's, raining down supplies by parachute. U. S. tanks and bombers are on the way, and Bastogne and the 101st—what's left of it—are saved.

They'll be saying Battleground is a film every American should see. It is indeed.

Try Palmolive's Famous "Beauty Lather" For Something Thrillingly New!

New Fragrance! New Charm! New Allure!

And Doctors Prove You, Too, May Win a Lovelier Complexion Using Nothing But Palmolive Soap!

Millions of women will prefer "Beauty Lather" Palmolive . . . the minute they try it! For Palmolive Soap's new flower-fresh fragrance means new allure, new charm.

And proper cleansing with Palmolive is so effective that all types of skin—young, old, oily—respond to it quickly. Dull, drab skin looks fresher and brighter—coarse-looking skin finer!

So just do as 36 doctors advised 1285 women, many with complex- ion problems. Wash your face with Palmolive Soap, massaging for one minute with Palmolive's wonderful "Beauty Lather." Rinse! Do this 3 times a day for 14 days. It's that simple.

Yes, doctors proved it could bring 2 out of 3 women lovelier complexions. Get Palmolive Soap and start today!

Get Bath Size Palmolive, too!

All that glitters is not the Christmas tree . . .

some of the gleam should be you!

■ Most luxurious holiday look—you in brocade, belted in black velvet, punctuated with roses. Shawl collar, tiny-buttoned bodice, flared skirt. Rayon satin brocade. Black, pecan or green. Sizes 9-15.
By Jerell Junior . . . $14.95

■ Most sophisticated holiday look—you in big satin polka dots, with jewel-buttoned black bodice. One piece dress with black tissue faille top; rayon satin skirt in rose, blue, green, amber, ruby, peacock. Sizes 9-15.
By Jane Juniors . . . $14.95.

These Modern Screen Fashions at The Hecht Company, Washington, D. C. For how to order, please turn to page 73.

■ Most elegant holiday look—you in dreamy lace over contrasting rayon taffeta slip . . . romance in the portrait neckline. Brown over gold slip; navy over flesh; black over gold; teal over teal. Sizes 9-15. By Dorris Varnum for Jonathan Logan . . . $19.95.

Jewelry by Coro. Gloves by Aris.

■ Most vivid holiday look—you in bright red wool jersey, edged and belted in gold. Very new because it is scoopnecked, has a fan of accordion pleats. Also navy, mauve pink, or winter white. Sizes 10-18. By Jerry Gilden . . . $16.95.

All that is gift wrapped is not a present . . .
the prettiest package should be you

■ Four leisure lovelies, to wear yourself or to wrap up as gifts. Above, dramatic quilted cotton housecoat in bright purple lined with lilac. Also navy lined with red; or forest green with yellow. Sizes 12-20. A Leisure Life by Wirth-Gold . . . $8.99

■ Cute trick cookie coat—perfect to give the girl who insists on looking her best, even around the house. It opens flat down the back, wraps around. Puffed cotton with rickrack, in blue, rose, aqua. Sizes 10-18. By Barbette . . . $4.95.

These Modern Screen Fashions at The Hecht Company, Washington, D. C. For how to order, please turn to page 73.

Jewelry by Coro. Gloves by Aris.

■ Wraparound designed for smartness-in-the-house, but high fashion enough to go proudly down any street. Wing collar, jut pockets. Opens flat down back, wraps at waist. Black cotton overprinted in rust, green, or lavendar; contrasting leaves. Sizes 10-20. By Swirl . . . $8.95.

■ Holiday date dress in beige shot with gold metallic threads. Scoop necked, gold belted. Knitted wool jersey. Also in gray with gold. Sizes 10-18. By Henry Rosenfeld . . . $17.95. Square black velvet bag by Graceline, $4.95*.

Plus tax.*

Gifts for her private life

Stocking case—four pockets with zipper compartment. Green, blue, grey, or orchid plastic with contrast lining. By Hush Purses. $1.

A. Deep plunge bra, for the girl who loves low necklines. Swish white nylon taffeta, edged with nylon net, by Gossard, $3.50.

B. Pink nylon "Friday" bra, which comes with black satin "Saturday" and white satin "Sunday" bras in Lovable's gift package, opposite page.

C. Mould-and-lift front closing adjustable bra. Rayon satin, $2.50. Nylon taffeta, $3. Cotton broadcloth, $2.50. Reno bra, a Jessie Miller Creation.

D. Pretty plunge bra in nyralon, given a lift by elastic. Delicious sha of blue; plus nude, black, white. By Flexaire, $2.50.

E. Sweet white nylon taffeta bra, with the famous sculptured cushion c round-and-round stitching. A Peter Pan Merry Go Round, $3.50.

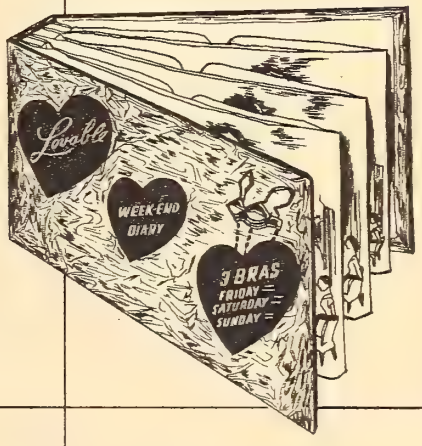
Handsome gold or silver finished necklace, $2.40. Bracelets: square disk, $3.60; round disk, $2.40. Monogrammed free. Tax included. By Coro.

These Modern Screen fashion gifts at The Hecht Company, Washington, D.C. For how to order, please turn to page 73.



Leopard spotted sling scuffs for a glamour girl. Velvety printed fabric. Sizes 4-10. By Honeybugs, $2.99.

Black pearl harem half-slip, knee deep in lace. Also alabaster white, teak beige, veil pink, mocha or apricot Rayon crepe. By Seampruf, $4.

Corduroy separates by Korday. Green, rose, maize, powder, beige, brown. Sizes 10-18. Jacket, $8.95. Slacks, $8.95. Skirt, $7.95.

Lovable's adorable gift package of bras. It's a "diary" with 3 pockets like those in a record album. Contains 3 bras marked Friday, Saturday, Sunday. $3, complete. (see B opposite page.)

Coats for the busy holidays

These Modern Screen Fashions at The Hecht Company, Washington, D. C. For how to order, please turn to page 73.

Earrings by Coro.

■ Do your Christmas shopping early, and look nifty as you go. Tie yourself snugly into a butter-smooth casual coat—flared in back, buttoned at cuff and pocket, defined by a string belt. All wool, with a feel like doeskin. Gray, wine, green, black, beige. Sizes 8-18. By Donnybrook. $39.95. At The Hecht Company, Washington. For how to order, see page 73.

■ Coat with a beautiful back. Triple-V at shoulder points up full fashionable flare; straight front has slash pockets, is thrice buttoned. All wool in forest green, jet black, wine, gray. Sizes 7-15. By Queenstown, $29.95. Ostrich bag at left, by Kadin, $7.95*. Appel bag at right, $7.95*. At The Hecht Company, Washington. For how to order, see page 73.

Plus tax.*

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

All the holiday fashions shown in this issue are currently featured at

The Hecht Company
7th & F Streets, N.W.
Washington 4, D. C.

SHINING FUCHSIA DATE DRESS WORN BY KATHRYN GRAYSON
page 65
Junior Miss Shop, Third Floor

"Some of the Gleam Should be You"
pages 66 and 67

LUXURIOUS BROCADE DRESS
Junior Miss Shop, Third Floor

SOPHISTICATED POLKA DOT DRESS
Junior Miss Shop, Third Floor

ELEGANT LACE DRESS
Junior Miss Shop, Third Floor

VIVID WOOL JERSEY DRESS
Casual Dress Shop, Third Floor

"The Prettiest Package Should be You"
pages 68 and 69

DRAMATIC QUILTED HOUSECOAT
Negligee Department, Third Floor

CUTE TRICK COOKIE COAT
Daytime Dress Department, Third Floor

LEAF-PRINTED WRAPAROUND
Daytime Dress Department, Third Floor

BEIGE AND GOLD DATE DRESS
Casual Dress Shop, Third Floor

"Gifts for Her Private Life"
pages 70 and 71

GIFT BRAS A THROUGH E
Corset Department, Third Floor

STOCKING POCKETTE
Hosiery, Main Floor

MONOGRAMMED JEWELRY
Jewelry, Main Floor

LEOPARD SPOTTED SCUFF
Shoe Department, Third Floor

BLACK GLAMOUR HALF SLIP
Lingerie, Third Floor

CORDUROY SEPARATES
Sportswear Department, Third Floor

"Coats for the Busy Holidays"
page 72

BUTTER-SMOOTH CASUAL COAT
Coat Department, Third Floor

TRIPLE-V FLARED COAT
Coat Department, Third Floor

ALL JEWELRY ON PAGES 66-72
Jewelry Department, Main Floor

ALL GLOVES ON PAGES 66-67
Glove Department, Main Floor

ALL HANDBAGS ON PAGES 69 and 72
Handbag Department, Main Floor

To order by mail, write:

The Hecht Company
7th & F Streets, N.W.
Washington 4, D. C.

Shades of Scheherazade

Lure and Lore of the East IN LINGERIE!

Inspired by the fabulous Near East with its fairy-tale past comes lovely lingerie by Seamprufe. Fashion-wise these Harem beauties are different, delightful . . . color-wise they're exciting—and they're designed to give you precision fit and extra-long wear. Illustrated, HAREM DELIGHT, $3.98. Other Harem favorites, in nylon and Bur-mil multifilament crepe.

HAREM COLORS: Veil Pink, Bagdad Blue, Jade Green, Teak Beige, Desert Yellow, Mauve Magic, Alabaster White, Black Pearl, Mocha, Arabian Night-Blue and Persian Apricot.

MADE OF Bur-Mil QUALITY RAYON FABRIC

Seamprufe®
INCORPORATED
FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 18

SLIPS • PETTICOATS • GOWNS • PAJAMAS

Ever wear a HALF-SIZE* DRESS
You're missing a thrill if you enjoy that average American Half-Size Figure (3 out of every 4 do) and haven't at least tried on a Rite-Fit Half-Size Dress. Five million buy Rite-Fit Half-Size Dresses every year. Why don't you?
At all fine stores or write for name of nearest dealer. Mail orders filled. About $8
*If you are 5' 5½" or under check your equivalent half-size:
14½ = 16
16½ = 18
18½ = 38 / 20
20½ = 40
22½ = 42
24½ = 44
BOW-TIME
Charming bows and self embroidered bodice and skirt to flatter you in this fine rayon crepe dress. Holiday colors: Winter Navy, Cherry Red, Emerald Green, Peacock Blue. Sizes: 14½ to 24½
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
HALF-SIZE Rite Fit DRESSES
the magic formula for a perfect wardrobe
FASHIONS IN VOGUE
NEVER COSTLY ALTERATIONS
FINE NAME FABRICS
74 MAX WIESEN & SONS CO., INC., 463 7th Ave., N.Y.C.

ANNIE, GET YOUR GUY

(Continued from page 47)

more pleased than her long-time dancing partner, Cesar Romero—who is sort of a male Sheridan inasmuch as he seems to demand nothing of his dates but fun.

It's been my painful experience that if you don't want too much from men, you usually get nothing. If you want to keep him all your own, you have to work hard, or some other female will trot off with him. All you get for sitting back complacently is a complacent pat on the head. That's what Ann gets—and I'm not counting the jewels given her by Hannagan.

And apart from a few genuine pieces, Ann's jewel-box contains mostly costume jewelry, anyway. That's the only phony obsession in Ann's make-up: she loves bright jewels, real or false. Otherwise, she has absolutely no chi-chi, none of the usual feminine coyness. The boys can call her at five minutes of eight in the evening and ask for dinner and she'll go, unless she actually has something else to do. Every other movie queen I know in Hollywood feels insulted—or pretends she is anyway—if called so obviously at the last minute. But not Annie.

always available . . .

That's why Ann is so popular with men-about-town like Bruce Cabot and Pat di Cicco. These boys hate to make dates in advance. They keep themselves wide open right up to the last minute, for the latest and most delicious feminine tidbit they can get. If she fails to materialize, they call Annie. Nine times out of 10 she's available. And they know they won't have to put on a big act for her. They can relax, too. All they have to give Ann are a few jokes. And that's all she gets.

It turns out that Ann didn't love disk-jockey Johnny Grant at all—only his disks. For awhile there, it looked like the beginning of a new big romance. But then Ann and Johnny decided to play their records separately, and she insisted, "we were just casual friends." So I guess Johnny failed in the chief Sheridan requisite—he didn't amuse her.

Her dates with Franchot Tone have me puzzled. Franchot is such an old sobersides. He takes life very seriously. But perhaps he has a joke book.

When Ann and Cary Grant were in Europe making I Was A Male War Bride, there was a fantastic rumor that Cary was also making romantic whoop-de-do with Ann. Fantastic, because Cary is a strict believer in the theory that the girl must do all the chasing. Ann wouldn't even chase her own shadow. Besides, Cary had Betsy Drake with him most of the time. And one of the reasons why women like Ann, too, is because she never tries to offer competition—even conversationally.

I remember a party when Loretta Young was at the same dinner table with Ann and Clark Gable. Loretta talked brilliantly. Ann made no attempt to take the spotlight. In fact, she didn't speak more than half-a-dozen words. She offered nothing—just laughed loudly when Loretta or someone said something amusing.

Ann has never given a big party in her own home. She goes to other parties, but she prefers the more casual atmosphere of night clubs. When she does have people up to her house, it's usually a few of the comparatively small-income people who have worked for her in the studios—such as Martha Giddings, her hairdresser. But even at these soirees, Annie insists on being amused. She arranges for dancers or a Mexican orchestra to appear at midnight and perform until dawn.

Ann loves everything Mexican. She has real enthusiasm for bullfighting, the on sport she chases. Unlike Paulette Goddar who talks only to the famous matadore Ann prefers the common, every-day bul fighters. She knows them all by their fir names and travels all over Mexico to s them in action.

Such effort seems uncharacteristic easygoing Ann. Her inertia goes 'way bac to when she won a Search for Beau competition that brought her to Holly wood in 1933. Ann, herself, didn't go to t trouble of sending in her own phot graph. A pal did. And if she hadn't bee practically carried to Hollywood by th Paramount representatives in Texas, An might still be in that great and glorio state, following her planned profession school-teaching.

When she failed to make the grade Hollywood in those early $50-a-wee years, Ann lacked the inner motor-pow to leave and go home: She stayed on an she married Eddie Norris, a beginne like herself, with a serious-looking pu but with an Irish sense of humor.

Ann finds it hard to resist the Iris brand of humor. The only men who hav held her for any time at all have bee Irish-Americans—Norris, George Bre and Steve Hannagan.

George Brent likes his girl just to liste and laugh at his stories. So he fell har for Ann and became her second husban Then George discovered he had marrie the entire troupe of Annie's studio pal

Ann likes these people around becaus she doesn't have to make any effort wit them. Mr. Brent, who had happily be lieved that life with Ann would be a mono logue twosome, found himself standing u as best man at the wedding of his wife hairdresser. And he resented it bitterl Ann was just as bitter when Brent finall gave her an ultimatum—she could choos between him and his patrician seclusio or her friends, without him.

Of course Ann will get another mar maybe another husband—but will she kee him? It's hard to imagine that the lov parade could pass Annie Sheridan by. Bu it could—unless she changes her tactic and develops a bit of romantic guile.

You can be humorous and down-to earth with some men some of the time But not with all men all the time. An above all, you cannot be lazy in love.

THE END

MODERN SCREEN

"I don't know when I've enjoyed a movie so much."

I WON'T GO STEADY

(Continued from page 39)

I like that. I also like the idea that I can go out with someone else if I want to.

I met Barry Nelson at MGM, where we were both under contract. Lillian Burns, the dramatic coach, had a Friday afternoon group of young contract players. The Romance of Rosy Ridge had been my first picture. Before that, I'd never read so much as a line. So I joined the group as soon as I could, and for me it was the greatest thing in the world—the kind of expert training I never could have afforded myself. We'd do scenes from pictures and plays, which Miss Burns and the rest of the group would criticize or praise, as the case might be. It was also a showcase. If a scene was good, some producer would be asked to see it. That's how I got my parts in Act of Violence and Words and Music.

It happened that Miss Burns asked Barry to do a scene with me. He's a top-notch actor and director, and working with him was just a joy. Pretty soon we were doing scene after scene together. One afternoon we got so wrapped up in rehearsing, we hated to stop.

"Why don't you come to the house for dinner?" asked Barry. "My mother's a wonderful cook, and after dinner we can rehearse on my wire recorder."

From then on till he left for New York, I went out with hardly anyone but Barry—for the good and sufficient reasons that I liked his company, and felt at home with him. He's a quiet person, rather reserved till he gets to know you well, very honest and real, with a great deal of depth and poise and charm. He doesn't care for night-spots, so we didn't go to night-spots. There were plenty of other things to do, and I was happy just doing these things with Barry.

What he loved was taking me places I'd never been before. Which wasn't hard, because I'd practically never been anywhere or seen anything. Before coming to Hollywood, my life had been that of any small-town girl, so everything was new and exciting to me.

like alikes . . .

Barry's interests range from music to sports, and I shared them all—but one. I was a music student at school, so in that field we talk the same language. Except that he likes classical music a little more than I do, and I like good jazz better than he does. As for sports, I'd always been interested in football at high school and college on account of the kids I knew who played. But Barry introduced me to professional football, and taught me the fine points. Once we drove to Ventura to see an intra-squad game of the Los Angeles Dons. He knew every player on the team, and all their records from A to Z. On the way down he briefed me so thoroughly that I was really able to follow the plays, and know what was going on. Since then, the Dons have been something special with me. I even read the sports page to find out what they're doing.

Boxing, however, I didn't take to at all. When Barry suggested the fights, I was rather reluctant, but finally decided you ought to see anything once. Once turned out to be plenty. A boy got hurt, he was bleeding. I caught the look in his eyes, wild and pained and bewildered, and covered my face and wouldn't look any more. That was my first and last visit to the ring. . . .

All this time, while I was going out with Barry, I did have a few dates with others. As I said before, I dated Barry most be-

LITTLE LULU

See? Kleenex* "Pops-Up" too!

Little Lulu says: QUICK AS A RABBIT— KLEENEX TISSUES POP UP ONE AT A TIME. NO FUMBLING, NO WASTE WITH KLEENEX. SAVES MONEY! YOUR BEST BUY IN TISSUES!

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. *T.M. REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

America's favorite boudoir slipper!

Honeybugs®

Made to be worn and worn. In plush with soft fluff of bunny fur. Black, Royal, Light Blue, Pink, White, Red. Sizes 4 to 9. $2.99
Little Miss Honeybugs, sizes 8 to 3. $2.79

At your favorite store, or write to Honeybugs, Dept. 3 — 47 W. 34th St., New York 1, N.Y.

cause I enjoyed him most—but we weren't going steady in the usual sense of the term. He never pried or questioned or felt that I ought to account to him for my time. I'd just tell him about these other dates as a matter of course, and it didn't change our relationship at all.

Then Moss Hart called him to come to New York for a part in Light Up the Sky. I happened to be working on my third picture in a row and, when it was finished, I got some time off. So Barry's mother and I flew East for the opening.

Just the name "New York" was enough to send me higher than a kite, and Barry showed the city to me as only Barry could. All the famous places I'd heard about all my life—now I was seeing them and could hardly believe it. Fifth Avenue and St. Patrick's Cathedral. Times Square. Radio City. Central Park. Maybe it sounds sentimental, but I can't help it—those two hours in Central Park were so beautiful it was sort of like being in church.

Our old friends, the Dons, were playing at Ebbets Field, so we went up there and took the subway back.. I had no idea where we were coming out, but Barry had it all planned. We walked up the subway steps at a quarter of six—and there was Times Square, all lit up in the dusk and alive with people. Please try to imagine the effect on a girl from Stockton, because I can't describe it.

miss liberty . . .

But the biggest thrill was to come. "We'll take the Staten Island ferry," Barry said, "and see the skyline of New York." That was good enough for me. I didn't know what else he had up his sleeve till I heard a man say, "Oh look, there's the Statue of Liberty." Barry was so mad, I think he could have biffed the man. He'd been waiting for me to turn around and be rocked on my heels. He thought the surprise was spoiled for me. It wasn't, though. The statue was just beginning to loom into view, and if my heart had pounded any harder, I think it would have burst. . . .

I've told all this to show the kind of person Barry is, and why it's such fun to be with him, and why we're friends. But when you're in Hollywood, you can't go out with someone who's in New York. Like any girl, I wanted to go out. There was no understanding between Barry and me to prevent it, so I dated different boys. After a while, I started going out more with Arthur Loew, Jr.

Just as Barry had opened a whole new world to me, so did Arthur. A different world. Not better, not worse—just different. Basically, the two boys remind me of each other—they're both completely themselves, they both hate anything even slightly phony. In other ways, they differ. Arthur's more of a mixer, so with Arthur I've met more people, which I think has been good for me. I've always been shy, and rather backward about talking to people. But Arthur's so naturally warm and friendly, that he sort of carries you along, and before you know it, you're at ease with a roomful of strangers.

He's full of jokes and wit and the kind of craziness that's so wonderful because it's unself-conscious. At MGM, for instance, all the young players eat at one big table. When you come in, Arthur gives them the high sign, and they stand up and clap and bow you into your seat.

But with all that, Arthur has his very serious side. He's learning every phase of the industry, and he's wise in its ways. I'm naïve about certain things, and he's taught me a lot. His mind is so quick, that just sitting and talking to him is almost more fun than going out. As a matter of fact, all we usually do is have dinner and talk our heads off, since we've both been working hard, and when I work, I've got to be in bed by 10. Sometimes we eat out, sometimes at his house or mine. Mother's a very good cook, and so's my Dad, who specializes in Chinese food.

He's as kind and thoughtful as he is fun-loving. Somehow he found out I'd never owned a charm bracelet, so he gave me one at the beginning of The Red Danube, with a charm representing that picture, which was my eighth. From time to time, he added a charm for each of my previous pictures, then two more for those I've done since. The one for Christmas Gift, which I've just finished at RKO, is a little gold Santa Claus.

He calls me Dearie—he calls everyone Dearie—and sends me white flowers for my hair when we step out. Whatever I wear, he says, "My, you look handsome tonight." That's his favorite compliment. It's only lately that I've been able to afford new clothes, so mostly I'd wear out-of-style dresses from my trousseau. This didn't bother me at all. I knew Arthur'd seen lots of people in Adrian creations, and wasn't dating me for the sake of my wardrobe. But I did face a problem when his mother and sister came from Tucson on a visit, and he threw a party for them in the Mocambo Champagne Room. Problem: no cocktail dress. Solution: a formal that went back to my freshman year at college. I'd grown so tired in high school of pinks and blues and yellows, that I simply decided I was going to have one black formal, no matter what. I designed it myself. The material cost $12, which was a fantastic price for me then, and I had it made, which was also unheard-of in my family.

But if I'd never worn it before—and I'd worn it plenty—it certainly paid off now. I cut it to ankle-length, put horsehair round the bottom of the skirt to make it stick out, and presto! I had a cocktail dress. "My," said Arthur, "you look handsome tonight."

It was a perfect evening in every way. But I think the nicest part of it for me was getting to know his mother and sister Jane. They're such a swell family. . . .

I wouldn't have missed my friendships with Arthur and Barry for anything. Entirely apart from good times, I feel that they've both helped me to develop as a person. But if I'd been going steady with Barry, I'd have missed knowing Arthur. Or else I'd have had to break off with Barry. Either way, I'd have lost something valuable. As it is, they're both my friends. Everything's aboveboard. There's nothing secretive. When Barry's in New York, we write to each other. When he was here last summer, I saw a lot of him. I see other boys too. I do it on purpose in order to maintain that freedom of contact. Barry and Arthur go out with other girls. We all like it that way.

Any good companionship might lead in either direction—toward marriage or away. It depends on feelings and circumstances, which change. Lots of people who think they want to spend their lives together find out to their sorrow later that they were mistaken. You've got to be sure. So, right now—I won't go steady. THE END

The complete screen story of Janet Leigh's current film, The Doctor and the Girl, is one of the absorbing features to be found in the December issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

Nothing missing here
junior clique frocks

AN alluring little package of charm in this Frock of stunning Rayon Moire, teasingly moulded to the figure above its whispy waistline and skirt of waving fullness.

Navy, Peacock and Grey in sizes 9 to 15.

At smart Junior Shops where smart Juniors shop. About $9

BARMON BROTHERS CO., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

TOO YOUNG TO DIE

(Continued from page 55)

HOPE: I knew you could, no matter what they say! . . . Well, haven't you read that stuff about you and Crosby being washed up?

SINATRA: Who wrote it, you?

HOPE: Perish the thought! But only the other day, I picked up an August copy of Cosmopolitan magazine and there was an article that said, "Crosby and Sinatra are finished."

SINATRA: Hah! How much did you pay to have it published?

HOPE: No, honestly, it came as a big shock to me.

SINATRA: I can imagine.

HOPE: It so happens that by a strange coincidence I have a copy of the article with me.

SINATRA: Strange coincidence, my neck.

HOPE (reaches into a back pocket and comes up with the clipping): I really don't want to read it to you, but if you insist.

SINATRA: Okay, go ahead. Read it.

HOPE: Ah, I just haven't got the heart! After all, you're so thin and weak.

SINATRA: Don't let that worry you, Jumbo. I can take it.

HOPE: "Jumbo"? . . . Okay, it says: "More than two years have passed since it first became apparent that Bing Crosby was beginning to slip. . . ." But I can't go on, Frank.

SINATRA: Never mind, keep going.

HOPE: "Bing . . . the jaunty little man . . . simply does not have it any more."

SINATRA: Keep reading.

HOPE: "There is no one around at the moment who seems capable of taking his distinguished place. Sinatra, for example, has been sounding progressively more inept with each new recording."

enough is enough . . .

SINATRA: That's enough.

HOPE (continuing): "He is slipping, too."

SINATRA: Enough, Bob.

HOPE: "The color has gone from his voice."

SINATRA (jerking the clipping away from Bob and tossing it out the window): Enough is enough. (Both men look at each other and then start roaring with laughter which gradually subsides.)

SINATRA: You'd think Bing and I were public enemies, the way they write about us.

HOPE: It's nothing, Frank. You've got to take it in stride. They've been trying to kill Bing off in print for the past five years.

SINATRA: I wonder why.

HOPE: For the same reason they've been picking on you. You guys make good copy.

SINATRA: Maybe we do. But I'm in my early thirties and Bing is in his forties, and we're too young to die. Why don't they hop on someone older?

HOPE: Like, say, Al Jolson?

SINATRA: What, and put Larry Parks out of a job?

HOPE: Don't worry about Larry. He'll be okay. He's got talent.

SINATRA: You mean Betty Garrett?

HOPE: I mean more than that. Larry's not just a crooner like some guy who happened to be born in Hoboken.

SINATRA: I never realized you were a jealous man.

HOPE: Not jealous, kid—just honest.

SINATRA: Well, speaking of honesty—tell me on the level, what do you think of Bing's voice these days?

HOPE: Are you really interested in Crosby's voice?

SINATRA: Bob, I give you my word. If anything should happen to Bing's voice,

...dream girl, dream girl... beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl

...hair that gleams and glistens...from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!...Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

NOT A SOAP!
NOT A LIQUID!
BUT KAY DAUMIT'S
RICH LATHERING
CREAM SHAMPOO WITH LANOLIN
for Soft, Shimmering Glamorous Hair

4-oz. jar $1; 10-oz. economy size $2. Smaller jars and tubes 49¢ and 25¢.

No other shampoo gives you the same magical secret-blend lather plus kindly LANOLIN . . . for true hair beauty.

Tonight he can SEE new sheen in your hair, FEEL its caressable softness, THRILL to its glorious natural beauty. Yes, tonight, if you use Lustre-Creme Shampoo today!

Only Lustre-Creme has Kay Daumit's magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin. This glamorizing shampoo lathers in hardest water. Leaves hair fragrantly clean, shining, free of loose dandruff and so soft, so manageable!

Famous hairdressers use and recommend it for shimmering beauty in all "hair-dos" and permanents. Beauty-wise women made it America's favorite cream shampoo. Try Lustre-Creme! The man in your life—and you—will love the loveliness results in your hair.

What's new in Feminine Hygiene?

New improved NORFORMS make feminine hygiene easier

Never before has an antiseptic and deodorant preparation for inner cleanliness been so pleasant and easy to use.

The New Norforms are small, dainty suppositories that form an antiseptic and protective film. Powerful, yet non-irritating new agents destroy germ life and eliminate (not mask) objectionable odors for hours.

Nothing to mix or measure—no worry about too much or too little. The New Norforms are safe to use on delicate tissues. They melt at internal body temperature without greasiness or odor.

The new formula and a new method of packing—individually sealed in foil—prevents spoilage—makes the New Norforms usable in any climate.

Get new, improved Norforms and discover how simple feminine hygiene can be. At all drug stores.

Send for booklet, "Feminine Hygiene Made Easy." The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, New York . . . Famous for Dependable Drugs.

NORFORMS are simply wonderful and if people should then go around saying Sinatra had inherited his mantle, I'd . . . I'd. . . .

HOPE: Just be heartbroken, wouldn't you?

SINATRA: That word doesn't do me justice.

HOPE: You can say that again. But just to put your mind at ease, scarecrow, let me tell you that Bing is now singing as well as he ever has in his whole life.

SINATRA: Then, why do these wise guys say he's lost some of his witchery?

HOPE: They have reference to his hair.

SINATRA: Maybe so, but it's his voice he sings with.

HOPE: Right. And a man's vocal chords last a long time. Jolson is one example. Ezio Pinza is a second. Crosby is a third. Bing's voice is still good for years and years. Now, what's happened, I think, is that people have gotten accustomed to it. That frog in his throat doesn't surprise them any more. The voice doesn't have the quality of newness it once had, but it's still there. If anything, it's developed. It's got more range and power. . . . I know you're tickled pink to hear all this.

SINATRA: I sure am, because all those things you said also happen to be true of my pipes.

HOPE: You don't say.

SINATRA: I do say.

HOPE: This is no time for modesty. Tell me everything.

SINATRA: Well, Bob, I think it's only human nature to point out small failings and neglect accomplishments.

HOPE: Your wisdom amazes me.

SINATRA: Let me miss one benefit dinner, just one, and the next thing you know, people are going around saying I'm as bad as Crosby. Let me make one bad record, and overnight, I sound like Bing. Same with pictures. One bad one, and they say I've pulled a Crosby.

voice of the people . . .

HOPE: You imply that Bing's name is synonymous with failure?

SINATRA: Your vocabulary amazes me.

HOPE: Well, get yourself de-amazed, thin-frame, and let me tell you a thing or two. One or two whacky critics can write Bing off in print, but (putting one hand on his chest and pointing dramatically upward with his other) they can't write him out of the hearts of the public.

SINATRA: Now I'm crying. . . . By "public," no doubt you mean Dixie and the four boys.

HOPE: I mean that one or two magazine writers can say anything they want to about Bing, but just so long as the people like him, that's all that counts.

SINATRA: Hmmm. . . . Speaking of what counts, what've you been doing these past few weeks, besides counting your money?

HOPE: Counting money? Listen, son, I've been keeping the airlines in business this past year. In addition to radio and pictures, I've been playing dates all over the country.

SINATRA: A little rough for a man of your years, isn't it?

HOPE: Ridiculous! Why, I chinned myself this morning. Almost.

SINATRA: Let's face it. There's probably some truth to the rumor.

HOPE: What rumor?

SINATRA: That you plan to retire in a few years.

HOPE: Who started that, you?

SINATRA: You're mistaking me for Crosby. I believe in live and let live.

HOPE: Yeah? For how long?

SINATRA: Well, at least until your kids get big enough to support you.

HOPE: The trouble with you and Bing is that you're scared silly. Ever since I sang "Buttons and Bows" in Paleface, you two guys are afraid you'll have some serious singing competition. And wait'll you hear me in my duet with Rhonda Fleming in The Great Lover. Matter of fact, I intend to sing more and more in my pictures. That's a hint, Frankie-boy.

SINATRA: Meaning what?

HOPE: Meaning that maybe you'd better retire while the retiring is good.

SINATRA: Me retire? I'm too young. My whole life lies before me.

HOPE: Well, I guess you could struggle along in pictures for a few more years.

SINATRA: It's no struggle. You see, Bob, I'm not like you. I have youth and energy and spirit on my side. Wait until you see On the Town.

HOPE: You mean Gene Kelly's picture?

SINATRA: I'm in it, too.

HOPE: A bit, no doubt.

SINATRA: I'm the co-star.

HOPE: They must be desperate at Metro these days. . . . Look, thin-man, what brings you to the Casa Hope, anyway? You want a job or something?

SINATRA: No, Bob, I don't want a job—but I do want some advice. You've been around in the entertainment business a long time and you know most of the angles. If you were Bing or me, what would you do about these articles that keep asking: Is Crosby Finished? and Is Sinatra Finished? You know, this attempt to kill us off in print?

HOPE (putting on a long white beard): Son, you and Bing can do one of two things—ignore the stuff altogether, because it's obviously not true and only written to entice the readers; or you can sit down and write an answer to those guys who insist you're finished. "Listen, fellas," you can say, "no one knows better than a singer when his voice is beginning to go. It's the kind of thing you, yourself, feel first, like a headache. You don't need anyone to tell you about it. When it does go," you can say, "I'm retiring. No one has to give me the gong or reel me in with a hook and line. I'm not the kind of guy who deludes himself. When my time is up, I'll accept it graciously. But that time hasn't come yet." That's what you and Bing can say, my boy.

SINATRA: Gee, that sounds great. Why don't we do an article like that together?

HOPE (removing beard): Together? I've got a brain, but what can you contribute?

SINATRA: I've got a terrific title, "Too Young To Die."

HOPE: "Too Young To Die," eh? That's not half bad. (Aside) Confound the whippersnapper! Why didn't I think of it?

SINATRA: O.K. Let's begin. You repeat what you said a minute ago and I'll copy it down.

HOPE: Relax, boy. The whole thing's already down.

SINATRA: Already written?

HOPE: Don't look now, son, but I've had my wire recorder turned on ever since you stepped into the living room. A voice like yours is still worth preserving.

SINATRA: Gee, thanks, Bob.

HOPE: Think nothing of it, kid. So is mine, so is mine.

THE END

SEEING STARS?

Everyone sees stars at one time or another. We see them practically all the time, but we're not qualified—for the $5 bills, that is. They're for the lucky people whose "I Saw It Happen" anecdotes we print. So, if you've ever had an amusing incident happen to you and a movie star, write it down and send it to the "I Saw It Happen" Editor, MODERN SCREEN, 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Y. The anecdote must be true and it must be short. Try for one of our $5 bills—we've plenty!

HEY, LOOK! WE'RE DANCIN'!

(Continued from page 58)

"At one time I had hopes of being a dancer," sighed Nancy—who'll be Bing's leading lady in Mr. Music. "I used to think I was pretty good—until I went to a senior prom at Wauwatosa High in Milwaukee, and right in the middle of a waltz I tripped on my evening dress and fell flat on my face. Whatever yearnings I had to be a Pavlova ended with that little disaster."

Don and Marion DeFore decided to take advantage of the presence of really expert dance instructors and approached Gower—who, with his wife, created and staged the dances for the current New York hit, Lend an Ear.

"We've invented a tired two-step," said Don, "and stick to it no matter what the tempo. But we do wish we could rhumba."

"We went dancing on our first date," Marion recalled. "We were off to a bad start until we confessed to each other that we really weren't ballroom artists. Then we happily went to the movies."

champion advice . . .

Gower was a patient instructor—and soon the DeFores were rhumba-ing soundly. Next, Nancy Olson, we Churchills, and even Richard Haydn sought—and received—terpsichorean advice from the Champions. By this time, Mona Freeman and Rhonda Fleming were working out ballet steps on the exercise bars, Billy De Wolfe was dancing with Marge Champion (never, we must admit, tramping on her feet once!), and Reba was following Alan's intricate steps.

Then in breezed Bob Hope. He was gussied up in a hunting outfit he wears in Fancy Pants—light tan breeches, riding boots, hunter's cap and red jacket.

"Tally-ho, old sports!" he called to everyone. "How about a dance with the king of the ballrooms?" he cried, seizing Rhonda Fleming, his true-love in The Great Lover. Looking ecstatic, he whirled her dreamily through a few steps. Rhonda, who'd been studying the picture of a ballet dancer in a magazine, kept right on studying it over the king's shoulder.

"Now you've lived, honey," he said, releasing her. "Well, look, everyone." he announced gaily, "what I really dropped in for was to open up the band-aid concession for this little clambake. Any broken noses? . . . Arms? . . . Legs? . . . No? Well, we'll soon fix that. Let me introduce you to my new round dance—it was invented for squares who can't square-dance."

Seated nice and comfy on a chair with his boots propped up against an exercise bar, he started calling out directions for the dance. They would have worked fine if we'd all been equipped with four arms and eight hands.

Just when we were really fouled up and everyone was interlocked octopus-like with everyone, Bob started reversing the directions. Dick Pribor stopped playing his piano and gazed at him sadly. "Now look, Mr. Hope," he said.

Hope eyed us for a moment. Then he said briskly, "Well, guess I'd better get back to the set!"—and with that he departed.

Which was a good cue for everyone else to follow suit—we were all, including the hard-working Champions, bushed.

But personally, the Churchills felt swell. We'd learned half a samba, how to step on your partner's feet gracefully, and how to sail off a dance floor with a flying leap—just what every young girl should know! THE END

(For ethical reasons, actual doctor not used in this picture.)

Doctor develops new Home Beauty Routine!

Try these 4 simple steps to a lovelier-looking complexion

● If you want a more alluring complexion . . . if you've ever suffered from dry, rough skin, *externally-caused blemishes, or similar complexion problems—here's some real news for you.

A skin doctor has now developed a new home beauty routine that really works! It has been clinically tested. In fact, 181 women took part in these tests conducted by 3 doctors, and results were amazing! Of all these women tested, 4 out of 5 showed softer, smoother, lovelier-looking skin! Try this new beauty routine yourself:

4 Simple Steps

Morning—1. Apply Noxzema all over your face and with a damp cloth "creamwash" your face—just as you would with soap and water. Note how clean your skin looks and feels! 2. After drying face, smooth on a protective film of greaseless Noxzema as a powder base.

Evening—3. Before retiring, again "creamwash" your face. So refreshing!

4. Now massage Noxzema into your face. Remember—it's greaseless. And that's very important! Pat a little extra over any blemishes to help heal them.

Follow these 4 simple steps for 10 days. A trial will convince you that this doctor's discovery is a truly remarkable new beauty aid. Do it now while this Big 85¢ Jar of Noxzema Skin Cream is yours for only 59¢.

Lovely Deena Winslett of Ft. Worth says, "I was bothered with annoying blemishes* but Noxzema helped heal them. I've used it as my regular night cream ever since."

Pretty Margaret Wilson of Detroit always uses Noxzema as her protective powder base. She says, "I love its clean, refreshing smell—it doesn't stain or feel sticky."

MONEY-SAVING OFFER

You get 43% more for your money than in the Small size when you buy the

Big 85¢ Jar of NOXZEMA

for only 59¢ plus tax

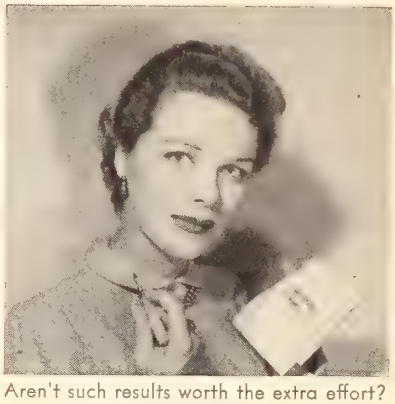
Limited Offer. Stock up now!

A Lovable GIFT
...FOR HER

The Lovable Week-End Diary...a book of three flattering Lovable bras—a gift she'll adore!
For Friday... "Pretty Pink" Nylon
For Saturday... "Party Black" Satin
For Sunday... "Pure White" Satin
$3
(A-Cup 32-36; B-Cup 32-38)

Lovable Brassiere Co., Dept.E12, 358 Fifth Ave., NYC 1

Alan Ladd



FREE PHOTO
LARGE SIZE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
direct from HOLLYWOOD
Write now for photo of your favorite STAR. Immed. serv. Illus. catalog & Special SURPRISE offer. Send 15c for handling & mailing.
HOLLYWOOD PHOTO PRODUCTS, Dept. M-12
P.O. Box 1446, Hollywood 28, Calif.

"YOUR HOLLYWOOD SCREEN GUIDE"
Want a Career in the Movies, Radio, Theatre, Television?
Here are the answers to all your questions. Complete authoritative instructions by PLAYERS COUNSELLOR of Hollywood. Home study procedure. Self-analysis for suitable types and parts. Step-by-step progress in acting profession. Knowledge gained at small cost may lead to success, even stardom! Complete $2.00! Money-back guarantee. Order direct or get free details.
Players Counsellor, 6711-C Sunset, Hollywood 28, Calif.

QUICK, EASY SHINES AT HOME WITH SHINE BOY SHOE HOLDER
SAVE THOSE DIMES & QUARTERS
NO BENDING • NO MESS
FITS MEN'S, WOMEN'S & CHILDREN'S SHOES (6 YEARS & UP)
$2.75
IDEAL GIFT
LASTS A LIFETIME
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
NO C. O. D.'s
Add 25¢ Handling Charge
B./E. COMPANY
5829 Ocean View Drive, Oakland 18, California DEPT 012

Sally Forrest outlines lips with a brush.

Then she blots excess lipstick on tissue.

Aren't such results worth the extra effort?

by Carol Carter, beauty editor

Screen beauties can tell you it takes patient practice to learn the art of applying lipstick. Do so and you'll have really pretty lips.

make a pretty mouth

■ A pretty mouth says nice things about you all day long! That means, in addition to having a sweet, contented mouth, you've also taken care to put on your lipstick as cleanly and smartly as possible.

Be sure your lips are dry when you apply the lipstick, or powder your lips to remove any moisture. It's just no go trying to get lip color to adhere smoothly if lips are wet. For that well-defined outline, use a lipstick brush. You'll probably have to practice with it a bit before you're entirely steady. Start with your upper lip and sweep from the center on out to the end of the mouth. On the lower lip you reverse the order—start from the corner of the mouth and brush toward the center. If you want a really competent-looking job, pay careful attention to the corners of the mouth—because if your artistry bogs down there, it will show clearly when you talk and laugh. Fill in the center of your lips with up-and-down strokes that fill in the little grooves in your lips. The present shape of your lips is probably pretty enough, but you can cheat a bit if not. If your lips are too thick, don't use lipstick to the very edge. For too thin or too straight lips, go just a hair's breadth beyond your natural lip line for a fuller effect.

Use lipstick freely. Let it remain undisturbed for a minute or two and then press your lips together on a piece of cleaning tissue to blot up the lush excess. If you want to do an especially good make-up job, powder your lips and repeat the process. This insures lovely lips for hours. Very convenient, too, is a thin film of lipstick fixative—particularly good if you're dining and you want to keep from eating your lipstick.

I'd love to send you a fine chart showing fabric colors and make-up to go with them. Let me know your hair color when you make your request. Address Carol Carter, Beauty Editor, Modern Screen, P.O. Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.

MY PLANS FOR GABLE

(Continued from page 52)

Then I closed my eyes and was somehow perfectly content.

I was just another tired traveler as far as the people of this hamlet were concerned. They didn't know me from Adam nor did it make any difference. I was just a man who wanted to sleep, and what could be more natural?

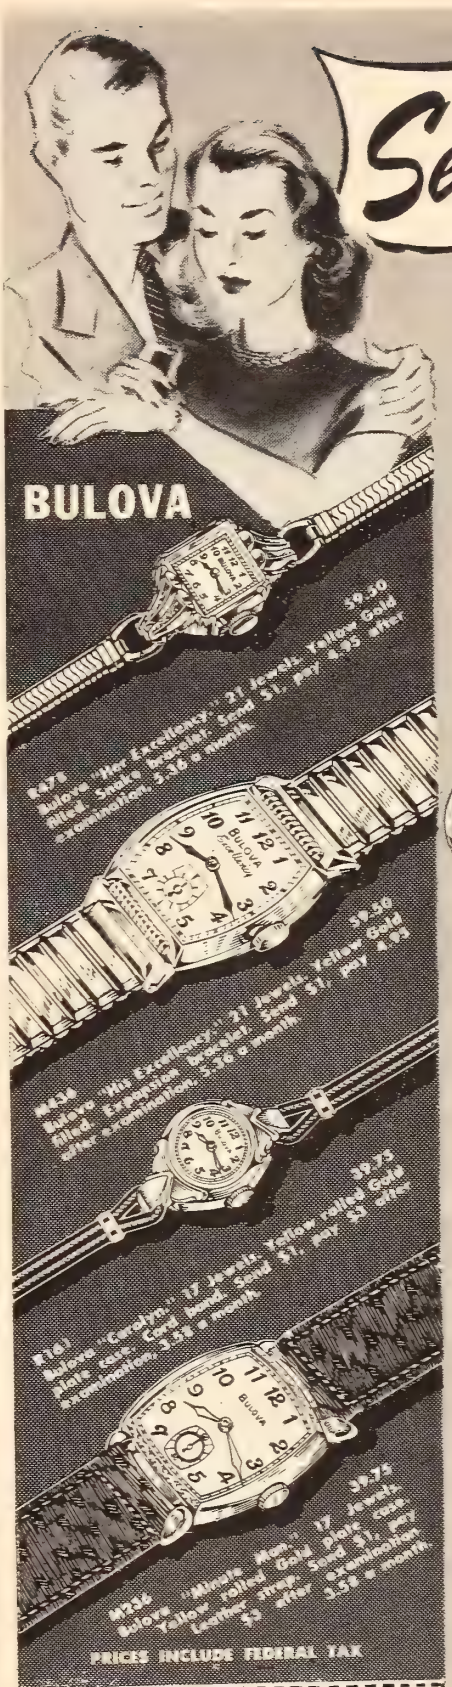
I'm not sure why, but I got a feeling out of that which I have since tried—and almost always unsuccessfully, to recapture many times. Because that would be the perfect life for me when I am not working: to be able to go among people, mix closely with them and be accepted just for myself.

Actually I can't, of course. Now, people don't mob me and tear off my sleeves for souvenirs, or anything like that. They always seem nice and friendly—sort of treat me as an acquaintance. But still—well, I know they're really looking on me as a curiosity, as a movie star.

Not that I'm crying bitter tears about the situation. I worked hard to get where I am, I wanted it, and I am grateful for the way things turned out. But the longing to mingle as just an ordinary citizen is always there and it gets stronger whenever vacation time comes around.

forbidden pleasures . . .

It's vacation time now. By the time you are reading this, I'll have left Hollywood for . . . I'm not just sure where. I know what I'd like to be doing. I'd like to be in Chicago, for instance, just meandering through the Loop or getting all confused finding my way through the maize of aisles in Marshall Field's store on State Street. I'd like to be in New York, caught in the thick of its sidewalk life; maybe trying to force myself through the lunch crowd in the garment section just below Times Square or gawking along Broadway watching the window chefs in the quick-sandwich joints slice away at their monstrous turkeys and hams. There's a stroll I could make up Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, or through Grand Circus Park in Detroit, or winding around with Milk Street in Boston.



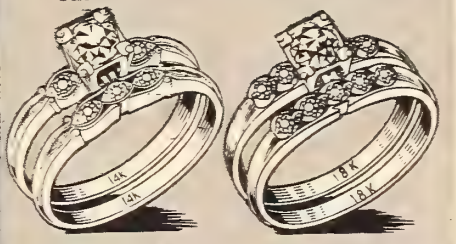
All these things I did once—when I was a struggling actor. But they are not for me any more. If I tried it now. . . .

Once I saw a Philadelphia policeman heaving and pushing in his efforts to rescue a beautiful movie starlet from an admiring crowd, and, in the midst of the melee, he looked at her and said, "Girlie, you may be a queen in Hollywood but right here in Philadelphia, you're a public nuisance!"

Well, I don't think I'd be a public nuisance. As I say, people on the streets don't mob Clark Gable, movie star, even in the big cities. But let's face it: I do attract that uncomfortably "special" attention.

So—while I'll probably head for New York on my vacation, it will be just to pop out here and there along Times Square to catch the shows, and then pop back to more secluded surroundings again. I may go to Europe afterward. Last time I was there I bought a little car and started to drive it through the country. My trip didn't go on very long because I had to call it off abruptly to return to California when my father died suddenly.

But it was enjoyable, if short. Only once was I recognized when I left Paris. The innkeeper of a little place along the road where I stopped for lunch asked me

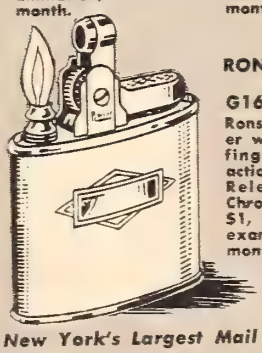


Send Only $1

WE WILL SEND YOU ANY ITEM YOU CHOOSE FOR APPROVAL UNDER OUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

Simply indicate your selection on the coupon below and forward it with $1 and a brief note giving your age, occupation, and a few other facts about yourself. We will open an account for you and send your selection to you subject to your examination. If completely satisfied, pay the Expressman the required Down Payment and the balance in easy monthly payments. Otherwise, return your selection and your $1 will be refunded.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG



A205/C53 59.50
6 Diamond Coupled Bridal Set. 3 Diamond Engagement Ring, 3 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or white Gold. Send $1, pay 4.95 after examination, 5.36 a month.

A413/C201 $100
10 Diamond Coupled Bridal Set. 5 Diamond Engagement Ring, 5 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or 18K white Gold. Send $1, pay $9 after examination, $9 a month.

F426 19.95
Genuine 1 Carat Zircon, 2 brilliant side Diamonds. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay $1 after examination, 1.80 a month.

D418 $75
Man's Ring. 2 Diamonds, center simulated Ruby. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay 6.50 after examination, 6.75 a month.

RONSON LIGHTER

G1628 $6
Ronson Pocket Lighter with famous one-finger, one-motion action. Press, it's lit! Release, it's out! Chrome plated. Send $1, pay $1 after examination, 50¢ a month.

SEND $1 WITH COUPON — PAY BALANCE OF DOWN PAYMENT AFTER EXAMINATION

L. W. Sweet, 25 West 14th St. (Dept. D7)
New York 11, N. Y.
Enclosed find $1 deposit. Send me No._____
Price $_____. After examination, I agree to pay $_____ and required balance monthly thereafter until full price is paid, otherwise I'll return selection and you will refund my dollar.
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ STATE_____

New York's Largest Mail Order Jewelers Established 1878

L. W. Sweet
MAIL ORDER DIVISION FINLAY STRAUS, INC.
25 W. 14th St., NEW YORK 11, N. Y. Dept. D7

YOU READ IT*

EVERY MONTH

now...

LISTEN TO IT*

EVERY DAY

*Modern Romances

is on the air!

Everywhere people are talking about this new kind of radio program, talking about the human interest in the stories and the frankness with which they are enacted. Like MODERN ROMANCES magazine, upon which it is based, each story is about real people in situations you yourself may face. Listen to MODERN ROMANCES today on your ABC Station and we guarantee you'll listen every day.

Tune in "Modern Romances"
every weekday
Mon. thru Fri. on the American Broadcasting Co.
A B C NETWORK
see your newspaper
for local time

in painful English if I was not Clark Gable. When I nodded he cried, "Ah-h-h! Then it ees possible you can be of inform to me!"

I said I'd be glad to be "of inform." What was it he wanted to know?

"I want to know about 'skeep it'," he declared. "I have seen many of your pictures and many times you say this phrase, 'skeep it'. What does it mean, 'skeep it'?"

I tried to explain. I told him that "skip it" literally meant sort of "jump over" something, but, in conversation, really meant to forget some subject or deed and go on to another.

"Oui! Oui! I unnerstand!" he exclaimed. "Eeet is the same then as in the English pictures when they say ' 'op it!', no?"

"Oh, no!" I said. And then I tried to explain the difference. All through the meal I tried to make it clear, but it was no use. In the end I decided that the only thing to do was to skip it. So I 'opped it.

Well, if I don't go to Europe this time, probably to tour the provinces of France, then I may head west again from New York for my Rogue River place in Oregon and some fishing. I'll drive up there, avoiding the bigger cities en route, as usual, and stopping at motels. As a matter of fact, though I have a 47-acre place on the Rogue, I generally stop at a motel near there which is owned by a friend. It's simpler that way. More mobility. I can throw my golf clubs in the car and leave at a moment's notice for deep-sea fishing at Guaymas, Mexico, for instance—where, though I am a stubborn Dutchman, I have many times met my match, and more than my match, in marlin and sailfish.

beginner's luck . . .

On one of my earliest attempts to catch marlin, I was accompanied by Jack Conway, the director, and another friend, A. T. Jergens. As soon as I got a bite I started to pull in violently and they both yelled out in alarm.

"You'll break the line!" Jack cried. "You've got to take it easy with marlin. Slow and easy. Play him."

But, as I say, I am stubborn. I did it my way. I fought. And at the end of the day I had caught three marlin, Jack had had three on the line and lost them all, and Jergens lost two. They both claimed that no one in deep-sea fishing history had ever caught a marlin my way before and that it could be accounted for only by the fact that my unethical yanking had simply confused the unfortunate fish into giving in!

But it never happened that way again. I learned to follow Jack's advice. "Just keep a light but steady pressure on the line," he would say. "Like a woman after a man." I'm sure I don't know just what he means by this, but I did it anyway.

Well, on my vacation I may fish, I'll play golf, but I won't hunt. I won't hunt because somehow I have lost my taste for it, especially for deer hunting. The last time I hunted deer was at Kanab, Utah. I had my rifle to my shoulder and a fine bead on a deer when it suddenly came over me that I couldn't pull the trigger.

I let my rifle drop and the guide with me looked astonished.

"What's the matter, buck fever?" he asked.

"No," I replied. "I just changed my mind."

The truth was that the deer looked too beautiful, standing there, for me to drop him and spoil the picture. I'm not trying to propagandize about hunting. Every man to his own taste. It just so happens that since that time, shooting a deer has become for me no more sporting than going out and shooting the old family cow.

The story got around and I was kidded about it that night when I attended a square dance, my first, at the schoolhouse in Kanab. There was cornmeal on the floor, dust in the air, and a hundred people I had never met before swirling around the place. I did everything wrong, had every girl I partnered with, giggling at my ineptitude—and I ended up having one of the best times I ever had in my life.

(It was also just as well that I had decided to quit hunting. The next morning I was so stiff I could hardly walk, let alone stalk a deer.)

For hunting thrills I have substituted golfing thrills. Landing a ball on a tough green, clearing some nasty traps on the way, is as satisfying as sending a bullet under a deer's shoulder—or at least it will do for me. And a few weeks ago it more than did for me when I was playing Bel Air and couldn't find my ball after apparently hitting a spoon shot straight from the tee to the green. No, the ball wasn't lost. It had come straight down into the cup, tearing a piece of earth the size of a half dollar off the lip and jamming itself tight between the pin and the side of the cup—for a flying hole in one. Incidentally, it happened to be the 13th hole.

With all this traveling that I do, and plan to do ahead, it may seem to a lot of people that mine is a restless soul. I wouldn't know. Everybody's life falls into a pattern, sooner or later, and that is the pattern of mine right now. It wasn't always like this.

There certainly was a time in my life when I really came close to being quite the fireside boy. . . .

Today, when I'm working in Hollywood, I'm still a homebody. Unless there is a special occasion involved I drive straight home from work, have my dinner, read and go to bed. If I go out at all it is on a weekend. Any time you read an item about my being seen in a night club you can pretty well bet it was on a Saturday night.

When the picture I am working on is over and done with, I can't stay put any longer and I'm off.

Why? Why not stick home? I don't know. Iron bars do not a prison make, as the old saying goes, and my trouble may be that neither does brick or wood make a home. It just makes a house. There's a difference.

Oh, I know what the difference is all right. Maybe I'll meet up with her some day. Maybe that's what all this traveling is about. A man can never tell.

THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

At a recent broadcast on the Ford Theater, I saw Ida Lupino giving many autographs directly from the stage. One smart boy kept repeating, "That's not Ida Lupino; that's her double. You don't think she would sit there and sign autographs." Miss Lupino finally turned to the boy and said, "Sonny, don't tell anyone, but I'm really Ingrid Bergman in disguise."

Lillian Rudolph
Richmond Hill, N. Y.

SO PROUDLY SHE HAILS

(Continued from page 14)

mother on this subject. Her mother had advised two places Greta might safely go with any man she met on her tour. Greta decided to follow her mother's advice.

"I would like to go to the zoo or to the museum," she replied. Gregory's reaction is not on record.

At any rate, there's a fine zoo in Forest Park in St. Louis, and that's where they went. As they wandered about, Gregory observed that he couldn't quite place the slight accent she sometimes showed.

"I am a Finn," she said. "And you?"

"I am an American Indian," replied Gregory, making joke. But Greta believed him.

"Really?" she asked, seriously. "You know, I can see it." And that night she wrote home to her mother, "I have met the nicest Indian."

Since the letter was postmarked from St. Louis, which is pretty far west when you've never been further west than Jersey City, her mother answered quickly, requesting full details on appearance, social manner and tribal customs.

This "Indian" was a hard-working man, Greta soon learned. (She'd already learned that Greg, while he'd get red pretty easily, was no redskin.) Though he had but two lines to speak in The Doctor's Dilemma, he was determined that these lines should be given perfectly. A number of times Greta found him alone in the theater, standing on the stage and working on the pitch of his voice. He was not embarrassed at being discovered. Instead, he put her to work to help him.

"Stand at the back of the house and tell me how it sounds," he would ask.

Greta would listen. Gregory would speak a few words, call out for a verdict, and then Greta would report on his delivery.

man proposes . . .

It was about this time that Greta, getting wise to the ways of the theatrical world, happened to ask Greg a question that led to some surprising repartee.

"What is your real name?" she wanted to know one day.

"Why, Gregory Peck," he told her.

"You mean—you haven't got a made-up name like all the actors?" she asked.

"No," he said. "There's nothing wrong with using a stage name, but I've always been Gregory Peck."

"Honestly?" she asked.

"Listen," he said. "If we were to be married, your name would be Peck. Mrs. Gregory Peck."

Greta blushed. "Oh, that is not why I asked!" she exclaimed.

"Of course not," he assured her. "But that's why I'm telling you."

She didn't quite get the full significance of his casual explanation until much later in the tour, when they reached San Francisco. Here she found herself meeting Gregory's mother, Mrs. Bernice Maysuch, and later his father, who drove up to Los Angeles from San Diego to see them.

She had a sense then that something interesting was about to happen—and, as she wrote her mother, "all of this just from asking a simple little question!"

And so Greta Rice became Mrs. Gregory Peck, and then she became a mother—but not yet a citizen. Her two brothers and a sister had become citizens. Her son, and then another son, were born into citizenship. But Greta was still an alien.

A resident of the United States since the age of four, Greta, as might be said of

DON'T RISK SUCH DISASTER IN YOUR MARRIAGE

Because of one intimate neglect, a wife can crash to the depths of unhappiness

THIS unfortunate wife has only herself to blame, because she has been guilty of one unforgivable intimate neglect. This disaster need not have been . . . she could so easily have protected her married happiness. She could have done this simply by safeguarding her dainty allure with regular, effective vaginal douching—with a scientifically correct preparation such as "Lysol." Reliable "Lysol" assures complete feminine hygiene.

Germs destroyed swiftly

"Lysol" has amazing, proved power to kill germ-life on contact . . . truly cleanses the vaginal canal even in the presence of mucous matter. Thus "Lysol" acts in a way that makeshifts like soap, salt or soda never can.

Appealing daintiness is assured, because the very source of objectionable odors is eliminated.

Use whenever needed!

Yet gentle, non-caustic "Lysol" will not harm delicate tissue. Simple directions give correct douching solution. Many doctors advise their patients to douche regularly with "Lysol" brand disinfectant, just to insure daintiness alone, and to use it as often as they need it. No greasy aftereffect.

For feminine hygiene, three times more women use "Lysol" than any other liquid preparation. No other is more reliable. You, too, can rely on "Lysol" to help protect your married happiness . . . keep you desirable!

For complete Feminine Hygiene rely on . . .

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A Concentrated Germ-Killer

Product of Lehn & Fink

NEW!...FEMININE HYGIENE FACTS!

FREE! New booklet of information by leading gynecological authority. Mail coupon to Lehn & Fink, 192 Bloomfield Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

D.M.-4912

How do some women achieve that PROFESSIONAL LOOK in a HOME MANICURE?

▶A beautiful manicure is not just a matter of filing nails, nor a matter of applying polish ▶ These women use SOFTOL, to quickly and easily push back, shape and remove cuticle without cutting. SOFTOL adds that final touch—gives your nails that trim, well groomed look, never achieved by polish alone. SOFTOL softens, shapes, lubricates and removes cuticle on both hands without cutting in 3½ minutes ▶Easy to follow directions in every SOFTOL package. Enough for 85 manicures. Only $1.00 plus 10c fed. tax. Invest in SOFTOL today at your favorite cosmetic counter. You'll gloat when you see the smart, professional looking manicure Softol helps give your hands.

W. B. ASSOCIATES • NEW YORK 17, N.Y.

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting . . . hair-free longer . . . with no ugly razor stubble! No irritation to normal skin. Get Nair today!

Cosmetic lotion to remove hair safely

FOR LEGS THAT DELIGHT USE NAIR TONIGHT 79¢ plus tax

many persons, was not a very nationalistic girl when she was younger. Born in Helsinki, Finland, but raised mostly in America (New York and Jersey City, to be exact), she was more interested in growing up than in which country this process was taking place. When her mother became an American citizen, Greta just never got around to following suit.

But in 1939, on a world cruise in an American ship, she was rudely awakened to the facts of 20th century existence. The ship was anchored off Danzig in the Polish corridor when Hitler chose that day to invade Poland. Greta and her mother were sightseeing in town when the news came. Her mother paled.

"We must get back to the ship immediately," she said.

"Why?" asked Greta, unworriedly. "Do you think they'll stop you, Mother?"

"Not me, you!" replied her mother. "I am an American citizen. They must let me proceed. But you have no such protection. You might never get back to the United States."

what america means . . .

In that moment, the full realization of what America meant, the freedom of life she had accepted so casually, hit Greta between the eyes. She fairly raced back to the ship with her mother, and never got off until it docked in New York.

Now was her chance to get busy on the project of becoming a full-fledged American. Yet—she didn't. There were two reasons. One was the dismay with which she contemplated going into court and answering the manifold questions about the country's system of government. The other was an old-fashioned feeling that, anyway, her principal destiny was marriage, and that at the proper time her husband would in some way or another take care of such matters for her.

Well, that husband turned out to be Gregory Peck. "Look, dearest," he would say from time to time. "Maybe it's time something was done about getting you naturalized."

"But the examination," she would protest. "What if I fail it?"

"Oh, there's nothing to it," he would say with the off-hand dismissal of such matters that is so typical of the native American. "They'll just ask about the form of government—who your congressman is, and all that."

"Who is our congressman?" she asked once.

"Why—uh—there's a book you can get on that," he replied.

But it wasn't until after a half-thwarted West Indies vacation that Greta actually did something about becoming an American.

What decided her occurred not so long ago in the airport office at Key West, Florida. After a vacation trip with Greg to Nassau and Bimini, for which Greta had obtained re-entry permits from the immigration bureau, she had been denied permission to visit Cuba and Haiti unless she got new permits. She and Greg hadn't found out about it until they were about to board the plane for Havana.

"This is ridiculous," Greg said to her. "This has got to stop. You know I'm supposed to go to Italy to make Quo Vadis. Darling, unless you get your citizenship, you're not going with me. I'll go alone."

That did it. Greta decided that she was still too new a wife to undergo those months-long "on location" separations.

"I'll do it, I'll do it!" she frowned. "I'll go to school and I'll make a perfect mark on that examination, you'll see!"

And so it was, that shortly after their return to Hollywood, Greta went to the Beverly Hills High School and enrolled in a night class on citizenship. At the end of her four-month course, she nervously told Greg she thought she was ready.

"Great!" said Greg. "I'll take you down."

Greg drove. Greta kept her nose in the book until the very second they got before the naturalization examiner.

She was prepared to answer hundreds of questions—but had to answer only four! She just couldn't stand it. Here she had a head crammed full of national, state and civic facts and nobody wanted them. She tried to suppress them but they kept tumbling out unbidden and she was well launched into a dissertation on the various branches of government, plus their general, specific, and even possible functions, until finally the examiner begged off with a laugh.

"It's all right, it's all right," he said. "I know how you feel. In fact, I'd bet that right now you know more about the United States than your husband."

Greg grinned and hastily changed the subject. When they left, however, poor Greta still couldn't restrain herself. All the way back home, she insisted on explaining to Greg the method of apportioning congressional districts in the country. She had been so long soaking in the stuff it seemed criminal not to be able to tell it to someone. (And, as it happened, Greg found it quite interesting!)

But she was not yet a citizen. A formal card of notification was to be sent to her and then, bringing the card with her, she would be permitted to take the oath of citizenship with a group of other aspirants in federal court. The card finally arrived and again she and Greg drove down.

He left her at the courtroom door with the others who were to be sworn in that day and went back to the visitors' area to watch the ceremony. After a while he saw the group file in and heard them chant their allegiance. He hurried out to the hall ahead of them—only to find Greta already waiting there and practically in tears.

"What—what are you doing out here?" he asked. "I thought I just saw you in there."

"Not me!" she cried. "I wasn't in the courtroom! I forgot to bring my notification card and they wouldn't let me take the oath without it!"

citizen peck . . .

Not until two weeks after that did Greta officially become an American. Greg was unable to accompany her this time. But he made certain that she'd be there in plenty of time to cope with any hitches. Not far from the Pecks lives a lady with a reputation for getting to any important event two hours ahead of time—Mrs. Ollie Carey, widow of the beloved Harry Carey. Greg left Greta in Mrs. Carey's charge and that did the trick.

When Greta got back home she found a wire from Greg. "Congratulations to the country's newest American," it read. But Greta wasn't the newest one very long. She did herself out of the honor soon afterward by contributing a brand-new citizen to the country—Carey Paul Peck, her third son.

Some weeks later, the Pecks had a dinner party at their home, with a group of brilliant people present. The conversation turned to presidential elections and then struck a snag because none of the guests could correctly explain the electoral system of voting.

"Just a moment," interposed Gregory. "We happen to have a political expert present." And he turned to his wife.

"Greta?"

Mrs. Greta Peck, formerly Greta Rice of Helsinki, Finland, smiled.

"Of course," she said.

And she told them. Right from the book, too!

THE END

SHE WANTS TO DO HOMEWORK

(Continued from page 51)

position, and respect him the more for it. But waiting was hard on them both, and in the end she wrung a concession from him. His idea had been to delay the marriage till he could take over full financial responsibility.

"That's not fair," wailed Jane. "No man of 25 makes as much as movie people unless they've inherited money, which you haven't and won't. Can't you pretend I'm a secretary and support me like one?"

He finally agreed that she might have a point there. They worked out an economic program acceptable to Geary. Jane agreed to be patient till he found something that would offer a solid foothold for the future.

Her father gave her the beautiful maple hope-chest for her birthday last April. First thing to go into it was an exquisite cup from Czechoslovakia, sent by Geary's aunt. One gift that moved Jane almost to tears came from a fan.

"I bought these," wrote the fan, "when I first heard you were engaged, and I've moved them around so much that they worry me. So I'd like you to have them before they get broken."

Jane and Geary opened the box together, and brought out a set of dishes in a Christmas tree pattern, with little dolls underneath the trees. Jane went out of her mind. Geary said, "Hey, you know who's gonna fall for these? Our kids."

His own contributions to the chest were more practical. As Jane gets carried away in antique shops, Geary gets carried away in war-surplus stores. The difference is that in one place you only look, in the other you buy. Geary collected such items as paring-knives, shoe-racks and what his bride-to-be called "similar trinkets." (They may be gadgets to you, but to her they're trinkets.) One day he showed up with, of all things, a back-scratcher.

The hope-chest also contained some little wrap-arounds that Jane crocheted herself. "Superstitious people think it's bad luck to have baby clothes in a hope chest," said Jane. "I'm not superstitious."

Janet Leigh, Liz Taylor and Marna Harbert, who's married to one of the boys at the MGM office, were planning a linen shower for Jane at Marna's house. Jane was hoping they'll find out by the grapevine or telepathy or something that, for bathroom towels, she thinks there's nothing like maroon.

Then there's Arabella, the piggy bank. Geary lugged her in one day—Arabella's at least a foot long—and placed her on the table. "That's for our honeymoon."

All their loose change went into Arabella.

bargain hunter . . .

She calls Geary just Geary, for she can't stand coy pet names. There's something about them that drives her crazy. She loves to tag along when he goes shopping for clothes. He doesn't love it, but puts up with it when he must, and sneaks out on her if he can. She consoles herself by browsing in men's shops, looking at things she'd like Geary to have. As a rule she doesn't buy them, because it's not sensible to buy a man clothes except for birthdays and Christmas. Being an individualist, she makes another exception. If it's on sale, she'll buy it. She'd buy anything on sale, including a white elephant.

She knits for him too—sweaters and argyle socks. Into the first pair of argyles went her life's blood, what with tangling, ripping and starting all over again. They turned out sort of bumpy, but they did resemble socks in a far-off way, so she blocked them and hung them on the line—and the dog got them. "Never again," vowed Jane. (Two days later she was making with the bobbins again.)

Domestically speaking, Geary's snagged himself a prize. There's no part of homemaking that Janie doesn't take to. Egged on by Ann Sothern, she's putting her eyes out now over needlepoint. She designs her own clothes, and sews many of them herself. As for cooking, she's been a natural from the age of six, when she shoved her first batch of cookies into the oven. To her, a kitchen range can be as thrilling as a song. She doesn't think it's cute for a girl to say, "I can't boil water." She thinks it's unfair to husbands. Her main problem will differ from that of most. She wants one only for when she's working. Otherwise, she'll take over the kitchen herself. Nobody else can cook when Jane's around.

Geary's one husband who'll be not only well, but temptingly fed. To that end, Jane started another scrapbook which holds only such recipes as she's tried out on him. On the set one day, Ann Sothern spoke highly of a certain banana fluff pie. Next day Jane appeared, bearing a banana fluff pie, minus one wedge.

"Geary didn't like it. I can't put it in the book."

She admits (reluctantly) that long engagements offer one advantage. You get to know each other's ways.

a wonderful guy . . .

"Geary," says Jane, "is the kindest, most thoughtful person in the world. And I don't say so just because he's my fella—everybody says so. You never have to ask him to do anything, he thinks of it before you do. Little things like going to the store for Mother, and building fires, and taking both our dads out to dinner and the movies on Fathers' Day. . . . And not prying. If something's bothering me, he can sense it, but he'll never ask questions unless I'm ready to talk. His whole family's like that. I'm not. I used to love to find out everything I possibly could. Now I try to copy myself after him, so at least I'm learning."

Every fifth of the month they've gone out to celebrate their engagement. Maybe to the Ambassador for dancing. Maybe to a show. But the big night-clubs have rarely seen them.

Saturday nights may find them at a friend's house, square-dancing. For these occasions, Jane runs up little calico dresses, all in one piece, so the blouse won't pull out. Sundays they have dinner at home and, if people come over, she cooks it. The other evenings are dedicated to canasta. Sometimes they'll spend the weekend at Idilwild with Geary's sister and brother-in-law. In winter, they ski. In summer, they go on pack-trips through the mountains. "Honestly, we've been like old married folks." The blue eyes go wide with earnestness, lest you should doubt this unusual state of affairs. "Even his family can't get over it."

Whatever Geary does, Jane wants to do with him. He's taught her the sports she never used to have time for—tennis and badminton, skiing, skating and diving. Last summer they concentrated on water-skiing. Jane got dumped a couple of times, and Geary thought maybe she ought to quit. She didn't. Now she's so good, she can ski along on one ski.

They've discussed every aspect of their future life together, from careers to children. Geary's not a bit opposed to her

You're a LOT lovelier with a LITTLE more Color IN YOUR HAIR!

What a thrilling difference just a touch of rich Marchand color makes! Your hair has bewitching new radiance, your personality sparkles with new glamour!

Use Marchand's "Make-Up" Rinse after every shampoo for color that glows ... highlights that glisten! Flattering shades for every hair color. Safe, easy to use, this beauty rinse removes dulling soap film ... blends in tell-tale gray hairs, leaves hair easier to arrange. Marchand color is not a permanent dye ... washes out after each shampoo.

Marchand's
"MAKE-UP"
HAIR RINSE
2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢
plus tax
★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

Sea-Shell Doll Lamp
Hand Made-Hand Decorated
Lights-up beautifully!

Only $1.98 COMPLETE WITH BULB CORD & PLUG

● Made of Sea-Shells ● Light Glows Through

Send No Money

This beautiful Sea-Shell Doll Lamp is ideal for Living Room, Children's Room, or as Nite-Light. Delicately hand decorated in red and white. Wonderful Party Prize or Xmas Gift. Only $1.98, plus C.O.D. postage charges. Send $1.98; we pay postage. Money Back Guarantee if not delighted.

ILLINOIS MERCHANDISE CO.
Dept. 7810, 1227 Loyola Ave.
Chicago 26, Illinois

. . . how to make sure of it!

Intimate feminine daintiness is vital to your charm. To be sure . . . syringe regularly. Faultless Feminine Syringes are designed specifically for this hygienic care, their gentle flushing action cleansing thoroughly, quickly. Modern, convenient, no accessories to handle, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

send for this free personal booklet

"Facts You Should Know About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-129
The Faultless Rubber Co., Ashland, Ohio

Faultless
feminine syringes

mail this coupon today

RIMMEL, INC., 565-5th Ave., New York 17

Please send me Rimmel French Mascara, postage paid. I enclose $1.25 plus 25c fed. tax (total $1.50). No C.O.D.'s Please . . .

INDICATE SHADE Dept. MS — ☐ NOIR (Black) ☐ BRUN (Brown) ☐ BLEU (Blue)

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

career, providing it doesn't interfere with their home life, which no man would want. Jane sees no reason why it should.

"I know lots of professional people have career trouble, but lots of others don't," says Jane. "I aim to be one of the others. Even when I'm working, my hours aren't too bad and I'm not too tired when I get home at night. Besides, I'm not a worrier. I don't feel I'll die unless I get certain parts. I think the studio's taking good care of me, and I leave it to them. You may be completely wrapped up in your work while you're working, yet completely forget about it when you go home. That's how I am now. With a husband and children, I imagine I'll be even more so."

They want children badly, and want them as soon as possible. It's a subject on which they're pleasantly hipped. Passing a house in the valley one afternoon, they spied a toddler running to meet her father. As he swept the baby up, a lump caught in Jane's throat, and her eyes misted. Through the mist, the man sort of dissolved into Geary, catching another baby into his arms. . . .

She looked up at Geary. He was smiling down at her. "Uh-huh," he agreed. "Not bad to come home to."

They've got their family lined up. A boy and a girl, and then they'll see. If they draw two of a kind, they'll go right on trying. On one point, Jane's firm. No nurse is going to take her children over. Somehow she'll arrange things so she can raise them herself—anyway, till they reach a certain age. "When they know I'm the mother, maybe I'll let them go a little more."

surprise, surprise! . . .

The making of Nancy Goes to Rio proved notable in more respects than one. First, they gave her a new portable dressing room. When she opened the door, there stood a big picture of Geary in a silver frame. The whole thing was sensational, but the picture of Geary—producer Joe Pasternak's idea—was like a heart that brought it to life and warmth.

The next surprise wasn't so good. "You'll have to take your engagement ring off," said Pop Leonard, the director.

"Oh no!" cried Jane, who'd never had it off before.

This, however, was just an instinctive emotional reaction. Of course she knew she couldn't wear the ring. She should have been prepared for it, but somehow the thought had never entered her head, and it came as a blow. In the first rush of distress, she couldn't bear not to have it somewhere about her, so she wrapped it tenderly in a handkerchief and stuck it down the front of her dress. If Janie bulges in a couple of scenes, that's the reason why. Later, she decided to be sensible about it and leave the ring safely at home.

But the big thing to come out of Nancy was the trousseau.

Jane considered starting her trousseau when she got the hope chest. Her mother advised against it. "The minute you start it," she told Jane, "marriage seems that much closer, and you'll be that much more impatient. Since you're not sure of the date, why not wait a little?"

As things turned out, no advice could have been more admirable. One day Jane was sitting looking at wardrobe tests for Nancy. Travel clothes, play clothes, evening and afternoon clothes. Darling little nighties and negligees. Clothes for every occasion, and the dreamiest clothes she's ever worn on the screen.

"Golly!" she sighed. Then: "GOLLY!" she exploded, popping right out of her seat. "That's the most perfect trousseau in the world. I'm going to try to talk the studio out of it."

To grasp the scope of this undertaking, you must realize that clothes worn by feminine players are studio property, and go straight back into Wardrobe. Stars never use them again, but they're spotted around on extras and bit players. As a great concession, you're sometimes allowed to buy a dress or two. But to get the whole works, and for nothing, is completely unheard of.

Jane tackled the job with what she describes as her usual subtlety. She just went to Mr. Schary and asked.

"We'll see," he said. "Come back later on."

Instead of which, she enlisted producer Joe Pasternak as an ally, and he arranged it, nobody knows how. Call it a sentimental wedding gift from Leo the Lion. Or, if you'd rather be practical, remember how tiny Jane is and how most girls couldn't squeeze an arm into her things.

Anyway, she wangled it and the clothes are out of this world. "Only," as she points out to Geary, "they won't be much of a novelty to you."

"On my wife," he assures her, "they'll be a novelty."

The final dance number in Nancy shows Jane on a rustic bridge. A boy darts in, grabs her and kisses her—and that's his only appearance.

Nick Castle directed the dances. "You know," he said, when the action was being planned, "we ought to get someone who can do this with feeling. Why not Geary?"

"A brilliant notion," said Geary. "We'll put the money I get for it in the piggy bank."

Having made a couple of pictures with Sonja Henie, he wasn't new to the work, and flew through his part with the greatest of ease. Not to speak of pleasure.

"All these months I've been kissing Janie for nothing. Now I get paid for it."

Back in the dressing room, she asked, "Did you mind, Geary?"

"Mind what?"

"Kissing me in front of all those people."

"Honey, I'd kiss you even in the Hollywood Bowl while thousands cheered. Why? Did you mind?"

"I was self-conscious. I knew I would be."

"Why didn't you tell me? We could have ducked it."

"And cheat Arabella out of a day's pay?! Who's that self-conscious!"

So when you see the movie, take a fast look at the lover on the bridge. That's Janie's fella. That's Geary. In the movie, all he gets is a stolen kiss. In the real-life story, he gets the gal for keeps.

THE END

that's hollywood!

My legs don't match Dietrich's. They don't even match each other.

Patsy Kelly

Dialogue is the talk that takes place between the actors in a movie—except Gary Cooper.

Abe Burrows
Quoted by Irving Hoffman in The Hollywood Reporter

TWO LOVES HAVE WE

(Continued from page 33)

look in his eyes. The same look comes into his eyes whenever I have to do a fast riding scene. (It's the only thing we ever argue about. He doesn't think I'm strong enough to hold back a high-spirited horse. I don't either, but I hate to admit it!) What gets me is that I've seen that same look in Roy's eyes when we're on the radio and only pretending that we are galloping!

And often, if it has been a tough morning, and I lie down in my dressing room to rest, knowing I'll have to get up in a minute or two if I want to get lunch in the short lunch period—well, I don't have to get up! Before I know it, Roy has entered carrying a well-loaded tray.

And so in this way we live our extra romance—but never openly. Although once we did forget. While we were standing on the set waiting for a camera call, Roy, right up in front of the whole crew, gave me a peck on the cheek.

"Hey! Do that on your own time!" called our director, Billy Witney, who sees all, knows all, and always makes sure that everybody else hears about it too. We knew that Billy was kidding but we both actually blushed—because it was so unlike us when we were working. It was more like—well, it was more as if we were married or something. And that we certainly are not—in the studio!

Sometimes Roy will flub a line of dialogue when we are doing a close-up, even though he has memorized it perfectly—and I know why. It's for my benefit. You see, when a scene has to be done over, the lights and our faces have to be rechecked. And when the closeup is shot again, something he had noticed—a bad shadow cast over my face, or something imperfect with my makeup—will have been corrected. He prefers to do it indirectly this way, without words or credit-seeking demonstration.

Their blue heaven . . .

But if we have our little daily vacation from marriage, we make up for it when we leave the studio. Then begins—or resumes, rather—that part of our lives that is just crowded with conventionality: Mama trying to maintain order and system among three children, 11 dogs, and assorted friends of both; Pop walking around with hammer, screwdriver and pliers stuffed into his back pocket as he works at keeping the house from splitting at the seams.

The house itself, especially the layout and the furnishings inside, is my domain. I like to decorate. That's okay with Roy. I like to redecorate. That's not so okay. Redecorating usually calls for a little talk-talk with Roy before I can go ahead. And I'll have to have a good reason, too.

I needed one when I wanted to paint the house again. I wanted it done darker, in a maroon, instead of the white finish it had. Roy said he thought white was fine. I agreed—that is, if it stays white. But Roy lets three of his dogs run loose around the outside of the house and I showed him the decorating they had done—a highly personalized sort all around the base of the structure, as only dogs can decorate!

It was a case of his either chaining up the dogs or letting me have my way. After talking it over with me, Roy went out and talked it over with the dogs. They must have told him they wouldn't care for chains very much. The house is now dark maroon.

And there was the love seat in the living room which I wanted to do over. Roy held out against it. But one day he sat down on the love seat while he had on levis with the inevitable screwdriver jutting out of his back pocket. There was a loud r-r-rip!—and a two-inch gash in the upholstery when he jumped up. (I've often wondered if that was his way of settling the argument without giving in on his stand!)

Not long ago, he gave me a charm bracelet with 12 charms. Six of them—a grand piano with a top that opens up; a church; a pair of baby shoes; a typewriter, a Charlie McCarthy miniature, and a camera—practically tell the whole story of my early life.

The church is where I first sang publicly. I was five and without front teeth, so I sang the whole song, a Christmas carol, with my hand over my mouth. I was certain that everyone in the church would call out, "Hello, Miss Snag!" if they saw my bare gums. (Everyone in my family did, of course!)

The piano represented my first music lessons as a child, lessons that I didn't practice faithfully because I was dying to play, not exercise, and attempted to learn by ear. Those days my parents kept after me always to practice. Now Roy does it.

The typewriter was a reminder of how I got my actual start as a professional singer. I was a secretary in a Memphis insurance office when the boss happened to hear me singing at my work. The song was Mighty Lak A Rose, and my audience consisted of another secretary and the office boy. The boss insisted that I sing at an insurance association banquet for which he was planning the entertainment. I did—and was heard by a radio program manager who gave me my first singing job with pay.

The baby shoes, of course, are replicas of those of my son, Tommy, who was born to me in my first marriage. And the Charlie McCarthy charm stands for what I dreamed about when I started singing for a living, but never thought I would attain—the "big time," which I achieved when I signed with the Edgar Bergen radio show.

Naturally, the camera means picture work, and shortly after that my association with Roy began. So the six remaining charms all have to do with us. There is a gold fence which represents our favorite picture together, Don't Fence Me In, a juke box which is a reminder of the records I have made, a tiny engraving of the first verse of the 46th Psalm—"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble"—which signifies our turning to the church as a family. The three remaining charms are a pearl-handled revolver with a barrel that twists, a rearing horse, and a good-luck token. These stand for, respectively, Roy, Roy and Roy. . . .

And that's the story of our two loves—at the studio and at home. But I can't end it quite yet. No story involving Roy Rogers has ever been written without at least a mention of a certain horse. Yet, as you can see yourself, in this story I had no reason to bring him in. How am I going to do it?

Oh, yes! You know one of the charms I mentioned above—the one that's a rearing horse? Of course! That's him! That's Trigger!

THE END

You'll find the screen story of Roy Rogers' and Dale Evans' latest picture, Bells of Coronado, in the big December issue of Dell's always-absorbing SCREEN STORIES magazine.

Pleasant TO TAKE

Pleasant IN ACTION

Pleasant FOR CHILDREN & GROWN-UPS

When Nature 'forgets' remember

EX-LAX

THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

10¢

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

SWEETHEART CAKE PANS

FREE Cake Decorator

FREE—Amazing new cake decorator free. Make flowers, loops, names, leaves . . . new easy way just like professionals. Also decorate jello, salads, desserts, pastries. ALSO FREE—seven delicious cake recipes—all new and different, plus lovely icings and whips for decorator. We make this amazing free offer to introduce our heart-shaped cake pans or jello molds. Size 9 by 1¼ inches. Bake a sweetheart layer cake for birthday, anniversary or special occasions. Set of two pans only $1.00 plus postage and C.O.D. handling. SPECIAL OFFER: Double order (4 pans and two decorator sets) only $1.69 plus postage and C.O.D. handling. SEND NO MONEY, just mail a card today. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or your money back. The free gifts are yours to keep regardless. Don't delay. Act now. Royal Industries, Dept. 5038-L, Mt. Vernon, Illinois.

MOTHERS! Now you can get the Latest, Most Complete Book on Child Care

ONLY 25c

A DELL BOOK on sale everywhere

Written by

Dr. Béla Schick

Consulting Pediatrician, Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, the discoverer of the internationally known Schick Test,

and

Dr. William Rosenson

Assistant Pediatrician, Mount Sinai Hospital, New York.

A complete and authoritative guide book for mothers and fathers, written by two nationally known doctors who specialize in commonsense child care.

In simple, clear language it gives the best and easiest ways to care for the physical, emotional and social needs of your child from its birth to the age of six. It includes many recent important advances in the fields of medicine and child care. It answers the hundreds of questions every parent wants to ask.

THE CARE OF YOUR CHILD

A dell book MUST FOR PARENTS

NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE ● 25c

NOTE:

Due to the tremendous demand, this book may not be available locally. To be sure of your copy, send this coupon NOW

MAIL TO: Dell Publishing Company, Inc. MS
Box 125, Murray Hill Station
New York 16, New York

Please send me postpaid, ... copies of Dell Book #340 "THE CARE OF YOUR CHILD." Enclosed is 25c for each copy ordered.

Name .....

Address .....

City, Zone & State .....

This offer good only within the continental limits of the U. S. A.

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 37)

large milk bills and comic books strew on the living-room floor can make us. Th Andrews troupe numbers six now: Dana son, David, 15; Kathy, seven; Stevie, four and-a-half; Susan, not quite two but cur rently star of the show; and Dana and I

Since that day—November 17, 1939—when we joined hands and hearts, Dan and I have stored up a great deal of happ living, fashioned of the ingredients that g to make a real marriage. These are mu tual understanding, hard work, children, solid home, and all the fun that goes witl them.

Oh, Dana has been very lucky in hi career, it's true. But no one ever pu more effort into a job than he does int the business of acting. Dana chose act ing as his life's work because it appealed to him more than any other. Maybe I'm prejudiced, as most wives are, but I believe that he would have been a success as a lawyer or an engineer or a salesman, i he'd squared that jaw and said, "This is for me."

The first time I ever saw him, I had no right to give Dana a second look. And didn't. He was calling for another gir after rehearsal, when we were student at the Pasadena Playhouse.

enter romance . . .

Even if there had been no "ethical" issue involved, I wouldn't have been interested because at the moment I was concentrating with stark, teen-age intensity on a career—with a capital "C." The only males who crashed through my consciousness a all were big, important producers who, in my daydreams, might see me at the Playhouse and proclaim me, Mary Todd, the dramatic find of the year.

Occasionally, as Dana showed up faithfully to take his girl friend home each night, the thought would occur that it would be sort of nice to have someone around like that. Nothing romantic—just a comfortable, big-brother arrangement was what I had in mind.

Dana's introductory reaction to me would have been completely deflating had I known it. "Oh, I saw you," he admitted years later, "but you were such a kid, I couldn't be bothered."

Then, director Moroni Olsen cast us as sweethearts in the Playhouse production of First Lady. By opening night we were practically living our parts, I guess. And that evening we had our first real date. Dana asked me to have dinner with him before the performance, at a small, unromantic restaurant called, encouragingly enough, "The Rite Spot."

Neither of us ate two bites. And it wasn't a case of love stealing our appetites either. We just had opening-night jitters. The conversation? Oh, it was sparkling. Sounded like the suave, sophisticated dialogue of a play. As a matter of fact, it was the dialogue of a play—all the spotty scenes in First Lady that we felt needed a last-minute polish.

Anyway, the show was a success, the date was a success—and from then on, the theater began to take second place in my affection. Somehow, sitting in Sheetz' ice cream parlor over daily cokes, strange irrelevancies, like the August furniture sales and the new apartments going up nearby, began to creep into our conversations about Shakespeare and the new hits on Broadway.

The gist of Dana's proposal, which wasn't a proposal at all in the best Emily Post style, went like this: "Mary, please on't be an actress. I don't want to marry a actress, and I do want to marry you." This was typical of Dana's straight-from-ie-shoulder honesty, avoiding any future isunderstanding or an arbitrary after-arriage edict to the effect that, "As my ife, you can't have a career as an actress." s it was, the choice was mine, and I've ever once regretted trading in one ightly-used theatrical make-up box for a ook book, an efficiency apartment and ana. A home and a family were the ost important measures of success to m and I realized then that they were to e, too.

In the first months of our marriage, ana must have despaired of developing homemaker out of such green material. here were lumps in the mashed potatoes, mps in the socks I darned, even my bed-aking was lumpy. But he never seemed mind, never once voiced the thought at must have occurred as he lifted a aden biscuit—"Honey, maybe you should ave stuck to your acting." Once a week, e had dinner at Mother's—probably the nly reason we managed to survive my arly cooking.

We have moved three times in the course our 10 years, each time because the mily outgrew its quarters. Luckily, at time when building was at a standstill, e found our present home in Toluca ake, so right for us that we half-expected see the children's clothes hanging in e closets as the agent showed us through. uilt originally for a family of three boys, s rooms are homey and sprawling as a ouse for growing youngsters should be. After the small fry have said good-ight—sometimes for the 11th time after e many last-minute reprieves—Dana and review the day's doings, tomorrow's roblems, next summer's vacation. Some-mes we talk for hours. Or rather Dana lks and I listen. Talking is Dana's fa-orite indoor sport, whether there are just e two of us or whether he has a larger udience. And if he can work up a good, st-moving argument on any subject from nited Nations policy to the correct con-ruction of a double malted, he is in his lory.

For an occasional spree—and this must e the Hollywood version of the busman's oliday—we go to the movies. In that case, ana can work in only one trip to the itchen, when we come home. Otherwise, e shuttles between the refrigerator and e den all evening. He is an ardent ice-ox forager, so I try to keep his favorite nacks on hand. In Dana's vocabulary, a snack" is a whole watermelon, a quart of milk, or similar light delicacies. And from a wealth of experience behind a soda fountain, he fancies himself a talented sundae-artist, creating lavish extravaganzas from a battery of syrups and garnishes he keeps on a shelf above the freezer.

"This one I call 'Andrews' Ambrosia,'" he will announce, adding a final gob of whipped cream to a sky-high mound of ice cream swimming in assorted goo. "They used to line up three deep at the fountain for 'em."

Perverse as children are, ours can be little angels at home, but in public, when you especially hope they'll be fairly tractable—that's when they can be downright heathenish! In New York's Grand Central Station when, a few months ago, we were on our way back to Hollywood from England, we had an hour to kill before train time. To anyone, except a mother or father, that would seem like a reasonably easy task. Two parents, two children—nothing arduous about that.

kids will be kids . . .

Well, first of all, as we emerged from the taxi and Dana was busy with porters and baggage, Kathy whispered to me, in ladylike disgust, "Mother, look what Stevie sat in!" She pointed primly to a squashed chocolate which, she knew darned well, she had parked on the seat.

Once inside the station, I hustled Stevie off to the rest room to wash the messy blob from the clean suit, just 20 minutes off its hanger. Back to Dana, standing under the big clock where we'd agreed to meet. No Kathy in sight. "Where's Kathy?" I asked, straightening my son's cap for the 10th time.

"I thought you . . ." Dana started helplessly. We finally located Miss Kathy, thumbing thoughtfully through a stack of magazines at a station newsstand, unaware of the baleful glare of the clerk. By now we had quite a large crowd following us, some who had recognized Dana but just as many who were spellbound by the horrible things Stevie was doing with a wad of bubble gum.

"Let's get them a soda. That'll keep 'em quiet," whispered Dana, by this time perspiring freely and looking 98 percent the harassed father, only two percent movie star. We ducked into the station drugstore and found four places at the fountain. By now faces were pressed against the glass of the drugstore windows. "If only Stevie won't play with his ice cream. . . . If only Kathy won't upset her glass," I hoped against hope.

Well, he did and she did. And for good measure, Stevie dropped his spoon with a clatter and plummeted after it, head-first. How we ever got to the train and on it is all lost in a chocolate haze. Stevie was still clutching two bedraggled straws, which he pressed against Dana's coat, leaving a pair of straggly imprints on Father's proud new Bond Street tie.

Finally our little darlings were both tucked in for the night, and Dana and I sank weakly on the opposite berth of our compartment. Just in time to save ourselves from complete madness, we burst out laughing. "Mrs. Andrews," Dana said, bopping me on the nose with a pillow, "do you realize you and your bedevilled offspring have just set Hollywood glamor back at least 20 years?"

Maybe we are a disappointment to people who think that happily-married movie couples never emerge from the hand-holding stage. But we've only got four hands between us, and that's just one apiece for keeping four young Andrews sprouts in line.

And for romance? We go to the movies.

THE END

Graduate

Graduate nurse Elaine Barrick, like countless other nurses, prefers Italian Balm to any other hand lotion, and uses it daily.

Have you tried Italian Balm recently? You'll be amazed at the difference it makes in your skin. This famous lotion acts quicker —softens roughest, driest skin overnight! Italian Balm is a concentrated lotion—not thin or watery. Amazingly economical. Spreads widely. One drop serves both hands. Unexcelled for chapped hands. 25¢, 50¢, $1.

Campana
Italian Balm
for CHAP-FREE HANDS

so soft!

SITROUX TISSUES
strong... absorbent
NOW FINER THAN EVER

. . . say
SIT-TRUE

HOT WATER in 3 Minutes! only $7.98 Complete

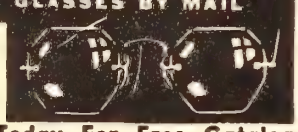
NO FIRES TO BUILD
SAVES FUEL BILLS
SAVES TIME & WORK

All the hot water you want in a jiffy. New low priced Electric Water Heater works like a charm. Just drop in water and plug in. Amazing quantities of hot water to bathe, shave, wash, hundreds of other uses. Handy size and shape fits every basin, tub, sink, etc.

Send No Money! Clip This Ad!

Mail ad on post card or letter. We'll ship C.O.D. for only $1.98 and postage on 10 day money back guarantee offer.

ILLINOIS MERCHANDISE MART
Dept. 6724-B 1227 Loyola Ave., Chicago 26, Illinois



A Career for YOU? DENTAL ASSISTANT

Trained Dental Assistants are in greater demand than ever! Prepare for experience in this fascinating field! New plan permits you to train at home, finish at famous Wayne School . . . Course includes lab, X-ray and chair-side assistance, office and reception duties. Everything furnished; easy terms. Write for complete facts, FREE!

WAYNE SCHOOL, Inc. 2525 SHEFFIELD AVENUE LAB. D1, CHICAGO 14, ILL.

BUY FROM THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED FIRM IN THE UNITED STATES SELLING EYE GLASSES BY MAIL

As Low As $1.95 For Satisfaction

Write Today For Free Catalog
Send No Money
ADVANCE SPECTACLE COMPANY
537 S. Dearborn St., Dept. M-12 Chicago, Ill.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER

TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH

ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS.

SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET

NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU

MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-T, Providence 15, R. I.

Don't miss

JACK BENNY'S
Waukegan Scrap Book in the new
RADIO ALBUM—15c

WILL PAY $10.00 EACH FOR CERTAIN LINCOLN PENNIES!

INDIANHEADS $50.00; DIMES $1000.00. SEND DIME FOR CATALOGUE OF PRICES WE PAY.

LINCOLN COIN CO.
DEPT. 883 • 806 E INDIANA AVE.
ELKHART INDIANA

Genuine STERLING SILVER

To introduce our Latest Elegant High Society style Sunburst Flash Ring send this ad and 35c in coin or stamps. Wear as Engagement Ring or Occasional ring. Brilliant White Sparkler set in Genuine Sterling Silver. Mail string for size and send 35c. Rush your order now while our supply lasts.

Only 35¢

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO. 2451 S. Michigan Avenue, Dept. E910, Chicago 16, Ill.

FREE PHOTO

LARGE SIZE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
Direct from Hollywood
INTRODUCTORY OFFER
Also FREE list decorated with all the latest stars and poses. Send name of YOUR FAVORITE and enclose 10c to cover handling and mailing.

Hollywood Screen Exchange
BOX 1150—DEPT. D-12
Montgomery Clift HOLLYWOOD 28, CALIF., U. S. A.

STARS ON A SPREE ABROAD

(Continued from page 30)

My job was to find out, and I tackled the first troubled trail the minute I'd checked my bags in at that movieland mecca in Rome, the Excelsior Hotel. I grabbed a cab and rolled through winding streets to an address I had. It lay up a dead-end street blocked by an untidy market. Dogs, dirty kids, rags and vegetables littered the swarming street. The Italian cop waved me back. I had to go around the block and come in another way, climb four dark flights of stairs in a nondescript apartment building, enter one of two tiny rooms gloomy with heavy Italian oak furniture and with dozens of black-framed photographs on the walls. The light was bad—but I knew Ingrid Bergman when I saw her.

dreams and nightmares . . .

She was pacing the rug as I came in, frowning and upset. She wore a plain blue cotton dress, no make-up, open sandals and no stockings. Her legs were sunburned and scarred, ankle to knee, from the rocks of Stromboli. She was seething with anger because a Roman newspaper that very morning had announced that she was expecting a baby.

I sat there while she paced the floor, using words which I'd never heard Ingrid use before. I watched her tortured face and heard her injured outcries at a world which, to her amazement, had flayed her reckless behavior. I heard her say repeatedly, "Americans think they own me . . . it's my own life to live. . . ."—and voice the bitter question, "Is it a sin to fall in love?"

I heard her say she couldn't come back and face the curious mob in America, she couldn't go to Sweden, she couldn't even go downtown in Rome, she'd be risking her life. She was there in that hideout and there she would stay.

But all the while she knew better and I knew better, too. I told her, "You've got to face it. You can't hide forever. You've got to live."

"I'm not a woman with a long record of romances," she cried. "I've been a good wife."

"That's just it—they built you up as perfect and the world bought a dream. Now you've smashed it."

"But I've worked harder than any actress ever worked—worked like a slave to make a great picture! Rossellini is a great director—you will see! You will see!"

I left after two hours, left Ingrid Bergman bitter and hurt at what she had found at the end of the rainbow across the sea—a doubtful future, a sorely injured reputation, a broken home and the punctured bubble of her saintly illusion.

And yet I felt all that would pass in time—that Ingrid would be back in Hollywood, even if, as she said, she did divorce her husband and marry Roberto Rossellini. I knew the unreal setting I saw her in would fade away from her and she would be back in spite of her vows to quit. In fact, before I got back to my hotel my head was buzzing with a plan to slip her back secretly to give the distraught girl a break from the press!

Unreality is the theme of Hollywood-in-Europe, and it was appropriate that I began my reporter's look at the cockeyed continent with that first fantastic picture of Ingrid, as out of place, really, as if I'd suddenly spied her on Mars.

Other stars are roaming around Europe—in Paris, Venice, Vienna, Naples, Rome, London, the Riviera—living like princes and princesses of the blood. Producers, directors and other Hollywood hot-sh are dwelling like Caesars in villas a palaces.

The basic reason for the whole hec Hollywood overseas invasion is that Holl wood studios have money in Europe th owing to currency regulations they ca take out, but can spend there. So they using it making pictures.

Thus, you can't take a step arou Europe these days without crossing t trails of Hollywood stars, and you do need a bloodhound to pick 'em up eith The swaths they cut are wide and t paths high and handsome. Everywhere went, for instance, that sensational, sca dalous scamp, Errol Flynn, still linger on—or the glamor of the guy did, that So while I just missed Errol in person the way, I ran into his aftermath ever where.

Errol was off to Venice just before landed in Rome—to live in a palace, course, and hob-nob with titles and swe as he does everywhere. He had his yac on the Mediterranean and cruised arou like a millionaire, which he isn't, in t grand style of a Don Juan, which he ce tainly is. You've got to hand it to Flyn whether you like him or not. He ge around where things are popping, he h fun every minute he lives, and he c slip out of entanglements and respons bilities like a greased pig.

Everywhere I went, I ran into love sighing ex-romances of Errol's, quiveri at his memory. Everywhere I heard not ing but praise for his charm. He'd raid the Riviera, lionized all the parti swooned all the girls. He'd even pok his nose into Stromboli, the only Holl wood star bold enough to try that. B he just had to see what was going when lovely Ingrid's heart turned itse loose. Errol stayed part of one day, ha a frugal lunch of bread, cheese and wine that's all there was—took a horrified loo around that bleak island and at a Berg man de-glamorized and too earthy f Errol. It didn't look promising. "Gad he muttered, "what am I doing here?" and sailed right off. The rugged art life not for Errol.

not so charming . . .

But there were a few people Errol didn charm so much—some passengers on th plane that winged him across to Europ to start his heart-breaking tour. I hear about that from one of them, in person, o a plane myself. I'll tell it—just in case m doing so might help Flynn to mind hi manners next time (which I doubt!).

Seems Errol made a round of the Man hattan bars before he climbed aboard shi and, the minute he did, insisted on his bert being made up right away for a snooz That meant discommoding the rest of th passengers, who hadn't had dinner ye No sooner tucked away, Errol rang th bell every other minute, stomped up an down in his nightrobe and generally mad himself a pest. At Gander, Newfoundlan he was roundly booed by his fellow-trav elers, which didn't bother him a bit. S he got booed again when he stepped o at Paris. You can carry the lordly charm too far—especially when your audienc isn't amused.

If I had to come up with one favorit glamor-pair in Europe, the answer woul be easy: the Tyrone Powers. No wonde Ty hated to come back home to Holly wood, stayed away from the States almos two years. He was having too grand time on the Continent. In Italy they con der him an Italian, he hung around there long—more than that, a royal Italian. lot since Mussolini, and before him Pom- ey and Caesar, paraded in triumph rough the ancient streets, has a Roman ob gone so wild as they did over Ty's nd Linda's wedding. Thousands lined the ay to the church, shouting, "Our Prince, ur Princess!" Flowers and gifts littered eir path.

Ty and Linda have lived in nothing but e grandest style since they were mar- ed. In Rome they occupied the Countess i Frasso's little place—the stables of her alace which she kept and made over hen she sold the big place. It's a royal arn for sure, furnished richly and ele- antly, one of the jewel-boxes of Rome. n England, while Ty made The Black ose, the Powers roughed it in a beautiful ountry house, with squads of servants, fit or a lord. In between pictures, Linda and y have covered Europe like a tent, have one everywhere, have been entertained y everyone. I don't believe the Prince f Wales, in his palmiest days, ever had ore adulation en tour or more applause.

Right now, of course, Ty and Linda have e world's sympathy on the tragic loss of eir expected child, for whom they had uch fine dreams.

Making a picture in Europe is an escape om reality. It does something pretty ixie-ish to Hollywood stars, no doubt bout that. Joan Fontaine is an example observed.

I flew all the way to Rome beside Joan. t was her first trip abroad, and I can't ay she started it too auspiciously. The ery day we climbed aboard the Constel- ation in Hollywood, reporters were on er trail. That day she had split up with er husband, Bill Dozier. In New York a arried magazine writer grabbed her. le'd just written a flowery piece about eir ideal marriage and he had to get ome new dope fast. Joan started the trip ith a furrow in her brow deep enough plant corn.

ot no worries, got no cares . . .

But the minute we hit Rome, Joan's ares whisked away in the torrid breeze. It was hot as the hinges of Hades!) She ound a gay beau her first day there, and om then on, Joan, acting half her age and osition, was as romantic as a girl who's ipped out of school. I asked her, "Aren't ou worried about the situation back at ome and what you'll do about your life, our home and your baby?"

"Not just now," she answered airily. Isn't this wonderful?" For her, yes; for ill and the baby and her real life and esponsibilities, no. But that's what Rome oes for you. It's out of this world at mes. Golly, sometimes I had to pinch yself to settle down—and I've certainly eached the age of reason!

One day, for instance, I attended a gala elebration in the square at Florence with oan, and Joe Cotten—where they were aking background shots for September. e had lunch with the mayor, an affable, easant Communist. We sipped vino un- er the shadow of a huge bust of Joe talin, installed by the Commie official, in e ballroom. I pinched myself—me, a ock-ribbed political conservative and a ommie fighter, in such a spot! But the eauty of Italy, with its art, history and ntique charm make you rise above such lts of reality—for the moment, at least, though I never felt quite comfortable ith Uncle Joe staring wickedly at me.

We watched the fiesta that night, with s dances and songs. After the celebration, oan skipped across the square with her ll swain, Slim Aaron, a magazine pho- grapher; coquettishly called, "Good- e—see you in the morning!"—and hirled off. She wasn't kidding. She danced until dawn like a daring debutante, without a care in the world—not there.

And I—well, Joe and I took another hack for a ride along the Arno river, sil- very in the moonlight, about the prettiest drive in the world, I suspect. (It's a good thing I'm well over 16 and Joe's safely married!) But we both got a jolt when, amid all this ancient beauty, we spied an open-air movie show across the river.

In Rome, Hollywood actors have come, seen, conquered—and stayed. The Dowling sisters are permanent residents and move in top society. Alan Curtis prefers it to Hollywood. Binnie Barnes and her husband, Mike Frankovitch, both speak fluent Italian by now. They are typical of the Hollywood expatriates who settle down in Rome and then wait to produce a picture or to get a job playing in one. Meanwhile—life in a villa and a promenade on the Corso is lots of fun; the girls are black-eyed and gay, the men suave and charming, and the spaghetti's superb! (I had it running out of my ears before I left.)

People are always dropping in to keep the Hollywood Romans hopping with excitement. Cary Grant, Errol Flynn, Greta Garbo—the Divine Swede travels constantly in company with George Schley, her manager and the husband of dress designer, Valentina. Garbo was supposed to make Friends and Lovers, her first in nine years, for Walter Wanger—but the bets are it'll never get going. There have been financial complications—and anyhow all Garbo's friends have advised her against doing it. Rumors buzz like bees around Rome, but real news is surprisingly scarce. It's a fantastic transplanted Hollywood.

Edward G. Robinson was one sturdy boulder of reality that was welcome to contemplate while I was there. Eddie was making My Daughter, Joy, on the Italian Riviera with Peggy Cummins. I wanted to run over for a visit but I can't spread myself around everywhere. I talked to Eddie on the phone, though, and asked him what was doing.

"Gladys (his wife) is painting like mad," he answered. "And my son is running all over Italy in a midget car."

"What about you?" I asked.

"I'm working like the devil!" growled Little Caesar.

Doug Fairbanks, up in the shadow of the Dolomites making State Secrets, also sounded nice and normal and hard-at-work when we chatted away on the telephone. But then, Doug has been getting around Europe since diaper days, has chummed with royalty, been knighted and decorated—and the big league glamor that stupefies other stars, a glamor that Hollywood can never really match, he can take in stride.

the noblest roman . . .

But the antics of half the Hollywood horde, swarming fantastically around the solid beauty of the cathedrals, the noble arches of the Emperors and the majestic marble ruins, are sometimes so incredible that even that screwball, Orson Welles, gets disgusted. He gripes bitterly at what he calls "The American Invasion!" Orson was there at the start of that invasion, of course—and he's stayed to make a pretty fair career-comeback for a broke genius. Darryl Zanuck told me he steals Prince of Foxes from Ty Power, and they say Orson's magnificent in The Third Man, made in Vienna, with Valli and Joe Cotten. Otherwise Europe hasn't altered the boy wonder one bit. He's still marching grandly on.

I talked to Merle Oberon, who was at Antibes, and deliriously in love. "You'll just have to fly over and meet him, Hedda," she entreated me. "I can't," I wailed. "I've got to go to Paris and catch up on the fashions. I'll see you both in Hollywood." But I won't of course—because "him" was

DON'T LET THOSE "DIFFICULT DAYS" COME BETWEEN YOU

Maybe it was his fault—that quarrel. Maybe. But next time take care! Don't let those Monthly Blues make you nervous and irritable! Instead — for nervous tension, periodic cramps and headache — help get usually grand relief with these improved Chi-Ches-Ters Pills! Packed in three convenient sizes. Get Chi-Ches-Ters Pills at your druggist.

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Company, Dept. 12-E, Philadelphia 46, Pennsylvania.

Lovely NAILS in A FLASH... with

NU-NAILS

ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS and

QUICK-DRYING GLUE

Cover short, broken, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy with our amazing new quick-drying glue. Can be worn any length . . . polished any shade. Help overcome nail-biting habit. Set of ten . . . only 25c. At all dime stores.

ONLY 25¢ SET OF TEN

NU-NAILS CO., Dept. 15-S
5251 W. Harrison, Chicago44

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 3209, Detroit 27, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. C-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

FOR HOME PERMANENTS!
And all your cosmetic uses. Dispenses clean cotton as you need it—special top holds wave lotion. New, practical, inexpensive.
COTTON PICKER ®
Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton
A CURITY Product
BAUER & BLACK Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

NERVOUS STOMACH
ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of "nervous stomach"—heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas in stomach and intestines. ALLIMIN has been clinically tested by doctors and found highly effective. ALLIMIN is the world's largest selling garlic tablet. For sale at ALL drug stores.
ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

10 SELECTED USED DRESSES $3.90
We make every effort to bring you our greatest used clothing bargains ever offered. Attractive prints, cottons, woolens, checks, plaids, solids, etc., at a give-away price. Some dresses may have been sold as high as $30.00 each when new. An excellent assortment of styles and colors. Some may require minor adjustments. Sizes 10 to 18, $3.90. Larger sizes 5 for $3.90. Deposit $1, balance C.O.D. plus postage. Satisfaction guaranteed or your $3.90 refunded. Write for FREE Illustrated CATALOG and discover the home of bargains for the entire family.
Trans-World Clothing, Inc.
164 Christopher Ave., Dept. 103-A
Brooklyn 12, N. Y.

RUPTURE-EASER
A strong, form fitting, washable support. Back lacing adjustable. Snaps up in front. Adjustable leg strap. Soft, flat groin pad. No steel or leather bands. Unexcelled for comfort. Also used as after-operation support. For men, women and children. Mail orders give measure around the lowest part of the abdomen. Specify right or left side or double. We prepay postage except on C.O.D.'s.
Right or left Side $3.95
Double 4.95
Pat. Pend.
PIPER BRACE CO.
308 East 12th Dept. DG-12 Kansas City 6, Mo.

WANT TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE?
EASY TO TRAIN AT HOME
ACT NOW—HELP FILL THE NEED
Now you can prepare for practical experience as a Trained Practical Nurse in spare time. Many earn while learning. Ages 18 to 55. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Write for free information and sample lesson pages.
WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, INC.
2525 Sheffield Ave., Desk K-47, Chicago 14, Ill.

Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold
FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

High School Course at Home
Many Finish in 2 Years
Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American Schools, H914, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

JADE
$12.95 PLUS TAX
Enjoy the priceless beauty of rare, exquisite regalite Jade fashionably designed and set in gorgeous yellow gold plate. An ideal lifetime gift. Only $12.95 plus tax. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Christmas delivery guaranteed. Royal Gem Company, 1517 Cross Roads of the World, Hollywood, California.

Count Cini, the dark and handsome Italian who crashed to his death so tragically even as he waved Merle goodbye on his take-off.

I know Merle was not dramatizing herself for a minute when she cried hysterically, "Life is finished for me!" She felt that way. Count Cini, from an illustrious family, one of the richest in Italy, was the world to her. What a pair they would have made! But now? I think Merle's salvation lies in work, and I'm hoping it's in Hollywood. She's a wonderful woman who's too young and beautiful to pine away.

I flew to Paris from Rome, and it's always a thrill for me to dip down over the sparkling lighted jewels of that band-box city. Paris, today, is to London what Palm Springs is to Hollywood—a weekend resort. It's only an hour-and-a-half's hop and I've a hunch all the Hollywood stars in England, loaded with American dollars don't feel comfortable flashing them around the hard-pressed British.

The talk around Paris, among other things, is that the marriage of David Selznick and Jennifer Jones stands a very slim chance to last unto a ripe old age. Jenny's psychiatrist in Switzerland advised her against marrying David—and that anxious producer never put anything on celluloid, not even Gone With the Wind, as suspenseful as his yes-no-maybe-so pursuit of Jenny with object matrimony. He chased her all over Europe, finally cornered her in France—and right up to their wedding day they couldn't make up their minds.

Leland Hayward, the Broadway producer, and his best-dressed bride, Slim Hawks, were supposed to stand up with David and Jenny, along with Louis Jourdan and his wife. Leland and Slim were on their own honeymoon and wanted to be off for travel and fun. Finally they got sick and tired of sticking around while Jenny and David see-sawed. "We'll give you two exactly 60 minutes to make up your minds," they ultimatumed. "Either you marry then, or off we go!"

wedding talk . . .

Well, David and Jenny used up the full hour talking it over—but with the last minute ticking off, they said they meant sure enough at last. And so they were married. Now, wouldn't that make a cute little movie scene for someone?

Ah, me—I told you Europe did something silly to Hollywood stars. I heard that Richard Widmark, a perfectly grand guy at home, was living so swankily in London while making Night and the City that the British actors, who are hard up, wouldn't speak to him. And who do you think out-glamorized Hollywood's Academy Award winner, Jane Wyman, over in London making Stage Fright? A grandmother named Marlene Dietrich. She's the toast of Paris, London and wherever she stops. And who has everybody nuts about him, twice as much as about his glamorous wife? None but my old crush, Buddy Fogelson, there in London with Greer Garson.

Well, for some Hollywooders, the Big European Excursion is meat—for others it's poison. For me, I don't know—and I couldn't stay long enough to find out. Back home my typewriter was rusting away. But I do know this:

There's no place like Rome. Or for that matter, Florence, the Riviera or Paris. But after all, as the old and so-true saying goes, there's no place like home. East, West, home's best. My home and my beat is Hollywood and I'm glad to be back. I think a lot of the Hollywood stars gallivanting over Europe on their Continental sprees might discover the same thing one of these days—even Ingrid Bergman.

You have, alas, to come to your senses sooner or later. THE END the fans

MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION

Ideas which we've gotten in the mail and think you might find interesting: The Pittsburgh chapter of the Ronald Reagan club has been chipping in weekly dues and as soon as $5 is collected, they buy toys and distribute them among handicapped children in local hospitals. Some of you other clubs might like to do something like that in your own neighborhoods . . . In order to gain recognition for her star, Dick Contino, Dolores Lusnig of Milwaukee got up a petition of 6,000 signatures and presented it to the manager of a local theater. And, as a result, the management is considering booking Dick there in the near future . . . Nell Ambrose of the Club Friendship reports that her club has collected over 10,000 stamps this year. Some of them are very rare ones and all are turned over to veterans' hospitals . . . The June Allyson club has a very fine idea for sponsoring members from foreign countries who are unable to send dues. They have a snapshot fund and all money received through the sale of snapshots goes to pay the dues of a new foreign fan.

Prizes: Club editors who are winners in the Best Editors contest this month will be glad to know that they will receive 500 foto stamps as their prize. These are wonderful little postage-stamp sized photographs for journals or stationery and they may have them of any star they wish. The American Foto Stamp company is supplying them. Our Best Correspondents (and there are no better) receive the terrific Revlon King's Ransom sets. Seven luscious lipsticks with a gold holder and all beautifully packaged in black velvet. Enger-Kress wallets in almost every shade of the rainbow are what the This Is My Best winners have won. Both beautiful and practical—everyone just loves them. Tangee's Trip Kits are all the rage among our club artists. The kits are filled to overflowing with their heavenly cosmetics and just right for that winter trip . . . And there are subscription prizes for candid camera contest winners, too.

10th Semi-annual TROPHY CUP CONTEST
4th lap

This Is My Best: (100 points) "How I Remember Grandpa," Janet Mars, Lloyd Bridges (Sonenberg) "No Escape," Pat O'Conner, Bing Crosby (Ness) "Rise Stevens Captivates Lowell," Penny McInnis-Rise Stevens. "Lest We Forget," Carry DeHart Jams Brown. "An Invitation," Patricia Schoonmaker, Shirley Temple. "The Precious Old," Ginger Bagnall, Nina Foch. Best Journals: (500 points) League 1. Bing Crosby (Ness). League 2. (tied) Shirley Temple. Vera-Ellen. League 3. DeForest Kelly. Best Editors: (250 points) League 1. Marionne Oppenheim, Bette Davis. League 2. Marilyn Gorman, Jim Davis. League 3. Bea Smith, Marta Toren Best Artist: (150 points) Carman Holt, Michael Kirby. Best Covers: (250 points) League 1. Bette Davis. League 2. Nina Foch. James Brown. (tied) League 3. Lloyd Bridges (Sonenberg) Best Correspondents: (100 points) League 1. Janet Miller Alan Ladd. League 2. Marsha Rosenthal, Dick Contino. League 3. Maryland Wong, Montgomery Clift. Most Worthwhile Activities: (250 points) League 1. Ronald Reagan. (Donation to children's hospital). League 2. Esther Williams (donation for club foster child). League 3. Frank Sinatra (Moison-Elsemore) (Box of clothing to war orphans). Membership Increases: (100 points) League 1. Gene Autry. League 2. Gordon MacRae. League 3. Marta Toren. Candid Camera Winners: (100 points for first prize, 50 points for others). Margaret Huebner, Dave Willock. Mary Molloy, Eleanor Steber. Marilyn Lee Arsint, Nelson Eddy (Motola). Helen Segeler, Penny Edwards. Irene Nagy June Allyson, Joyce Moison, Sinatra. Leading Clubs: League 1. Ronald Reagan 950. Bing Crosby (Ness) 900. League 2. Shirley Temple 1150. Jack Berch 750. League 3. Dave Willock 700.

MY SNEAK PARTY

(Continued from page 40)

scenes left lying on the floor of the cutting-room.

This time, though, a friend of a friend of mine who knew a friend of the theater manager, tipped me off—after making me swear never to tell how I learned about the sneak of My Friend Irma. I promised. Then I called my guests—Marie Wilson and her mother, the Don DeFores, and John and Marie Lund.

By 6:30 we were all bundled into two cars and headed for Inglewood, a Los Angeles suburb. We had to leave that early because, not really being invited, we had to scramble for seats along with everyone else. Since we would have to sit through another complete feature before the preview came on, we had no time for dinner before the show.

Well, we made it all right—and so did Bob Beerman and Bert Parry, the Modern Screen photographers, who'd found out from this same friend of a friend. All through the picture they were roaming up and down the aisles with their Speed Graphics, shooting photos with the aid of infra-red lights. An infra-red flash-bulb gives off no light—just a little pinpoint of red. Still, the light is so penetrating that pictures can be taken in the dark. Good pictures, too, except that the light makes a girl look as if she weren't wearing any make-up at all.

I'll make a confession about myself, though I wouldn't dare to speak for the rest of our guests, half of whom—Marie Wilson, John Lund and Don DeFore—were in the cast of My Friend Irma, too. I love catching sneak previews of movies I'm in. Not for the sake of self-admiration, but because I want to see just how my performance came out. You never can really tell just what your work in a picture was like until you see yourself in the finished product, for your scenes usually are shot all out of order—sometimes the very first one on the last day of shooting.

All through the picture I forgot our guests completely, I was so wrapped up in the screen performances. John told me afterward, as we pushed through the mob, that I chewed my knuckles, laughed wildly, groaned, worried, and generally worked myself into a complete dither.

When we finally reached our cars, he snapped me out of it by remarking, "I hate to bring up the subject, but I'm bordering on starvation—and so are all our guests. What about dinner?"

"Oh, that," I retorted. "Why, it's simple: On to the Kopper Kart!"

And so we went—happily, because we thought the picture was swell. If it had been bad, we'd probably have slunk home without so much as a sandwich. Somebody brought along a stack of the preview cards the audience had filled out, and while we waited for our 11 P.M. salads we looked them over.

We made a little bet among ourselves as to what character in the picture the audience would like best. You might have guessed it—we all did—the favorite was Marie Wilson as "my friend Irma." But I must add that the whole cast received some wonderful raves—particularly Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

Then came the food—and I don't think any of us missed home cooking as we dug into thick prime ribs of beef. Marie's dog, Hobbs, who slept through the preview, woke up right away. We'd smuggled her into the restaurant, and I caught Marie transferring a huge hunk of beef below the table. She looked up and pretended that she'd dropped her napkin.

All of a sudden I was glad my dinner party had failed to take place at home. John and I agreed that it was a hugely successful evening. He thought of the gag to top it off. When we were all ready to go back to Hollywood, the headwaiter came up with the check for the dinner. I was amazed to see him hand the bill to John Lund. John was amazed, too. The total was $285.36! How was I to know that my playful husband had prearranged this staggering check, and had paid the real one 10 minutes before?

Also, how were we all to know that Mr. Lund can't be topped? He simply asked for a pencil and wrote across the face of it, "Charge to Hal Wallis Productions."

What a party! We must give one like it again sometime.

Matter of fact, I think I'll call up my friend Irma tomorrow and begin making out a list.

THE END

RAGE IN HEAVEN

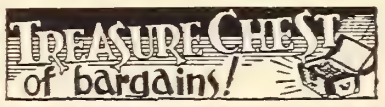
(Continued from page 24)

insincerity—and you could see at once that this was not the truth.

And when he took Wanda in his arms, he showed no zest, no enjoyment in the move. There was an impatience about Audie, a restlessness to get the picture-taking finished, to stop living this photographic lie.

When it was over and the photographer and I had left the Murphy apartment, I turned to him and said, "There's one marriage that's going on the rocks."

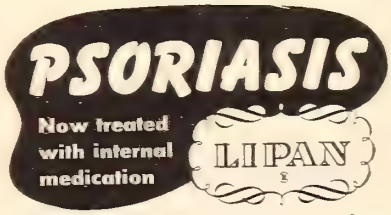
My camera boy shrugged. "Oh, I don't know," he said. "Maybe it's just a bad day. Every married couple has bad days."



A week later, the headlines blossomed forth: AUDIE MURPHY HINTS HE AND WIFE MAY SEPARATE . . . HOLLYWOOD BLAMED FOR WOES OF AUDIE, WANDA . . . AUDIE, WANDA WASHED UP.

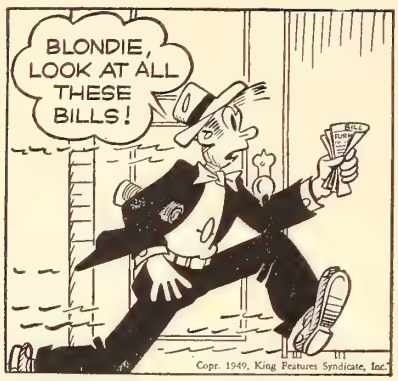
I quickly got in touch with Wanda. "I don't know how those stories got started," she complained. "We're not talking or even thinking of divorce! We have our problems, but who doesn't? If we're given half a chance, I'm sure we can work them out."

Oddly enough, this was more or less what Ginger Rogers had told me two weeks before she divorced Jack Briggs. But there's a world of difference—many years and three husbands—between Ginger and Wanda. And when a 21-year-old newlywed tells me that she and her husband have no thought of divorce and are seriously working at making their marriage a success, then I am woman enough to believe and understand her.

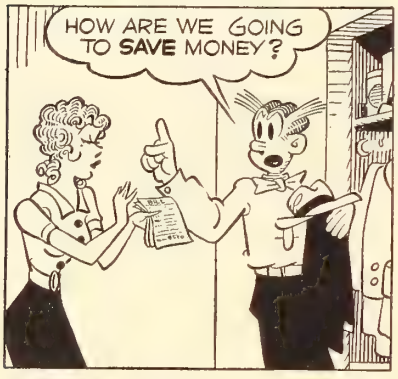


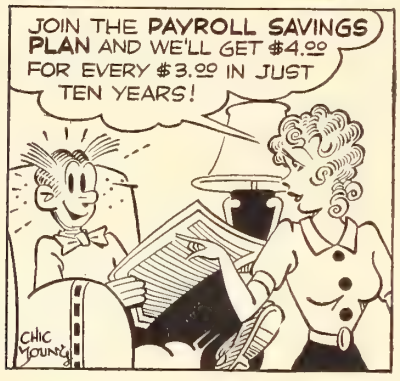
And yet, despite this belief and understanding, I knew that Audie and Wanda had been bickering and quarreling for many months. I knew that Wanda's mother had gone to Darien, Georgia, because she wanted these two to work out their own problems without help or hindrance of mother-in-law. I knew, too, what many of Wanda's friends had been saying. "She has a really tough job," one of these friends had confided to me. "Audie is very high-

$25 FAMILY PARADISE FOR $5



When we bought out a large department store, we had the choice of selling out cheap to dealers or giving you folks a chance to buy the many wonderful and expensive things at unbelievable prices. So, we've put up our giant "Treasure Chests" containing $5.95 Stainless Steel Carving Sets or 24 pc. Princess Mitzie Pattern Tableware Sets, Service for 6, $7. 3-pc. Pen and Pencil Sets, $5. Glamour Kits, $3. worth of Shaving Needs including 100 nationally advertised blades, Jackpot of Toys, lovely Gift Jewelry worth up to $5. and other needs all priced at more than $25. Thrill the whole family or take care of plenty of Christmas giving. Everything new and perfect. Send name, address and pay postman $5 plus postage or send $5.75 and we'll send postpaid and include $1 Ball Pen as an extra gift.
Treasure Chests, Box 1831-D, Bridgeport 1, Conn.





For several years a number of doctors have reported amazing success in treating Psoriasis with LIPAN—a new medical wonder taken internally. LIPAN is a combination of glandular substances that treat certain internal disorders which many medical men now agree to be the cause of Psoriasis. Clinical results show LIPAN successful in over 90% of cases treated. Even stubborn lesions are alleviated to a degree almost beyond belief. Absolutely harmless! Ask your druggist for LIPAN or write direct for free booklet. Or, send for month's supply (180 tablets) enclosing check or money order for $8.50.

SPIRT & COMPANY, Dept. DM-12, Waterbury, Connecticut

WHY DON'T YOU,

too, take Blondie's tip?

Set aside a regular amount week after week, month after month, year after year.

Then in 10 short years you will have a mighty nice nest egg tucked away.

Get started now. Get your Bonds through Payroll Savings or at your bank or post office.

Automatic saving is sure saving—

U. S. Savings Bonds

Contributed by this magazine in co-operation with the Magazine Publishers of America as a public service.

strung, you know. You can't blame him for that. After all, he went through so much. But let's face it: Veterans in the throes of readjustment aren't easy to get along with. They don't make such great husbands, either."

"The true story of those two kids' troubles," insisted a Warner Brothers press agent who had worked with Wanda when she was at that studio, "is that Wanda makes more money, a whole lot more money, than Audie. She probably pays most of the household bills. Audie's the kind of guy whose vanity rebels at such stuff, but there's not much he can do about it. There he is, one of the great heroes of the War, and he's playing second fiddle to a little girl who doesn't even weigh a hundred pounds. It undoubtedly hurts his ego, and that's why they fight."

Another friend of Wanda's said, "Audie is as stubborn as a compass. He wants his own way about things. He's also basically anti-social, and Wanda is not, and that's all it amounts to. I'm sure these kids can make a go of things, and in the years to come, they'll probably wind up being one of Hollywood's happiest couples."

whose fault? . . .

In other words, the feeling in Hollywood has been that if anything is wrong with the Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy marriage—and many gossip columnists have been insisting nothing really is—then what little blame there is, falls on the lap of the returning hero.

I, for one, don't think so; and I, for one, must predict, on the basis of the facts, that this marriage will probably end in the divorce court, unless Wanda suddenly decides to give up her acting career—and I fear very much that she won't. Dixie Wanda Hendrix is an intensely ambitious little girl who all her life has worked and struggled for this screen success, and now she stands on the very threshold of great fame and large salaries. (Incidentally, her work in After Midnight, to be released next spring, is extraordinary.)

And also—all the aforementioned rumor and gossip concerning Audie Murphy is completely false.

He is not a neurotic; he is not in the throes of readjustment; he is not cynical and disillusioned; he does not live off the earnings of his wife. If his marriage goes on the rocks, it will not be his fault—it will just be the result of mis-mating. It will be the story of a war hero who fell in love with the picture of a girl on a magazine cover, a girl who in real life turned out to be far different than he imagined.

The truth is that actresses, not war veterans, are the most difficult human beings to live with. Millions of women have married and stayed married to returning war heroes. But how many men have stayed married to film actresses? Very few.

When Audie Murphy first came to Hollywood, he knew nothing of actresses in particular, and very little of women in general. His picture had appeared on the cover of Life magazine, and because of that, Jimmy Cagney had invited him to the movie capital. "I saw in him," Cagney says, "poise and assurance without aggressiveness. You might call it a spiritual overtone."

Well, this spiritual overtone was worth $75 a week to Cagney, and that's what he paid Audie. He also sent him to dramatic school and told him "to hang around and get the feel of things."

Audie hung around and learned a little about acting, and he dated two or three girls, but they said he was awfully shy and slow. "Doesn't drink or smoke, you know, and won't even tell you about the war." Moreover, Audie didn't particularly go in for night life. "He doesn't even know the difference between Ciro's and Mocambo," one girl snickered. "He's a country bumpkin, a farmer."

In a large degree, this was true. Audie was born in Texas, one of nine children. His father was a poor sharecropper. His mother died when he was 16. Life to him was a grim proposition of getting enough food and clothes. He worked all day in the fields. He had little schooling. When his mother died, his younger brothers and sisters were put in an orphanage. He became an itinerant worker, hitch-hiking from town to town in an effort to keep body and soul together.

No wonder Mocambo meant nothing to him. No wonder the fast beauties of Hollywood Boulevard considered him a rube, a farmer, a square.

He was all these things, but he was also honest and sincere and an idealist. During the war, he had been wounded, had several times been near death. And men who have looked into the mouth of death and have returned miraculously, these men somehow have a better sense of the true values of life. They know what is important and what is not.

When Audie was under contract to Cagney, he was lionized by many Hollywood organizations. He was invited to this producer's house, to that producer's lawn party. He was dined and wined and feted. Everyone was sure of his great future. He was handsome. He could talk well. He was possessed of a certain boyish sex-appeal. He seemed a natural. But then the Cagneys dropped Audie from their contract roster—and seemingly overnight, the great war hero was an outcast, a social leper. No invitations, no dates, no dinners. Not even a place to sleep.

That's right—the most-decorated hero of World War II couldn't find a place to sleep in Hollywood. Terry Hunt, who owns a gymnasium in Beverly Hills and who fought in Burma during the war, was the only man to give Audie a helping hand. Terry let the kid sleep on a cot in the back of his gym.

Audie had a small amount of money, enough to rent a small apartment, but there was nobody in the city who would rent him an apartment without his first paying a $250 to $500 bonus. Naturally, Audie became a bit cynical, a bit disillusioned. Who, under similar circumstances, wouldn't?

At that time, Audie was supporting two younger brothers and one younger sister. As soon as he returned to Texas after the war, he took these three out of the orphanage and sent them to live with an older sister. He paid all the bills.

no bowl of cherries . . .

Despite the fact that life had handled him pretty roughly, Audie still viewed it with a deep, abiding sort of optimism. "I realized," he says now, "that there were an awful lot of good people in the world. It was just that somehow I had missed many of them."

Audie Murphy wasn't sour on the world when he met Wanda Hendrix. He was slightly disillusioned but not sour. Still, there's no doubt about it: Audie was desperate at that time for some sort of understanding and reassurance. Wanda gave it to him. She seemed to understand his irritations, his moods. Better still, she knew how to cope with them.

And so they became engaged. Wanda went off to Italy for five months to make Prince of Foxes. When she returned, Audie's book of his war experiences, "To Hell and Back," had been published with immediate success. He had been given the lead in Bad Boy and the producer, Paul Short, had put him under contract, guaranteeing Audie a minimum of $10,000 a picture.

He and Wanda were married. And everyone was certain it would last.

It was true that Wanda wasn't a very good cook, but that's nothing against a young wife. She would learn. But gradually, as the months unfolded, more than rumorous cooking stories started to be hushed about. Wanda and Audie were tiffing.

Wanda, under contract to Paramount, wanted desperately to achieve a full-fledged stardom. She, too, had known poverty as a youngster in Florida. She wanted the better things of life, and here they were, at last, within her grasp. She wanted to get into the social swim of things; she wanted to get known, to pose for pictures, to receive her share of adoration and publicity; she wanted to be seen in all the right spots with all the right people.

To Audie, this was so much bunk. If Wanda was a good actress, she would achieve fame on the basis of her ability. Fame on the basis of sociability or publicity, he felt, was a false foundation.

There were often arguments about this.

"Now, look," Audie said one evening. "If you want to go to these parties, please go. There are dozens of guys to take you. I just don't like them."

You see, Audie doesn't believe in glamor. He doesn't believe in not talking to the plateman at Universal, merely because the plateman makes only $85 a week. Nor does he believe in treating prop men and electricians with kindly, superior benevolence. You know, talking down to them with a sticky kind of sweetness that makes them feel like peasants before the feudal lord.

Nor is Audie, the orphan from Farmersville, Texas, ambitious. To date, he has starred in two pictures, Bad Boy and The Kid from Texas. At this moment, he is starring with Wanda in Sierra. His income is approximately $25,000 a year. He thinks that's wonderful enough. He pays all the household bills. I'll repeat that: He pays all the household bills. He also supports four members of his immediate family.

Audie respects Wanda very much. Wanda in return loves him intensely. My personal opinion is that Audie, once he achieved the sort of financial security he felt necessary to support a wife and family, expected Wanda to give up her career.

I'm sure that he himself has never suggested that move, but I'm equally sure that he expected it to be volunteered in the natural course of events. When he fell in love with Wanda's picture on that Coronet cover, he felt that he was falling in love with a typical American girl, a girl who would be satisfied with wifehood and motherhood.

He wanted simplicity; he wanted sweetness; he wanted a plain, natural girl; and in Wanda, he thought he had found all that. He did; but he also found an actress.

Better men than Audie Murphy have tried marrying and staying married to rising young actresses, and better men than Audie Murphy have failed. Because to be married to an actress, particularly a successful actress—and Wanda Hendrix is certainly that—a man needs large amounts of worldiness, sophistication, and nonchalance, and a not-too-sensitive heart. Audie Murphy has none of these.

Well, just what does Audie think of the domestic chances of him and Wanda?

"The other day," he told me, "some writer interviewed me. She asked about me and Wanda. I told her that if Wanda and I had any basic disagreements—and I'm afraid we have—we would have had them any place—New York, Texas, or Hollywood. Well, the next day, she wrote a story and said that I had blamed everything on Hollywood. I never said any such thing.

"No, Hollywood's been good to me and it's been good to Wanda. There've been a lot of stories out to the effect that I'm a psycho, that I'm a bit off my nut, that I'm hard to get on with, that I'm still readjusting myself to civilian life. That's bunk.

"Wanda and I have differences. I guess all married couples do. If the love that first brought you together lasts, I guess you can work those differences out. If the love doesn't last, if it fades too quickly, if it turns out that you weren't in love, that you were only infatuated, then maybe you shouldn't stay married.

"I mean, if a marriage doesn't work in the first few years when it's supposed to work, when you're both supposed to be so much in love, what is there to make anyone believe that it will work in six or eight years? If people aren't happy together before children start arriving, will they be happier afterwards? These are questions that Wanda and I will have to work out."

THE END

You won't want to miss reading the screen story of Prince of Foxes, in which Wanda Hendrix co-stars with Tyrone Power, in the December issue of SCREEN STORIES—another entertainment-packed Dell magazine.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AS AMENDED BY THE ACTS OF MARCH 3, 1933, AND JULY 2, 1946

Of MODERN SCREEN, published monthly at Dunellen, N. J., for October 1, 1949

State of New York } ss.
County of New York }

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Helen Meyer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the Business Manager of the MODERN SCREEN and that the following is to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily, weekly, semiweekly or triweekly newspaper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the acts of March 3, 1933, and July 2, 1946 (section 537, Postal Laws and Regulations), printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.; Editor, William B. Hartley, 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.; Managing editor, Durbin L. Horner, 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.; Business manager, Helen Meyer, 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

2. That the owner is: (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding one percent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a firm, company, or other unincorporated concern, its name and address, as well as those of each individual member, must be given.) Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.; George T. Delacorte, Jr., 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.; Margarita Delacorte, 261 Fifth Ave., New York 16, N. Y.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding one percent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by her.

(Signed) HELEN MEYER, Business Manager

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 21st day of September, 1949.

(SEAL) JEANNETTE SMITH GREEN (My Commission expires March 30, 1950.)

SEND ONLY $1 for Any Item

Balance in easy payments.

Your Money Back if Not Satisfied.

Immediate Delivery

J3

3-genuine-diamond engagement ring and 3-genuine-diamond wedding ring. 14Kt. Gold. Perfectly matched in attractive gift box. Both for $29.95 tax incl. 3-diamond ring only $22.95.

MEN'S WRISTWATCH

J2

Nationally advertised watch with written guarantee. Latest model in luxurious gift box. Only $17.95 tax incl. Ladies' Watches at same price.

J4

Bargain of the Month. 14Kt. gold engraved wedding band. White or yellow. Reduced to $3.98 tax incl. while they last.

J6

Beautiful gold filled Carmen stretch bracelet to enhance her wrist and win her heart. Attractively Boxed. Now $6.95 tax incl.

Send for Big FREE 48 page Catalog. Full line Genuine Diamond Rings, Nationally Known Watches. Lowest Prices, Best Terms Guaranteed. 10 day money back guarantee. HOW TO ORDER: Send only $1. Balance in Easy Payments. State age, occupation. No extra charge. No red tape. Orders filled promptly. ORDER TODAY.

ATLAS JEWELERS, Inc.

Dept. L, 225 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.

CORNS REMOVED BY MOSCO

also Calluses. Quick, easy, and economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢ and 50¢. Buy Mosco at your druggist.

Your money refunded if not satisfied. The Moss Company, Rochester, N.Y.

FREE Subscription to Ciro's Capers

GLAMOROUS FILM STAR NEWS

WRITE DIRECT: H. D. HOVER, Owner

Ciro's, 8433 Sunset, Hollywood

"How to Make Money with Simple Cartoons"

A book everyone who likes to draw should have. It is free; no obligation. Simply address

FREE BOOK

CARTOONISTS' EXCHANGE

Dept. 4312 Pleasant Hill, Ohio

FREE PHOTO

DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE STAR

(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)

SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY

With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 10c for handling.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER

Box 2309, Dept. O-129, Hollywood 28, Calif.

ROY ROGERS

Zircons—STUN Your FRIENDS

Genuine "Brilliant-White" diamond-like zircons. Hard for even experts to tell the difference. 14K rings. Large selection. Low Prices. One shown: 1-Ct. $9.95. Pay postman. Money-back guarantee. Big, FREE Catalog.

14K

U. S. Zircon Syndicate,

139 N. Clark St., Dept. 37, Chicago 2, Ill.

TINY RADIO—REALLY WORKS!

FITS IN YOUR HAND! Works on new "PERMA-CRYSTAL" so it NEVER NEEDS TROUBLESOME TUBES, BATTERIES OR ELECTRIC "PLUG-INS"!! Easy to use—Plays for nothing—Should last for years. Beautiful Red Plastic Case. GUARANTEED TO WORK on local programs by following instructions. C. B. of Ala., says "Tiny Radio is just Wonderful"!

SEND ONLY $1.00 (bill, ck., mo.) and pay postman $2.99 COD plus postage or send $3.99 for postpaid delivery. SENT COMPLETE READY TO PLAY on simple attachment. Has personal phone. WONDERFUL GIFTS FOR BOYS & GIRLS Low priced. Order YOUR Tiny Radio Now!

MIDWAY COMPANY Dept. TMM-12 Kearney, Nebr.

HE'S NOT MY BABY ANYMORE

(Continued from page 49)

You couldn't buy any. The whole little town was closed up. So Farley drove out and found himself an orchard and picked sprays of blossoms off the trees—whether with or without the owner's permission, I never asked. Back at the hospital, the nurses were busy, so he fixed them himself. And when she woke up next morning, Joan's room was bright with them. . . .

Farley's first love is his work. I can still see him, 17 years old, standing outside Mr. Goldwyn's office, the contracts just signed and none of us quite believing what had happened. Bob McIntyre, Mr. Goldwyn's casting director, put his hand on the boy's shoulder. "Well, Farley—d'you want to be a big movie star?"

"No sir, I just want to be a good actor."

That hasn't changed. But next to his work, he loves music, painting and books. One of his treasures is a painting of a little Indian boy by Diego Rivera, that he brought back from Mexico. One of my treasures is a picture Farley drew as a youngster, while lying on the floor in front of the fireplace. I had it framed not so long ago, and hung over the mantel. Farley had a fit. Nevertheless, it still hangs over the mantel.

"Some people," I tell him, "go for Diego Rivera. I have a taste for early Farley Granger."

Books he devours. "I've got so much to learn!"—that's his constant cry. If Farley's been away—though it's only for a few days—first two places he heads for are the bookstore and the Gramophone Shop. Straight like a thirsty horse for water.

I've seen mothers look at their dearly beloved children just the way Farley looks at a book. About music, it's funny. My father was a fine violinist, and I used to hope Farley'd be able to sing. He can't sing a note. Or rather, he'll cheerfully sing anything you ask. But you don't ask, because he's always half a key off. But this doesn't affect Farley's passion for music. That he was born with.

The way Farley got into films was this: Back in 1942, Farley—who'd been active in high-school play productions—landed a part in a little-theater production of The Wookey.

Lucille Reimer—she was working as a talent scout at the time—saw Farley in this little play and called us up. She wanted to take him to Samuel Goldwyn's for an interview, and since he was still under-age, she wanted Dad and me to go along. Naturally, we all went. "It's nothing," we kept telling each other over and over. "Things like this happen every day, and nothing comes of them." But I was shaking, and Farley's eyes were like coals.

Nothing definite happened that day. Farley was one of a hundred boys being interviewed for the part of Damian in The North Star. Bob McIntyre took him to Miss Hellman and Mr. Milestone. They took him to Mr. Goldwyn. All Mr. Goldwyn said was, "I like his physique." He was called back once to read, then we didn't hear and we didn't hear for a month.

Then one Thursday the call came. I was out on the front porch a dozen times before he got home. "Farley, you're going in for a test tomorrow."

P. S.—He got the job. And a Goldwyn contract.

He made North Star, he made Purple Heart and he joined the Navy. He was in the Navy two years, one month and one day. When he returned, we had 65 people in our little house to meet him and greet him. I invited all his old flames—Janie Withers, June Haver, Ann Blyth. "Have spaghetti and meatballs, Mom," he'd said on the phone. We had spaghetti and meatballs. And a champagne punch. They sat on the floor and played games till four in the morning. Me, I cried.

After that came what Farley calls the long drought. Eighteen months, and no picture. He wasn't the only one. It happened to lots of boys, whose careers were sidetracked by the war. In Farley's case, they said he was the wrong age. Too old for kid parts, too young for juvenile leads. "We're paying you to grow up," Mr. Goldwyn told him.

But Farley could stand not working just so long. I'm not sure I know just how to express this, and I don't want to express it wrong. He knew what a marvelous opportunity he'd been given back there in '43. He knew how experienced people beat at the doors of Hollywood for years, and how the doors had opened for him—a greenie—almost by magic. But he also knew that the cellar door can open as quick as the front door. Quicker. First and foremost, he still wants to be a good actor. He's much more concerned with working than with any glory that might come from a certain picture. "You can't learn to be a good actor," he'd say, "without acting." With every month that passed, he grew more tense and impatient. He went out and hunted for parts. And when he sold himself to Nick Ray for They Live by Night, no one was better pleased than Mr. Goldwyn.

Since then, it's been good sledding. They Live by Night to Rope to Enchantment to Roseanna McCoy to Side Street for MGM. Next comes With All My Love for Mr. Goldwyn, with Joan Evans and Ann Blyth. He's old enough now for juvenile leads. Even without the moustache he wore in Enchantment.

So much for Farley, the actor. Farley, the individual, lives by himself. Which is how it should be. For a year or so after he got back, he stayed with us. Kind of revelled in home cooking and being waited on. Then one day he looked at me out of the corner of his eye. "Mother, would you mind if I got a little place of my own?"

"I was wondering," says I, "when you'd get around to it." And that was the truth.

Dad had brought up the subject with me more than once. "The boy's grown up," he'd say. "He's found a career, he's financially independent, he'll be wanting to fly the coop. It's only right and natural. You can't develop as an independent human under somebody else's wing."

So now Farley has his place, and we have ours. I think it's a perfect arrangement for us all. I keep his room as he left it and he's free to come and go as he pleases.

Sometimes he'll drop by at 10, after a show. Raids the icebox. Rifles the preserve closet in the hall outside his old room. Ogles a cake I've baked. "I could be talked into taking half of that home." He still brings his friends to dinner whenever he feels like it. I'll be sitting here knitting, and the phone'll ring. "What're you having tonight, spareribs and sauerkraut? I'll be over at 6:30 with Arthur Laurents." If I don't have spareribs and sauerkraut—well, the market's close by.

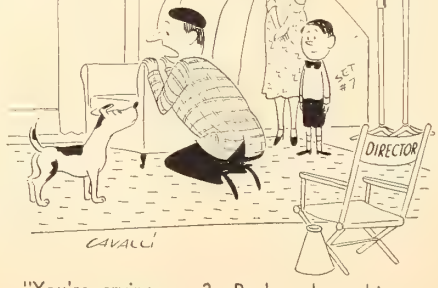
After dinner, if the boys don't have dates, they'll stick around and gab. Farley lies on the floor and plays with Boots, same as in the old days. She's his dog and knows it. Minute she hears his car outside, she starts going crazy.

He still brings me his socks to darn and his pants to shorten. "Here's a job for you, dear." Apart from records and books he splurges on gifts and clothes. To Farley, every day is Mother's Day. My garden's full of flowers, but Farley's always bringing flowers. Or perfume. Or a print he picked up. "Happy Thursday, dear," he'll say and dump it in my lap.

Farley's car is a black convertible Chevvy, and he's got a red cap that he uses just in the car. Likes the color combination. His house is just about seven minutes away. His maid comes in twice a week to keep it clean, and fix an occasional meal if he wants her to. Breakfast he fixes himself. That consists of throwing a teabag into hot water. In the morning Farley looks upon food with distaste. (But, I must add, it's the only time of day he does!)

Right now, he tells us, marriage isn't in the cards, and I can only take his word for it. Tomorrow's another day. Naturally I'm interested in whatever information he volunteers on the subject. But I strongly believe that people, including mothers, have no right to pry.

He goes out quite a bit with Shelley Winters and Vera-Ellen. They don't do much night-clubbing. Only time Farley cares about night clubs is when there's some top performer he doesn't want to miss—like Mitzi Green. As for dancing, he can take it or leave it. He's no Fred Astaire, not even the poor man's. They don't throw him off the floor, but they don't hand him any Arthur Murray cups either.



What he likes is dinner for two and a good movie. Or dropping in after dinner at the Gene Kellys' or the Saul Chaplins'. The Chaplins keep open house. Saul's a brilliant pianist and very generous about playing for his friends. They'll have music or games or gabfests or a combination of all three. That's Farley's idea of a swell evening. I imagine the girls like it too, or they wouldn't go with him.

Have I left anything out? Oh yes, his faults. Of course he has faults. Only trouble is, I can't seem to think at the moment what they are. Which leaves me wide open to other people saying, "That's Farley?"

I'm only his mother, folks. That's Farley to me.

THE END

MODERN SCREEN

"You're crying, see? Rodney brought you home with him but his mother won't let him keep you so you're crying, see?"

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR MITCHUM?

(Continued from page 29)

a moment—then he released his grip, e her all the money he had in his pock- and told her to get lost. He hated a ef—but he understood one.

Women will understand this better than n. Women see the lust for life in Bob chum, they suspect an inner brutality—l they see, through a magic door, his lence matched by a strange, brooding derness. No matter what he does, they l never desert him. It's a loyalty bred that same instinct that tells a wife her sband wouldn't beat her if he didn't love

Bob Mitchum is a furious man in busi-s, as well as every other phase in his . At times in Hollywood, he has been led hard to handle, a phrase used when actor doesn't do as he is told. An ex-ination of the incident involved, how-r will usually show that all he's done put his cards face-up on the table and that's the way it figures—and that's way it's going to be, or else. And he er kids about that "or else."

Mitchum has the trust and respect of ward Hughes, his boss—an attitude ward people that Mr. Hughes never opts lightly. Bob earned that by talking in and meaning what he said. His re-t brush with the law in Hollywood is closed incident. The fiddler was paid, and show's over. But it was during those ing days that Hughes learned that Mit-m was a man of quality.

On the assumption that Bob would get same break as that of thousands of er Los Angelenos who face the local rts on the same charges each year—t is, probation or a suspended sentence he studio had started a picture with the r. The trial came midway in the shoot-of the film, and the day before he go to court, Hughes called Bob into his ce for a meeting. Somebody asked Bob at was going to happen the next day. "I'm going to jail," said Bob.

"But you can't!" chorused the assembled executives. "You've got the best lawyer in the state. He's a cinch to get you off."

"I don't want to get off," said Bob. "I want to pay off. I want to hold up my head again. I see by the papers that I'll probably get special treatment. I don't want any part of it."

There were $300,000 already in the film. The executives were speechless. Finally, Hughes spoke.

"He's right," he said.

"But what about the picture?" howled an aide.

"The devil with the picture," said Hughes. "Finish it when he gets back, start it over again, or throw it in the ashcan. A man's self-respect is more important than any picture."

Mitchum has been holding his head higher than ever since then, and he's the only man in the studio who can say "no" to Hughes and get away with it.

There is a great deal of humility in Robert Mitchum, and he can ladle it out when the occasion calls for it. In the matter of marriage and his family he has done so, publicly and whenever the situation demanded it. To his wife, Dorothy, and his children, he is a good husband and father. But he runs the joint, there is no question about that. He's the head man, the guy who makes the decisions.

And, like Dagwood Bumstead, he often comes a cropper administering his household. Once, when he was having lunch in the house, he heard his boy, Josh, howl in fright from the middle of the swimming pool. Bob made the 200 yards to the vicinity of the pool in record time, but he started his dive a little too far away and instead of cutting the water like a knife, he landed on the flagstone rim of the pool, knocked out cold. He came to with the family standing over him, as Josh yelled, "Hey Mom, why did Daddy do that?"

Although there is a high fence around the Mitchum home in Mandeville Canyon, there is always an assortment of neighborhood kids sporting in the pool. Where they come from, Bob and Dorothy don't know or care, but they keep an eye on them like a couple of paid life guards.

An afternoon spent in the Mitchum backyard would convince you that the household revolves around kids. It's a club for them. The front yard of the Mitchum house generally has half-a-dozen wheeled conveyances, ranging from very tiny tricycles to full-scale bikes, parked in a neat row in the center of the driveway. And whenever a crisis develops in the routine of play or plotted destruction, the lads, strangers and kin, go into the house to discuss it with the old man.

Josh popped in with a mob recently with the request that they be permitted to pitch a tent on the front lawn. He was told that he could erect it on the vacant lot next door. He was back in a minute with the information that the ground was too hard to take the pegs.

"Wet it," said Scoutmaster Mitchum.

Josh's next trip indoors was more effective. He looked like a channel swimmer, only he wore mud instead of grease.

"It's too slippery," he said. "How about the front lawn?"

"You and that gang sink as much as a toothpick in that lawn," roared his dad, "and if the gardener doesn't kill you all, I will!" The boss roustabout had spoken, and the project was abandoned.

That's the homey, humorous side of Bob Mitchum. Let's get back to the driving, violent side of the man.

ollywood cook book

by nancy craig, american broadcasting company women's editor

■ William Lundigan felt as much at home in front of the ABC microphone when I interviewed him as he does before the cam-s. Which was only natural, since he first me to public notice as an announcer for FBL in Syracuse, N. Y.—his home town. Bill's favorite dish is one that he likes to ok himself—especially for a midnight pper. It's cheese omelet, and here's his ipe:

Separate two egg yolks from whites. Beat ites until they are foamy and just begin-g to stiffen. Fold whites into slightly ten yolks. Then grate and add two table-oons of sharp cheddar cheese. Slice three dium mushrooms and sauté in one table-oon butter. Cook omelet in one to two spoons butter. When the omelet starts to ff, add the mushrooms and fold over until e omelet is golden brown. Sprinkle heav-with paprika and chopped parsley.

BIRTHMONTH WATCH

Only 7.95

You'll feel like a Glamorous movie star when wearing your very own Gorgeous Birthmonth Watch! Very elaborate and Expensive looking. Exquisite dial and Dainty case. Bracelet contains two Large, Breath-taking Birthmonth Sparklers surrounded by over 50 Fiery Brite Brilliants. A Dependable, Glamorous time-piece you'll treasure! SEND NO MONEY! Just name, address and Birth Date. Pay postman C.O.D. $7.95 plus 10% tax on delivery. Order now!

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO., Dept. E-900
2451 S. MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO 16, ILLINOIS

ONLY 19¢ EACH

NEW SILK FINISH

ENLARGEMENT

GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement made from your favorite snapshot, photo or negative and mounted in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing for complete information on having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman 19c each for the enlargement and frame plus cost of mailing. Satisfaction guaranteed. Limit two to a customer. Originals returned with your enlargement. Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M213, Hollywood 38, Calif.

YOU CAN LEARN TO BE AN ARTIST

START DRAWING AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME—
Trained Artists are capable of earning $65, $80 and more a week! Our practical home study training makes it fun to learn COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. No previous Art experience necessary. Write for details in FREE BOOK, "Art for Pleasure & Profit." STATE AGE.
VETERANS! Course G.I. approved.
WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
Studio 8012R, 1115 15th St., N.W.
Washington 5, D. C.

"I EARNED MORE THAN $200 AN HOUR for every hour I worked!"

Exceptional 1st WEEK EARNINGS
Hazel McLean $40.35.
Mrs. Parsons $48.36.
Norma Whitman $43.24.
I'll show you how you may do as well—or better

SEND NAME FOR OFFER OF NYLON SELLING OUTFIT
Amazing offer — Cash for your spare time—Your own NYLONS at wholesale. A New Chevrolet as an extra Bonus — plus regular monthly checks to producers —too much to explain in this small space. Free! Send name on penny postcard, give hose size. I'll send everything FREE telling how to Start, how to pile up profits.
Lowell Wilkin, Wilknit Hosiery Co., 1012 Midway • Greenfield, Ohio

stop Scratching

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

Simulated Diamond
IMPORTED 35c
Nothing more to pay
To introduce our Beautiful Gleaming Rainbow Flash Stones, we will send an Imported Simulated Diamond. Mounted in Lovely Tiffany Style Ring. Illustrated, for the return of this ad and 35c expense in coin. SEND NOW.
FREE Mention your Birth Date, and we will include FREE a White "Luck" Elephant — imported from the ORIENT.
Globe Jewelry Co., Dept. 8129, Wheeling, W. Va.

BE A Nurse
LEARN AT HOME
Practical nurses are needed in every community... doctors rely on them... patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 50th yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2312, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age_____

He began to startle Hollywood soon after his arrival there.

He was a shock to the press and publicity corps, because he would not go along with a phony stunt, figuring that people would just have to like him the way he was or go to blazes. When he began to click, and he wasn't making enough money, he would walk into his boss's office, lay the profit figures on the desk and say he wanted his share or he'd go back to Long Beach and take a job cleaning fish. He began to get his cut.

Now that he's a thoroughly established star, he's still considered a character. He's not, really, he just acts on impulses and loathes sham. When he got a chance to work with Greer Garson at MGM, the goal of most male players, he thought she was a bit stuffy. The second night they worked together in a small boat in a lagoon on the back lot, he waited until a moment when she stood up.

Then he put one big hand on her posterior and shoved. She hit the water with a yell—but she loved it. He's the only man who ever dared call her Big Red.

Today, Bob is living the life of a country squire out in Mandeville Canyon. Still, this is not the quiet, happy little ending for Bob Mitchum. He is a man of many parts, many backgrounds, many moods. Most of all he's a man who will take a situation by the throat and throttle it into the shape he wants it. For instance, consider the case of the vacant lot next door to the Mitchum house. Bob hasn't the money to buy it right now, but he has a "hold" on the property in the shape of a very large saxophone which sits on the living room table 24 hours a day.

At any time, any hour, that anyone looks at the lot next door with the slightest interest, Bob grabs the saxophone and blows himself purple in the face.

"Good heavens!" one dowager prospect exclaimed recently. "Does that noise go on all the time?"

From Bob's bedroom came a familiar, sardonic voice. "It sure does, lady. It sure does."

Who knows what lies ahead for unpredictable Robert Mitchum? No one, of course, can say. But when he again gives Hollywood an electric shock—as his strong, restless spirit will eventually dictate—no one should be surprised. THE END

GARY COOPER'S MOUNTAIN HIDEAWAY

(Continued from page 44)

Russell, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, and dozens of other famous people in the theater appeared here. It's been burned out twice and it's still usable. It was reopened a year ago with a concert by Burl Ives, and it's been going strong ever since."

The rest of the afternoon we spent tramping around the town. We saw the antiquated town bell, now used to call skiing classes. We walked down to look at the ruins of Aspen's railroad station, now dead for 33 years. (Bus service nowadays connects with coast-to-coast trains at Glenwood Springs, some 40 miles away.) We looked down the main street on which, 40 years ago, horse-drawn street-cars ran on a 10-minute schedule. Last of all, we climbed up a small back road to Gary's 15-acre property which overlooks the entire city and the ski slopes across the valley. (The house was still incomplete, and the Coopers were staying at the hotel.) The view from the knoll which comprises his front yard was as pretty as any winter scene ever painted.

"When Rocky and I first came up here and looked out across that valley," Gary said, "we knew that we'd found the hideaway where, above all other places, we wanted to spend our free time."

We got back to the hotel just in time to meet Mrs. Cooper and Maria, their 12-year-old daughter, who had just come down the long, winding Ruthie's Run for the seventh and final time of the day. Both were wearing identical knit caps, and their faces were equally tanned from the hours already spent on the ski slopes. As they dashed upstairs to dress for dinner, Cooper said proudly, "They're the real skiers in the family, excellent form. But I'm the headlong type—I just make up my mind and come down the hill."

The next morning, Gary met us for breakfast at 7:30 and then walked us down to Mike Magnifico's Sport Shop to be measured up for skis. Mike is a merry-faced man in his early forties who is one of the pioneers in the new Aspen, and one of the more difficult ski runs is named after him. He came to Aspen in the 1930's, opened a small shoe-repair store, and waited for the town to be reborn.

"He's a patient man," Cooper explained. "He worked, and waited it out, and now he has the biggest ski shop in town to show for it."

Cooper left us to be outfitted and walked back to the hotel to meet Rocky and Maria. Thirty minutes later, we met them at the bottom of the hill. When we trudged up, Gary was helping Rocky buckle on her skis. Maria could hardly wait for her mother and kept looking anxiously as each empty chair went by on the lift that carries the skiers to the top of the run.

Aspen's chair lift, built at a cost of $250,000, is the longest in the world. It carries skiers three miles up the mountainside in less than half an hour. The first section passes over the rooftops of the city and rises over thousands of aspen trees to Midway, at an elevation of 10,000. The second section rises another 5,600 feet to the Sundeck, a modern octagonal building which offers on every side some of the most commanding scenery in the world. From there, the skier has more than a dozen unbelievably beautiful trails to choose from.

When we reached the Sundeck, Rocky and Maria waved a quick goodbye and poled over to the start of Spar Gulch Run.

"We'll see you at lunch," Rocky yelled, as they disappeared over the hill.

"See what I mean?" Cooper laughed, leading us into the building for coffee. "They're the real skiers of the family. Me, I have to think about what I'm going to do before I shove off. They'll be back up for a second go at it before I make up my mind to try it the first time."

Cooper gave up worrying about Maria, on even the toughest runs, some time ago. For two years, she has been skiing with Elli Iselin, one of Aspen's, and America's, leading instructors. Last year, Maria surprised no one by placing first in her class during the downhill races. She has better form than most adult skiers and the kind of driving self-confidence that makes champions.

After coffee, I decided to go back to Midway to wait while Bob Beerman skied down with Cooper to get pictures. I was surprised when, a few minutes later, Cooper came gliding in alone. I had a vision of Beerman's broken body lying in the snow—until Cooper assured me that Bob was making it down all right. Just taking it easy. Half an hour later, Bob finally slid in, his clothes completely covered with snow.

"I have just joined the ski crowd," he remarked grimly.

A ski-patrol man told me that evening that he had counted 39 of Bob's sitzmarks (the jocularly technical term for marks made when a skier tumbles, or sits), each one distinguished by a five-point impression in the snow.

We beat the Coopers back to the hotel that afternoon and, after a hot shower, had a chance to talk to Meg Bronski, who operates the ski desk in the Jerome Hotel lobby. "No one up here thinks of Gary Cooper as a movie star," she told us. "He, Rocky and Maria are as regular as anyone on the mountain, and they all three would rather ski than eat."

This will be the third winter the Coopers have spent at Aspen. The first winter they came up briefly from Sun Valley, which used to be their favorite winter resort, to try the fine skiing that a few pioneers were raving about. The second winter they bought their 15-acre home site, and began plans to build. This winter, they will spend every free moment away from Hollywood in Aspen, as they did most of the summer. By now, their home is completed, and frequently will be filled with friends who share their enthusiasm for winter sports. (Their next-door neighbors will soon be the Charles Lindberghs, who bought an adjoining lot on Red Mountain during the Goethe Festival this July.)

That night, our last in Aspen, Bob and I met the Coopers in the cocktail lounge for a goodbye drink—one final Aspen Special. Across the valley, the moonlight reflected on the ski slopes made it seem like day.

"When I leave this place," Gary said, "I go back to work in Hollywood, refreshed and ready for anything. Aspen is a perfect hideaway—a hideaway where you can really relax and live."

Then Gary walked with us to the bus outside the hotel and said goodbye. The thermometer was dropping down below zero again. As we drove off, the driver remarked, "They always say that those tall fellows have snow on their shoulders six months out of the year. But I think Cooper's got it in his blood." THE END

(Gary Cooper's current picture is Task Force.)

so lovely to look at lana turner on the january cover of modern screen on sale
december 9

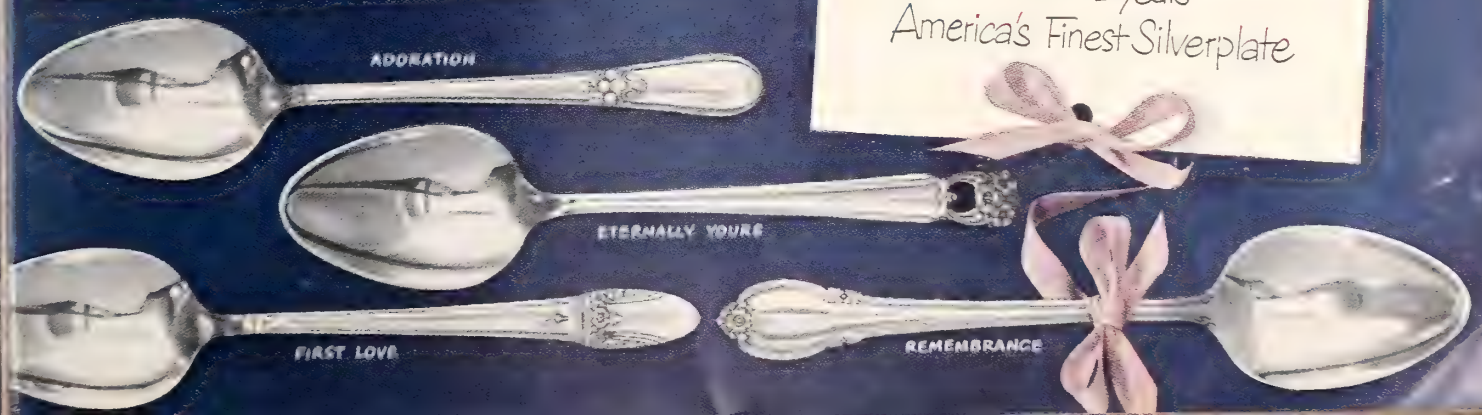
It's still the thing to do...

It's still a loving tradition for a groom to give his bride something special on their first Christmas. Something she can keep and cherish...like lovely silverplate. And though silver patterns may have changed, for over 102 years there has been one traditional choice...

It's still the thing to own...

For over 102 years American Brides have treasured beautiful 1847 Rogers Bros. silverplate above all others.

Today's magnificent patterns have an extra height and depth of ornament, a perfection of finish and balance usually found only in solid silver.



62-piece service for eight in the beautiful, richly lined walnut finish cabinet illustrated, $79.75.

Other wonderful Christmas gifts... Silver Snack Sets, Iced Drink Sets, Cocktail Sets and Demitasse Sets in dual-purpose mahogany cases; their velvet linings lift out, making handsome cigarette cases or jewel boxes. No Federal tax.

Copyright 1948, The International Silver Company, Meriden, Conn.

1847 ROGERS BROS.

for 102 years
America's Finest Silverplate

This Fall...there's just one way to look...

"Plumb Beautiful!"

Revlon's

new color... a rich, ripened, catch-your-breath red... for matching lips and fingertips

Incredible, the stay-on power of Revlon's ever-improved nail enamel and lipstick!

Color makes the fabulous difference! Revlon makes the fabulous colors!

Matchbox
1.00 plus ta

hy Shirley Temple's Marriage Failed!

modern screen

ELL

JAN.
15c

JAN 2 1 1950

Your skin has a fresher, clearer look with your First Cake of Camay!

MRS. JOSEPH JOHN LENZI, the former Ruth V. Sherwood of Washington, D. C.—bridal portrait painted by Moore

A lovely skin invites romance! And your skin will be smoother and clearer with your first cake of Camay, if you give up careless cleansing—use Camay and Camay alone. Let no lesser soap than Camay touch your skin! We call this "The Camay Mild-Soap Diet" and if you follow directions on the wrapper, you'll be lovelier! So begin today with fine, mild, free-lathering Camay!

Washington Girl becomes Camay Bride!

Best-Looking Couple prize at their first dance together went to Ruth and Joseph. Ruth's mask couldn't mask her Camay complexion! Washington born and bred—and beautiful—she'd met her husband-to-be through Theatre Guild work.

Jai Alai, they say, is the most exciting game in the world. But, on their Cuban honeymoon, Joseph couldn't take his eyes from his bride's breath-taking complexion. No wonder Ruth promises she'll stay on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet!

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

©CIB 228642

"I had to watch a Three-day Football game!"

says SUSAN HAYWARD, co-starred with DANA ANDREWS in the SAMUEL GOLDWYN production,
"MY FOOLISH HEART"

Though it lasts only a few minutes on the screen, the football sequence in "My Foolish Heart" took days to film! I sat with chilled, icy hands through three days of the rawest, meanest weather I've ever seen before we got the final "take"...

I washed dishes for hours to satisfy director Mark Robson...

But Jergens Lotion kept my hands from looking rough...

Kept them soft and beautiful in tender, romantic scenes...

And close-ups with Dana Andrews. You'll find that...

Because it's liquid, Jergens is absorbed by thirsty skin...

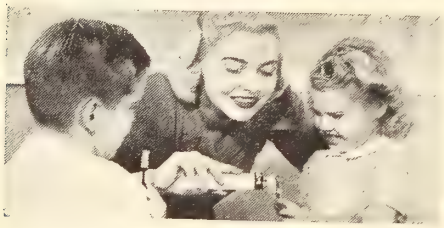
CAN YOUR HAND LOTION PASS THIS FILM TEST?

To soften, a lotion should be absorbed by the upper layers of the skin. Water won't "bead" on hand smoothed with Jergens Lotion (left hand). It contains quickly-absorbed ingredients doctors recommend, no heavy oils that merely coat skin with oily film (right hand).

Prove it by making the easy test described above...

You'll see why Jergens Lotion is my beauty secret...

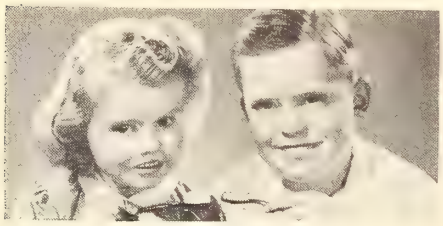
Jergens Lotion



used by more women than any other hand care in the world

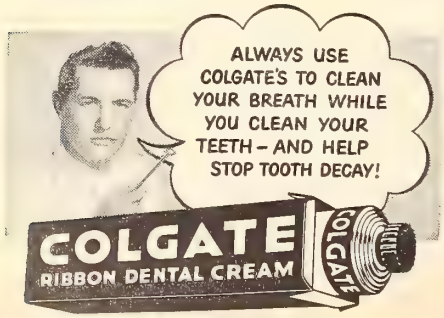
still 10¢ to $1 plus tax

And is used in Hollywood 7 to 1 over other hand cares!



NOW! PROOF THAT BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!



Exhaustive Research By Eminent Dental Authorities Proves How Using Colgate's Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

Now, the toothpaste you use to clean your breath while you clean your teeth, offers a proved way to help stop tooth decay before it starts! 2 years' continuous research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay! Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation! And no change in flavor, foam or cleansing action!

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of These Results!

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst after meals or snacks. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed, helps remove acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices between teeth where food particles often lodge. No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating is the safe, proved way to help stop tooth decay with Colgate Dental Cream!

JANUARY, 1950

modern screen

stories

IS BETTE DAVIS AFRAID OF LOVE? ..... by James Hathaway 20
VALIANT LADY (June Haver) ..... by Stanley Blake 22
WHY SHIRLEY'S MARRIAGE FAILED! (Temple-Agar) ..... by Jack Wade 26
THE PRIVATE LIFE OF BURT LANCASTER ..... by Arthur L. Charles 28
YOU KNOW ME, ALLYSON! (June Allyson) ..... by Gwen Littlefield 30
MISTAKES THEY NEVER CONFESS (Hutton, Peck, Turner, Haymes, etc.) by Hedda Hopper 32
". . . TO SUSIE FROM ALAN" (Alan Ladd) ..... by Ida Zeitlin 34
MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED ..... by Robert Stack 37
YOU'RE ACTING LIKE A CHILD! (Esther Williams, Larry Parks, Vera-Ellen, etc.) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 38
THIS LOVE OF OURS (Baxter-Hodiak) ..... by Anne Baxter 41
THE BEAUTIFUL REBEL (Patricia Neal) ..... by Louis Pollock 42
HOLLYWOOD'S LOVELIEST CHRISTMAS STORY (Audie Murphy) by John T. Elliott 44
ANYBODY HERE SEEN STANWYCK? (Barbara Stanwyck) by Sandra Sue Dresker 46
MY LITTLE GIRL ..... by Lana Turner 48
THE MAN BEHIND THE RIDDLE (Lew Ayres) ..... by Sheilah Graham 50

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: Still On Top! (Ladd, Turner) 24
MODERN SCREEN'S HOLLYWOOD PICTORIAL 52

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS by Christopher Kane 16
FASHION 58
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot by Leonard Feather 71
YOUR LETTERS 78

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Lana Turner by Eric Carpenter of MGM
Other pictures credits, page 88

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
JUDITH G. FIELD, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
BEVERLY OTT, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 2, January, 1950. Copyright, 1949, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delcorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious—if the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

Come on, everybody, let's all go ON THE TOWN!

Three gay gobs go on a 24-hour shore leave...and it's a musical frolic from the Bronx to the Battery! They get taken in tow by a female taxi-driver ...make havoc with a dinosaur in the museum...rock Radio City with laughs...raise the roof of the Empire State with song...and steal kisses in Central Park! They land back in Brooklyn Navy Yard...busted, exhausted but happy! It's wonderful fun, so come along...EVERYONE!

M-G-M PRESENTS IN COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR

GENE KELLY · FRANK SINATRA

BETTY GARRETT · ANN MILLER

'On The Town'

JULES MUNSHIN · VERA-ELLEN

HEAR THESE TOP-HIT TUNES!

"New York, New York" • "Miss Turnstiles" • "Prehistoric Man" • "Come Up To My Place" • "Main Street" • "You're Awful" • "On The Town" • "Count On Me"

Song Hits from "On The Town" available on M-G-M Records

Screen Play by Adolph Green and Betty Comden • Based Upon The Musical Play • Directed by GENE KELLY and STANLEY DONEN • Produced by ARTHUR FREED

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

That "Left-Out Feeling" is no fun!

Don't sit out a party alone. Guard your daintiness against underarm odor. Never trust your charm to anything but dependable Mum. Creamy, flower-fragrant Mum contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Get Mum today.

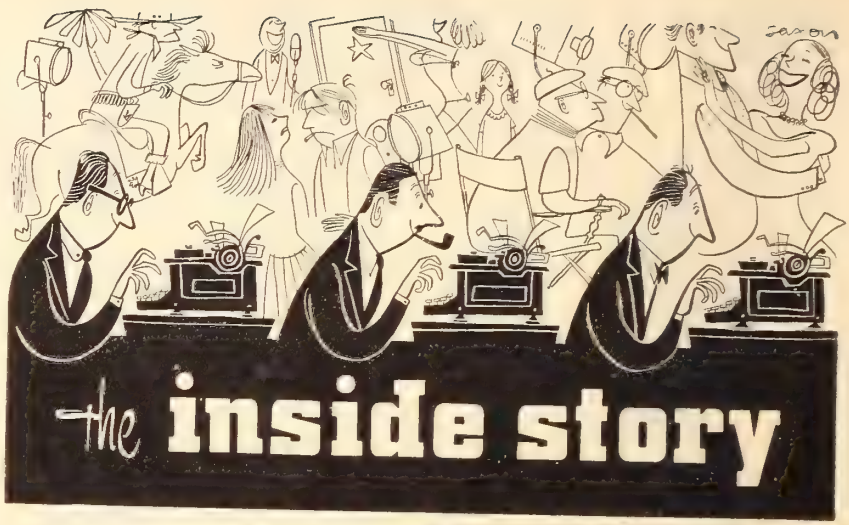
Mum-Safer for Charm

Mum checks underarm perspiration odor all day or evening. Protects against risk of future odor after your bath.

Mum-Safer for Skin

Mum contains no harsh, irritating ingredients. Doesn't dry out in the jar to form scratchy crystals.

Mum-Safer for Clothes



No damaging ingredients to rot or discolor fine fabrics. Thrifty, too—no waste, no shrinkage.

For sanitary napkins—Mum is gentle, safe, sure...dependable for this important use, too.

Product of Bristol-Myers keeps you nice to be near

ONE SUNDAY MORNING, attired in our ancient but serviceable shaggy fur coat, we went for our customary stroll in the park. No sooner had we set foot on the greensward when we were beset by several small urchins, all shouting, "Are you Lassie?" A thing like that can give one pause, we'd like to tell you—and after beating them off we got to thinking about Barbara Stanwyck and her problem. People seldom recognize her. When they do, they don't—they think she's Bette Davis or Jeanette MacDonald. What a problem! It's kicked around more thoroughly in Anybody Here Seen Stanwyck? on page 46.

WE ONCE HAD a beautiful relationship with Theda Bara. We'd write her torrid mash notes about our undying passion, and enclose locks of our hair. She treated us with a certain amount of coolness. Let us be frank—we never heard from her. Now that we are considerably older and slightly wiser, we're sure June Allyson has the right idea. She found out about a young lady who wanted to start a fan club for her and not only did she agree, but it was the beginning of a life-long friendship. You'll find You Know Me, Allyson on page 30.

IT SEEMS THE REASON Pat Neal is an accomplished actress today is that, not so long ago, she fell in love. Object of her 15-year-old affection was the leading man in a little-theater group, and her yen for him led her to ask for a job in the company. Why did he agree so readily? And what happened when he came to call one night? Turn to page 42 to read this and other revealing stories about The Beautiful Rebel.

IF YOU PRESS Burt Lancaster, he'll tell you he's a great believer in discipline for children. Does he practice this? Well, not quite yet. He expects to put his theory into practice when his three young'uns are old enough to understand. But we have a sneaking suspicion they're old enough now—they're just not letting on. See what you think when you read The Private Life of Burt Lancaster on page 28.

WELL, THE CHURCHILLS are at it again. Even though they and their friends know darn well they're all too old for electric trains and wetsy-betsies, they decided to get together for a pre-Christmas view of what makes the kiddies so happy. The occasion was a spectacular party at Uncle Bernie's, the Hollywood toy impresario. You're Acting Like A Child on page 38 is for youngsters of any age.

EXCUSE US for pointing, but we'd like you to take special notice of our new pictorial section on page 52. (We won't say more about it because we think the pictures speak for themselves.)

LANA TURNER'S little girl is growing up like anything. She's been to Europe, is crazy about cowboy songs and is just learning (from her ma) about charge accounts. Lana tells all in My Little Girl on page 48.

WE'LL BE BACK on the same corner next month with some fresh, new stories on people you keep asking us about. We're doing the younger crowd up proud—there'll be Kirk Douglas, Montgomery Clift, and John Derek—all in one issue. We know when our arm's been twisted.

"I know the devil that is in you —you love as you live, without mercy
...without regret!"
Samuel Shellabarger's
PRINCE of FOXES
A Saga of Scoundrels in a Century of Infamy!... Three Years in the Making!... A Magnificent Cast of 50,000!
20th CENTURY-FOX
TYRONE POWER ◆ ORSON WELLES ◆ WANDA HENDRIX ◆ WITH MARINA BERTI ◆ EVERETT SLOANE ◆ KATINA PAXINOU ◆ FELIX AYLMER
DIRECTED BY HENRY KING ◆ PRODUCED BY SOL C. SIEGEL
SCREEN PLAY BY MILTON KRIMS ◆ FROM THE NOVEL BY SAMUEL SHELLABARGER
IT'S A GALA HOLIDAY OF ENTERTAINMENT! ASK THE MANAGER OF YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE WHEN HE WILL PLAY IT!

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

Gary Cooper, his wife, Rocky, and daughter Maria are shown around the flat-top U.S.S. Valley Forge, before a preview of Gary's naval-aviation picture, Task Force, aboard the ship.

At a Toluca Lake Valley square dance, Ann Blyth is amused by an exchange between columnist Jimmy Fidler and Bob Hope, who helped entertain guests. Ann's honorary mayor of Toluca Lake.

British director Alfred Hitchcock points out the Statue of Liberty to Jane Wyman as they arrive in New York Harbor from England, where Jane starred in Hitchcock's new film, Stage Fright.

Dan Dailey III, aged two, sets off for a ride with his second-honeymooning parents on the Colorado location of A Ticket to Tomahawk, in which his father co-stars with Anne Baxter.

Object of Peter Lawford's rapt attention at a dinner party in New York's Stork Club is society girl Melissa Weston, whom he gave a serious-looking rush on his recent personal-appearance tour.

Robert Montgomery, in his real-life role as an ABC national radio commentator, is interviewed on world affairs and youth problems by college and high-school editors at a theater in New York.

■ What happened to Shirley Temple and John Agar to break up their "perfect" marriage? My MODERN SCREEN readers are asking that, I know. Was Hollywood to blame? Shirley says that John Agar did not understand the demands her career made upon her and that he was unhappy every time a lot of attention was paid her when they went out to night spots and to parties. He didn't want to be "Shirley Temple's husband." He wanted her to be strictly Mrs. Agar. Few men can stand playing second fiddle.

Shirley, the most publicized little girl in the world, could never, even with the best intentions in the world, be merely "Mrs." anybody. Living with Shirley—pampered and treated like a queen from the day she crept into the hearts of the whole movie-going world—wasn't at all easy.

I have, necessarily, written a lot of stories about break-ups of Hollywood marriages. But this seems to be the saddest. The young Agars started out with such high hopes for a successful marriage. John had a flourishing career, and money in his own right. Shirley stood for everything that was beautiful in the minds of her adoring public. She was the whole world's little-girl-grown-up. Linda Susan Agar was baby royalty, a child who belonged to the public, in the same way that Bonnie Prince Charlie of the British royal family belongs to all of us.

Remember when first John courted her? She was in school—17 years old and not in motion pictures. He was in uniform and it seemed they might have much the same normal life that any other young couple would. But then the whole picture changed. Shirley returned to work and John started out on his own acting career.

How will this divorce affect Shirley's screen career? Well, only time can answer that question. I really don't know. I do know that she will get her way about playing sophisticated roles because this divorce gives us a new Shirley—a divorced woman.

Shirley's mother stayed completely out of her matrimonial troubles. The only time Mr. and Mrs. Temple mixed in was when there was a story going the rounds that Shirley was casting romantic eyes in the direction of a young Hollywood boy. Then, I understand, the Temples consulted attorneys, determined that their daughter's name should not suffer.

For further details, see "Why Shirley's Marriage Failed" on page 26.—ED.

* * *

Another instance of young love lost is the case of Wanda Hendrix and Audie Murphy. This time everybody knows where to put the blame: Right on the war. Audie survived what killed most boys—but his health has never been strong since then and his nerves are plainly shaken.

The kids have had a lot of plain bad luck, too. They were no more than married when they both became ill. Before they had time to recuperate, they were sent on personal-appearance tours, which meant they had no chance to establish a home. Back again in Hollywood, their work separated them, Audie at Allied Artists, Wanda at Paramount. They parted and reconciled; parted and reconciled.

Now Wanda has taken a small, unfurnished apartment, high up in the Hollywood hills, while Audie has gone back to his native Texas. His present plans are to return to Hollywood only when he's actively shooting a picture.

Interestingly enough, the first night she was alone, Wanda had a chance at three dates. And all for the première of The Heiress. Bob Sterling, Bob Stack and Anthony Curtis all called her. Wanda accepted none of them. Her reason? "I wouldn't want Audie to read about it and be unhappy," she said.

Do you make of that what I do? Most any girl whose man had delivered her such a blow by publicly announcing a separation, wouldn't care how much the man suffered.

But Wanda is different. She won't even let the rumors of Audie's dates with other girls influence her. Wanda tells me she isn't getting a divorce. My chapeau is off to this girl, who is making such a valiant and dignified effort.

* * *

The third matrimonial break-up happened to an older and more experienced actress, but it's just as sad. Bette Davis sued her husband, William Grant Sherry, for divorce.

In Bette's complaint, she charged she was afraid of Sherry, as she called her husband. He admitted he had a frightful temper and broke up the furniture when he was angry, so Bette felt he might do something to her or the baby.

Bette had been unhappy for a long time, but she kept her trouble to herself, because she adores their little daughter, Barbara. She, too, tried hard to keep her marriage together.

Bette is never one who likes to be bothered when she's working, and Sherry was constantly on the set.

There is, of course, his side to it. He was a comparatively unknown man who was suddenly thrust into the Hollywood whirl, which is different from any other place in the wide

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Gregory Peck gallantly assists Slip, his Alsatian, who recently became the mother of 13 pups. Hearing of Slip's problems, over 1,000 people sent letters offering to provide good homes for her overwhelming family.

Elizabeth Taylor fixes Montgomery Clift's tie at the Hollywood première of The Heiress, which they attended together. Liz looked stunning in a white dress and capelet while Monty looked alright in a tuxedo.

world, and is not very easy to get adjusted to.

There will be no money squabble. Sherry signed an agreement before their marriage and he will let Bette keep their baby. He says he wants only Bette.

(You'll find more about Bette Davis' divorce on page 20.—Ed.)

* * *

Guy Madison staged a battle with his boss, David Selznick, which brought a suspension to the young star.

Said Guy, "I'm a mature man. I'm grown up and I refuse to play baby-faced juveniles any longer."

Curiously enough, Guy's complaint on this score was the same as Shirley Temple's. (Just between us Modern Screen readers, I don't think Shirley needs to worry—her teen-age days are over.)

* * *

Whether it was Olivia de Havilland, Montgomery Clift, the excellence of The Heiress, or all three that brought the top-flight stars to the most glamorous première of the year, I don't know. But certainly they were all there, done to the teeth.

Montgomery Clift doesn't own a tuxedo, so at the last minute the Paramount publicity department had to scurry around to rent one for him. But Monty walked in triumphantly with the prettiest girl in town on his arm—Elizabeth Taylor. Liz looked like a dream in a white ruffled dress, and judging by the applause from the sidewalk standees, you know how well she rates with the younger generation. She seems to have overcome her many attacks of the heart, and although I have to admit her appearance with Clift was a studio-arranged affair, she was obviously having a good time with him.

Olivia de Havilland at that period was taking care of her new baby. She confided to me a few days before the opening, "I'm just sick enough so that the doctor won't let me go. I feel up to it, but he says 'No'."

Shelley Winters is getting to be one of the actresses the fans go for in a big way, and when she and Farley Granger walked in together it was enough to set the crowd screaming.

But screams were frequent—the Gary Coopers came with the Van Johnsons. Alan and Sue Ladd sat next to me in the theater—and I am always conscious of what thoroughly nice people both of them are.

Lana Turner, with the most gorgeous emerald necklace and earrings, has never looked prettier in her life, and I mean it. She has kept her figure down beautifully. I had a chance to talk with her and Bob Topping because they sat next to us at dinner at Romanoff's before the première.

Romanoff's was like New Year's Eve, and everyone was running about greeting everyone else. David Selznick walked in with Margaret Sullavan, who looked as if she might be his young daughter. (Jenny, of course, was in Wales working on Gone to Earth.) David has aged so since all his troubles.

Lizabeth Scott, who had that very day changed her name from Emma Matzo to the one she uses on the screen, was in the throng.

Virginia Mayo, in a dress as blue as her eyes, and Mike O'Shea were among the ones who came early enough to say a word into the microphone.

Robert Mitchum, who always rates with the crowds these days because they seem to appreciate the effort he is making to do right things in the right way, received a greeting that must have warmed his heart and also that of his lovely wife, Dorothy.

Just think of every big name, and you will

"I was a nice girl- wasn't I?"

Please wait until you know the Truth about "My Foolish Heart"

SAMUEL GOLDWYN
PRESENTS

DANA ANDREWS · SUSAN HAYWARD

"MY FOOLISH HEART"

with Kent Smith · Lois Wheeler · Jesse Royce Landis · Robert Keith · Gigi Perreau Screen Play by Julius J. Epstein and Philip G. Epstein · Based on a story in the New Yorker by J. D. Salinger · Distributed by RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.

Directed by MARK ROBSON who gave you
"Champion" and "Home of the Brave"

I dreamed I went skating in my

*maidenform bra

A figure eight! Wonderful! But my Maidenform figure . . . spectacular! I never knew how much a bra could do 'til I tried Maidenform. Improves my form, gives me a lift I love. How wonderful if only I could skate so dreamily! One dream, at least, is real . . . a bra with perfect fit . . . my Maidenform.

Shown: Maidenform's Maidenette* Strapless in white satin and lace designed for young uplift.

This is only a hint of a come-hither collection! For strapless, hug-me-close support, for fuller figures, it's Maidenform's Hold-Tite.* Inter-lude* for classic roundness, deep-down cut. And for deep, deep down necklines, your bra is Dec-la-tay.*

There is a Maiden Form for Every Type of Figure

*REG U. S. PAT. OFF.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Anne Baxter, wearing the unladylike outfit she describes on page 74, has her hair dressed while on a location trip to Durango, Colorado.

get a picture of a première the likes of which I haven't seen since the old days when studios spent money like water to exploit stars and their pictures.

* * *

Right or wrong, Bogey is standing by his Baby. She said she would not do Storm Center, and so she got herself a suspension.

"I'm for Baby," said Bogey. "She doesn't have to work if she doesn't feel like it."

Confidentially, one reason Jack Warner was so burned up at Lauren Bacall is because she received a salary all the time she was in New York and he even gave her an extra week's vacation after Bogey's much-publicized incident with the pandas. Score one for Warner's.

Ginger Rogers took the job that Baby walked out on.

* * *

There just isn't any party the whole year through that surpasses the Hollywood Press Photographers' Ball for sheer fun. Maybe that's because everybody dresses up in the most elaborate costumes. Or maybe it's because the party serves no useful purpose at all but is simply for amusement. All I know is that going to an average of two or three parties a week, as I do, I never attend one where there's more laughter than at this annual event, hosted by the boys who snap our stars all year round.

This year it was held, as it has been for the past five years, at Ciro's, and, as always, it was jammed to the doors. The sensation among the costumes were those worn—in a manner of speaking—by Vera-Ellen and her very handsome escort, Rock Hudson, a new boy with a shiny new contract at Universal-International.

Vera and Rock came as Mr. and Mrs. Academy Oscar. They were covered with gold paint, from the tops of their wigs down to the soles of their shoes—and in between there was just as little as the law would allow. A gasp went up when they entered, and immediately every camera in the place was snapping their picture.

Actually, they had on bathing suits under their gold lacquer, but it sure didn't look that way at first glance—and when they danced together it was slightly sensational.

FUN

BOB HOPE, LOVER OF THE YEAR

The Profile...Women At His Feet...Men At His Heels...Laughs Everywhere!

In A Paramount Picture

"The Great Lover"

with Roland YOUNG · Roland CULVER · Richard LYON · Gary GRAY

Produced by Edmund Beloin · Directed by ALEXANDER HALL

Written by Edmund Beloin, Melville Shavelson and Jack Rose

Getting conflicting advice from the chef and from husband Ben Gage on how thick the slices should be, Esther Williams carves a roast beef at the gala opening of her and Ben's new Hollywood restaurant, The Trails.

The Palms, a former sandwich joint that worked its way up in the world, has a more informal first night. Scott Brady takes over the piano as Gail Russell and Guy Madison show sympathy—for the helpless guests.

The funny part of it came after the party, Vera-Ellen told me next day. Their "paint" had been designed for them by the MGM makeup department. They could safely wear it for several hours, but the only way to get it off was out in the open air, using cloth saturated in alcohol. They were warned that, in a closed room, the alcohol would knock them out. Imagine coming home from a party at two in the morning (when most of us did go home that evening) and standing out in the cold night breezes in little except your skin to rub off your gilt!

Diana Lynn, as Madame Butterfly, and her husband, John Lindsay, as Madame Butterfly's naval boyfriend, Lieutenant Pinkerton, sat at my table and applauded Roddy McDowall and Ann Blyth dancing by. Roddy was a mail bag, all puffed out with old fan letters and newspapers, and cute Ann was the helicopter that flies over Hollywood giving us "airmail" right in the various city zones.

Everybody kept spinning the silver propeller on top of Ann's head, but Roddy said he preferred the balancing propeller, which was attached to his girlfriend right where your mamma use to apply the hair brush. Roddy said it was very useful—giving them a lot of free space on the dance floor.

Joan Crawford was there in her carnival costume from Flamingo Road with Cesar Romero as her escort. But I didn't see her erstwhile boyfriend, Greg Bautzer, with Ginger Rogers—though goodness knows, I have seen these two together everywhere else this month. Ginger and Greg have seemed serious enough to be marriage-minded.

Dan Duryea, considering his screen roles, came most appropriately as a wolf. Handsome young Scott Brady stalked in as Frankenstein's monster, in a scarey green make-up and red eyes. Dinah Shore turned up as a very curvaceous Sadie Thompson with George Montgomery as an Indian.

I'll conclude with one little word of criticism. It's this: I wish our glamor girls wouldn't destroy their charm on the off-chance of being amusing. Betty Hutton, for example, came to the Ball looking like a beat-up ranch hand, wearing a mustache and with a dirty face and uncombed hair. I know she meant to be funny—and she was. But her own bouncy, pretty self is so much more delightful. And this applies to all our other dolls who were present with snaggle teeth, black eyes and other curious get-up. I still don't believe that the way to fans' hearts is through looking ugly.

(For pictures of the stars at the Press Photographers' Ball, see page 52.—Ed.)

* * *

Jeanne Crain's and Paul Brinkman's housewarming to show off their beautiful new home—high on a mountain top with an enchanting view—was one of the important social events recently. Paul, who built practically every bit of the house by hand, proudly showed his friends his handiwork at this party, which was a buffet supper for almost 200 guests.

Earlier in the evening, the oldest son of the Brinkmans' was brought in to meet the guests. He is a darling little boy. He had already won my heart by saying to Jeanne at the time she was putting her footprints in the Grauman's Chinese Theater court, "Mommy is making mudpies." Well, "Mommy" can make mudpies or anything else she wants these days after her performance in Pinky, which made us all realize Jeanne is now one of our top dramatic actresses.

When Ingrid Bergman's personal representative, Joe Steele, returned to Hollywood from Europe, he went right over to see Dr. Peter Lindstrom—to give him some Italian dresses that Ingrid had sent for her 11-year-old daughter Pia. Joe said the doctor was cordial but Ingrid's divorce plans weren't mentioned.

* * *

Purely Parsons' Opinions: The sensation of New York is Janet Blair, who never had a real break in Hollywood. The best she ever got were "B" pictures. When will Hollywood learn to appreciate its real talent? . . . I don't know of a man in Hollywood who so completely enjoys life as Paul Douglas. . . . Maybe it's Greg Bautzer's influence, but it's a fact that Ginger Rogers is much better dressed since she has been going with him. She wears her hair combed back plainly from her face and all those geegaws she used to have on her clothes are now fortunately missing. . . . The young couple who live the simplest and seem to be the most contented with each other are Larry Parks and Betty Garrett. . . . Stars may come and go, but for sheer charm, I still nominate Gary Cooper. . . . Ever since I saw The File on Thelma Jordon I've had my money on Wendell Corey—he's not pretty, but my, how he can act! . . . I'm personally bored with that rumpled-shirt, unmade-bed routine of Montgomery Clift's. That boy is a great star and a superb actor, but why on earth does he have this affectation of being so deliberately untidy? . . . I believe it is high time they stopped wasting lovely Janis Carter in "B" pictures. There really is a siren, as you surely know if you saw her in I Married a Communist. . . . I'd like to see Clark Gable and Burt Lancaster together in a picture with Ava Gardner as the girl they scrap over.

JANE WYMAN

She's the Lady who took the Oscar for "Johnny Belinda"!

DENNIS MORGAN

MAN THE LAUGH-BOATS!!

WHAT MANEUVERS! JANE'S GOT THE NAVY ALL AT SEA OVER THE MAN SHE WANTS TO LAND...

IT'S THE LAUGHIN'EST LOVIN' EVER FROM WARNER BROS.

DEAR ADMIRAL, PLEASE SEND THE WHOLE FLEET!

The Lady Takes A Sailor

WITH

EVE ARDEN

ROBERT DOUGLAS • ALLYN JOSLYN • TOM TULLY

DIRECTED BY MICHAEL CURTIZ · PRODUCED BY HARRY KURNITZ

SCREEN PLAY BY EVERETT FREEMAN FROM A STORY BY JERRY GRUSKIN
MUSIC BY MAX STEINER

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS

Olivia de Havilland and husband Marcus Goodrich beam on their new son, Benjamin.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

We've got a little scheme to help you start the New Year right. All you have to do is read all the stories and features in this issue, fill out this questionnaire, and send it back to us—in a hurry. If you are one of the first 500 people who return it, you'll win a free three-month subscription to Modern Screen. Just let us know which stories you like best and which stars you'd like to read about in future issues. Remember—the February, March, and April issues will be yours, and for free!!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our January issue? Write the NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices

Is Bette Davis Afraid of Love? ☐
Valiant Lady (June Haver) ☐
Why Shirley's Marriage Failed! (Temple-Agar) ☐
The Private Life of Burt Lancaster ☐
You Know Me, Allyson! (June Allyson) ☐
Mistakes They Never Confess (Hutton, Peck, Turner) by Hedda Hopper ☐
". . . To Susie From Alan" (Alan Ladd) ☐
My Prayer Was Answered (Robert Stack) ☐
You're Acting Like A Child! (Williams, Parks, Vera-Ellen) ☐
This Love of Ours (Baxter-Hodiak) ☐
The Beautiful Rebel (Pat Neal) ☐
Hollywood's Loveliest Christmas Story (Audie Murphy) ☐
Anybody Here Seen Stanwyck? (Barbara Stanwyck) ☐
My Little Girl (Lana Turner) ☐
The Man Behind the Riddle (Lew Ayres) ☐
Hollywood Pictorial ☐
Modern Screen Fashions ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

Now, wouldn't that really be somethin' to see?

Add to Hollywood's own peculiar distinctions: The fact that two of Hollywood's most attractive, unattached men have the custody of their sons, and spend most of their time bringing them up. Meaning Robert Walker and Kirk Douglas. Bob is a changed boy since he came back from the Menninger Clinic. His charm has deepened and his life obviously centers around his two sons. As for Kirk, while his most frequent date is Evelyn Keyes, he spends more evenings than you would believe with his two small boys, Joel and Michael. Jennifer Jones, of course, has married David Selznick, but Kirk's wife, Diana Douglas, is appearing in a play in the East and she and Kirk are still legally one.

* * *

By actual count, 1821 requests came to 20th Century-Fox for dog adoptions when the news broke that Gregory Peck's white Alsatian had presented the world with a litter of 13 pups. So I can't imagine what will happen when I tell you there are nine new pups at the John Derek residence in the San Fernando Valley! These are collie puppies—but don't start writing in for any. John would gladly give up eight of them—Patti Derek, his wife, feels differently. She loves the whole kit and kaboodle so intensely that John swears they have to get a dog-sitter in the evenings when they go out to see a movie. Incidentally, I don't know of any young couple that lives more sensibly than the Dereks. Patti does all her own housework and cooking. John does all their gardening. I hear from Columbia that the way John looks in Technicolor will send his stock zooming.

* * *

You may or may not believe it, but as we go to press, the beautiful British actress, Jean Simmons, is blushing over sweet nothings whispered in her ear by the dashing Orson Welles.

With similar chatter, several years ago, Orson persuaded Rita Hayworth to marry him. So don't be surprised if he and Jean elope. Maybe it will happen before you read this.

* * *

Betty Lynn is going along smartly at 20th Century-Fox, and you-all will see how persuasive her charm is when I tell you this story.

Betty was a candidate for the part of a Southern belle in Cheaper by the Dozen, but producer Walter Wanger just couldn't go for her accent. "If only you could catch the inflections Una Merkel has," he said.

That evening, Betty ran into Una in the ladies' room of a Santa Monica little theater. Betty introduced herself, told Una what Wanger had said and asked her if she'd have coffee with her afterwards. "If I could just listen to you talk for a while, maybe I could imitate you and get the job."

The happy ending is that Una is now coaching Betty—as a labor of love. Nice, isn't it?

* * *

The majority of your letters this month were from a shocked nation who just couldn't accept Shirley Temple's divorce from John Agar. It was as if a beloved child had met with disaster.

Your letters also indicate that you are interested in Robert Mitchum's plan to make a picture to try to improve prison conditions. Bob's radio interview with me seems to have given him a new stature in your eyes.

And there were hundreds of letters from fat ladies who, having heard that Spike Jones was looking for a buxom lass to sing with his band, wanted to get the job.

Keep the letters coming. I love to hear from you. Let me know what interests you most about Hollywood.

That's all for now. See you next month!

HARRY POPKIN · SAM STIEFEL · JACK DEMPSEY present

MICKEY ROONEY

...in his most exciting role!...

"THE BIG WHEEL"

Actually filmed at the famous Indianapolis 500-mile race classic and the nation's top speedways!

co-starring

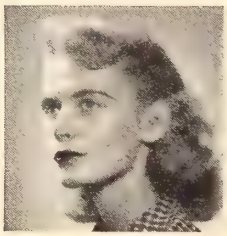
THOMAS MITCHELL

with

MICHAEL O'SHEA · SPRING BYINGTON · MARY HATCHER · HATTIE McDANIEL

STEVE BRODIE · LINA ROMAY · ALLEN JENKINS · DICK LANE

HARRY M. POPKIN, Executive Producer · Original Screenplay by Robert Smith · Produced by SAMUEL H. STIEFEL



Directed by EDWARD LUDWIG · Released thru United Artists

Hedy Lamarr is the tempting Delilah and Victor Mature is Samson, her muscular victim, in Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular Samson and Delilah.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

SAMSON AND DELILAH

■ The biggest, and I do mean biggest, attraction for the movie-goer this month is Paramount's Samson and Delilah. It's tremendous, impressive, and beautiful to look at. I thought it was a lot of fun.

Part Holy Bible, part C. B. De Mille, and Technicolored in the bargain, Samson and Delilah gives you a lot of show for your money. Victor Mature plays Samson, the reckless strong man who falls in love with a beautiful Philistine woman. Samson is a Danite (the Danites are cruelly taxed and oppressed by the Philistines) so when he breaks the news to his family, there are no cheers of joy. But love is love, and Samson so terrifies and impresses his future father-in-law, to say nothing of the Philistine leader (George Sanders) when he, Samson, breaks a lion into pieces with his bare hands, that he's promised the lady of his choice (Angela Lansbury). Still, there's many a slip. Angela marries another, is foully murdered, etc., etc., and Samson starts tearing up houses and setting fields on fire, in very colorful fashion. Well, the Philistines set another lady, Delilah (Hedy Lamarr), to find out the secret of Samson's strength, and she does just that. Everything he eats goes to his head. Without his hair, he's an average mortal. According to the Bible, Delilah had no special motive for betraying Samson. She was just a good Philistine. In C. B.'s version, she's Angela Lansbury's younger sister, and Samson's scorned her for love of Angela, and she's never forgotten it. A couple of times she almost forgets it, but then there's Samson's hometown girl,

Baby, you're just what I want for Christmas
Here's a romantic Yuletide treat that'll take your heart for a merry sleigh ride—Mitchum playing "Santa" to a lovely young widow! And wait'll he finds out the mistletoe's loaded!
"Aah, that Mitchum's a softie . . . always kissin' girls!"
"And it's my girl he's kissin'!"
RKO PRESENTS
ROBERT MITCHUM
JANET LEIGH · WENDELL COREY in a DON HARTMAN Production
Holiday Affair
with GORDON GEBERT
Produced and Directed by DON HARTMAN · Screenplay by Isobel Lennart
RKO RADIO PICTURES

Miriam (Olive Deering), who gets on her nerves (I think Miriam's a De Mille invention, too) and in the end, Delilah just doesn't trust the man to be faithful to her. So she turns him over to the authorities. She feels awful when Samson's blinded, though, and she helps him make the walls come tumbling down (once his hair's long again, his strength is restored) and all the Philistines are killed, killed, killed. So are Samson and Delilah. In case I sounded carping about C. B.'s inventing a bit of plot here and there, I didn't mean it that way. To make a full-length spectacle out of a couple of pages in the Bible requires some doing, and he did it.

THE FALLEN IDOL

Cast: Ralph Richardson, Michele Morgan, Bobby Henrey, Sonia Dresdel. Denis O'Dea.
Selznick

Here's an excellent British thriller, based on a short story by Graham Greene. Ralph Richardson and Sonia Dresdel play Mr. and Mrs. Baines, butler and housekeeper for a foreign ambassador to England. The ambassador goes away for a while, leaving his small son and his large embassy in the care of the Baines'. Small son (Bobby Henrey) adores Mr. Baines, but hates Mrs. Baines. She's a cold woman, and autocratic. She kills the boy's pet snake because she thinks it's horrid and dirty. (She thinks almost everything is horrid and dirty.) Mr. Baines, who's fallen in love with a girl named Julie (Michele Morgan) is miserable, but he hasn't the heart to ask his wife for his freedom. He's such a gentle man he pities mean people because their meanness makes them unhappy. Mrs. Baines traps little Bobby into admitting Mr. Baines met a girl on a certain afternoon, and then she plans a revenge. She says she's going out of town for a few days, but she doesn't go. She allows enough time for Mr. Baines and Julie to get themselves in a compromising position, then she starts raising the roof. In the excitement which follows, she falls to the bottom of a flight of stairs, and is killed. Bobby, who's crept out of his room, sees only the body hurtling through the air, and Baines standing at the top of the stairs. He believes Baines is the murderer, and that starts the real trouble. Bobby makes up fantastic lies to tell the police, in the belief that he's protecting Baines. The police assume the boy is hiding something. Then, when Julie and Baines insist that he tell the truth, you're scared half silly, because you know that what the child thinks is true isn't true at all. There's suspense the way only the British build suspense. There's a romance which is as sweet and as sad as springtime, and the cast is perfection, down to the smallest bit player. By all means go to see The Fallen Idol. It's one of the most gripping movies ever made.

A KISS FOR CORLISS

Cast: Shirley Temple, David Niven, Tom Tully, Virginia Welles.
United Artists.

Adolescent Corliss Archer comes to life once more, with Shirley Temple playing her. Story begins with Corliss' father, Mr. Archer (Tom Tully) representing a gold-digging blonde in a divorce case. Blonde is divorcing rich, attractive David Niven, and Archer is making blonde out to be a regular little Red Riding Hood—so sweet, so young, so innocent. The divorce is granted, David is assessed a vast sum for alimony, and he's bitter. He wants to get even with Archer. Fate plays right into his hands because Corliss, in an effort to make her boyfriend Dexter (Darryl Hickman) jealous, phonies up a whole diary of passionate love-making between her and David. After all, David's the man of the hour—Dexter will be plenty impressed. Next thing that happens is that Corliss and Dexter get locked in the basement of a night-club where they're not supposed to be, and Corliss doesn't get home until six A. M. She decides she'd better have amnesia, and she reverts to the age of nine. Her parents study her torn clothes, her vacant look, with dismay. Corliss, delighted with the effect she's creating, continues to act like a halfwit. Her parents ask her questions, Corliss answers with baby-talk. When she's told to go up to bed, she turns wistfully. "Daddy," she whimpers, "I want you to carry me—" "What do you think I am, a horse?" roars her father. (That's my favorite line in the picture: It's so tender and paternal.) The next day, the elder Archers read Corliss' diary, in the hopes of finding something to snap her back to herself, and of course they discover the mad romance between their daughter and Tommy Manville Niven. David gets dragged into the situation, and he's delighted. Intends to play up to Corliss, admit everything. What a lovely way to get even with Archer! This is worrisome to Corliss. She doesn't like her family thinking she's a fallen woman, but Niven refuses to back up her story that the diary's a parade of lies. Niven's running around calling Archer "Dad," and sending Corliss silk underwear. I won't tell what happens, but it's fun. Shirley is cute, and David is delightful. As for Tom Tully, he's on the scene so constantly, and he's so earnestly and loudly un-subtle, you could say his performance was as broad as it was long.

ADAM'S RIB

Cast: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Judy Holliday, Tom Ewell, Jean Hagen.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

This must be MGM's year. Adam's Rib is delicious, delightful, delovely. Adam (Spencer Tracy) is assistant district attorney, his wife (Katharine Hepburn) is likewise a lawyer. They live an idyllic existence—apartment in the city, farm in Connecticut, pretty clothes, mixed drinks before dinner, lots of wit and affection between them. Until the day Katie reads about a lady (Judy Holliday) taking several shots at her husband and his girlfriend in their love nest. Men, Katie declares, are always getting away with things because of the "unwritten law." When they shoot somebody for destroying the "sanctity of the home," the world applauds. But let some poor female try to murder an errant spouse, and wham! Spencer tries to explain to her that she's crazy. Just because a man gets away with an oc-

(Continued on page 87)

The Fallen Idol: Ralph Richardson and his wife, Sonia Dresdel, come to blows when she discovers he's in love with another woman.

A Kiss for Corliss: Much-married David Niven goes along with Shirley Temple's fib of torrid love between them to get even with her father.

Adam's Rib: District Attorney Spencer Tracy and lawyer Katharine Hepburn, find their ideal marriage flagging when they're rivals in court.

"Maybe I am just a 'dame' and didn't know it!"
"Thelma Jordon"
HAL WALLIS' production starring
BARBARA STANWYCK · WENDELL COREY with PAUL KELLY · JOAN TETZEL · Directed by Robert Siodmak
Screenplay by Ketti Frings · From a story by Marty Holland
Paramount Pictures

Bette Davis and William Grant Sherry with their daughter, Barbara, a few months before Bette sued the artist for divorce.

is bette davis afraid of love?

Haunting fear has been the force that has taken a great star to the heights. Now, it may rob her of happiness.

BY JAMES HATHAWAY

■ "My home at Laguna Beach is my castle," Bette Davis said. "I won't let down the drawbridge and allow the world to come in!"

But when, a few weeks ago, it was announced that Bette was filing suit for divorce from artist William Grant Sherry, her third husband, the world did come in—tramping printer's ink through the restful cliff dwelling which overlooks Wood Cove in a setting whose serenity is matched nowhere in the world.

In the necessary brevity of news dispatches, the factors which control a human being must be covered in a few short sentences. And when the front pages carried the story of Bette Davis' marital break-up, the impression was inevitably gathered by millions of hasty readers that here was just another case of a temperamental actress who had tired of marriage and wanted her freedom.

The story is a deeper and more tragic one than that. The key to it is perhaps to be found in a statement Bette made shortly after her divorce from Harmon Nelson, her first husband. Bette said: "I'm not happy. I'm absolutely frightened to be happy, afraid something might happen."

Later on, this fear seemed strangely justified, after she (Continued on page 86)

Man with a past
...meets woman with no future
...in the last port of call for adventurer, renegade, and outcast!

UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL presents

South Sea SINNER

FROM THE SENSATIONAL SCREENPLAY "EAST OF JAVA"

Starring

SHELLEY WINTERS · MACDONALD CAREY

HELENA CARTER

with LUTHER ADLER · FRANK LOVEJOY and LIBERACE

new sensation of the piano!

Universal International

Screenplay by JOEL MALONE and OSCAR BRODNEY · Directed by BRUCE HUMBERSTONE · Produced by MICHEL KRAIKE

When tragic illness struck the man she dearly loved, out of her enduring faith June Haver found courage to go on.

BY STANLEY BLAKE

valiant lady

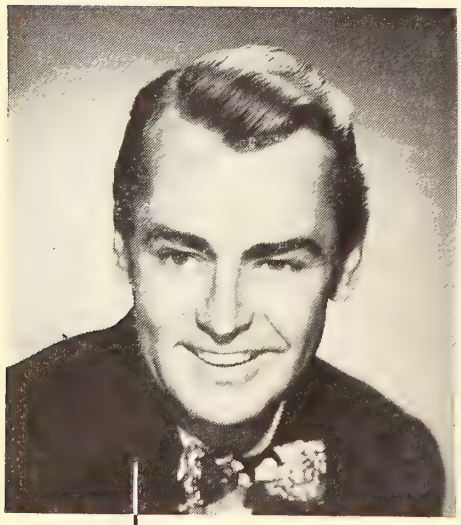
Radiantly happy a few months ago, June and Dr. Duzik hoped to marry

One of the most heartbreaking tragedies in Hollywood history was the recent death of Dr. John Duzik, fiancé of June Haver. The following story tells how June went through the final days.—THE EDITORS.

■ It was one of those tight little scenes that make everyone listless and nervous. Shifting around in the darkness of the big sound stage, the crew of The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady waited for Director David Butler to finish rehearsing the principals, June Haver and Gordon MacRae.

Someone shouted, "All right, let's shoot it!" The arcs snapped on with a hiss. Voices chased other voices around high up in the catwalks. The sound man buzzed for silence. Then the set went still, and the dialogue began, hardly a whisper to the people standing motionless out on the fringes of the set.

Director Butler said he liked the second take. That was the cue for a flood of noise. Grips and electricians began walking to their prearranged destinations to set up the next take. June Haver picked up her skirts and headed for her dressing room, oblivious to the noise. As she passed the camera crew, one of the men perched on the boom called down, "June, how's Doctor John today?"



She paused momentarily to acknowledge the question, shook her head vacantly, tightened her lips, and continued to her dressing room.

That was the morning after June's fiancé, Dr. John Duzik, had the first attack of internal hemorrhaging following a routine operation for stomach ulcers at St. John's Hospital. His condition was "critical and unchanged" when June called from her dressing room. . . .

(Continued on page 58)

with J. M. KERRIGAN • ANGELA CLARKE • John Miljan • Nan Boardman • Executive Producer SAMUEL BISCHOFF • Producer EDWARD GROSS • Directed by LOUIS KING • Screenplay by Alfred Lewis Levitt and DeWitt Bodeen • Based on the novel by Benedict and Nancy Freedman • Presented by NASSOUR STUDIO in association with HUNTINGTON HARTFORD • Released thru UNITED ARTISTS an open letter to the winners men

1. ALAN LADD
2. CLARK GABLE
3. GLENN FORD
4. BING CROSBY
5. MONTGOMERY CLIFT

women

1. LANA TURNER
2. BETTY GRABLE
3. JUNE ALLYSON
4. ELIZABETH TAYLOR
5. SHIRLEY TEMPLE

still on top!

■ Dear Champions of 1949:

On this page are listed the final top standings on the MODERN SCREEN 1949 star-popularity poll—the most extensive survey of its kind conducted by any magazine.

It is a remarkable tribute to you, Lana Turner and Alan Ladd, that for the second straight year our more than 4,500,000 readers have voted you their favorite actress and actor. This is especially notable in your case, Lana, since you made no films during the past year. But your fans remained intensely loyal; the hold upon them of your honest, warmly human personality was as firm as ever. Perhaps an important factor has been the fine way your marriage to Bob Topping has worked out. You have proved how wrong were the cynics and gossip-mongers and how right were your millions of supporters in their unwavering faith in you.

You, Alan Ladd, have stayed at the top by continuing to deliver straightforward, forceful screen performances, by living a private life that's a model of wholesome family devotion, and by treating the public with simple, unaffected friendliness.

Betty Grable, June Allyson and Shirley Temple also repeated their 1948 success by again coming very close to the top spot. In announcing the winners last year, Betty, MODERN SCREEN said of you then: "Betty Grable made little news—she just kept right on being the one-and-only wonderful Betty." And, Betty—that's exactly what we'll say about you this year . . . You, June Allyson, have long been one of the great pets of our readers. Your growing stature as an actress, and the courageous way you and Dick Powell fought down vicious and absurd separation rumors, have put you in even more solidly. . . . You, Shirley Temple, continued to be so strongly popular that MODERN SCREEN broke publishing tradition by devoting an entire section of its April issue to you in celebration of your 21st birthday.

There's a newcomer in the front rank this time. That's you, Elizabeth Taylor. The extraordinary beauty into which you have grown, your fresh charm, and the mixed-up romances into which your young heart has led you, have tremendously increased your already large following.

Among the close runners-up for first honor among the gentlemen, we find two repeaters: Clark Gable and Bing Crosby. Clark and Bing, you're very remarkable fellows. Wish we had something new to say about the magic you possess. Well, it's certainly more imperishable than any words we might find to describe it. . . . We're not a bit surprised to find two newcomers in the first five: Glenn Ford and Montgomery Clift. You, Glenn, have in the past few years been a man about whom our readers couldn't seem to hear enough. . . . And you, Montgomery Clift, are the most natural and vital young actor to come along in many a day. There's nothing flamboyant about you. You simply manage, somehow, to project your personality into third-dimensional reality.

To all of you, ladies and gentlemen, go our congratulations and best wishes.

William B. Hartley

EDITOR

"Your Hair'll Shine and Glow— so Dandruff-free

—all you've got to do is get ahold of me!"

Says Talkish the Tube

Prell Shampoo removes dandruff in as little as 3 minutes! Doctors' examinations proved it!

Prell leaves your hair gloriously radiant! Light-meter tests prove it!

THERE'S NO OTHER SHAMPOO LIKE PRELL -IT'S EMERALD-CLEAR!

● Prell's exclusive formula with the patented cleansing ingredient is amazing! For Prell not only removes unsightly dandruff fast . . . Prell leaves hair beautifully, shiningly radiant. More radiant than with the most expensive soap shampoos . . . more radiant, in hardest water, than leading cream shampoos. Radiant and easy to manage, curl, do in any style. And, by actual tests in hundreds of homes, Prell goes farther than any other known shampoo, because it's more concentrated. Get Prell today!

Prell SHAMPOO

CREATED BY PROCTER & GAMBLE

What secret tensions brought the world's most cherished romance to a tragic end?

why shirley's marriage failed!

BY JACK WADE

Ever since Shirley Temple's announcement that she was seeking a divorce from Jack Agar, the shocked public has speculated on just what the real reasons were behind it. In the following story, MODERN SCREEN presents for the first time a complete and authoritative account of what wrecked a marriage that universally had been hailed as perfect—THE EDITORS.

■ A few weeks before Shirley Temple publicly decided that life with Jack Agar was both unlivable and unlovable, these two were playing golf at the Riviera Country Club.

Jack, tall and graceful, was hitting the ball far and straight. Trailing behind came Shirley, a little wisp of a girl barely five feet tall, churning up the turf with a golf club almost as large as she, trying mightily and fruitlessly to send the ball flying onto the green.

As the Agars finished the ninth hole, Jack, walking beside Shirley, slipped his arm around her waist. "Maybe, Shirl," he said, "you'd better quit. This can be rough, you know, if you're not used to it."

Shirley looked up at him and shook her head. "Let's go around again," she said.

So they shot nine more holes. When they had finished and were ambling towards the clubhouse, Shirley happened to make a gesture which fleetingly turned her hands palms upward. Only then did Jack see the cruel mass of broken blisters which dotted them.

Tenderly, he took the two little hands and placed them in his. "Shirl!" he muttered. "You've sure got guts."

Shirley Temple (Continued on page 56)

When three-months-old Linda Susan posed for this, her first picture, no one dreamed that 18 months later her parents would separate the private

Later on, maybe, he'll keep those kids of his firmly in line—but right now, the little rascals have Daddy where they want him.

By ARTHUR L. CHARLES

Billy and Jimmy Lancaster take off for a brisk trot on an amusement park carousel. At home, they delight in arousing their parents—at dawn.

Burt and Norma Lancaster skillfully execute a rhumba at Mocambo on a rare nightclub appearance. Norma was a USO entertainer.

■ The way Burt Lancaster greets every new day, Saturdays and Sundays painfully included, is like this:

Much too soon after dawn breaks over his Bel Air home, two small conspirators in one-piece sleeping suits (usually with flaps down) will bounce to the floor from their bunks. Whispering to each other, they will scurry out into the hallway and down to the master bedroom where Burt and his wife, Norma, are sleeping.

Then, with a whooping, scrambling rush, the pair will burst into the bedroom and immediately commence noisy mischief. Burt will awaken and threaten reprisals. Norma will do the same—or perhaps try some desperate entreaties. But this will avail nothing against the hardened little hearts of the invaders. Jimmy, who is three, will be tugging at the bedclothes. Billy, who is two, will be snapping up window shades or trying to climb the front of the dresser after first jerking open the drawers.

Just about this time a new voice, a tiny one, will be heard in a questioning wail concerned with such things as food and an immediate change of surroundings. Susan Elizabeth, who is only two months old, has been awakened by the commotion. Burt and Norma will accept defeat and sleepily struggle out of bed while Jimmy and Billy will howl with delight. Mission accomplished!

Can't Burt handle things around his household with a firmer hand—as might be expected of a man who plays the stern sort of roles he does on the screen?

Well . . . uh . . . yes, says Burt, working up a stern look. He plans to do that very thing! Very soon now. But . . . uh . . . at present, what with the boys still babies, practically . . . well . . . And his voice trails off as foolishly and humanly as that of any young father still so new to parenthood that he can't even mention his children without a fond note creeping into his voice. So it looks as if Jimmy and Billy have nothing to worry about for awhile.

With order eventually restored after the early-morning invasion, events will progress towards breakfast with Burt, Norma and the boys being joined by Burt's father, James; Burt's sister-in-law, Ruth; and, usually, Burt's partner from the vaudeville days, Nick Cravat, who is often on the scene even though he has his own home in the San Fernando Valley. Susan Elizabeth, of course, (Continued on page 84)

life of burt lancaster

June Allyson plays with Leslie Powell, her one-and-a-half-year-old adopted daughter.

by GWEN LITTLEFIELD

former President, June Allyson Fan Club

You know me, Allyson!

This is about an unforgettable friendship between two girls—a star and a fan.

Gwen Littlefield, who wrote the following delightful account of her intimate friendship with June Allyson, started the June Allyson Fan Club in 1944 and was its president until 1947, when she went off to college. The organization then disbanded, but a new one was founded soon thereafter by Lois Carnahan of McKeesport, Pennsylvania. Under Miss Carnahan's outstanding leadership, the June Allyson Fan Club is again one of the best.—THE EDITORS.

■ "Don't you have a home?" the manager of the Wilshire Theater in Los Angeles asked me.

I knew what he was thinking. He was thinking that I was one of those whacky, movie-struck fanatics. You see, for eight consecutive hours I'd been sitting in his theater watching June Allyson perform in four successive showings of Two Girls and a Sailor.

"I happen," I told him with as much dignity as I could summon, "to be president of the June Allyson Fan Club." I stressed the word, "president."

The manager laughed. "Well, that explains everything," he said. "Have a bag of popcorn—on the house."

That's how my exciting and unforgettable relationship with June Allyson began. I was 15 at the time, and to tell the truth, I wasn't president of the June Allyson Fan Club at all. In fact, I was president of nothing. I was just a Los Angeles high-school girl.

That night, however, when I went home and looked back on the fib I had told the theater manager, I suddenly thought, "Why don't I become president of June's fan club?" The thought kept going through my mind. "Why don't I?"

Well, I decided I would. I called a girl I knew at MGM and from her I got June's phone number. June, at that period, was classified as a starlet.

It seems a little silly now (Continued on page 81)

June Allyson shared Gwen Littlefield's pride when Gwen accepted Modern Screen's 1945 trophy cup for the best fan club in the U. S. and Canada from Hedda Hopper.

June and Dick Powell have a little fun at their family piano. June's marriage, in August 1945, did not alter the warm friendship between Gwen Littlefield and herself.

mistakes they never confess

by hedda hopper

Why do the great stars of Hollywood, blessed with so much, so often choose the high road to disaster?

BETTY HUTTON happily kisses her husband, Ted Briskin. Recently on the verge of divorcing him, Betty woke up to her responsibilities in time to prevent a tragedy.

GREGORY PECK and his family safely rode out rumors of trouble at home after he had left in a temporary huff. Greg's honest statement of the facts killed the gossip.

■ On a recent day in Rome, I listened to a Swedish beauty who had become an American idol pour out the story of her folly with an Italian director on a Mediterranean isle. But, although there was anguish in Ingrid Bergman's voice, what we talked about was obviously no folly at all to Ingrid.

On the contrary, she left me no doubt that she felt persecuted, hounded, unfairly treated—the victim of a vicious and cruel world. Ingrid could not, would not blame herself for the situation she was in.

How many times have I watched stars pay for their blunders with anguish and tears? How often have I watched indiscretion, impulsiveness, temper, bad judgment, lack of tact, fickleness and greed-for-glory grease the skids for Hollywood greats? Far more times, believe me, than I have fingers and toes.

Sometimes their boners only crimp a career, nick a nice bank account, tarnish a Hollywood tiara. But other times they bruise and blight.

Lawrence Tierney might well have turned into another Burt Lancaster if he'd joined Alcoholics Anonymous in time. Orson Welles could have rivalled the brilliant record of the Barrymores if he hadn't tried to make like a screwy one-man-band. The great Charlie Chaplin could still have the warming love of America if he hadn't made the mistake of angling his art towards Moscow.

When I consider the bulls and boners that dot the Hollywood landscape I sometimes wonder: How can stars go so wrong, act so blandly and (Continued on page 66)

ROBERT MITCHUM joins his sons for a mid-afternoon snack. Mitchum is concentrating on his family with renewed devotion since his near-disastrous misstep— for which he won forgiveness by taking his punishment without trying to cover up.

JEANNE CRAIN gives an autograph while husband Paul Brinkman smiles approval. His attempts to influence her career worry people who have seen the same thing work badly in other cases.

BETTY GRABLE, who gets a great thrill out of horses and horse races, settles down with Harry James for a day at the track. Friends are hoping that Betty's interest in racing will not get so intense that she'll let it interfere with work DICK HAYMES and the former Nora Eddington Flynn endangered his future by the publicity resulting from their marriage. More damaging was his dismissal of the agent who had built him up.

In the living room of their new house, Alan and Sue Ladd talk over career matters—they're sometimes at it until 3 a.m. Alan stands under portraits

Alan catches up on current events as he relaxes on his special bedroom couch. He always wanted one so that he could stretch out during the day without having to rumple a neatly-made bed.

In their bedroom, which is decorated in the warm colors they both prefer, Sue (who doesn't mind sprawling on a bedspread) and Alan play with his pet boxer, Jezebel. The Ladds own four dogs, give them the run of the house.

the children, around whom the household revolves.

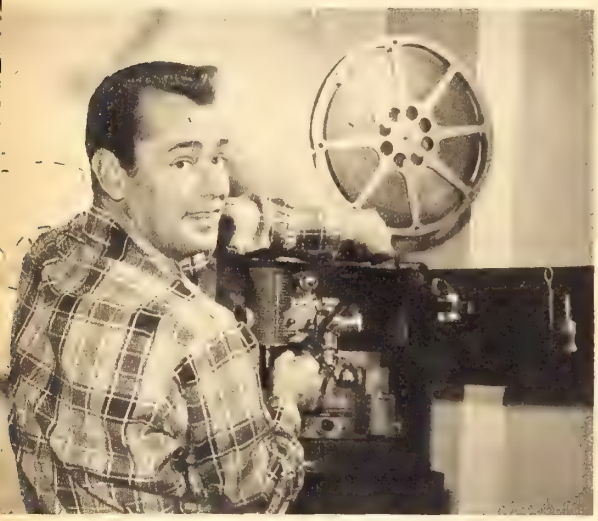
Alan confers with Jezebel on the patio. The Ladds had large windows put on rooms facing the patio "to bring the California outdoors inside." Pool is in background.

by Ida Zeitlin

For Alan Ladd, it was the day of fulfillment—the day he tied a ribbon to the door of a newly-built house and wrote on a card . . .

"...to susie from alan"

■ Like all of us, Alan Ladd's a product of his early influences. He wanted a couch in the bedroom of the new house. He likes to flop down on something, and you don't flop down on a bed till the spread's been removed—that's one thing his mother was always strict about. She couldn't stand hearing doors slam, so Alan's kids are trained not to slam doors. She had a great tenderness for animals—even when food was scarce, she'd manage to feed any pup that needed a hand-out. So today there are four dogs at the Ladd house, and a baker's dozen up at the ranch.



When he's not working, Alan loves to sleep late, and does. But with a guilty conscience. His stepfather—who was generally in bed by nine o'clock—thought that sleeping past six was the badge of a sluggard. Right now there's some building going on at the ranch, and the carpenters start their hammering early. Sue wanted to stop them one morning, so Alan could sleep. He wouldn't let her. "They'll think I'm a lazy actor."

He's an unobtrusive but consistent check-grabber. Once to a friend who protested, he replied: "I hate wrangling at the table. Seems a little juvenile. If you didn't have the money, you wouldn't be sitting there eating in the first place. Besides, I get a bang out of taking the check. There were so many years when I couldn't have picked it up for a blue-plate special."

Yes, like everyone, Ladd's a product of his past. But people react differently to the same stimuli. In some, early hardships create lasting resentments. Others, having won the battle, soon learn to take the victory for granted. Alan belongs to neither group. Success finds him humble, grateful and incredulous. In spite of tangible evidence to the contrary, he can't rid himself of the feeling that he's in on a temporary pass.

Sue and Alan Ladd pose with daughter Alana, while son David "shoots" them with a toy camera. He can't get too close, because Alana's in bed with a cold.

Alan loads up his new projection machine to run off Chicago Deadline in the family playroom. He's uncomfortable watching himself in a regular theater.

In their home office, Alan goes right on reading his mail, and Sue answers the telephone. Alan hates to talk on the phone, will let it ring when he's alone.

"Still feel you're working from week to week?" asked someone who hadn't seen him in a couple of years.

"I always will."

He explains it this way: "When you've lived most of your life with insecurity, often not knowing where the rent and food's coming from, you can't suddenly crow, 'I've got X things and X dollars, therefore I'm secure.' The other feeling's too deep in your bones. You're scared to death you'll make a mistake tomorrow, and it's going to be your fault and you won't be able to rectify it. Gets to be kind of an instinct with you. How can you reason with an instinct?"

In their early days together, he told Sue a story. Long before This Gun for Hire, Dick Wallace gave him a small part in a play. The cast met at Wallace's house. There Alan saw a silver dresser-set. "Why that hit me harder than anything else, I can't say," Alan told Sue. "But it did. I thought, to own such a thing, you must really be in solid." He smiled at his own naivete.

In spite of the smile, Sue filed the story away in her mind for future reference. She didn't go dashing right out for a dresser set. That would have been both extravagant and obvious. But from time to time she'd give him a single piece. Carol Lee, the Ladds' older daughter, who wanted to be in on it too, saved up enough to buy the shoehorn. When they moved into the new house, Sue added the piece that completed the set. It shines softly on Alan's dressing table and still makes him smile—in memory of the awestruck kid of years ago, in appreciation of the love that gathered it piece by piece. The silver as such doesn't matter. The symbolism does . . .

The ranch he and Sue bought is another symbol. "Some people buy pieces of paper called stock," says Alan. "That's not for me. I don't want to be left high and dry with a bunch of papers. I'd rather have something I can understand. Like the little wristwatch I used to own and hock all the time. It cost $25 to begin with, and they'd give me five for it. After a while they wouldn't give me more than two. But I knew I could always get two bucks on the watch. The watch was my security for a meal. Well, so's the ranch. When they put me out to pasture, the ranch'll be there."

And he'll know how to run it. He has a feeling for the land and for animals. What he doesn't already know, he sets out to learn from the ground up—through books, through people, through first-hand experience. Last year they spent Christmas at the ranch. Sue tied a tiny tractor to the tree, with a card that said, "Look out the window." Outside stood a real tractor, sporting a huge red bow. Alan rode it all over the place that day. Next day he had to go back to work. By the time he returned, the hired man had done everything about the place you could possibly do with a tractor. Alan stared gloomily over his well-ploughed fields—and then caught sight of a neighbor ploughing across the way. His face brightened. He approached the neighbor: "Say—could I go behind you with the tractor and help?"

Next to the tractor, the truck is his pride and joy. All the Ladds share his enthusiasm for it. (Continued on page 79)

FOURTH
in a series

Today, Robert Stack bears no noticeable scars from the injuries he received in an accident which could easily have been fatal.

As I lay there helpless, a life of disfigurement seemed worse than death itself.

My prayer was answered

by Robert Stack

■ It was a beautiful summer day about seven years ago, shortly before I was to go into the Navy. My friend Carey Loftin, the stunt man, and I were motorcycling to Lake Tahoe, where we expected to have a wonderful vacation.

I was winging along the road hitting about 60 miles an hour. Traffic was light that day, and I was experiencing that exhilaration which only speed can give. I was singing "Cow-cow Boogie" at the top of my lungs. I swung smoothly, confidently, into a curve. The motorcycle hit some loose gravel on the asphalt. I spun wildly and crashed into the cliff at the side of the road, with the motorcycle on top of me, pinning me down.

My back felt broken. My legs felt paralyzed. One side of my face felt crushed. The pain was excruciating, and under the weight of the motorcycle I was completely helpless.

Carey, riding just a short distance behind me, saw what had happened, braked his motorcycle sharply and ran to me. With his great strength, he lifted the motorcycle off my back.

"Try to bear it, Bob," he said. "I'll get help."

Then he stepped out into the center of the road, to flag down any approaching car. None would heed his frantic (Continued on page 75)

'Twas some nights before Christmas, when all through the store, not a creature was stirring— except a gay party of grown-up kids.

You're acting like a child!

by reba and bonnie churchill

■ A boisterous orangeade cascade is streaming down the side of a wall. Nearby, a thriving lollipop tree sprouts all-day suckers in six delicious flavors. Across the way, a pint-sized television set provides direct contact with Santa and the North Pole.

Well, there really is a place that has these wonderful things—and more! It's called "Uncle Bernie's Toy Menagerie" and it's in the heart of Beverly Hills.

The toy shop's entrance is guarded by two dancing blue elephants painted on a sunny yellow wall. Over the door there's a shingle which reads: "Through these portals pass little mortals with the finest toys in the world."

This particular evening, the sign referred to Esther Williams and Ben Gage, Larry Parks and Betty Garrett, John Ireland and Joanne Dru, Vera-Ellen and Johnny McKee, Candy and Mel Tormé, Barbara and Marshall Thompson, Nancy Davis and Peter Thompson, Glenn Denning, Phyllis and Don Taylor, and us Churchills.

We were all on hand to get a preview of the fabulous orangeade falls (it had just been installed that afternoon), do some Christmas shopping and— let's be frank—play with the toys. In this case, there'd be no sting in saying to a grown-up, "You're acting like a child!" Such behavior was expected.

Our host, Uncle Bernie, was holding the party after hours so his guests could have the run of the

In the course of an after-hours party at Uncle Bernie's, famous Beverly Hills toyshop, Don Taylor and Marsh Thompson finish a stirring horse-race. Opposite page: Uncle Bernie shows his wares to Vera-Ellen and Johnny McKee as Esther Williams and Ben Gage pause at the orangeade falls.

Fascinating though romping with playthings has been, Uncle Bernie finds it an easy matter to get the gang to take time out for food. Here, Mel and Candy Tormé, Reba Churchill, Babs and Marsh Thompson gather round for dessert—a two-foot cake decorated with candy toys.

At Uncle Bernie's toy shop, Joanne Dru and John Ireland choose a doll for their little girl. Below: Larry Parks and Betty Garrett are fascinated by the trains.

Below: Esther Williams and Vera-Ellen invade the boys' province to give trucks and boats a whirl as Ben Gage and Johnny McKee have fun with dolls.

you're acting like a child continued store. Uncle Bernie is a genial, joyous person with puppy-brown eyes, a booming laugh, and a mania for making people happy. "This way," he figured, "the real kids may have a fighting chance to try out their toys on Christmas morning."

Our neighbors, the Mel Tormés, had told us about the toy preview. "Come along," urged Candy, "you can help me keep Mel from buying out the store." We, who are always eager for an excuse to visit Uncle Bernie's, didn't need any coaxing. "Howdy, pardners," called early-arrivals Marshall Thompson and Don Taylor as we entered. They had already started their juvenile high jinks. Astride a pair of sturdy metal hobby horses, they were jockeying them across the store in a race to the finish. Barbara Thompson and Phyllis Taylor were cheering their husbands down the homestretch.

Soon as we could control ourselves at the spectacle of six-footers Don and Marsh crouched earnestly on the tiny ponies —Don wearing a feathered Indian headdress and waving a rubber tomahawk, and Marsh sporting a tot's-size 10-gallon hat and cap pistol—we judged Don the winner of the race. We presented him with a yo-yo. For consolation, we gave Marsh a water gun.

Betty Garrett and Larry Parks had just arrived, but were already knee-deep in small-fry paraphernalia. Beaming and excited, they were in constant huddles on whether to get various wonderful items. You see, they expect their first child in February. They've already ordered a crib—in the form of a theatrical trunk.

Larry was intently studying a roller-coaster gadget. He'd push a button that started a figure on a motorcycle whirling around the loops and turns. "For the baby?" we asked. "For Larry," Betty answered.

Joanne Dru and John Ireland were more interested in the Winter Wonderland display. They're renting a cabin in the mountains—"so our five youngsters can enjoy a white Christmas and have a real chance at snow fun."

Joanne had carefully prepared a holiday list. For every item she crossed off, John added two. We glanced at the growing list. "Mittens, pipe, hat and scarf for snowman . . ."

But Joanne's list was nothing to Esther Williams'. Esther and Ben Gage had a little book filled with gift reminders. Whenever Esther would check off one name, another would pop up. Esther gives presents annually to 80 relatives and girlhood friends. Peter Thompson brightly suggested, "Wouldn't it be easier just to own a department store?"

"Don't mention it!" said Ben. "We already own five enterprises—a gas station, property in Acapulco, Mexico, a building project in Twenty-Nine Palms, and a new restaurant."

Sooner or later it was bound to happen—two-gun-totin' Mel Tormé spied Uncle Bernie's display of cowboy guns. Mel and Glenn Denning soon had our heads spinning with their talk of carbines, .38 calibers, and Winchesters. Mel has a collection of 200 rifles, while Glenn is an expert on guns. Glenn became an expert because, he says, "I figured if I knew enough about them, my agent might become impressed and get me a role in a Western. But so far, no luck. They always cast me as a pilot. And I thought I'd put my parachute in mothballs for good when I came out of the Air (Continued on page 85)

This love of ours

by Anne Baxter

Because we're apart so much, we know that only our shared life has meaning.

■ Happily married? At the moment—no, we're not.

And what has come between the Hodiaks, John and Anne? One continent and one ocean. Remove those two small barriers, and we are happy—just about the happiest combination in the world.

"After all, Anne," people tell me, "John will be home in another week or two. Lots of Hollywood actors are in Europe on location. You've got to be adult about such things."

Well, my answer to all that sort of well-meant advice is a loud, unlady-like, "Go, jump in the lake!" I refuse to be "big" and/or adult about the whole business. If lots of Hollywood actors must be in Europe on location, let 'em go. But please leave my John at home. And I'd like to stay there, too.

Even with the most wonderful husband in creation, how can I be happy when all that's left of him around the house (Continued on page 74)

seventh in a series

Three things led Pat Neal to stardom—
the looks of a goddess,
the talent to go with them, and the nerve to make her own rules.

BY LOUIS POLLOCK

the Beautiful rebel

■ Patricia Neal, who was born in the South to be a small-town belle, and was reborn in the North to be a star, is a kind of rebel—the tall, beautiful kind. Her talent belongs to her studio, but everything else belongs to herself. A newcomer to pictures, an activity in which a girl is expected to throw herself into going places, meeting people, and soaking up a whole new curriculum of social and personal accomplishments, Patricia is happily doing nothing of the sort.

She swims little, plays tennis less and rides barely—"Barely ever, that is, I mean, honey," she says, in her musical Dixie drawl. As for sketching, painting, archery, soap-carving, or staggering around a dusty ballet floor on buckled-up toes—well, just the thought of it is too wearyin', thank you all.

And this goes also for most of Hollywood's standard leisure-time activities. Patricia has proven to be one of the staunchest non-joiners in the film colony's history. Not yet has she roasted as much as one weekend weenie with the Oh, So Young Set, worn a cellophane-grass skirt to any of the very chic parties thrown by the Smart Set, gotten pale from brain fag at a scotch-and-water seminar of the Intellectual Set, or even, despite her Broadway background, taken the usual blood-oath to sneer at the movies in general with members of the Theatrical Set.

"Then what do you do?" appealed a group of reporters who were interviewing her en masse one day and finding it puzzling to fill in her personal story with all the activities she wasn't active at. "With your evenings, we mean. And your weekends."

"Oh, I do right well," she assured them. "I let the evenings fall and the weekends just happen."

"And boys?" they asked pointedly.

"I'm going to let that happen (Continued on page 72)

Pat Neal and her mother like to talk over the old Knoxville, Tennessee, days as they do the dishes together.

Pat at The Fountainhead première with Kirk Douglas. Tall dates are a preference with Pat, who's five-feet-eight.

Forlorn, forgotten, the little boy dreamed of a Christmas he couldn't have—until war hero Audie Murphy made it come true.

BY JOHN T. ELLIOTT

Hollywood's loveliest Christmas story

■ On Christmas Day of 1947, I was driving along Wilshire Boulevard, one of the main drags in Los Angeles. At the corner of La Brea, I stopped to pick up a thin young fellow who was bumming a ride.

He looked around 20 or 21, and he had brown hair, sad eyes, and a face that teased my memory. He was dressed in the kind of Army jacket General Eisenhower introduced in the last war, and a pair of unpressed grey flannels.

As he hopped into the car, he said softly—there was a trace of the South in his voice—"Thanks for picking me up." And then he smiled. But it wasn't a cheerful smile. It was the kind of telling smile with which a man turns the pockets of his soul inside out—and somehow I knew at once that here was a young man who was very much alone in the world.

Well, no boy, no human being should feel alone and neglected and unhappy on Christmas; so, to be friendly, I began to talk about the holiday spirit and what kind of Christmases I used to enjoy as a kid. And as I talked, this young fellow beside me started to loosen up and talk some himself.

"I don't want you to think," he said, "that I'm complaining, but I don't reckon I've ever had what you'd call a real Christmas—you know, with a tree and all the trimmings."

"How come?" I asked.

"Well," he drawled on, "I come from a pretty poor family. Matter of fact, 'poor' is too rich a (Continued on page 83)

Joan
Schaffer
'49

Unaware that vacationing Barbara Stanwyck is sitting among them, New Yorkers in Central Park pay her no attention. A hidden Modern

■ Recently in New York's Grand Central station, Barbara Stanwyck was struggling up a stairway, caught in a mass of impersonal humanity, when someone came down hard on her toe. Barbara immediately let out a colorful verbal reaction.

"Why," she heard a man up ahead say, "that's Barbara Stanwyck's voice."

She braced herself as the man turned his head, expecting the mass to become quite personal. He stared right past her. "Must have been hearing things," he muttered.

And the man behind her said impatiently, "Look, lady, let's get going. I ain't got all day, you know."

While most Hollywood stars complain of getting writer's cramp signing autographs while traveling the highways and byways, Barbara Stanwyck declares with mock plaintiveness, "People never recognize me unless Bob's along. In fact, sometimes they don't recognize him because I'm with him."

And, surprisingly enough, it's true. This has created situations which her friends tell about with great amusement—amusement in which Barbara joins, except on rare occasions like one which caused her to make a radical change in her life.

That was when she went to the première of Stella Dallas, in which she gave a performance that made her an Academy Award nominee. When Producer Sam Goldwyn learned she was to be escorted by the fans' rave of the year, Robert Taylor, he gave the special police officers orders to see the young actor wasn't torn limb from limb.

A good thing it was, too. The fans broke through the ropes to surround Taylor. Police went to his rescue. One officer pulled reen photographer snapped these photos.

anybody here seen Stanwyck?

Sure—but they never know it. She's got a face that launches a thousand raves on the screen, and a thousand blank stares on the street

BY SANDRA SUE DRESKER

On another Central Park bench, Barbara's neighbor displays no excitement.

arbara, resisting and sputtering, from ob's good right arm. Taylor's fists went to action.

The nonplussed officer said ruefully, "I dn't recognize her. She's not dressed like ıy star. I thought she was one of them ıwdy kids."

Barbara pulled down her no-nonsense cket, straightened her good tailored skirt, ınked her sensible felt hat firmly down ıto her head and resumed her subtle stalk to the theater.

As a result, she (Continued on page 70)

by Lana Turner

my little girl

She travels in a magic world of her own imagination, of cowboys and cookies and distant lagoons— and sometimes, because she loves me, she takes me along.

■ My little girl is growing up, and the other morning she acquainted me with that fact. She was standing before me as I explained to her why she mustn't do a certain thing. As on previous occasions, I talked to her without condescension, yet tried to bring the subject down to her level of reasoning. When I had finished she looked at me quietly, then smiled a gentle smile.

"Mommy," she said, "I'm not a baby any more. I'm six years old."

And it struck me suddenly how far she'd come since the days when she reached out her plump baby hands to catch the sunlight as it danced across her play pen. I told myself I must remember from now on to discuss things with her on a plane a little above, rather than beneath her understanding. I could see I'd insulted her for the first time, and the knowledge made me unhappy. . . .

The mind of my little girl has a singular doggedness about it which I try hard to understand. The day I told her we were going to Honolulu, she and Bob and Nana—her nurse—and I, she was consumed by curiosity about this new place. I told her about the white beaches and the cocoanuts and the people with their golden skin and white teeth. She could think of nothing else and spent hours looking for pictures of places in Hawaii, and boats that travel there.

Then Bob and I changed our minds and decided to go to Europe instead. Cheryl was five years old at that time and to her Europe was, of course, a strange and marvelous place. We went to London and Paris and saw all the wonderful things of the Old World, and my little girl digested all that her young eyes could devour. When, after five months, we returned to New York and entered our room in the hotel, she sprawled on the bed and looked at me expectantly. I could see that something was about to burst forth and I asked what was troubling her.

"Now are we going to Honolulu?" she said.

I couldn't keep from laughing—yet while I laughed, I knew that I had disappointed her and, even more important, had broken a promise to her that she would not forget.

One day months later in Hollywood, I saw her walking away from our house, toward the hills in the (Continued on page 76)

Lana's six-year-old daughter, Cheryl, who's getting to be a big girl, proudly reaches up to the mantel of the Topping living room.

Earthy and spiritual, friendly and aloof, idealistic and skeptical, an intellectual who prefers his women not to be brainy . . . That's the puzzling Lew Ayres.

As soon as Lew's fondness for Jane Wyman became open gossip, the "romance" died.

South African Heather Walsh is one of the many beauties Lew has instructed in art.

the man BEHIND the RIDDLE

by sheilah graham

■ "Lew Ayres wanted on the phone!" yelled the doorman on Stage 11 at Warner Brothers.

"He's busy!" yelled back the assistant director.

"Who is it?" asked Lew quietly.

"Who is it?" impatiently repeated the doorman into the telephone. They were ready for another take and wasted time meant wasted money. A few seconds later the doorman shouted, "It's ex-Marine ————. Says he's passing through town and he wants to thank Mr. Ayres again under nicer circumstances for saving his life during the war."

"O.K., I'll take it," said Lew.

I happened to be on the set at the time. As Lew walked toward the telephone, my thoughts rushed back to the dark days at the beginning of the war when Lew went through a private hell. He was publicly branded "coward," because he preferred to be catalogued "Conscientious Objector" rather than forego his principles and fight. Lew was no more a coward then than he is now. But he has always seemed the most contradictory character in Hollywood.

Take the steady stream of girls in Lew's life. The newest, as of this writing, is pretty redhead Arlene Dahl. Lew is seen all over town with her, at the Beverly Hills Tropics, the Lanai Room, the (Continued on page 77)

modern screen's hollywood pictorial

■ On these pages MODERN SCREEN presents the first in a series of pictorial features devoted to exclusive picture stories and outstanding news photos of the month. Here, month after month, MODERN SCREEN's readers will be able to see the best current work of our own staff photographers and that of photographers attached to all major film studios and to world-wide press services. This section will, we feel, provide our readers with the most unusual, dramatic and entertaining pictorial coverage of the varied Hollywood scene that has ever been presented in any national magazine.—THE EDITORS

AVA GARDNER TELLS A LITTLE DINNER-TABLE JOKE, ALMOST FAILS TO GET A LAUGH.

DINING WITH British star Stewart Granger, Ava is, as always, full of conversation.

SHE'S REMINDED suddenly of a perfectly terrific story, animatedly launches into it.

HER AUDIENCE doesn't forget his salad as Ava, working hard, delivers her story's punch line.

HE GETS IT! The English actor politely rewards Ava with a restrained but genuine laugh—and Ava relaxes. For a moment there, she suspected her joke wasn't exactly going over.

STARS ARE GUESTS AT A HOLLYWOOD PHOTOGRAPHERS' PARTY, GET LAUGHS BY THE DOZEN.

THE BIG SENSATION of the annual Press Photographers' Ball is Vera-Ellen and Rock Hudson, covered with gilt as "Mr. and Mrs. Oscar."

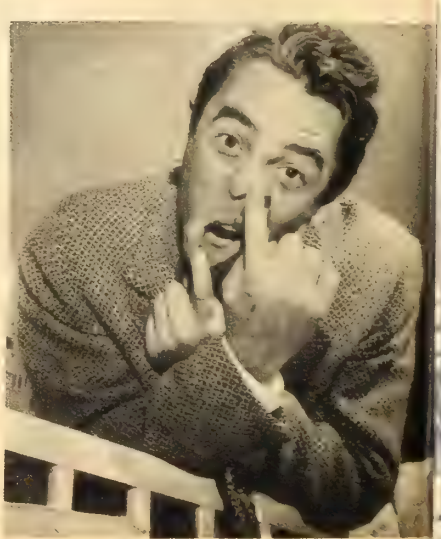
PLAYING IT DEADPAN, Civil War soldier Red Skelton isn't fooling as he shoots away with a modern camera. Photography is his hobby.

EASTERN POTENTATE John Lund, known for the evening as the "Aga Salam," escorts an exotically-clad harem beauty—his wife, Marie.

HILARIOUS HELICOPTER Ann Blyth waxes merry with cover girl Joan Leslie. (MODERN SCREEN is on her skirt.) Roddy McDowall looks on.

GAY NINETIES bather Marshall Thompson finds it fun to make some rain over the umbrella of his wife Barbara's old-style beach outfit.

CARNIVAL QUEEN Joan Crawford in her Flamingo Road costume takes her gayety intensely. Her escort, Cesar Romero, is about to sneeze.



more pictures on following pages

JAMES MASON'S DAUGHTER, Portland—named for Fred Allen's wife, Portland Hoffa—inspects an apple offered by her mother, Pam Kellino.

Hollywood babies discover a brand-new world . . . explore it,

HOW TO DIAPER A BABY WHO APPARENTLY DOESN'T LIKE IT. Macdonald Carey wonders how to get his daughter, Liza, into the happy mood he ESTHER WILLIAMS' SON, "Benjy" Gage, is given his daily "swim" by his mother in the plastic pool on the second-story porch of the Gage house.

rotest it, delight it. Here are three charming new examples.

ves necessary before putting a diaper on her. He tries funny faces. They fail to amuse. So he goes ahead, anyway—and she doesn't mind a bit!

the end

WHY SHIRLEY'S MARRIAGE FAILED!

(Continued from page 26)

knew she was no golfer. She's never been much of any sort of an athlete. Some girls aren't. As a schoolgirl, Shirley accepted this lack of prowess philosophically. She had many other compensations. But when she married Jack Agar and discovered after three years that time and circumstance had made her a golf widow, she decided to do something about it.

Golf, she felt, would give her more hours with Jack, more common ground to share with him. She began to take lessons and to play. She trudged down the fairways even though she didn't like the game, even though it meant blisters and sore feet and weary muscles.

She tried, as part of her marriage, to make a success of the sport.

You see, she figured that if only she could make a go of the various parts which constituted the whole of her marriage, then it followed logically that the marriage would have to succeed. But despite all her efforts, despite all Jack's—despite the most sincere, heartfelt and determined combined effort, the most celebrated screen marriage of modern times was announced a failure on October 13, 1949—exactly four years, 23 days, 11 hours and seven minutes after it was established.

tried so hard . . .

Six months before her divorce announcement, Shirley got together with her lawyers, George Stahlman and Grant Cooper, in a series of conferences concerned with the state of her unhappiness with John Agar.

"She discussed the possibility of divorce," her lawyers said, "and we all decided that first, everything must be done to avoid it. If however, it became unavoidable, then the divorce was to be conducted as quickly, quietly and respectably as possible, and Shirley was to say nothing to anyone."

By October, Shirley became convinced that she and Jack would never be able to see eye-to-eye on the really basic, important points of marriage. It was a conclusion she reached sadly, because it implied that she had failed in a woman's major work in life—wifehood.

"I didn't want to break up my home and my marriage," she sobbed later. "I didn't want it to be this way. I start to cry every time I think about raising the baby without her father."

The basic truth in the Shirley Temple-Jack Agar marriage is that for more than 30 months before Shirley decided to call it quits, the marriage had not been happy.

During that time, these two sterling young people had been living a brave lie. In magazine layouts, in newspaper interviews, on the screen and on the radio they had played the perfect young couple, the blissful young-marrieds; and yet through it all, Shirley knew in her heart that this was a horrible mockery.

More than two years ago she went to David Selznick and said, "My marriage is going on the rocks. What shall I do?"

Selznick, who has both Shirley and Jack under contract, could help the bewildered little actress very little. "In a case like yours," he said paternally, "you must follow the dictates of your own heart and your own mind."

For almost two-and-a-half years, Shirley followed those dictates. She gave birth to her daughter, and Jack developed into a rising young star; but even these two milestones had no adhesive effect on the marriage, and gradually it began to rend apart at the seams.

By last October, Shirley was convinced that a thorough disintegration had set in, that whatever hope there had once been for re-building the marital structure had completely dissolved. After a conference with her parents and lawyers, she decided to file for divorce.

She and her little daughter, Linda Susan, went down to Palm Springs and there joined Shirley's parents. Despite the fact that the Desert Inn was then officially closed, the management saw to it that Shirley and her family occupied a cottage.

"For six days," Shirley says, "I tried to think out the best thing to do. I didn't want to break up my home and my marriage, but there was no other way."

Shirley came back to Los Angeles and spoke with her lawyers. "I'm going through with it," she told them.

She then phoned her husband—he was staying at his mother's house in Beverly Hills—and told him that she was filing for divorce.

Jack was stunned. He had no idea that for six months Shirley had been confering with her lawyers. "When Shirley came home from Palm Springs," he says, "and told me that she wanted a divorce, I was shocked. It was the first news I had had about her intentions. I'm sorry it happened. I agree with Shirley that the divorce must be conducted in a dignified manner. But I don't have an attorney."

A day later, however, Jack hired legal counsel, because one afternoon after Shirley told him her fateful decision, he was presented with a copy of the formal legal complaint that had been filed one hour previously in the clerk's office at the California Superior Court.

By this time, of course, the news that Shirley Temple had filed a divorce complaint was emblazoned in headlines across the front pages.

Shirley, despite her lawyers' warnings, had also called many of the local journalists to explain her action. She told them, "I don't want to hurt Jack. He's a nice boy but he's a little mixed up. . . . We have been trying to make this marriage work. We both tried hard. We really did. But it just didn't work."

In Shirley's complaint, which was a legal masterpiece of brevity, she charged that Jack had "treated her with extreme cruelty and inflicted grievous mental suffering." No particulars were mentioned. The complaint also stated that Jack and Shirley had no community property; that Shirley wanted no alimony, no support, only the custody of the baby; and that Jack could have rights of "reasonable visitation"—which means he can visit his daughter almost any time he wants.

Now, once this complaint hit the press, the news-hungry public realized that to all intents and purposes it was a whitewash that said nothing. And they demanded to know the true story behind the divorce. The Hollywood reporters were compelled therefore to give rational explanations.

Shirley had filed for divorce, newspaper reports then implied, because:

(1) Shirley was more than fond of Johnny Johnston, crooning husband of actress Kathryn Grayson.

(2) Shirley's husband was more than fond of a number of girls around town.

(3) Shirley and Jack had been involved in a violent in-law mess.

(4) Career rivalry came between Shirley and Jack.

All these stories are false. The true reason for the break-up is that Shirley and Jack were mis-mated from the very beginning. At 17, Shirley was too young to get married, and at 24, Jack was too young to marry an American institution.

mix-ups . . .

But first, let's get to the reasons ascribed to the divorce:

Johnny Johnston, a slim, curly-headed blond crooner from Kansas City, is the husband of Kathryn Grayson and the father of three children—one by Kathryn, and two by a previous wife. He married Kathryn in Carmel, California on August 21, 1947, and while she was pregnant, he began shooting a lot of golf. On the golf links, he met Jack Agar, the two began playing together, and this naturally led to a fairly close friendship.

It was a friendship, however, that Kathryn Grayson didn't particularly like. She felt that her husband was seeing too much of Mr. and Mrs. Agar at a time when she was at home awaiting a baby.

"I didn't feel very well," Kathryn was quoted as explaining, "and thought Shirley wasn't very kind to invite Johnny to go with them . . . when I was home all alone. Shirley had a baby and she should have known how I felt, and I told her so, too. And then there was one time when we had a spat, and Johnny took off and went to live at the Agar house."

To this, Shirley is reported to have replied, "Kathryn is pretty silly to take such an attitude. John did ask my husband if he could come to our house and stay a few days when he was having trouble with his wife. But he stayed in the chauffeur's quarters, and Jack was always in the house as long as he stayed."

According to Kathryn, the man mainly responsible for the rumors about her and Johnny Johnston and the Agars is Joe Kirkwood, Jr., another golfing crony of Jack Agar, and the actor who plays Joe Palooka in pictures. Kirkwood recently married Cathy Downs.

"A few weeks ago," Kathryn explained, "I heard that Joe was telling different columnists about trouble between me and Johnny. I was so angry I went to see him to talk about it. When I left his place I slipped and sprained my arm."

"I wish she'd sprained her neck," Kirkwood was reported as saying. "I was just trying to help everybody out and persuade Kathryn that she was wrong in thinking

"You see the movie, dear—I'm staying home tonight."

that Shirley was too interested in Johnny. That's what you always get for trying to help out. . . . All I want is to be left alone."

When Johnny Johnston, who'd gone to New York one week before Shirley Temple announced her divorce plans, heard about Joe Kirkwood's statement, he was quoted as saying, "There's a certain fellow in Hollywood who is trying to make trouble for me with my wife and when I get back out there I'm going to punch him in the nose."

Shirley's reaction to Joe's statement, was reported in these words: "Just find out about Joe Kirkwood, just find out all about him."

Kirkwood, prior to his marriage, was involved in a paternity suit in Boston.

Now, what does all this mean, these charges and counter-charges and innuendos and implications?

rumors are flying . . .

Actually, they mean nothing. The dialogue of recrimination is merely kid-stuff, verbal sparks set off by emotionally-immature youngsters. Shirley has not now nor has she ever entertained the slightest designs on Johnny Johnston. She has never been the cause of any of the tempestuous quarrels between him and Kathryn Grayson; and neither Johnny nor Kathryn has been responsible for her disagreements with Jack Agar. Shirley may have smiled and conversed with Johnny Johnston. In the course of two years and in the presence of her husband, she may have dined, danced, and sung with him. But as for supplanting Agar in her heart with Johnston—such eventuality seems far beyond the outposts of possibility. Kathryn and Johnny have settled their difficulties and are expecting another baby in April.

So much for the Johnny Johnston angle. Consider next the rumors that Shirley filed for divorce because her husband was spending too much of his spare time with other girls.

I've seen Jack Agar in a bar or two, maybe even tasting one drink too many, and so have dozens of other reporters, and I've also seen him talking to a girl or two who wasn't his wife. And, of course, the possibility exists that perhaps one of these girls, a non-professional, is genuinely in love with Jack. But that doesn't mean Agar has ever "cheated" on his wife.

Jack, today, is one of the most widely-admired actors in the screen colony. Girls fall for him the way coal shuttles into a cellar basement. But according to Shirley herself, disenchantment first reared its disillusioned head in her household more than two-and-a-half years ago—and back then, no one ever saw Jack Agar with any girl other than Shirley. So "the other woman" doesn't apply in this case.

Of course, now that he and Shirley have gone their differing ways, Jack will undoubtedly squire other girls around town; but this is not to say that any of these broke up his home or that his differences with Shirley centered about another woman who was less demanding, more subservient to his ego, more flattering to his vanity, more understanding to his aims, and more in tune with the tenor of his life.

No, Shirley didn't file her divorce complaint because she was jealous of another rival. Nor did she file it because in-law trouble had brought her and Jack to an impasse.

That in-law story is pure poppycock. Parents like Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, wise enough to rear Shirley in a normal, wholesome manner when she, as a child, was beset by all the temptations of the motion picture world, were surely prudent enough to stay out of her marriage.

It's true in a way that Shirley never left home after she became Mrs. Agar, for she and John moved into the guest cottage on the Temple property and in the past four years she's usually been within a hundred yards of her mother's beckoning. But stories to the effect that her folks sought to regulate the lives of the young couple are completely untrue.

As for the purported career trouble breaking up their marriage—in the sense of two picture careers in one household not mixing—that never applied to Shirley and Jack. There was never any career rivalry between these two. Who could possibly rival Shirley Temple's amazing career, anyway?

Jack was once asked how he felt about Shirley's continuing with her career. "I'm simply going along with her," he said flatly, "in anything she wants to do. She'll probably work as long as she gets pleasure from it. She can quit whenever she feels like it. I'm interested only in her happiness."

The failure of this marriage can never be attributed either to Shirley or to Jack. The responsibility for it belongs to them both.

PLEASE NOTE

. . . that the MODERN SCREEN FAN CLUB ASSOCIATION has been discontinued, due to limitations of editorial space. All club presidents will be notified by letter.

THE EDITORS

They were both sadly unprepared for marriage.

They married during the heat and haste and passion of war.

They never really knew each other.

They didn't realize that marriage is the toughest kind of human relationship in the whole pattern of human behavior.

A lot of movie fans made the mistake of believing when Jack and Shirley got married that this was the typical, ideal American marriage. What is typical about a bride who is worth $2,000,000 and a bridegroom who himself doesn't have to work for a living? No one back in those halcyon days ever asked that question.

Let us, however, just for the record and for the basic understanding of this marriage, take a look at Shirley Temple in 1945. This beautiful, apple-cheeked child, barely out of the Westlake School for Girls, had never gone around with boys very much. When Jack first met her she was 15. How Jack met Shirley is of course, old hat, and there's no point in re-hashing the story here, but the very vital point is that he first proposed to Shirley when she was 16.

Now, what sort of man wants a 16-year-old wife? Certainly not a mature, well-rounded man of the world. But certainly an immature, eager, infatuated soldier; and that's exactly what Jack Agar was back in those days of '44 and '45.

Moreover, he was a fatherless boy, quiet and well-bred, not too well-educated, without trade or occupation but heir to a considerable sum left by his father—who had been head of a Chicago meat-packing house, the Agar Packing and Provision Company.

Two months before Shirley was graduated from the Westlake School for Girls, she and Jack became engaged. Though prior to their engagement, he and Shirley had been together less than 20 times, both were sure they knew the other thoroughly. All young lovers feel that way, and doubtless they always will; but after a year or two of marriage, they discover moods and behavior patterns in their mates that they never thought existed.

Jack had never intended to become a motion-picture star. His plans called for him upon discharge to go to Cornell University and study business administration and learn the meat-packing business. But David Selznick had looked him over very carefully at the wedding, and he had decided that Jack might be developed into a young star after his discharge from the service.

For 18 months following his screen test, Jack Agar worked hard, learning how to walk, talk and act on the screen.

in the beginning . . .

Those 18 months, according to Shirley, were the best years of their married life. They moved into the little cottage on the Temple estate. They played cards and records at night. They ran all of Shirley's old pictures, only one of which Jack had ever seen before. The marriage was good, golden and glorious.

And then, Jack got his first job. John Ford signed him for a role in Fort Apache. Later, Shirley was signed for the same picture. During the shooting of this film, Jack learned what really tough work acting is.

When Fort Apache was released, Jack was billed on many theater marquees as "Shirley Temple's Husband."

More than anything, this kindled a fire in him to make good on his own. Not—let me repeat—that there was any career rivalry between him and Shirley. He simply wanted to be accepted by the public on his own merits.

In the past two years, he has been. Fort Apache was followed by Adventure in Baltimore, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, Iwo Jima, and I Married a Communist. In all these, Jack has performed adequately and has captured the loyalty and interest of movie-goers everywhere.

Why is Jack Agar being divorced by Shirley Temple?

Perhaps he has not been as attentive to Shirley as he was when they were first married. Perhaps he has played too much golf in his spare time and made Shirley a golf widow.

Perhaps he has fallen out of love with Shirley and she with him.

Perhaps, despite his growing success, he is still beset with doubts about his acting ability and needs a wife who, rather than sometimes offering constructive criticism, will constantly build and maintain his ego.

Perhaps he needs a wife he can dominate, a wife who has not been accustomed to every luxury that money can buy and who will look up to him as her superior, as the family bread-winner.

Perhaps all this is why he and Shirley Temple no longer need each other.

As a matter of fact, it is. THE END

VALIANT LADY

(Continued from page 22)

That afternoon, June sat with a bright smile on her face while Gordon MacRae sang a sweet little song. Later, for her daily contribution as The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady, June danced a gay Irish jig which you are sure to like when you see it on the screen. When you do, remember that June Haver is an actress—a very great actress.

That night, Director Butler gathered the cast together and told them that the book—or dialogue—portion of the film had been completed. Next week the entire company would start rehearsals for the big winter production number which ends the film. June only half heard the call as she rushed to St. John's.

It was a silent group that spent the weekend in the tiny family waiting room just three doors away from John's room on the third floor at the hospital. June, John's mother and father, and his brother and sister. Down the hall, John's doctor worked to curb the hemorrhaging. It didn't stop, and an urgent call was sent out for positive-O blood. The Studio Club at 20th Century-Fox responded with 40 pints.

The transfusions seemed to be the answer, and on Sunday night, June went home to rest. She had hardly reached her front door when the hospital called her back with the news that John had taken a turn for the worse. She spent the night in the hospital chapel, praying.

The next morning at nine, June called dance director LeRoy Prinz and apologized for not coming in that day.

"I want to get the picture finished as badly as anyone," she said brokenly. "But I'd never forgive myself if . . . I weren't here."

When the man you love is close to death, it's hard to think that anything else matters. June stayed at the hospital through Wednesday, as Dr. Duzik's condition grew steadily worse from the added complications of uremic poisoning. On Thursday morning, however, June came in for rehearsal at eight. Everyone on the set sensed June's heartache, and tried to make it easier by curbing their own concern and curiosity.

"There's no change," June told them, as she methodically set about learning her dance routine.

On Friday, October 7th, the company began shooting the big finale number, a winter scene resplendent with singing and dancing. By noon they had finished with a number of close-ups, and June left the lot to have lunch at the Smokehouse with several members of the cast. She was just finishing a salad when a messenger from the studio rushed in and told her that the hospital was trying to reach her. June put through the call from the restaurant and got John's brother at the hospital.

"John is not expected to live beyond six o'clock this afternoon," he said. "You'd better get here if you possibly can."

silent prayer . . .

June moaned—and ran back to the studio. With Shirley Clark, her stand-in and close friend, she rode to the hospital in the car which the studio had waiting outside the set for her use. All the way cross-town to Santa Monica, the two girls sat in the back seat of the big black limousine, and prayed silently.

Somehow, John passed through that night's crisis. The next afternoon, he came out of coma and asked the doctor the score of the Ohio State-USC game. He smiled happily when he learned that his alma mater had held the Buckeyes to a tie. By Sunday night, his condition had improved—and June felt she could go back to the studio next morning and finish the finale.

June was in the make-up department at Warner Brothers at 6:30 the next morning. After a slow start, the entire cast worked all day, and at 10:30 p.m., the last bit of gaiety was recorded on film. Each time June had called the hospital, Dr. Duzik's condition was the same. She told everyone: "No news is good news to me." Before she went home, a very weary June said to LeRoy Prinz, "I'm so glad we got it finished. Thank you and everyone again for being so very wonderful to me."

the greatest girl . . .

That night, Director Prinz, who has seen a lot of show business in his time, went home with an enlarged respect for the little blonde girl whose heart and courage were as big as she.

The assistant director, Eddie "Mecca" Graham, who has known June since they worked together on Look for the Silver Lining, said, in effect, what was on everyone's mind when the production broke up that night: "June is the greatest girl I've ever met in motion pictures. She's so young to have found the strength within herself to keep going through this experience. All of us are pulling hard for June and her Doctor John."

When June came back to Warners' to make The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady, everyone was delighted to see her. June seemed brighter and friendlier than ever; this was going to be a good picture to work on. On the first day, she buzzed around the set, saying hello to her old friends. To a few of them, she confided the reason for her special happiness . . . after she finished this picture, she hoped to be married. Her fiancé was entering the hospital for a routine operation, and in just a few months, she said, they might be honeymooning in the Grand Teton country in Wyoming. June talked about Wyoming as if she had discovered it—as, in a way, she had when she visited John's folks last summer at their ranch near Jackson Hole.

And when John first went into the hospital, June wasn't at all worried. "Doesn't he have the finest surgeon in town? You couldn't find a better man than Dr. Stevens," she told her friends. Every evening, after his operation, June would stop by to see John at the hospital and tell him all the entertaining things that had happened at the studio during the day.

That was before the hemorrhaging started. Before it happened, there wasn't a person on the set who hadn't been aware of June's happiness, and the reasons for it. Now, that knowledge helped them to understand just a little what her courage really meant. . . .

In the next two weeks after that last grueling Monday on the sound stage at Warner Brothers, June spent most of every day at the hospital with John. A strong, athletic man with an intense will to live, he was kept alive by the skill of his doctors through recurring crises.

But at 6:30 the morning of Sunday, October 30, with June at his bedside, holding his hand, death came to John Duzik. . . .

In three short years, Hollywood has seen June grow from a pretty but uncertain girl to an intelligent, mature woman, who has squarely faced her problems. And Hollywood is praying that, out of her enduring faith and courage, June Haver will find the strength to surmount her great tragedy. THE END salute to the daytime dress department

connie bartel, fashion editor

■ We want to devote this entire column to a fabulous spot for fashion finds: the daytime dress department of your favorite department store.

We think it's practically unequalled for terrific fashions at unbelievably low prices. We would like to make certain that you know about it, because we've found that while lots of girls practically live in the DDD, others have always passed it by, believing that it features nothing but housedresses! And what a mistake that is!

First of all, the Daytime Dress Department has a very high level of style sense. The minute shawl collars, or big pockets, or low necklines turn up in expensive clothes—bang, the DDD has them ready for you, with tiny price tags.

But it's one thing to offer style at low prices, and another to offer style-plus-quality. And that's where the DDD really shines. The fabrics are downright good—sometimes the identical fabrics used in much more expensive clothes. The workmanship is excellent—buttons sewn on properly, hems deep and generous, seams nicely finished. The cut is good; the buttons, zippers, hooks are right. And all this, for prices usually under $10.

It's wonderful—and it's a little amazing. The only thing that makes DDD fabulous fashions possible, of course, is mass production. You'll find that most of the fashions featured carry labels you recognize—the trademarks of manufacturers so well established and so big that they can afford to offer tremendous value for very little.

As you can tell, we're mad for the Daytime Dress Department. On pages 59 through 64, you'll see why.

Audrey Totter wears classic with T-square pockets

■ Audrey Totter, currently in MGM's Tension, wears the sort of smooth classic that's a must in every girl's wardrobe. The fly front conceals a long zipper for good fit; the stitched t-square pockets have pearl buttons for emphasis.

It's made of fine Sanforized vat-dyed broadcloth by Ameritex, in blue angel, sloe gin rose, creme de cocoa, mint green. Also pastel blue, pink, aqua. Sizes 12-20. Also 16½-24½. By Stefi—$5.95.

In the Daytime Dress Department of Bloomingdale's, New York. Other stores, page 65.

Jewelry by Coro.

modern screen fashions

the best buys
are likely to be in the daytime dress department

7.95

Above: The bliss of silky dark cotton, ready and right anywhere, anytime. Sweetheart of a dress with tiny heart buttons, a heart dangling from a bright belt. Dan River broadcloth, in burnt orange, grey, grape or lime. Sizes 12-18. By Billy Marrow. Where to buy, page 65.

8.95

Below: Dress with an air of bravado. Bright plaid buttoned to the hem with smoky pearl buttons—styled in a high pitch with wing collar, jut pockets. Galey and Lord gingham, in rust, purple or green. Sizes 12-20. By Hope Reed. Where to buy, page 65.

8.95

Opposite: Jewel of a dress for the girl 5′ 5″ and under . . . superbly cut in superb combed chambray. Handsomely buttoned neckline, to wear open or not; dashing lapels; enormous triangle pockets. Aqua, copen, brown. Sizes 10-20. A Georgianna Petite. Where to buy, page 65.

a modern screen fashion

the best buys
are likely to be in
*the daytime dress
department

5.95

Right: Fashion is mad for puckered fabrics—and here's dark glamour in combed (that means it's good) cotton matelasse. When you're through gasping at the price—look again at the rolled collar, the zipper to the waist, the full skirt and the shoestring ties. When and where couldn't you wear it? Navy blue, green, brown. Sizes 12-18. Styled by Ted Cohen
Where to buy, page 65.

8.95

Opposite: The dress with the side-drape fin, sophistication plus. The top is a pearl-buttoned classic, very smart, very simple. The skirt—ah! The skirt wraps and hooks to the left, ends in a wordly pleated fin on one hip! Divine colors: tangerine, maize, kelly, grey, powder, aqua, cocoa, Beford blue, pink, navy. In Pima cotton. Sizes 10-20 and 14½-24½. By Kay Windsor. Where to buy, page 65. Coro Jewelry

the best buys are likely to be in the daytime dress department

12.95

Embroidered beauty—especially proportioned for the lucky girl with the 5′ 4″-or-under figure. Romantic eyelet embroidery outlines the V-neck; tiny embroidered daisies are scattered over all. In Crown-Tested Soap 'n' Water linen-like rayon—washable, of course. Pink, blue, aqua, daffodil, beige. Sizes 10 S to 20 S. By Brief Measure. Where to buy, page 65.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

FASHIONS pages 59-64 are in the DAYTIME DRESS DEPARTMENT of these stores:

T-square pocket classic dress worn by Audrey Totter (page 59)
Baltimore, Md.—The Gaxton Co., 214 N Charles St., Main Floor
Boston, Mass.—R. H. White Co.
Chicago, Ill.—Mandel Brothers, State & Madison Sts., Third Floor
Miami, Fla.—Byron's, Flagler St., Main Floor
New York, N.Y.—Macy's, Fourth Floor
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co., 7th & F Sts., NW

Silky dark cotton dress (page 60)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Second Floor
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co., 7th & F Sts., NW

Bright plaid cotton dress (page 60)
Boston, Mass.—Filene's, Sixth Floor
Houston, Texas—Levy's, Third Floor
Indianapolis, Ind.—Wm. H. Block Co., Illinois & Market Sts., Fourth Floor
Minneapolis, Minn.—The Dayton Co., 7th St., & Nicollet Ave., Fourth Floor
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Second Floor
Portland, Ore.—Lipman, Wolfe & Co., 521 SW 5th Ave.

Dress with big triangle pockets (page 61)
Boston, Mass.—Filene's, Sixth Floor
Chicago, Ill.—Carson, Pirie Scott & Co., State, Madison & Monroe Sts., Second Floor
Houston, Texas—Foley's, Third Floor
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Second Floor
Philadelphia, Pa.—Strawbridge & Clothier, Market & 8th Sts., Third Floor

Sophisticated side-drape dress (page 62)
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh, Washington & Avon Sts., Third Floor
Brooklyn, N.Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St., Second Floor
Cincinnati, Ohio—H. & S. Pogue, 4th & Race Sts., Third Floor
New Orleans, La.—D. H. Holmes Co., Ltd., 819 Canal St., Second Floor
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Second Floor
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

Dark glamour puckered dress (page 63)
New York, N. Y.—Gimbels, 33rd St. & Avenue of Americas, Third Floor
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co., 7th & F Sts., NW

Embroidered beauty for 5'4" or under (page 64)
Boston, Mass.—E. T. Slattery Co., 154 Tremont St., Second Floor
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Second Floor
San Antonio, Texas—Frost Brothers, 217 E. Houston St., Fourth Floor
Springfield, Mass.—Albert Steiger Co., Main & Hillman Sts.
Topeka, Kans.—Crosby Bros.
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co.

HOW TO ORDER MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(1) Buy in person from stores listed.
(2) Order by mail from stores listed.
(3) Write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.—for store in your vicinity.

LITTLE LULU

Just one at a time - like Kleenex*!

Little Lulu says: WHY FIGHT WITH A PACKAGE? WITH KLEENEX TISSUES YOU CAN PULL JUST ONE AT A TIME, NOT A HANDFUL! ONLY KLEENEX HAS THE "POP-UP" BOX THAT ENDS WASTE, SAVES MONEY!

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. ★T.M.REG.U.S.PAT.OFF.

KORDAY

styles a fresh approach to your midwinter wardrobe in a soft-spoken blouse and skirt . . . interprets wonderful all-wool jersey in spring's life-loving colors . . . Panama sky blue, sulphur yellow and angel pink. Sizes 10 to 18.

The blouse: To be worn with a deep, daring neckline, or demurely buttoned at the throat. $8

The skirt: Whirl-pleated to move with grace through your busiest days. $11

For store nearest you, write KORDAY sportswear, inc. • 991 Sixth Avenue, New York 18, N. Y.

MISTAKES THEY NEVER CONFESS

(Continued from page 32)

and blindly stupid? Maybe it's a gift. Anyway, it's been going on for years in Movieville, and I suppose it always will.

If stars would only stop and think—and some of them do—so many fatal foolish missteps could be so easily avoided in both their professional and private lives. Betty Hutton came dangerously close not long ago to hurting the very people she loves most in this world—her children and her devoted husband, Ted Briskin. In the nick of time she saw what she was about to do and recoiled. A few steps along her mistaken path, though, and Betty might have been sorry the rest of her life.

Betty's made mistakes before—career mistakes, that is. She deserted her absolutely inimitable screen self to do Dream Girl, learned from the licking she took and ran right back to the high-voltage cut-ups she does best.

Betty was frightened when they teamed her with Fred Astaire in Let's Dance. She told me in terror, "I don't know how I'll ever be able to dance with Fred Astaire. He'll make me look awkward and clumsy and silly. I can't keep up with him." But she did—as I knew she would—and Fred praised her to the skies. The relief from that fear turned into a giddy wave of self-congratulation that made Betty's head spin dizzily. She lost her balance momentarily and forgot her family in the all-absorbing thrills and demands of her exciting job.

little reminder . . .

Her decision to split up with Ted was hasty, unfair, and unbecoming to Betty's good sense. Betty found the minute the news was out that the idea was very unpopular with her friends in Hollywood. They all love and respect Ted, a swell, attractive guy, successful in his own business and a model husband—which is a hard article to find in this town.

I was as distressed as anyone, and I remembered something Betty Hutton had told me one afternoon when I dropped in. Little Rebecca Welles, Rita's baby by Orson Welles, had just left. Her nurse had brought her over from across the street to play with Betty's kids. Finally the nurse said, "Come on, it's time to go home now, Rebecca." Whereupon Rebecca burst into anguished tears, crying, "I don't want to go home! I don't want to go home!" She ran to Ted, threw her arms around his neck and sobbed, "I wish you were my daddy! I wish I lived in a house like this!" With her mama away whizzing around the world with Aly Khan and Rebecca's irresponsible dad chasing his career in Italy, no wonder little Rebecca longed for the warmth and affection she found at Betty and Ted's.

That was the story Betty told me. So at that crucial juncture of her own home life, I reminded her of it and I said, "How would you like to have your babies as lonely, mixed up and pitiful as Rebecca?"

"Oh, my Lord," Betty answered, "I can't do it. I can't do it."

I have no idea whether my reminder had anything to do with Betty's reconciliation. I like to think so. In any event, Betty Hutton came quickly to her senses and saved her home, which she must know means the world not only to her, but to some other people who are her flesh and blood—and her responsibility.

Stars, who play so much fiction in their careers, can cherish delusions in their private lives to such an extent that sometimes you wonder if they refuse to see reality. For some reason, Joan Crawford told herself for months that Greg Bautzer was going to marry her. Greg told me he was considering no such thing. Yet, until they finally parted a few weeks ago, Joan continued to stir up her own unhappiness with sighs for that handsome, cagey playboy.

And while I'm on the subject of Cupid's errors, there are a couple of romances usually placed in that category which I believe just don't belong there. I mean Ann Sheridan's long-distance romance with Steve Hannagan, now cooled, and Lana Turner's widely-lampooned marriage to Bob Topping. Both have been taken for rides time and again. But both couples knew what they wanted, and they got it, make no mistake. They made no mistake.

Ann and Steve were two people who saw eye-to-eye on all things—love, fun and the dangers of matrimony for two people like themselves. For five years they kept up a cross-country romance, built strictly for good times and companionship, and what both Ann and Steve always said about marriage was, "we never will." Yet Steve supplied the steady man in Ann's life that she needed. He backed her up in her Hollywood battles, gave her seasoned advice, got her free from Warners' to make Good Sam and get going in the career that had reached a belligerent stalemate.

They liked their easygoing, episodic relationship, that pair, with good times in New York and Hollywood, where one or the other was always flying. She was his girl; he her guy—but no more than that. That's the way both wanted it. As Annie once told me bluntly, "Steve and I will never be pushed into matrimony to make anybody a headline."

They had several years of happiness and now it's a case of "Thanks for the Memories"—and the line that goes, "no tears, no fuss, hurray for us." When Annie went to make I Was a Male War Bride 6,000 miles away from Steve, their lives angled off in different directions, and the spark cooled. The daily letters they started writing dwindled . . . and that was that.

So I can't call that romance a mistake. I think for Annie and Steve it made very good sense. And about Lana Turner and Bob Topping, I feel exactly the same way.

Lana is a girl born to follow her heart—to make mistakes, to act impulsively and honestly, following the endearing human traits that make her Lana Turner, a girl who should act that way, a girl who draws sympathy and love from her public as honey draws bees. While columnists were taking her apart and bringing tears to Lana's eyes, while critics were shouting "bad taste," Lana herself was swamped with thousands of sincere wishes for happiness from the people who count—her fans.

Yep, the sophisticates booed Lana raucously for marrying "playboy" Bob Topping. They pointed to his brief, broken marriages, and to Lana's. It wouldn't last six months, they said. Another mistake, another heartbreak—and the end of Lana's career.

So? Well, I wish you could see Lana Turner today as I see her. She's glowing and happy and more beautiful than ever. She's cemented to a family and a husband who loves her, for the anchor she needed. She's had a taste of real living—away from Hollywood frowns and studio trouble. She's had some of the fun she long ago deserved; she's developed a new, more confident personality. With Bob she's moved into a beautiful new Beverly Hills home. Bob wants her to keep on with her career, although there isn't the pressure of money anymore.

And about that career—who is tumbling all over itself, rolling out the red carpet, lining up stories to star her with its greatest stars, including Clark Gable? MGM, which only a few months ago was reading the riot act to Lana and making her do pictures she didn't want to do, disciplining her, making her tremble. It has a new respect for Lana, now—and so has the world.

A mistake? Finding love, happiness, security, contentment? I hope Lana makes more mistakes of that kind!

error, error, everywhere . . .

But I can point out plenty of Hollywood-star stumbles at the marriage altar and in the divorce courts. Deanna Durbin married an older man who promptly made Deanna grow up too fast, turn sexy on the screen, and kill a budding adult career.

Greer Garson helped her "first lady" prestige very little by marrying young Richard Ney, who'd played her son in Mrs. Miniver, and then treating him like a little boy around the house. Marrying Broadway producer Mike Todd and letting him take her away from Hollywood did Joan Blondell no good. I'm sure Virginia Field must be gnashing her pretty teeth for ever letting Paul Douglas get away from her too soon.

Virginia and Paul were married when Paul got his chance to show his terrific talent in Garson Kanin's Broadway hit, Born Yesterday. Up till then, Paul had been making only a comparatively modest living in radio. But when he was signed for the play, Hollywood studio scouts immediately swarmed him with movie offers. Paul turned them down. Hollywood had handed him the cold shoulder before; this time he thought he knew how to play his cards. But Virginia disagreed violently. "Are you crazy?" she asked him. "This is your big Hollywood chance."

"Uh, uh," said Paul, "that comes later." He was looking long-term this time. He knew he could come out to Hollywood the way he wanted, later on—with a Broadway hit under his belt. Virginia, I suspect, was too impatient. She couldn't wait for Paul's success. Anyway, she left him. Then Paul, in his own good time, came to Hollywood with a big-money contract and great expectations, well realized in A Letter to Three Wives.

He's still playing it long-term. Not long ago he turned down $20,000 a week—$10,000 at New York's Paramount Theater

"I came here last night with Bill, so I thought I'd come tonight and see what the picture was like."

Are you in the know?

What to do if Mom says you're too young for dating?

☐ Try crowd psychology ☐ Play Hannah the Hermit ☐ Stick to hen parties

Chances are, it's solo dates the family vetoes . . . they're not against your having friends. Why not get your schoolmates to rally at your homestead, now and then? Show Mom you can cope with a mixed crowd. Dating first on the "gang" plan is good practice for solos later. And whatever the doings, whatever the day, remember—those flat pressed ends of Kotex prevent revealing outlines. Even when you're togged for a gala evening, you know you can brave the limelight with confidence . . . (and Kotex!).

Should you break a movie date with Bill—

☐ For a Big Man On Campus
☐ If you're asked to a formal fray
☐ To meet a blind find

You're booked for Saturday night at the cinema. Then the real Bikini comes along. Should you call Bill and beg off? Check no on all three counts above! Breaking dates is a rating-buster. And "calendar" time, too, is no excuse . . . for new Kotex is made to stay soft while you wear it; gives softness that holds its shape. And your new Kotex Wonderform Belt won't twist, won't curl, won't cut! Made with DuPont Nylon elastic: feather weight, fast drying!

It's a mighty sharp student who—

☐ Snags the prof
☐ Has the Tweedy Look
☐ Majors in poetry

Competition's keen when the prof's cute. True, you may not be a ball of fire at scanning. But your tweeds'll tell him you're on your toes, style-wise. For this year, tweed's terrific . . . new, inexpensive, with a "high fashion" look. In coats, suits or dresses, it's for you! And just for you on problem days, there's a Kotex absorbency you'll find exactly right. How to tell? By trying all 3: Regular, Junior, Super. Each has a special safety center—pledging extra protection!

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

What Has A Free Country Got To Do With A New Dress?

THE BIG DANCE is only a few weeks away. How to wangle that dream dress you sigh for? Dad wouldn't understand that a girl's got to blossom out in something "special." So? You decide to earn it.

And right here's a thought that may never have occurred to you. Except for getting the family's permission, you don't have to ask anyone else. Certainly not Uncle Sam.

Now . . . which job? Baby sitting? Clerking part time at the corner drug, or at your town's department store? Whichever job you choose, you find you can snag your heart's desire in time for the shindig!

It Only Happens Here

But—if you lived overseas, you'd learn things just don't happen that way. Because in one country across the Atlantic, it would take twice as long to earn the price of that dress . . . while in others it would take up to 10 times as long.

Only one example of how much it can mean to you to live in this free country. Whether it's a matter of earning some little special luxury—or your daily bread—you know you have a free choice. A chance to earn more in less time than any other people on earth. And that's how it can always be, as long as you do your part to keep our American way of living the very best way.

Free Booklet For You

Learn why Americans live better . . . how machines make jobs . . . why freedom and security go together! Right now, send coupon below for the fascinating free booklet, "The Miracle of America."

(Offer expires May 31st, 1950)

Georgia Hughes,
919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 11, Illinois.

Please send me, without charge, a copy of the booklet: "The Miracle of America."

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

and another $10,000 at the Copacabana—and chose instead to go to Berlin to make Two Corridors East. Paul knows the terrific hike that this Air Lift epic will give his Hollywood career—and that comes first with him. Maybe Virginia Field could be sharing that fame and success of Paul's, if she hadn't been so hurry-up about it. But Marion Hutton's got him now.

Of course, Hollywood's marriage mistakes are a penny a sack—everywhere you look. I think a lot of unions which survive are headed for trouble when the husbands start telling their star wives how to handle themselves. That didn't work for Deanna Durbin, or Gene Tierney, or Ingrid Bergman, and it won't work for Jeanne Crain to listen to Paul Brinkman, too much, about her screen life. Kibitzing should be left to the experts—and by the way, some of the biggest professional mistakes stars have made came when they stopped bending an ear toward the Svengalis who made them.

Dick Haymes' troubles stem from just such a pilot-dropping. Dick made a Hollywood splash principally because of the help and brains of his agent, Bill Burton. Bill worked for Dick night and day, made him movie box-office, a radio Hooper hot-shot, a juke-box front-runner. Well, Dick got too big to take Bill's advice and Bill's no longer representing him. Dick needed that guiding hand. Without it, his career has plummeted. Bill himself is only sad, not bitter, about Dick's actions. "After all," he told me philosophically, "you can't take care of a star unless he has some judgment of his own. All I can say is I'm sorry about the whole thing."

Practically every star in Hollywood has career mistakes to be ruefully remembered—even Clark Gable, who still gags today when you mention his disastrous Parnell, and should at mention of Adventure, too. Jeanette MacDonald made a big error in refusing ever to sing with Nelson Eddy on the radio. They were a hugely popular, perfectly-matched duo that could have become an American institution except for singing jealousy, which destroyed them. I still get letters from all over asking when they're going to get together again. Jimmy Stewart let Frank Capra almost destroy him with the "cutes" in Magic Town.

Why should America's greatest war hero, Audie Murphy, let producer Paul Short present him as a criminal and a killer? He began as Bad Boy and now, I understand, they want him to play Billy the Kid. If you can make a hero out of Billy the Kid, I give up! Sometimes the ways stars let themselves be mishandled is incredible.

More so than at playing ridiculous roles, stars should shudder to remember the times they've snubbed and insulted the public which makes them—and the press which obligingly ballyhoos them day in and out. Margaret Sullavan was and is a great actress who didn't last in Hollywood half as long as she should because she just couldn't be civil to her curious admirers. Maggie's just coming back to Hollywood after six years' absence for a second try and I hope she's mellowed enough to help instead of hinder herself.

The smarter stars don't bite the hands that feed their egos—and when they do they usually come to their senses fast. When Bette Davis was at the crest of her popularity she went on location in Arizona. The picture limped along with little or no publicity, so Warners sent a special exploitation man there in a hurry to beat the ballyhoo drums. He sized up the situation, went into deep thought, and then told Bette, "We'll toss you into a cactus bed—that'll hit the papers."

"Nothing doing!" flared Bette.

"Not real cactus, of course—it won't hurt," explained the p.a. But Bette still raged. "I'm no clown!"

He shrugged. "I couldn't care less whether you do or don't," he told her, "I'm just doing my job. But it'll get your picture in the papers." Bette snorted, "Ridiculous." But finally she let them toss her in anyway, and the picture that enraged her was plastered all over the land. She still wouldn't speak to the press agent who'd pincushioned her ingloriously with prop cactus spines. She stayed furious for—oh—maybe three months. By this time, the press again was being very silent about Bette Davis.

One day she buttonholed the exploitation man at Warners, gave him a load of her big blue eyes. "Don't you think it's about time you found another bed of cactus or something for me?" asked Bette sweetly.

Ah, well, to err is human. And stars are human, believe me—very. Only when they commit errors, they have, unlike ordinary mortals, a press agent—or a squad of 'em—standing by to make a misstep look like a strut to glory.

But it might just prove something or other that the erring stars who've admitted their boners have been coming off pretty well lately. Bob Walker and Bob Mitchum both were in pretty hot water but came out unscaled because they admitted their follies, faced up to facts, won sympathy instead of suspicion—suspicion that they were covering up or being covered up by some nimble press agent, lawyer, studio, or what have you.

Gregory Peck has made mighty few mistakes since he took over one of Hollywood's top star spots. But those he has made he's come right out with, like the Honest Abe he is. So they haven't bothered him a bit. His first picture was awful. Greg admitted it. "I'm not ready yet for Hollywood," he said. "I'm going back to the stage and learn some more about acting." He had his bags all packed, when Darryl Zanuck caught him, before Greg could catch his train, for Keys to the Kingdom. But that didn't steer Peck away from learning. He's still at it as I write. His La Jolla summer theater is just winding up, and the ambitious year-round legitimate theater he's sparkplugging for Beverly Hills is about to get started. Greg's never stopped improving his art. He told me, not long ago, he never will. "I don't know anything yet," he said. But he knows enough to keep from kidding himself—or his public.

away in a huff . . .

Not too long ago Greg made a slight mistake in his private life. He had an unimportant tiff with his wife, Greta, and roared away in his car to cool off without telling her where he was going. Then Greta had the bad luck to have a columnist call her the next day and ask where Greg was. "I don't know," she said simply, "He left and didn't say where." As a matter of fact, he'd driven to Del Mar, stayed overnight, then had flown to Mexico with a friend for a few days' fishing. So the Pecks had to fend off a flock of divorce rumors and all sorts of things which their happy home didn't deserve. Greg came back, kissed his wife, and they went on as if nothing had happened—even while all the calamity crows were cackling. But Peck's complete candor soon killed all that gossip.

Ginger Rogers is another dead-level lady who looks life straight in the eye. Yet, being a stubborn Irisher whose real name is McMath, she'll seldom admit she's wrong. And Ginger has been very wrong. But I want to pat her before I spank.

Ginger faced trouble with her marriage to Jack Briggs at an awkward time. For one thing, the very week the bad news broke—that Jack and Ginger were about to split—their picture showed up on the cover of a national magazine with Ginger giving Jack a loving kiss. It made everyone, including the Briggses, look pretty silly. What the public didn't know, of course, was that the shot had been taken one whole year before.

Ginger's career had just got into high gear again, after a dangerous dip. This was no time for unpleasant publicity, with The Barkleys of Broadway making her an American idol for a second time.

Ginger knew she'd get the blame for the bust-up, with whispers of "swelled head . . . too much success . . . no time for a husband now," and so forth. That didn't influence her actions for a second. Ginger has never cared a rap for what people said. First she pleaded with the reporters to give her a break so she and Jack could work out their trouble. They couldn't, so she came out with the separation news.

I went out to see Ginger before I left for Europe last summer. Sometimes I'm old Miss Fix-it and I did like that pair. I thought Ginger was making a mistake because a happy marriage is a hard thing for a Hollywood star to find and hers had looked so happy. She convinced me it wasn't, and wouldn't be, and told me why.

"No, no, Griswold! You tear the ticket in half!"

Still, Ginger can muff the duke. She did with her own career, but to this day she'll never confess it. Briefly, she insisted on running her show too much, forgot she was the All-American girl and tried to play grand ladies. She made some pretty poor pictures and was very close to closing out a classic Hollywood career. Luckily she snapped back into the old Ginger Rogers in the nick of time. But to this day that stubborn, tawny-topped harp has the nerve to tell me to my face about miscast things like The Magnificent Doll, "I don't care what people say—I liked it."

Many of the antics I observe on all sides of me today I can theme-song with the hop-scotch jingle we used to chant as kids, "a river and a lake—and a big mistake."

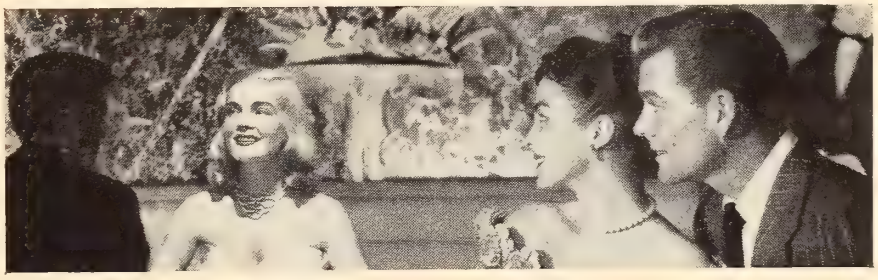
horses, horses . . .

I think Olivia de Havilland and Joan Fontaine have long been wrong in letting career rivalry set up any kind of a silly feud in their personal lives, when they could mean so much more to each other as sisters without it. I think it's a mistake for a wonderful gal like Betty Grable to go in so earnestly for horses and horse races. I do hope Betty won't let it interfere with business. While it's scarcely an obsession with her, she has had written into her contract that production plans or no, she has a complete vacation when the ponies run at Del Mar each year.

And I think—surprise!—that what looks like the greatest good fortune ever to befall a Hollywood star might well wind up a blunder for "Princess" Rita, certainly as far as her happiness goes. There have been mistakes from the beginning of that glittering modern Scheherazade legend which don't spell happiness-ever-after to me. Rita was a queen in Hollywood before she fell for the Aly ballyhoo—despite the obvious differences in their backgrounds and interests. Now she's a very doubtful princess. Only the important months ahead will tell how great a mistake she's made.

Without being the seventh daughter of a seventh son, I think I can predict pretty certainly that bulls and boners and foolish fluffs—private and professional—will continue to muddle up the Hollywood heavens where the stars hang by the gossamer threads of their own frantic weavings. And I think I can safely say something else without being a seer: They'll darned seldom confess them.

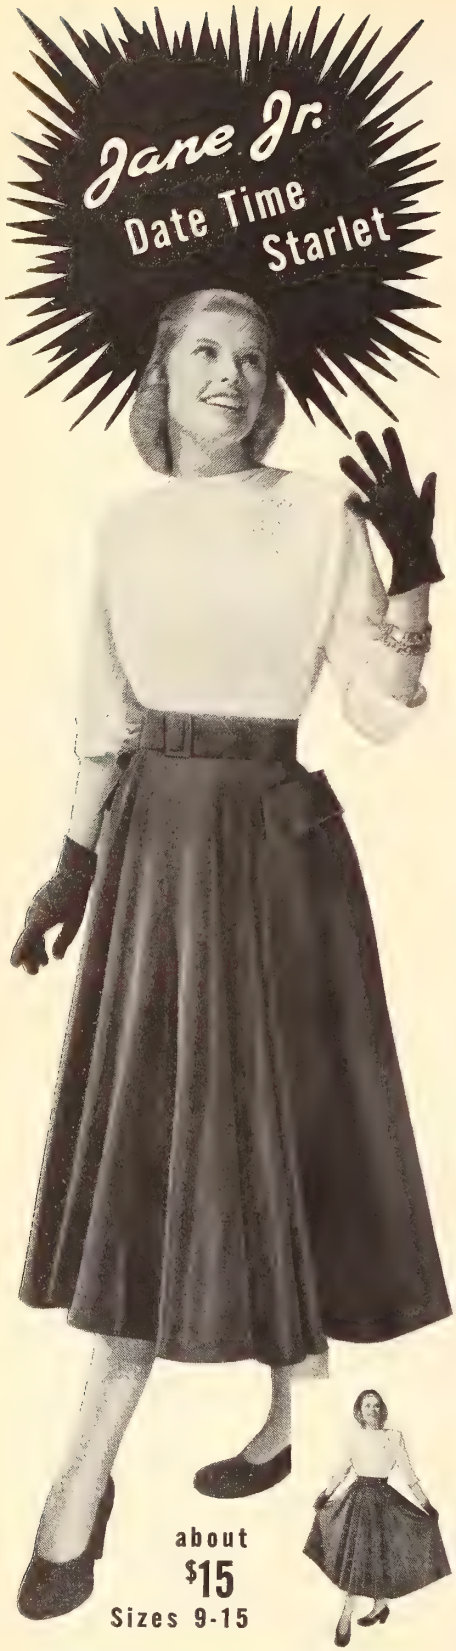
In fact, about the only case I can remember of such shocking humility concerns an actress who could have been one of the greatest stars Hollywood ever had—if she hadn't taken an instant deep and determined dislike to the movies and all their works.



She made a picture years ago, and after one look at herself decided she'd committed something like murder. She tried to buy it back so her disgrace would never be seen by the public. For months she wouldn't speak to the people who'd talked her into her fiasco.

Well, it won an Academy Award and it's still pointed to as a milestone in Hollywood's artistic progress The star sensibly concluded at last that everyone couldn't be wrong except herself. She swallowed her pride one night in public and her apology has become a Hollywood salute ever since. Helen Hayes came humbly up to the late Edgar Selwyn, who produced The Sin of Madelon Claudet, wearing an honestly sheepish smile.

Don't look now...



You're at the Mocambo. Over at the next table is Lizabeth Scott. It's not polite to stare—but what do you do? You look up from your crepe suzette, steal a glance. Think she doesn't know it? Of course she does! She's a star . . . she expects it! That's why she wears Woodbury Powder (Fiesta for Lizabeth) on her radiant features . . . and carries it in her compact.

there's Lizabeth Scott...

Lizabeth is one of the Hollywood stars who chose Woodbury Powder, 6 to 1, in response to a recent survey.* Something wonderful in Woodbury Powder — a new ingredient — gives your skin a smooth-as-satin look. The delicate fragrance clings as long as the powder. 7 heavenly shades glorify every skin type — no obvious "powdered" look. 15¢, 30¢, $1.00, plus tax.

Twinkling rhinestones on this dress of white wool jersey and swishing black taffeta.

THE HECHT CO., Washington, D. C.
SAKS-34th, New York City
RICH'S, Atlanta
F. & R. LAZARUS, Columbus
FOLEY BROS., Houston
JOHN SHILLITO, Cincinnati
THALHEIMER'S, Richmond
RIKE-KUMLER, Dayton

or write for store nearest you

JANE JR., 1400 B'way, N. Y. C. 18

ANYBODY HERE SEEN STANWYCK?

(Continued from page 47)

was quite receptive when Designer Edith Head made suggestions about her personal wardrobe. And since Stella Dallas, she has worn mink, gold lamé or other standard star-identification when attending premières, thereby managing to keep out of the clutches of the police.

Not that the lass doesn't look well enough in ordinary dress to be a star. And if producers in their hue-and-cry for new faces ever let Barbara go behind the scenery, she knows a fellow who can help her. He approached her not too long ago at Schwab's drug store in Beverly Hills and earnestly identified himself as a talent scout for a major studio Then he said, "I'd like to arrange a screen test for you. We're always looking for interesting new faces, you know."

Barbara smiled. "I'm very flattered—but this face isn't new. I've had it a long, long time. Anyhow, I've got a job I wouldn't dream of giving up."

Several weeks later the scout was introduced to her at a Hollywood party. Bumping his forehead with the heel of his hand, he exclaimed, "And to think I missed recognizing you!"

"Doesn't everyone?" she grinned.

amazing resemblance . . .

She sometimes wonders now if the aura of anonymity that surrounds her is contagious. Recently she and Bob Taylor were playing golf on a public course in Westwood, without making any stir among the other players. Then she heard a voice say, "You'd never believe anyone could look as much like Robert Taylor as that man does, would you?"

After the Grand Central stairway incident, Barbara went, still unrecognized, to the Waldorf-Astoria, which she entered without fuss or furore. Wise to registrations, the fans soon became alert once she was there. Then, every time she left the hotel, she passed through an "honor guard" whose autograph books almost crossed in a frenzied arch.

But when she went to 21, having made reservations by telephone for herself and guests, she was told by the headwaiter, "Miss Stanwyck hasn't arrived yet."

"No fooling?" asked Barbara. And the headwaiter did a double take, gulped, bowed and led her to the table, apologizing elaborately.

Sounds unbelievable that he should have been fooled. But I myself once was welcomed by a headwaiter in an exclusive Beverly Hills restaurant who said to me, "Miss Stanwyck, right this way. Mr. Blank is waiting for you."

I told my host what had happened. "Sure," he smiled. "Somebody probably told him, 'You'll know her. She'll wear a tailored suit, sensible shoes and no hat.' Stanwyck wouldn't be caught dead dressed in the fussy clothes most of the women here are wearing. Wait till she arrives—I'll bet you and she will be the only ones here dressed to fit that description." He was right.

Then there was the driver who suddenly screeched her car to a halt just after passing Barbara and a friend out walking in Holmby Hills.

Jumping out, the woman dashed toward her, saying effusively, "Darling! How wonderful to run into you! It's been so long since I've seen you!"

Embarrassed because she didn't recognize the woman, Barbara listened patiently as the "old friend" chattered along until she asked, "And, Jeanette, how's your dear mother?"

"Jeanette?" Barbara asked blankly. "Uh—I think you've made a little mistake."

"Why, Jeanette MacDonald, you tease, you!" the gushy one exclaimed reproachfully.

"Sorry, I'm not Jeanette MacDonald," Barbara said quickly and firmly.

"Why, Jeanette!" Bewilderment replaced assurance then.

"Really, she isn't Jeanette," Barbara's friend said helpfully. "She's Barbara Stanwyck."

"That's the silliest thing I ever heard of," the woman said vehemently. "Insisting she's not Jeanette, then trying to pass herself off as Barbara Stanwyck. I'm surprised!"

With that she indignantly departed, leaving Barbara and her friend to continue their walk, their shoulders shaking with laughter.

On another occasion when Barbara was out walking, this time alone, a car drew up beside her, filled with sight-seers and tagged Nebraska. The driver leaned out and asked, "Girlie, can you tell me how to get to Benedict Canyon?"

After she'd given the information, one of the passengers said, "I'll bet you're in the movies. Aren't you?"

"Yes," she answered.

"I knew it! You're Bette Davis!"

"No," she said and started to walk on.

"Aren't you Deanna Durbin?" another asked.

"Oh, no!" Barbara laughed.

"I've got it! It's Margaret Sullavan!" another voice declared firmly.

Barbara called back over her shoulder, "Be seeing you later, Quiz Kids."

Barbara also smilingly remembers the young bank clerk who occasionally cashed checks for her under the impression that she was her own secretary—a person who doesn't exist. After a few times, he suggested a date. When she explained her boss never gave her an evening or weekend off, he exclaimed, "What a slave-driver!"

Barbara herself is quick to recognize anyone whom she's known or whom she's admired from a distance. Not long ago she warmly greeted an actress whose fame and beauty were at their height when Barbara was little Ruby Stevens, trying to emulate Pearl White by leaping fearlessly around the rocks in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. The veteran actress, glowing over the encounter with a fan—an experience she hadn't had for some time—cooed to Barbara, "You know, you ought to be in pictures yourself!"

THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

One night at the Hollywood NBC parking lot, my girl friend and I saw Red Skelton sitting in one of the cars. We hurried over and asked for his autograph. He was so busy talking to his wife that he didn't seem to notice us as he signed. However, the very next night we saw him again and as we smiled and walked by, he yelled, "Hey! Do you two girls board together?"

Dee Hicks
Montebello, Calif.

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

---Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

ICHABOD AND MR. TOAD—"Katrina" by Bing Crosby* (Decca); Tex Beneke (Victor). "The Headless Horseman" by Bing Crosby (Decca). "Ichabod" by Tex Beneke (Victor).

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN—"Toot Toot Tootsie Goodbye" by Tony Martin* (Victor); Art Mooney (MGM); Marion Hutton (MGM). "I Only Have Eyes For You" by Kate Smith (MGM).

LOVE HAPPY—title song by Marion Hutton (MGM).

MY FRIEND IRMA—"Just For Fun" by Jane Harvey* (MGM).

SONG OF SURRENDER—title song by Dick Haymes* (Decca).

CHRISTMAS SPECIALS

GENE AUTRY—"Country Christmas Songs" (Columbia long playing).

BING CROSBY—"Christmas Greetings Album"* (Decca).

DORIS DAY—"Here Comes Santa Claus"* (Columbia).

BOB EBERLE—"Here Comes Santa Claus" (Coral).

ROY ROGERS & DALE EVANS—"Christmas On The Plains" (Victor).

ERNEST TUBB—"White Christmas" and "Blue Christmas" (Decca).

There's a bewildering assortment of other timely wax fare, including Christmas albums by Como, Sinatra and the Three Suns, a fine Christmas song waxing by Eckstine on MGM, and the "Merry Christmas Polka" by the Andrews Sisters, Dinah Shore, Freddy Martin and others. And if you're a little late there's Gordon Jenkins' "Happy New Year" (Decca).

POPULAR

WOODY HERMAN—"Tenderly" (Capitol).

Here's something unique—a great jazz orchestra playing Walter Gross' beautiful waltz and making delightful modern music without spoiling the original mood.

FRANK SINATRA—"Frankly Sentimental" (Columbia).

You'll like everything about this collection—the eight tunes, which include "Laura," "One For My Baby," "Guess I'll Hang My Tears Out To Dry"; the way Frankie sings them; and the musical backgrounds. This is Grade A Sinatra.

BENNY GOODMAN—"Back in Your Own Backyard" (Capitol).

Benny deserts bop to go back in his own swing backyard in this unexciting release.

"BOPULAR"

SERGE CHALOFF—"The Most!"* (Futurama)

ERROLL GARNER—"What Is This Thing Called Love?"* (Apollo).

One of four sides recorded by Erroll in Paris. All are available now on Apollo, including his version of "Lover Man."

CHARLIE VENTURA—"Boptura" (Victor).

KAI WINDING—"A Night on Bop Mountain"* (New Jazz).

Kai, Danish-born ex-Stan Kenton trombonist, heads a neat sextet featuring several leading bop soloists.

Like an Angel of Mercy to your Face and Hands

Millions of women find this NEW BEAUTY IDEA proves wonderfully effective aid to:

1. Lovelier, clearer-looking skin.
2. Softer, whiter-looking hands.
3. Healing beauty-marring blemishes.*
4. Glorious soothing relief for irritated or itching skin conditions!

Why bother with countless jars and bottles? You don't need a lot of preparations to help keep your skin looking lovely. Do as so many nurses, models, actresses do. Give your skin medicated care.

Try it for 10 Days

Use medicated Noxzema as a dainty, greaseless night cream—as a long-lasting foundation for make-up. Try this beauty secret for just 10 days. See how fast it helps your skin improve.

You'll be delighted to discover how quickly medicated skin care helps smooth and soften a rough, dry skin and helps heal unattractive skin blemishes *from external causes.

Smoother, Whiter-Looking Hands . . . often in 24 hours

Nurses first discovered Noxzema for hands irritated by constant scrubbing. If your hands get red and rough from housework, from exposure to water or weather . . . see how quickly medicated care helps soften and heal them back to natural beauty.

Read how 2 typical women helped solve their skin problems:

Beauty... Pat Barnard says, "Noxzema is part of my regular beauty routine...I use it every morning and night. It works wonders for my complexion."

Blemishes...Rita Tennant uses Noxzema as her regular night cream. "Noxzema is so dainty to use," says Rita. "And it quickly helps heal any of those little externally-caused skin irritations."

25,000,000 Jars Sold Yearly

Try Noxzema! See if you aren't honestly thrilled at the way it can help your own complexion problems . . . as it has helped so many thousands of other women. See for yourself why over 25,000,000 jars are used every year. Available at all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax.

THE BEAUTIFUL REBEL

(Continued from page 43)

too. But with one difference, maybe . . ."

"Yes?" they all urged.

"Happen that he's nice and tall, I might encourage things a bit," said Patricia—who wouldn't need more than four-inch heels to look a six-footer right in his (preferably blue) eyes with her own hazel ones.

This correctly indicates that Patricia is not unmindful of romance. As a matter of fact, she went on the stage because of a man. But outside of inspiring this move, the man was a terrible disappointment.

This occurred when she was 15 and going through the not-unusual phase of girlhood in which she was having difficulty maintaining poise in front of boys. With her family she attended the performance of an amateur theatrical group, the Tennessee Valley Players, in Knoxville, Tennessee—where her family had moved from her birthplace in Packard, Kentucky. She took one look at the leading man and fell hard.

She began planning furiously how she could meet him. By the end of the first act she had decided on her course of action. So—the next afternoon Patricia was a member of the company.

She has no recollection of how she managed it. But she does remember that the very first time she talked to her idol, he asked if he might call on her at her home that evening!

Whereupon Patricia concluded that she was now definitely grown into ladyhood and ought to do something about it. After the rehearsal she did two things. First she gathered up all the glasses, spoons, salt-shakers and other knick-knacks she had gathered as souvenirs from various high-school eating "joints," and set about returning them. She wanted to start her new life with a clear conscience. She felt wonderfully honest and clean as she went about downtown Knoxville from Miller's Grill to the Blue Circle, to Lane's Drug store to Todd and Armistead's, handing back cutlery and glassware long since written off as breakage and loss by the owners of those establishments.

Then she returned home and sat down at her make-up mirror—not to get up until the doorbell rang and she knew he had come.

disenchantment . . .

She let him in. He smiled. She swayed giddily, but somehow got the door closed. Then she introduced him to her parents, and promptly had her heart broken.

Her big moment gave her not another glance. He concentrated all attention on her father, launching into a vigorous sales-talk on insurance—which, it seemed, he was selling. A sickening realization that she had just been used to flush up a prospect came over Patricia. Numbly she crept away and left the two men alone.

The next day, knowing that she must get over this tragedy somehow, she decided to attend a rehearsal. There wasn't a part in the play for her, but she wanted to prove to herself that she could watch him and still put him right out of her mind. She was looking at him and suffering horribly (not having sold her father a policy, he was upstaging her) when someone asked her to read a few lines. Somehow she got them out and they seemed to be received favorably. A few minutes later she was told she could have a leading role in the company's next production.

She was so scared by the prospect that she'd never have considered it had she not sensed that her fright was beginning to overshadow the pangs of her broken heart. In view of this desirable development, she said "yes." Three weeks later, the 15-year-old Patricia stepped out on the stage to play a fallen woman.

"Miss Patricia Neal," reported a newspaper critic the next morning, "posed about the stage a great deal with a cigarette in her hand. It is doubtful that she knows anything about acting—or smoking either, for that matter."

Hardly more than five years later, she was a star on Broadway in Another Part of the Forest, playing a younger version of the same character Tallulah Bankhead had portrayed in The Little Foxes. Patricia played it so well that she won five awards for her performance.

She got the part as a result of trying out and failing to get a part in another play. She did a reading for a Theater Guild production of Eugene O'Neill's Moon for the Misbegotten. They were not quite satisfied, but she met O'Neill and he was instrumental in her getting a part in a Guild summer stock production. Lillian Hellman, who wrote Another Part of the Forest, saw her in this and was sure that Patricia could handle the lead role in her play.

By this time Patricia could count among the great whom she had gotten to know, not only O'Neill and Hellman, but such other prominent theatrical folk as Richard Rodgers, Herman Shumlin, Alfred de Liagre and, of course, the great Tallulah.

"Darling," said Tallulah throatily to her at a party one night, "you were as good as I am—and if I said half as good it would still be a whale of a compliment."

With her success, Patricia soon began to add more names to the roster of her friends and acquaintances—and, it shouldn't surprise anyone, Hollywood names. They came bearing great gifts they were anxious to hand over in exchange for her signature on a contract.

There was Sam Goldwyn. She wore flat shoes to meet him, because someone said he didn't like tall girls. (Patricia says being tall gives a producer a good excuse for saying "no." But, once you get started, the height doesn't matter a bit.) There was David O. Selznick, with whom she was quite impressed because she heard him say that he doesn't get ulcers, he gives them. There was Dore Schary, who offered her a personally-guided tour of RKO (which he headed at the time, before going to MGM). There was Matty Fox of Universal-International, who picked up the telephone while she was sitting in his office and tried to buy Another Part of the Forest to offer her as her first picture if she would sign with his company. And then, last but mightiest—because he saw eye-to-eye with her about her being allowed to return to the stage any time she wished—there was Jerry Wald of Warner Brothers. She signed with him and went to star in John Loves Mary, The Fountainhead and The Hasty Heart.

so in love . . .

From Knoxville and not knowing how to smoke a cigarette, to Broadway and London (where she made The Hasty Heart) and Hollywood, all while you are growing from 15 to 21, may seem like a magical transition—but don't forget that Patricia was in love. Oh, not still with that slick young insurance agent. That heartbreak was long gone. Patricia was in love with the stage.

She loved it so much that in this same period she hastened her pace of living and crowded in two years of college at Northwestern University to improve her general knowledge of English and classical literature and drama. She loved it so much, too, that instead of going home between summer stock in Colorado, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, she stayed near the producers' offices in New York—working at modeling, assisting a doctor, cashiering in a restaurant and clerking in a jewelry store. (She is one girl who is not overly impressed by a diamond. She has handled hundreds of them!)

The most distinguishing trait of any rebel is certainly individualism. It was during this string of busy years that Patricia learned to be quite individual. For instance, at Northwestern in Evanston, hollywood cook book

by nancy craig, amc can broadcasting company
women's editor

■ When Jimmy Stewart married at last, his bride got not only a handsome guy but one who can cook. When a really earnest cooking urge possesses him, he's likely to bustle around a hot stove creating the following delectable dish—chicken and wild rice. He swears it's easy to do—and, though at first glance it may seem elaborate, it's really quite simple.

- 4 pounds stewing chicken, cut in pieces
- 2 celery stalks, chopped
- 2 green peppers, chopped
- 1 medium-sized onion, chopped
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon light pepper
- Hot water to barely cover chicken
- 1 cup washed wild rice, soaked in water while chicken cooks
- 1 small can mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup chicken broth
- Pinch of savory
- Bread crumbs

Have chicken cut in serving size pieces. Cook with celery, green peppers, onion, salt, pepper and just enough water to barely cover chicken pieces. Cover and cook about 1½ hours, or until tender, over low heat. (Wild rice should be washed and soaked for an hour while chicken is being cooked). When chicken is tender, remove meat from bones and cut into small pieces. Cook wild rice in 1 quart boiling, salted water for 30 minutes, or until almost tender. Drain and add to chicken. Make a sauce of butter, flour and 1 cup of the chicken broth. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add a pinch of savory and sliced mushrooms. Combine with chicken-rice mixture. Spread in buttered baking dish, 9x12 inches, and sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for 1 hour. Make gravy from remaining chicken stock and serve with chicken-rice casserole. Makes about 6 servings.

Illinois, she conformed to the extent of accepting a bid to join a sorority. But this, she soon discovered, brought her under the jurisdiction of certain rules—most of them unwritten, but nevertheless effective—that were beginning to rubber-stamp her life. There was approval and disapproval of whom she went with and whom she brought to the house. There was comment on what she did and how she did it. It kept on until, in the finest tradition of the South, she revolted.

"I've seen mothers of some of the college girls weep because their daughters hadn't made a certain sorority," says Patricia. "How silly! It's fine if you want to be just a little old pawn being shoved around. But if you feel like you can be a somebody—and being any old somebody is better than being just a type—then you're so much better off skipping it!"

Patricia did. The break-up came more or less as the result of a weekend vacation during which Patricia planned to accompany a classmate on a trip to the latter's home in Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin, and announced they would travel by hitchhiking! Since sophistication was the keynote of the sorority attitude, this was greeted by the sisters with high horror. Just the same, Patricia and her girl friend went. And en route, Patricia learned that she wasn't sophisticated, anyway!

The first car to pick them up and take them part of their way was a jalopy in which rode a middle-aged couple who seemed enchanted about something. It soon came out. After nearly 20 years of marriage they were expecting their first child. It was like an impossible dream to them and they could talk of nothing but plans for the baby, the woman's eyes filling again and again with tears of joy. When it came time for the girls to get out, Patricia found that she had twisted her scarf into a shapeless string, so deeply touched had she been. That day she not only learned a little about the real values of life, but also that she was not the blasé kind.

Patricia loves acting so much that she knows now that she will not give it up when she marries. That is definite. And the way she tells it, it not only makes sense but explains the "rebel" in her:

"It just seems to me that if a man is attracted to a girl by the sort of person she is, and she's the sort of person who loves her career—then it's positively dangerous for her to wash out this strong background and give it up. She might be washing out part of herself."

Patricia hopes that some day she will make some man happy. Right now acting is making her happy. She thinks it is a good and simple bargain and she thinks she can keep it better without any distractions like taking fencing lessons, yachting to Honolulu, or studying Sanskrit.

So she lives in her little house in West Los Angeles with her mother and younger brother, Peter, and once in a while she will go out with a Kirk Douglas or a Farley Granger or a Joe Carpenter.

Joe Carpenter? Who's Joe Carpenter?

"Oh . . . he just happens to be a tall boy," says Patricia. THE END

You'll find the complete screen story of Patricia Neal's new picture, The Hasty Heart, as one of the many absorbing features in the January issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

NOW—For the FIRST TIME

All of the latest important developments in the fields of medicine and child care in one complete volume. FOR ONLY 25c

THE CARE OF YOUR CHILD

A NEW DELL BOOK - On Sale Everywhere

FREE RACHEL FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder. BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors furnished. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder. Mention shade wanted—☐light or ☐dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now.
J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894)
1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 102, Chicago 7, Ill.

Esther Williams

MOVIE STARS PHOTOS 8 x 10" SIZE DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD
6 for $1.00
8 x 10 photos 25c each or 6 for 1.00
Thousands of beautiful poses of highest quality.
Practically all stars available.
We supply what you order — NO SUBSTITUTIONS.
Glamour portraits or pin-ups.
FREE Beautiful Illustrated Catalog with Order
STEWART-CROXTON STUDIOS
P. O. Box 2390, Dept. D-1
Hollywood 28, Calif.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED and COLORED IN OILS
to size 8 x 10 on double weight paper
89¢
3 for $2.50
Same price for full length pictures, busts and groups. Your original photo returned with enlargements. Give color of eyes, hair and clothes. Just mail photo, negative or snapshot regardless of size and enclose 25c per picture. Pictures mailed postpaid within 3 days. Satisfaction guaranteed

Send your photo NOW.
LEIGH'S Art Studio, Dept. 2
130 West 42nd St. New York 18, N. Y.

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 41)

is his picture on my dressing table, his favorite old beat-up smoking jacket hanging forlornly in the closet, and Shoo-fly.

Shoo-fly, an animated, furry black ball with shoe-button eyes, is a French poodle puppy—and she was John's latest birthday gift to me. I've never figured out where he hid her the night before, but that morning when I awoke, there was Shoo-fly, sitting demurely on the foot of my bed, wearing on a ribbon around her neck a large, heart-shaped sign which read, "I will love you, if you will love me."

But Shoo-fly is small consolation now. Especially when she keeps trotting into the living room with one of his slippers in her mouth, when she knows darned well he isn't home.

John and I have run up some mighty staggering long-distance telephone mileage since John arrived in London to make The Miniver Story. And the principal theme of our conversations could be entitled, "Never again!"

"No more roles for the Hodiaks that break up the home team for more than three weeks at a time," John vowed the other night, as we tried to figure out over the telephone the exact minute when we'd be together again. Like every lesson learned the hard way, this we know for sure: Life and work and play lose all their zip and sparkle when the one person in the world who puts meaning into these treasures isn't around to share them.

fate can be cruel . . .

Through her very uncooperative manipulation of picture schedules, Fate has dealt some decidedly crushing blows to life on the Hodiak home front. It all started last spring when John went to Gallup, New Mexico, for shooting on Ambush. "Goodbye," I waved, with a phony cheeriness and a distinct sniffle, as his train pulled out.

"Goodbye," we repeated, practically passing each other in Union Station weeks later when he returned and I lit out for a personal-appearance junket to Chicago —where You're My Everything had its Eastern première.

I was home in time for another "goodbye" as I joined the cast for A Ticket To Tomahawk, setting out for location in Durango, Colorado. And our running drama of farewells reached a ludicrous, if nonetheless disheartening, climax when John, New York-bound, got off the plane at Albuquerque and took a bus to Durango for a final farewell before sailing for London and The Miniver Story.

"It's a fine state of affairs, Annie," John said with a sad smile, "when a guy has to fly almost a thousand miles to kiss his wife goodbye before he goes to work."

And what an unromantic sight I was when John swung off the bus at Silverton, the little ghost-town 50 miles from Durango where we were shooting! I had a fleeting regret that I wasn't all dolled up in glamorous lace-and-ribbon frippery instead of that weatherbeaten old leather jacket and buckskin cowgirl skirt, with a murderous-looking knife strapped to my back and a trusty six-gun at my side.

"Honey," he grimaced, backing away after that first kiss, "this is just like making love to a well-stocked arsenal."

(For a picture of Anne in that get-up, see page 10.—Ed.)

That night after he had gone and I was sitting with the rest of the company around a big camp fire, listening to the cowboys' pleasant harmony, I decided that John would now have new respect for me as a wife. At least, he should have after seeing some of the accomplishments I'd mastered in my role of a female U. S. Marshal of the Old West. Getting into the spirit of the story, I'd learned a whole new repertory of handy skills, conducive to maintaining domestic peace and discipline. Gregory Peck had taught me to shoot a pistol. Richard Sale, the director, had been tutoring me in the fine art of knife-throwing. And between scenes that day, John himself had taught me to "fan" a gun. I had hoped to become adept with a tomahawk, too, but when I approached my Navajo cronies on the matter of teaching me, they insisted they didn't know how to handle one themselves. Even so, I assured myself, after watching me wield all those other dangerously business-like gadgets, Mr. Hodiak would think twice before making fun of my infrequent biscuit attempts or my unskilled way with a Sunday breakfast omelet.

But John was a little doubtful about a new parlor trick I picked up in my spare Durango moments. I'd learned to play the Indian drums and by the time he arrived, had collected several fine specimens to bring home. One of these is an authentic Indian war drum, measuring three feet in diameter—a real beauty, fashioned from a burned-out log covered with deerskin. John was as enthusiastic as I about owning this interesting piece of Americana, but when I broke the news of my recently-acquired musical ability by almost breaking his eardrum with a masterful sample, he winced. "Darling," he said, "couldn't you take up a quieter hobby—like stamp collecting?"

Well, maybe after that day at Durango, John wished we had stuck to our rule about not visiting each other on the set. The arrangement works fine when we're on the home lots of Hollywood, reasonably certain of being together for dinner and spending a quiet evening. But last spring when John was on location in Gallup, New Mexico, I became the first to break our rule. With our third anniversary just a day away and the New Mexico weather apparently determined to delay shooting long enough to keep the company there past the big date, I broke down.

"It's been raining cats and dogs," John moaned over long distance. "We won't get out of here on time, I know. Do you think you could . . . No, I guess it's silly."

That was enough for me. "Want me to come over there and get that sun out full blast?" I asked him. His answer was a roaring affirmative.

That night I took a plane to Gallup and arrived early the next morning—our anniversary. Luck was with me, too. The sun popped out like a big yellow ball of butter and stayed out all day. Shooting was finished late that afternoon, and John and I had a glorious third anniversary celebration, just the two of us, at El Rancho, Gallup's colorful old Western inn.

"Were you surprised when I brought the sun with me?" I joked as we sat before the great fireplace in the Inn's big lounge.

"Surprised?" John smiled, holding my hand in both of his. "No, I wasn't surprised. You always bring the sun for me, Annie, even though it keeps on raining."

John says the nicest things. And this is invariably a surprise to people who know him only through his roles. John, soft-spoken, gentle, the most considerate person I've even known, is usually knee-deep in hissing skulduggery on the screen.

that wonderful guy . . .

If you'll forgive a slight rave, the real John Hodiak is easygoing, never critical, never impatient, ever appreciative and understanding, with a wonderful disposition and a sense of humor to match. Tease me? He teases me a lot, but that's half the fun and I love it.

I know that when we celebrate our golden wedding, if we're that lucky, there will still be the spell of romance in life with John. Unlike most husbands, he isn't ashamed of being sentimental. He remembers anniversaries and my birthday, with no wifely prods from me. He sends me flowers on the slightest excuse—when I'm blue or have a cold or a bad day on the set, and for important occasions like the Hollywood première of You're My Everything.

In a way, that was the biggest moment of my career, I guess, and the most heartbreaking because he wasn't there to share it. That night I had to drive up to Grauman's Chinese Theater, where the première was held, in a 25-year-old jalopy reminiscent of the flapper era of the picture. It chugged and jerked like a bucking broncho, but I concentrated on pretending that John was sitting beside me and somehow I made it.

Scared to death as I always am in a crowd of people, I just took a good, deep breath of John's gardenias on my shoulder and clutched that beautiful lace scarf that was his Christmas gift. And that's how I managed that endless walk down the long foyer, without having my knees buckle as I feared they would. Afterward, there was a lovely party for the cast and their friends at Romanoff's. Everyone was wonderfully generous in their praise of the picture and because it was my first première, it was truly a thrilling evening. But let's face it: That night I'm sure I was the lonesomest gal in Hollywood.

It was after two when I finally got home, opening the door to the tune of the telephone ringing insistently. When I answered, there was my favorite voice saying gaily from Gallup, "Hi, honey! How did it go?" Even with a five o'clock call for the following morning, John had waited up to make this really a night to remember.

When we're apart I worry about John, I'm not ashamed to admit. Not about

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ Dick Powell said wistfully: "If there's one thing I hate it's being known as a boy who is always ready to break into song, and I think audiences, after too much of it, will begin to hate it too. That's the thing I want to look out for. I love to sing, as every singer does. But I want to act, without singing, now and then. The only non-singing pictures I ever did was when I first came to the screen. I did one with George Arliss and another with Will Rogers. But people have already forgotten about those."—From a 1938 issue of Modern Screen what he eats or wears, and certainly not about whether or not I can trust him. I don't think either of us has a jealous thought. But I worry because, like any wife worthy of the name, I feel that I have a certain special job to fulfill in my husband's life. With John, it's a job of morale boosting. An idealist, he is up in the clouds one moment, down in the dumps the next. He's a perfectionist in his work and impatient of any flaws in his own performance. He thrives on big dreams, great plans—plans for picture-making and dreams of the day when we can see faraway places together. . . . Well, it's my job to keep him up there on that cloud. When hundreds of miles separate us, I can't do that.

We have been very fortunate in avoiding the tragic and poisonous "rumors" that play havoc with so many career marriages. Only once has one of these stories, usually manufactured from whole cloth on a dull Hollywood news day, touched us. That happened when John was in Gallup. I picked up a newspaper one morning to be startled and shocked by an item telling how John and I had agreed that we would both have dates with other people while our picture commitments kept us apart for such long intervals.

I was furious, because it was absolutely without foundation. We had never discussed such a thing. That night I called John and read him the "news." Man-like, he laughed at my sputtering anger. "What'll I do?" I wailed.

"Do? Why, I'd just forget about it," he counselled wisely. "And if anyone wants to know who the other man in your life is, just say, 'Hodiak—John Hodiak—H-o-d-i-a-k.' As for my love affairs on location—honey, the way I look under three layers of New Mexico dust and a stubble of genuine Western whiskers, I couldn't get a date with Li'l Abner's grandma!"

Bearded and dusty or spruced-up and handsome, John is . . . well, have you ever heard of a picture called You're My Everything? THE END signals. The rushing motorists must have thought, "He's another hitchhiker trying to get a free ride." They whizzed by, too fast to see me lying off to the side, bleeding profusely, my face badly gashed.

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

(Continued from page 37)

Finally a car did stop. The driver got out and came with Carey to where I lay.

"Good Lord!" he said. "He's as good as dead. Look at the way he's bleeding! I won't have a corpse in my car!" Nothing Carey said would change his mind. He drove away.

Carey kept trying to flag down another car. Then a truck stopped. The driver took me about a mile down the road, to a service station. At the back of the station was a cot. Carey put me down on it as gently as possible and made for the telephone to call an ambulance.

In those days, it was difficult to get an ambulance in a hurry. I lay on that cot for two hours, in almost unbearable agony, bleeding, sweating—and scared.

Death has never seemed too frightening to me—I've been close to it many times. But I admit, without apology, to a dread of disfiguration. To be disfigured is an actor's nightmare. One of the most frightening things in any man's life is the prospect of having to start a career over again, when he hasn't qualified himself for anything else.

I've seen that fear many times among servicemen for whom death held no terror. The fear of being crippled to such an extent that they wouldn't be able to go on with their work after the war, lived with them. They didn't know what they would or could do with their lives if they couldn't go back to the work they knew.

With my whole heart I prayed it would not be impossible for me to make my living again as an actor. I had visions of myself with a grotesquely shattered face—visions that made me desperate.

And yet, as I prayed, those visions seemed to fade away. As I prayed, I began to feel a great spiritual relief, even though I continued to have great physical pain.

The ambulance took me to the hospital in Bishop. There I was given an anesthetic, X-ray photographs were taken, and the doctor removed, with a stiff brush, the dirt and gravel embedded deeply in the whole right side of my face—which was one big swollen mass of raw meat. I would wear bandages for a long time, the doctor said. My back was [illegible] broken. Both ankles were broken and I would be off my feet for several weeks.

"What about my face?" I asked. "Will—will I be disfigured?"

He shrugged. "It's not as bad as it could be," he said and left the room. I lay in bed, my face covered with bandages, wondering exactly what he meant.

Eventually my brother arrived. He had driven from Tahoe, and now he took me to our family physician in Reno, Dr. Frank Muller, an old family friend. I knew that if I wished, Dr. Muller would be blunt and to the point with me.

"Frank," I begged, "tell me: Will I be scarred for life?"

"Well," he said, "you'll have a few marks, I guess." I turned away from the sympathy in his understanding eyes. My prayers started again. For weeks, until the bandages came off, I prayed constantly. By placing myself in the hands of God, I came to the end of my fear.

The day the bandages finally came off, a feeling of great confidence flowed over me. Dr. Frank Muller's smile as he looked at me confirmed that confidence. He handed me a mirror. The marks were almost imperceptible—in time would be entirely gone. My prayer was answered.

There may be some who will say that this was just a matter of luck, that my prayers made no difference. That I cannot accept.

I must admit that when I lay with my face in bandages, I didn't know for sure how my prayer would be answered. Say what you will about faith, one cannot know what God's will is. But I hoped that in my case the will of God would be that I would emerge unscarred. And I asked for strength to bear it if that was not to be.

Prayer is power—the greatest power in the world. It affects not only outward events, but puts strength deep into the heart and soul of the man who prays.

There was a time when the scientists thought that man could discover everything and solve all his problems through his own reasoning processes. Now most of the scientists realize that there are spiritual truths which science has never touched—but which are the only valid explanation of things that go beyond science and reason.

One of these truths is the power of prayer. Only fools today deny it.

YODORA

the deodorant that works

2 WAYS

stops

perspiration odor

Wonderful Yodora does not merely mask, but stops perspiration odor. Effective for full 24-hour protection.

softens

and beautifies underarm skin

Made with a face cream base, Yodora keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders. Tubes or jars 10¢ 30¢ 60¢

Kind to skin, chemically safe for clothes, it's the perfect cream deodorant . . . You'll adore Yodora!

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

McKESSON & ROBBINS

MY LITTLE GIRL

(Continued from page 49)

distance and the sea beyond them. She was wearing a hat that was much too large for her, perhaps borrowed from Nana, and she was carrying a large suitcase. I leaned out of the window and called to her, "Where are you going, Cheryl?"

"I'm going to Honolulu," she informed me.

She was back within a half hour, and Bob playfully rumpled her hair. "That was a short trip," he said.

She looked at him sorrowfully and then her eyes flashed for an instant. "No, it wasn't, Papa. It was a long trip, and I had a very good time." . . .

I try hard always to give my little girl a reason for things being right or wrong. It's often difficult for me, because I've lived in an adult world so long that I've lost the ability a child has to stop and reason about these things. When I tell her to put on the blue dress and she so desperately wants to wear the yellow, I realize that her wish is much bigger and more important to her than is my reason to me. Yet I must insist, for she has to learn discipline—but I try to avoid the time-worn reason that I so dislike— "You must do this because I'm your mother and I say so."

pinch of vengeance . . .

My little girl is far from a model child in many ways. She has lately developed a habit of pinching people. Since she always chooses as her victims Bob or Nana or myself, I'm convinced that in her own small way she's exacting vengeance on the grown-ups who are forever wielding their authority over her.

One evening after a pinching episode, she was reprimanded by my husband and grew defiant. I told her she must leave the room, and her small face immediately puckered into the grimace that tells of tears on the way.

"Cheryl, don't act like a baby," I told her. "If you're going to be defiant, like an adult, you must behave like an adult and leave the room when you're asked." With this, the tears stopped and I saw my chance to reason with her. "You know, dear, that if Papa and I had guests and someone became unpleasant, we'd ask them to leave, and because they're grown up, they'd go without arguing." Now she was all attention, because she had understood. "Why do you pinch people?" I asked her.

"Because I think it's fun."

"I don't. I think it's very dull."

"What does 'dull' mean?" Here was the stall, the quick ability of a child to dodge and miss the intended punch. "It means unattractive," I told her—and I changed the subject right back again. "You wouldn't want people to pinch you," I said.

She drew herself up with all the dignity of her six years and said, "They wouldn't dare!"

"They wouldn't try," I said. "It doesn't interest them."

Now she has stopped pinching people. . . .

I wish I had the power really to look into the mind of my little girl. So much goes on there, such fascinating things, and I'm unable to share them. She has a little game she plays all by herself. The game is to pretend she's someone else. Sometimes this someone is a fictitious Missy Murphy. My little girl seems to get great joy from the portrayal. More often she pretends she's Stephanie Wanger, the daughter of Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger and Cheryl's best friend. There's a great bond between the two of them, and I'm not allowed within it. Every once in a while when I call my little girl by name she will look up at me with impatience in her face.

"I'm not Cheryl," she says. "I'm Stephanie now, and you must call me Steffie."

"I'm very sorry, Steffie. I didn't realize."

"Oh, Mommy," she says, "when will you learn to understand?"

And an hour or so later she'll come to me and put her head on my shoulder in that enchanting way she has, and tell me that she's my little girl again. . . .

My little girl was getting a glass of water one afternoon when we heard the crash of a glass dropped on the kitchen floor. Then we heard something that brought both my husband and me to the edge of our chairs: "God!" said my little girl.

We didn't say anything until she came to us in the living room. I didn't think it wise to show I was shocked, for then this word would become forbidden fruit and she'd delight in saying it. Instead I asked her casually what the word was she'd just used.

"I said 'God'."

"Oh," I said. "Were you speaking to Him?"

My voice must have betrayed my feelings for her eyes suddenly clouded over and she answered me in a small voice. "No, Mommy. I just—said it."

"Why did you say it, dear?"

She was puzzled by the importance attached to this word and said, almost apologetically, "I heard Papa say it once."

What was I to tell her? We make an effort to set a good example in all ways, but it's so easy to forget. And when she left the room without, I'm afraid, a proper answer from us, I looked at my husband. He grinned sheepishly and retired behind his paper. "It won't happen again," he said. . . .

Nana, my little girl's nurse, is from England and her heart is understandably with her people in their time of poverty and stress. I hadn't known it, but for months Nana had been telling Cheryl about the "poor, hungry, small ones in England" who would so love to live in this nice house and eat the good food and wear the lovely clothes that belong to my little girl.

I first learned of it the day Cheryl came to me a week or so before her birthday. "Mommy, you don't have to buy me anything for my birthday."

"I don't?" I said. "Why not, dear?"

"Well, you see, there are all those poor, hungry, small ones in England, and I don't think I should have anything. I'd like you to send all my things to them and I'll just wear my cowboy clothes."

While I was very pleased about her generosity, I was sorry that she'd learned about unhappiness in the world so soon. It's true that she's very fortunate to have all the material things she has, and someday I want her to realize it and be thankful for it. But she's too young for this knowledge, and it serves only to make her feel as if she's being selfish.

I could see that she was greatly upset.

"That's very nice of you, dear," I said, "but you know that Papa and I send things to England and Europe all the time." I explained the CARE agency and told her of the things we send—but it didn't satisfy her and she left the room slowly, her eyes sad and thoughtful.

It's too late for me to spare her. It's so hard trying not to hurt these little people. . . .

A few days ago, my little girl had just come from school, a place which seems to raise her self-esteem to great heights, and she was saucy with me.

"You mustn't behave this way," I told her.

bad examples . . .

She looked down her nose at me. "The other kids do," she said.

I lost my temper and I told her, "I don't care what the other children do!"

"Mommy!" Her eyes were wide with reproach. "You should care—because I care what they do."

I was at a loss for a moment—and finally said, "We won't talk about it now."

And after thinking it over I called her back and took her hand in mine. "Mother was wrong," I said. "Of course we must care what the other children do. We'll watch them closely from now on, but if they do anything that's unattractive, you must not do it."

"Why? Am I different, Mommy?"

"No, dear, you're no different from anyone. But you're special to me, and I try to know what's best for you.

I don't think this has been sufficient, but I can hope that she'll trust me to be interested in the customs of her schoolmates. She has taught me to be. . . .

My little girl has an open heart and an open hand. She wants to give away her things to everyone, and when she's given candy or a cookie, she offers it to her friends before tasting it herself. I'm proud of her for it, but at the same time I'm sorry, for I know that this can lead to her being hurt.

I stood in the garden one day and watched her when the cook had given her a handful of her favorite cookies. She was playing with a friend at the time, and at once she went to this little boy and held out her hands to him. His eyes gleamed and he took the cookies, every one of them, and ran away. I saw Cheryl stand rooted to the spot. She looked down at her empty hands and a great sadness came into her face. She was stunned by this selfishness —she did not understand it because she has none herself. When she looked after the running boy, there were tears in her eyes. A lump came into my throat and I turned and went into the house. There was nothing I could do to help her. She must learn this lesson by herself. . . .

I've always wondered just how my little girl regards my being a motion picture actress. She has seemed to accept it without its meaning too much to her. Although

I SAW IT HAPPEN

One day I was lunching at the Brown Derby, when in walked a large, messy, dirty man in an old, plaid shirt and levis. I overheard a young woman seated at a table near me say, "I thought this was a respectable place—just look at that filthy man." She probably would have been quite surprised to learn that it was John Wayne just off the set of Tall in the Saddle.

Barbara Wooll
Los Angeles, Calif.

he sees my picture in magazines and omes running to show me, she has never een me on the screen and has shown no nterest in doing so. But the other day she aught me a lesson.

She came into my bedroom after a walk n the hills with Nana. Her face was shin-ng and there was a bit of the devil in er eyes. I wondered what was coming. hen she tilted her head to one side and here was a scoffing tone in her voice.

"Hello, Lana Turner," she said.

I smiled at her. "Hello, Cheryl."

There was sudden disbelief written on er face, and she burst into a storm of ears as she threw herself into my arms.

"What on earth is the trouble?" I said, till not understanding.

"Oh, Mommy—Mommy!" she choked etween sobs. "You are my mother—my nommy!"

Only then did I realize what had hap-ened. In her mind she had separated her nother and Lana Turner, the actress, into wo different people, and when I answered er as Lana Turner she was frightened.

I held her and soothed her as best I ould. When at last she was quieted and ooked up at me with a tear-stained face told her, "There's no difference, Cheryl. one at all. I'm your mother and always ill be and I love you very much. . . ."

My little girl, as you may have guessed, fond of cowboy clothes, cowboy mo-ies, cowboy songs—anything that relates o the subject. One day she came to me nd told me that she would like to have a sso.

"How much money do you have?" I sked her.

"A nickel and three pennies."

"I'm afraid that isn't enough to buy your sso. Haven't you saved any more than ght cents from your allowance?"

"Yes, but everything except my eight nts is for the poor hungry, small ones n England."

"Then you can't very well have your sso."

"I'll charge it," she announced.

Bob, who was in the room, made a face nd muttered something about a chip off ne old block. I made a face back at him nd turned my attention to my little girl.

"I suppose you could do that," I told er, "but then, you see, you'd have to use our allowance for next week, and many eeks after that, to pay on your charge ccount. It isn't a very wise way to handle our money."

"I guess not," she said thoughtfully. hen she straightened up, filled with re-olve. "I'll charge it anyway," she said, nd marched out of the room.

"Now, where do you suppose she arned about charge accounts?" I said ab-ntly.

"I can't imagine," said my husband. I rew a cushion at him. . . .

The day my little girl hurt herself, she came running to me holding one hand with the other, and I saw blood on the injured hand. The tears were ready to come as I took her arm and put it across my lap so that I might see the injury.

"This is very interesting," I said. "What happened?"

"Well, I put my hand in the puppy's dish."

"When he was eating?"

"Yes, Mommy."

I had told her repeatedly not to do this. Now, at last she had learned. Perhaps it wouldn't have happened if my husband had warned her, for she's more obedient to him. The male authority is good for Cheryl. Before, there was only myself, and I admit I say "no" too many times.

At any rate, my job now was to stop the tears before they started. "My goodness," I said, "how long do you suppose this scratch is?"

My little girl was interested. "A foot long?" she said.

"Well, I wouldn't say that long. Maybe an inch. Now we'll stop the blood. You see, this is how it's done."

I wish it could be that easy all her life to take her mind from pain. . . .

I'd been away from my little girl more than four months when I finally came home. She'd been sent home from New York with Nana when I had been ill, after our trip to Europe. Bob and I had been fishing while I recuperated, and though we were enjoying ourselves, I felt I couldn't stand to be away from Cheryl any longer. Bob, who's a better fisherman than I and therefore was having an even better time, was very understanding, and he said we'd go home. Our plane arrived in Los Angeles in the very early morning and dawn was just breaking as we arrived at the house. I ran up the stairs two at a time to Cheryl's room.

She was sleeping when I tip-toed in, and for a long moment I stood by her bed and looked at her. Her hair was tousled on the pillow, and on her face was that lovely, pure expression of a sleeping child. When I could stand it no longer, I sat on the bed and pulled her gently to me. She wakened slowly. At last she opened her eyes and looked at me through the sleep that was still in them. And when she realized it was I, her mind jumped in the peculiar way that children's minds do.

"Oh, Mommy, I went for a walk yesterday and saw the prettiest horses!" And then, as the sleep rolled away she hugged me to her and said, "Mommy—it is really you? Oh, you're really home! You won't go away any more, will you?"

I won't ever again. I don't think I'll ever separate from my little girl until the day she wants to go herself. When that day comes, I hope I have the strength and wisdom to let her travel alone.

She has given me so much, my little girl.

THE END

THE MAN BEHIND THE RIDDLE

(Continued from page 50)

nanteclair, etc. He seems devoted to her. aybe Arlene is it. Until now, Lew has emed almost too spiritual for affairs of e heart.

Frankly, I'm puzzled. Saint or sinner, ystic or man-about-town—which is the ue Lew Ayres? He's ethereal and earthy very kind, sensitive, but sometimes un-nsciously cruel. A thinker, a dreamer, d a philosopher—and yet completely terested in matters of the flesh, like od food, good living—and girls. He's a an who is, the longer you know him, e harder to understand. But the longer know him, the more I have to respect him for, above all things, Lew Ayres is completely sincere.

He was sincere when, not long ago, he almost had a fist-fight with a photographer who snapped his picture with Jane Wyman at a night club. He loathes publicity. He was sincere when he told a friend of mine recently that the only movies he wanted to make were "helpful" movies.

Lew will talk as little about his war heroism as he will about the dozens of girls he dates. (But they come later in our story.)

Early in 1942, he was sent to an Ore-

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

PULL UP A PILLOW, pretty, and let me tell you about my dreamy F.M. That's my Favorite Man — and he answers to the familiar name of JOHNNY OLSEN, one of the great entertainers on the air. Of course, I have to share him with millions of admiring mademoiselles from 6 to 60, but he's still the lad who elicits "oh Johnny's" from me whenever I tune in on his "LADIES BE SEATED" program. Why, I'm just about glued to the chair while JOHNNY cavorts through a half-hour of fun with the females. And all those wonderful games and prizes! Incidentally, you'll find it most rewarding, too, participating in the "LADIES BE SEATED" Kindly Heart Award. JOHNNY tells all about this heart-warming listener feature on the program every week-day afternoon. You can join my generous JOHNNY (dear F.M. that he is) over your local ABC station at 3:30 P.M. (EST). When he says "LADIES BE SEATED" . . . kerplunk! . . . down I sit for a relaxing time, enhanced by pleasurable puffs on the F.M.'s (and my) favorite cigarette, Philip Morris, of course.

BE IT EVER SO HUMBLE, there's no place like home . . . especially when it houses ART LINKLETTER'S happy "HOUSE PARTY," one of the nicest places to visit come high noon any weekday. This jovial jamboree takes the cake for being one of the gayest sessions sparking the airwaves. Hear Pillsbury's "HOUSE PARTY" (better batter that cake with Pillsbury, pretty!) with ART LINKLETTER, than-whom-there-is-none-better, noon to 12:25 P.M. (EST) on ABC.

GIVE ME FIVE MINUTES MORE, (wasn't that a "pop" tune once?) 'cause there's five minutes more to complete the half-hour link with "LINK." In this gal's opinion WALTER KIERNAN can't be beat when it comes to humanizing the news and making complicated, world-wide events seem simple, even to me. He's really been around, too . . . and how I do envy the experiences he's had interviewing the outstanding personalities of the day. Catch KIERNAN keynoting the news with "ONE MAN'S OPINION" every Monday through Friday, at 12:25 P.M. (EST) over your local ABC station (yep, it's another wonderful Philip Morris program).

MY TUNING TIPS

Breakfast Club 9:00 A.M. EST
Don McNeill's wake-up-time.

Modern Romances 11:00 A.M. EST
Stories of human emotions.

Bride and Groom 2:30 P.M. EST
Boy meets girl—and weds.

Joan Lansing

your letters...

UPSET BY SHIRLEY

Dear Editor: When I heard that Shirley Temple and John Agar had split up, I was so mad I could have cried. Out of plain curiosity, I'd like to know what the mental cruelty is that Shirley is charging John with. If only movie people could learn that personal happiness is so much more important than having their faces splashed on a screen!

MARJORIE HANCOCK,
VINEYARD HAVEN, MASS.

Dear Editor: Although I'm only a few years older than Shirley, I've watched her grow from a darling little girl into a beautiful young woman. She always had a sweetness that most of the other stars seem to lack. And when she married, I was sure this marriage would last—even in Hollywood. There are always excuses made, and in Shirley's case I suppose it will be said that she married too young. Well, maybe, since 17 is pretty young. But I married at 18, and I've been married eight years.

VERDIA MARTIN, SO. HOUSTON, TEXAS

OLIVIA'S BABY

Dear Editor: I was really thrilled to learn the good news about Olivia de Havilland's baby boy. All through the long anxious months she spent in bed, my thoughts were with her. I'm sure that many of her admirers felt the same way and got a little lump in their throats, as I did, seeing the beautiful look of happiness on Olivia's face as she held her baby in her arms.

ANNE RINKEL, NEW YORK CITY

A MOTHER COMPLAINS

Dear Editor: I read your magazine from cover to cover each month—chiefly because the teen-agers at our house will bring it in, and I prefer to know what manner of material they are reading. Many of your articles are good, but I wish to protest the constant effusive eulogies on such persons as Lana Turner, Rita Hayworth and Jennifer Jones. I do not presume to judge the dramatic capabilities of these women, but they are not the proper sort to be so held up to the young people who, I think, form the larger part of your readers.

MRS. R. A. MAGGY, SAN FRANCISCO

(The movie personalities you find in our magazine are the ones requested by our readers in a very accurate month-to-month readership poll.)

AVA'S INTENTIONS

Dear Editor: It seems to me that someone who really has Ava Gardner's interests at heart should give her a piece of sisterly advice. Why does she continue to keep that wonderful guy, Howard Duff, on a string? Ava may be a stunning girl and a great star, but she's making a big mistake if she thinks those things are going to bring her happiness. Howard is sweet, handsome, successful, and he loves her. What more does she want?

CONSTANCE MILLER, CLEVELAND

DISILLUSIONED

Dear Editor: As a staunch defender of Hollywood, I've been having a hard time of it lately with more and more divorce and separation announcements hitting the headlines. What's wrong out there, anyway?

PHYLLIS DAVIDSON, BALTIMORE, MD.

(We've been wondering about it, ourselves, and have done some investigating. Next month's issue of MODERN SCREEN will have an article telling what we've found out. Title: "Divorce, the Shame of Hollywood.") gon camp for conscientious objectors. But soon he was placed in the regular Army in a non-combatant status—as a medical corpsman and chaplain's assistant. After service in New Guinea forward areas, he went ashore in the first wave of our invasion forces on Leyte in the Philippines. He helped to set up the first hospital there—to treat not only the military wounded, but also the civilian population injured in air-raids before the landing.

But Lew wanted to do more in the war than just heal men's wounds. Then, as now, he wanted to help heal their minds. He was a familiar and beloved figure in the very front lines, giving first aid and mental comfort to men who were dangerously wounded.

Through an associate of Lew's I heard the story of the terribly sick soldier who opened his eyes and saw Lew bending over him. "Why, it's Doctor Kildare," the GI said with a faint smile of astonishment. "Yes, it's Doctor Kildare. And remember, he always cures his patients," said Lew in a voice he contrived to make as brisk and confident as his screen counterpart. "Well," said the soldier, grinning, "I feel better already."

And once while Lew was in the conscientious objectors' camp, another objector was chopping wood and accidentally cut himself badly. Lew rushed to his help and by his prompt attention saved the man from bleeding to death. This helping of people is a wonderful fixation with Lew. Even before the war he used to teach first aid with tremendous patience in his open-to-all classes on the Metro lot. He also taught two nights a week, every week, at the Beverly Hills chapter of the American Red Cross. His clear-thinking brain believed that war was inevitable and he wanted people to know how to help themselves.

lust for life . . .

Just before the war ended, Lew's friends in Hollywood heard that when it was over he would enter a monastery and devote the rest of his life to prayer and meditation. But Lew's lust for living was too vibrant to disappear behind the stone walls of any religious order.

When he returned to Hollywood he resumed his movie career—and, naturally, the pursuits of female companionship.

And on the subject of the latter, I have a bone to pick with Lew: He still refuses to accept women as intelligent companions or admit them as co-partners to the fascinating side of him that is intellectual and very adult. He just wants to love women as "mere" women. He's as clear as a sunny day in California on everything else, but in my opinion he's a bit mixed up about the ladies.

"I don't like intellectual women," he once told me. And he had an unhappy experience with one woman, Olivia de Havilland, because of his persistent segregation of mind and matter.

Lew was terrifically interested in Olivia in the years before she married Marcus Goodrich. He maneuvered a meeting with her, even though his pal and Olivia's, Billy Bakewell, warned him at the time, "She's very brainy." But Miss de Havilland was so round, so firm, so pretty, her eyes so soft and appealing and the overall picture so feminine, that Lew still reasoned it just wasn't possible that she could have a mind, too. He decided to risk it.

Brother! Was that an intellectual one-night stanza! Poetry, history, psychology and psychiatry spewed forth in endless streams from Olivia's rosebud lips. Lew never saw her socially again.

But don't get Lew wrong. He's always the gentleman. Whether it's a palpitating romance you've heard he's involved in or just a casual dinner date, he'll attemp to shield the girl's privacy by looking yo straight in the face and saying he's neve even heard of her.

I remember when I wrote in my colum that Lew was feeling tender toward Jan Wyman. He called me and raised th roof and swore he'd never met her. Min you, that was after Lew had given tha fine performance with Jane in Johnn Belinda!

It wasn't until the exciting night whe Miss Wyman was given her Academ Award that Lew came into the open a her very proud escort, making no bone about his admiration for her. Bu strangely enough—and this follows th pattern of most of Lew's romances—onc the cat was out of the bag, so to speal the romance or friendship was at an end To my knowledge Jane and Lew hav never had a date since the Academ Award.

One of Lew's passions is painting. An I can usually tell which Hollywood gir is interested in Mr. Ayres, and vice versa when she tells me, "I'm going to an classes three times a week." That's ho I learned about Love and Lew fro Audrey Totter, and Arlene Dahl. The both suddenly became madly enthusiasti about painting.

But don't get Audrey or Arlene wrong either. Or Heather Walsh, the South Af rican beauty who learned how to pain under Lew's expert tutelage. I don think any of them, except maybe Heathe was in love with Lew. They just foun him an attractive and interesting escor And whether they tired of Lew, or he c them, I'll never know because, as I sai before, Lew is a Gent—and Arlen Audrey and Heather are Ladies. All I do know is this, that as the publicity in each case grew, the friendship or wha have you diminished.

Lew is never without a book or a gir but never together. You can't blame hir for loving both equally, but I do thin he's making a mistake to separate them I'm told he carries a mental notebook i his head with a list of all the available girls in town—the good-looking, the girl who are just amusing, the girls who ar simply using his name to get their name in the columns. But none of them ar fooling Lew. He has them mentally cata logued with the same precision and dee thought that he gives to helping peopl or to indexing his magnificent library c classics.

Well, it's no crime to love the ladie (Where would we be if men didn't? The thing is that with Lew, his adoratio for the fair sex stands out sharply be cause of his almost saintly approach t the other aspects of living.

the spiritual approach . . .

There are weeks at a time, sometime months, when he doesn't see girls. That when he goes off secretly in his trailer t paint and ponder in the desert. No on has ever caught up with Lew on thes trips. But he is probably camped some where on the huge tract of land he owr near Newhall. He takes along as man books and as few clothes as possible an there in the desert, I'm told, he com munes with nature-in-the-raw. Mayb that's why he likes women so much whe he comes back to our Hollywood civili zation. We're such a change from na ture-in-the-raw! (Or are we?)

Lew has a phenomenal memory. H can remember word for word whole chap ters of terribly difficult-to-understan works on philosophy and religion. H can also remember the telephone num ber of every girl he calls, and every on he doesn't.

He hasn't too much sense of humo have found that men as intense as Lew ldom have. But he has a quality that perhaps more attractive to a woman. hen he talks to you, you and your roblems are the most interesting subject the world to him. His eyes never leave our face while you talk. I don't think it a pose. He is genuinely interested in eople. He is very kind, always gentle—kcept when he's angry about something e doesn't like in some newspaper. He is orshipped by his butler, Joe Smith.

Joe came in when Ginger Rogers went t. Lew's interest in astrology went out about the same time. Always on the ystic side, Lew worked out from the lanets the right day, hour and minute marry Ginger. Perhaps his figuring was rrong, or perhaps he misread the astral gns that might have told him that he nd Ginger had nothing in common. She ked to dance and go to parties. Lew ked to fish in solitude. The only parties, ther than for two, that Lew has ever iven on his mountain top have been for roups of scientists or writers. (Ironic-lly, Ginger now prefers fishing to party-g. And I think Jack Briggs, from whom ne is getting divorced, would rather ance!)

When Ginger married Lew, her luck Hollywood changed for the better. ew's luck changed, but for the worse. He had made a big success in All Quiet on the Western Front. Ginger was one of a hundred Hollywood ingenues. Then Fred Astaire latched onto her as his dancing partner. Lew, after the first good picture, remained static. And in Hollywood when you're static, you travel backward. It was too much for his ego. The divorce was friendly and Lew and Ginger are still friends.

Before Ginger, Lew had married Lola Lane. This mating can best be described as mutual combustion. Before Lola there was Lili Damita, who later became Mrs. Errol Flynn. Lew—or maybe Lili—was smart enough to know that marriage between them could only ruin a beautiful friendship.

Today there is no special girl in Lew's life. But I think that one day, and a day not too far off, he will realize that a book is incomplete in itself for happy living, and that a friendship with a girl could be so much better than casual if he would admit her to the secret and exciting life of his mind. Then, perhaps, he will find what all philosophers since the world began have been seeking—true happiness.

Lew Ayres deserves it—because few men in Hollywood, or anywhere else, have given so much to their fellow men.

THE END

" . . . TO SUSIE FROM ALAN"

(Continued from page 36)

ne day the principal of the school at-nded by Carol Lee and Lonnie—as they all Alana—sent for the girls. "There's a uck driver here, ready to take you two ut to the ranch. But I'll have to check ith your mother before you can go."

Carol Lee laughed. "That's no truck river. That's Pat Lane, Daddy's best riend."

Alan's friends are the people he feels t home with. A few happen to be names. lost of them aren't. He's not a good ixer. You've got to be around quite a hile before he'll loosen up with you. trangers leave him self-conscious and is tongue bungles at small talk. "I wish were the type who could walk into a oom and have everybody love me. But m not, and there's no use wishing."

In people, what he most dislikes is pre-nse. In gadgets, what he most dislikes the telephone. If there's no one else round to answer, he'd as soon let it ng. To Sue, who leaps at the first tin-le, this is incomprehensible. "I'd die curiosity," she says.

"When you do," he assures her gravely, nstead of a lily, I'll put a phone in your and."

Perhaps because of his early acquaintance with life's seamy side, Ladd has that faculty for putting himself into the other fellow's skin which makes for true gentleness. In his business, the star is king and often acts like one—but never Ladd. On the Paramount lot, his unfailing consideration of his co-workers is a byword. But any allusion to it embarrasses him. "We're a team," he says. "I'm lucky enough to be the guy who's picked to carry the ball across the line."

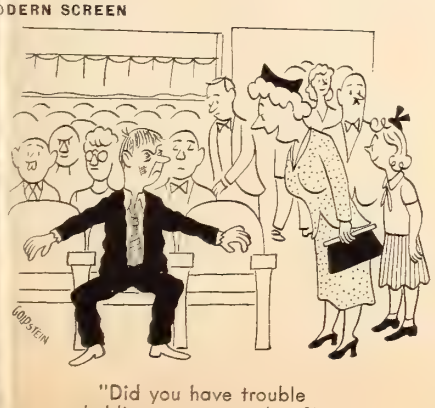
Outwardly, Alan very rarely loses control though he can tie himself into knots over scripts and stories. Sue is his safety-valve. Except when he has an early call sometimes he and she are up till three in the morning, batting ideas around. "Keeps me from arguing with a lot of people," he says.

The heart of his personal life rests with Sue and the children. In the unsure world of his youth, his mother's love was the one stable element. Therefore he knows how to value love when he finds it. One of his proudest days was the day he tied a bow to the door of the new house: "This is to Susie from Alan."

They'd been wanting to build ever since they were married. At first they couldn't afford it. Then came priorities and the shall-we-buy-now-or-wait-till-we-can-build routine. They looked at dozens of places that were either too expensive or didn't meet the family needs. Finally they bought a lot in Holmby Hills. But not till last year did they take the bull by the horns and go to an architect.

"We'd like lots of windows," they told him. "We've always felt that in California you can't get too much of the outside inside."

"Maybe modern's what you want, then."



"Maybe," said Sue, eyeing Alan a little dubiously.

"Okay by me."

The plans were drawn. In September the ground was broken, the foundation laid, the cement poured. Sue and Alan watched. "I hope this is what you want," said he.

She turned quickly. "Why? Don't you?"

ODERN SCREEN

"Did you have trouble holding our seats, dear?"

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady—throw your razor away—use safe, odorless Nair lotion to keep legs smoother . . . more exciting . . . hair-free longer . . . with no ugly razor stubble! No irritation to normal skin. Get Nair today!

Cosmetic lotion to remove hair safely

FOR LEGS THAT DELIGHT USE NAIR TONIGHT 79¢ plus tax

FALSE TEETH

KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion; holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that one can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate. 25c and 50c at druggists. . . . If your druggist hasn't it, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box.
© I. P. Inc.
KLUTCH CO., Box 5087-A, ELMIRA, N. Y.

GET Coets

IDEAL TO USE AS EYE PADS

HANDY COTTON SQUARES
DOZENS OF COSMETIC USES
80 FOR 29¢ 40 FOR 15¢
At drugstore and cosmetic counters

"Now, wait a minute. You did want a modern house, didn't you?"

"No. If it had been left to me, I'd have had French provincial."

"That's what I wanted!"

"Oh Alan, why didn't you say so?"

"I thought you wanted modern!"

All was not yet lost. Using the same foundation and floor plan, they had the roof and exterior changed. Big windows facing the patio bring the outside inside. The rest is French provincial. Sue set her sights for a June house-warming, while friends laughed merrily over the notion that you could build a house and be settled in eight months. Alan bet on Susie and won, though her system did involve some minor discomforts. Coming home from work, ready to fling himself into a pet chair, he'd find it gone. Next day a sofa would join the vanishing act. Sue was having the stuff sneaked out to be re-upholstered. They wound up sitting on the floor. One night Alan got hungry, went down for a bowl of soup, and couldn't find any. "Exit the canned goods?" he inquired. Sue looked guilty. Thanks to her foresight, however, they moved in June and to a well-ordered home.

sentimental gentleman . . .

That was the day Alan pulled a gag that didn't come off. His timing was wrong. For both it had been a day of fulfillment, long in coming. Inside, Alan felt as elated as Sue. But being a woman, she had her feelings nearer the surface. In the bedroom she discovered a cherished picture of her father, re-framed by Alan as a surprise. This fresh evidence of his thoughtfulness sent her cup brimming over. "Oh, Alan!" was all she could quaver, when he returned from an errand to the hardware store.

"Like it, honey? Well, come on outside. I've got something else to show you."

At the store he'd picked up a For Rent sign, which was now tacked to their beautiful new front door. One gander, and Sue looked ready to burst into tears. Unprepared for this reaction, Alan could have kicked himself. "I'm a dope," he consoled her, ripping the sign away. "Might have known you're too tired for anything to be funny."

"I'm the dope," she conceded. "But let's go burn that thing."

He has the kind of male humor that's tickled by feminine inconsistencies. Every night after dinner Sue goes around turning off lights. "Get my wife!" he chuckles. "We've just built a new house. Every time I look around, we've got a new piece of furniture. But my wife turns out lights. That's her contribution toward saving the Ladd fortune."

Unperturbed, she continues to turn off lights. As for furniture, by adapting and recovering, she was able to use most of their old stuff. But of course in a new house, you always need some new pieces. Every now and then Alan feels he should put his foot down.

It's not a heavy foot. By temperament, he's generous to a fault and calls it self-indulgence—"like everything else you do for your own pleasure." Every year they go through the same routine. He gives Sue his Christmas list.

"Are you sure that's all, Alan? Because I want to get the shopping done early."

"That's all."

So through long experience she buys three dozen extra presents for him to give, knowing he'll need that many at the last minute.

He does his own shopping for his presents to Sue. Comes home laden, sneaks the loot into a closet, hauls it out the same night and planks it in front of her. The first time this happened, she protested. "But I won't have anything to open at Christmas! I like to open boxes at Christmas, even if they're empty."

"Open 'em now, I want to see if you like 'em."

On Christmas Day there were more boxes under the tree—half of them filled with presents, half of them empty except for a card: "Your wish is my law."

But now and then he feels he should take a stand. As when Sue decided they needed some plates for over the mantel in the dining room.

"We've got lots of plates," Alan objected.

"But they're not just the right kind."

"Better make 'em do."

"Okay," said the docile Mrs. Ladd.

A few nights later he said casually, "Guess you really want those plates, don't you, Susie? Might as well have 'em."

It was obviously a load off his chest. Denying Susie the plates bothered him a lot worse than it did her.

Jezebel, the boxer, sleeps beside his bed. If she wants out, she scratches gently at his hand or rattles the chain-collar round her neck. As above noted, Alan's a guy who loves to sleep. But let it be a dog who disturbs him, and he'll never say boo. Same way in other departments. He's a stickler for neatness. When the kids leave things in a mess, he really gets after them. The dogs can tear cushions to shreds or try out their teeth on the new porch furniture, and it's fine with Alan. "People have sense, dogs haven't," he explains.

Frank Freeman gave them Jezebel as a puppy. She was raised with Lonnie. Snoopy belongs to Laddie, Junior. Happy, the collie, is Carol Lee's dog. Each of the kids owned a dog but two-year-old David. Last Valentine's Day Alan appeared with a baby boxer, sired by Vic Mature's Genius. "This is David's dog," he announced.

"Look!" Carol Lee pointed to the puppy's chest, marked by an almost perfect A. "Let's call her Scarlet, after The Scarlet Letter."

Because people have sense and must sooner or later come to terms with reality, Alan believes in discipline for children. To him, discipline means character-building. "I want my kids to have nice things. They're entitled to that as long as I can afford it. But I also want them to earn it. Developing good qualities will make life easier on them. If they're courteous, they'll be better liked. If they learn the difference between honesty and sham, they'll like themselves better. If they take responsibility, they'll be stronger inside. If they know how to feel for others, they'll be happier people."

Dinner time is family time at the Ladds'. Sue and Alan like to listen to the kids' problems. The kids like to hear what goes on at the studio. Every aspect of th business is freely discussed in their pres ence, every question answered. This i deliberate policy on the part of their par ents. Neither Sue nor Alan has any clos relatives. "If anything happened to u we'd want the children to understand ou affairs."

When Alan took his suspension, Carc Lee was a sophomore at high school. Th day the news broke, she appeared in th principal's office. "Please, if there are an extras from now on, I'd like to pay ther out of my allowance. My daddy's nc working and I'd rather not have any extra charged on the bill."

Then there's the other side of the meda One Sunday night, Sue and Alan were in vited to a birthday party. There were ne servants in the house, and while the seemed entirely satisfactory, they wer still new. So, because of the younge children, Carol Lee and Laddie were tol to stay home that evening. Complicatior arose when Booboo Howell, son of th groceryman at Camarillo, dropped in an offered to take them to a movie. Carc Lee called her mother.

a job to finish . . .

"Lonnie and David are fast asleep, an the new people said they'd stay up till w got back. D'you think it would be all righ for us to go?"

Sue gave her permission. A little late she mentioned the matter to Alan. It wa one of the rare occasions when he ble his top. "Come on. We're going home

"I'm sorry, Alan. But don't blame th children, it's my fault."

"It's their fault, too. When they're give a job, they should finish it."

To impress that fact on their mind they were deprived of certain privilege and though Sue insisted that the blam rested with her, they took their medicin cheerfully. For the most part, they meas ure up to standard and beyond. Sinc there's nothing arbitrary about the dea since all the whys and wherefores are ex plained, they're proud of their place i the family set-up. When Alan goes o location, Sue goes along. Being togethe is part of their psychology for a happ marriage. So they've got to leave some one behind whom they know they ca trust. That someone is Carol Lee.

While Sue and Alan were in Chicag she took charge of the kids up at th ranch. One day Lonnie tumbled from th swing and knocked out two teeth. He sister hustled her to the dentist—then, i case of a shock or something, to the pe diatrician. Having handled the emergenc as capably as Sue herself could have don she polished things off by calling Chicag and putting Lonnie on the phone for adde reassurance.

Alan thinks rewards are just as im portant as discipline. For a job well don Carol Lee was rewarded. But the kic seem to feel that the top award for mer is their father's approval.

For himself, he's got a silver dresse set. His name ranks high on all popu larity polls. His pictures roll up record And he can't get rid of the sense that he in on a temporary pass. He's incredulou —but grateful. Grateful to Sue, who stood shoulder-to-shoulder with him. Bu then, Susie loves him. Grateful to Para mount, who gave him his break. Bu Paramount doesn't love him so much tha they'd pay him good money except for or reason.

"And that," says Alan, "is—people. Pec ple out there in the audience. They' been wonderful to me, I still can't figu why." He doesn't express emotion easil but the quiet voice goes deep with feelir when he says, "I wish I could find son way to thank them." THE E

"Cut!"

YOU KNOW ME, ALLYSON!

(Continued from page 31)

But back then when I was 15 and had never spoken to a screen star, I didn't at first even have the courage to try out the telephone number. Each time I approached the phone, a lump would come into my throat, butterflies would zoom up and down in my stomach, and I'd hang up.

But one Sunday I finally got up enough nerve. I grabbed the phone and quickly dialed the number. As soon as a voice answered, I leaped headlong into my prepared speech. "My name is Gwen Littlefield. I've been an admirer of yours for some time. I think a fan club would do you a world of good. It's a lot of work, I know, but I'm prepared and qualified to go through with it. I'm sure, Miss Allyson, you're going to be a big star. . . ." And on and on I went, giving the voice at the opposite end of the wire no opportunity to say a word.

When at last I finished, the voice, patient and soft, said, "I'm very sorry, Miss Allyson isn't at home. This is the maid."

I almost died.

But the next day I actually got June herself on the phone; and somehow, I immediately lost all my nervousness.

"Why, yes," said June, after I'd explained my purpose, "I'd just love to have a fan club. I think it's awfully sweet of you to volunteer. But what exactly do fan clubs do?"

"Oh," I said, "they make you a big star. I'll call you up again in a few days and give you all the particulars."

"You be sure and do that," June said. And I sat down and wrote MODERN SCREEN, asking for information on how to start a fan club.

The magazine told me that the first thing to do was to get the star's permission. When I wrote back and told them that I already had it, they printed my name and address. Readers wrote to me by the hundreds, and before I knew it, the club was under way. The dues were one dollar a year, and for that sum members received a membership card, four club journals a year, and a large photo autographed by June.

For about a month I phoned June regularly, and we talked about the club and our future plans for its development. Near the end of October, June must have become a little curious about me and what I looked like, because she phoned me one night and said, "Gwen, I wonder if you could come up to my apartment right away."

Fortified with my "Allyson Scrapbook," to prove what a loyal fan I was, I rushed over to her Wilshire apartment.

My knees were actually shaking as I pressed the doorbell. I was positive June would be gracious and refreshing, I told myself, but my knees wouldn't listen.

June's maid showed me in. I sat down on a sofa. I waited for what seemed an eternity. I was on the verge of dashing out, scrapbook and all—when June came into the room. She wore a very tailored black suit, a white blouse and, over her tawny hair, a flaming red bandanna. She looked exactly as I had imagined.

The words I had planned to say tangled in my throat. June came to my rescue. "What beautiful red hair you have," she said. "I really envy you. Tell me, how's our club coming?"

I stammered a few words.

"Let's look at the scrapbook," June said. As we turned the pages, she became more expansive. "These pictures were taken in New York before I'd ever seen Hollywood. . . . This was my first magazine layout. . . . Don't I look silly in that one?"

June got up and left the room for a moment and then returned with two baby orchids. "A fellow in Hawaii," she said, "sent these to me yesterday. I want you to have them in honor of our meeting."

That night when I went home, bedecked in orchids, I felt like the screen's number one glamor-girl myself. To me, June Allyson was the most thoughtful, genuine, and wonderful actress in the world.

The following day she asked if I'd like to go to the studio with her and pick up a script. I sure didn't turn that opportunity down. For years I had stood outside the MGM gate wondering if ever I'd be able to get in—and now, here was June Allyson, asking me to go with her, asking me to walk in as if I'd done the same thing every day for years.

As I drove with her to the studio, little bubbles of excitement simmered inside of

"See if I wait until 8:15, I miss the comedy, but get out at 10:20. Right? Or suppose I go in now at 7:20 . . ."

How to give QUICK REST to tired eyes

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST TODAY

EYES OVERWORKED? Put two drops of gentle, safe Murine in each eye. Then feel that refreshing, soothing sensation that comes instantly. You get—

QUICK RELIEF from the discomfort of tired eyes. Murine's seven important ingredients are scientifically blended to cleanse and refresh overworked, tired eyes. Use Murine morning and night and whenever your eyes tell you to.

MURINE
FOR YOUR EYES

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

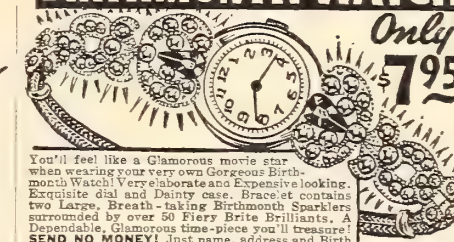
Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.



Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 3309, Detroit 27, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1955 LAKE LAB

BIRTHMONTH WATCH

Only $7.95

You'll feel like a Glamorous movie star when wearing your very own Gorgeous Birthmonth Watch! Very elaborate and Expensive looking. Exquisite dial and Dainty case. Bracelet contains two Large, Breath-taking Birthmonth Sparklers surrounded by over 50 Fiery Brite Brilliants. A Dependable, Glamorous time-piece you'll treasure! SEND NO MONEY! Just name, address and Birth Date. Pay postman C.O.D. $7.95 plus 10% tax & postage on delivery!

WORLD-WIDE DIAMOND CO., Dept. H-913
2451 S. MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO 16, ILLINOIS

Learn At Home To TAILOR YOUR OWN CLOTHES!

Be the envy of your friends. Wear smart clothes you tailor yourself! Easy, fun to learn women's custom tailoring at home. Practical course takes you step-by-step. Sewing experience not necessary. Many earn while learning. Chance to get into well-paid tailoring work, or own profitable business. Low fee includes supplies. Mail coupon now!

GET FREE FACTS

METROPOLITAN SCHOOL of TAILORING
35 S. Dearborn, Dept. 1101, Chicago 2, Ill.
Rush FREE Booklet and sample lesson pages.

Name .....

Full Address .....

Read it—

Listen to it—

Enjoy it—

MODERN ROMANCES

A great magazine

NOW

A great radio program broadcast daily over the ABC Network

Everywhere people are talking about this new kind of radio program, talking about the human interest in the stories and the frankness with which they are enacted.

Like MODERN ROMANCES magazine, on which it is based, each program is about real people in dramatic situations you yourself may face. Listen to MODERN ROMANCES today and we guarantee you'll listen every day.

Tune in "Modern Romances"
Every weekday
Mon. thru Fri. on the American Broadcasting Co.
A B C NETWORK
see your newspaper
for local time

me. I tried to stay calm, but I couldn't. June didn't help, either. Her driving was terrible. She did things to her Ford convertible that were simply out of this world. She drives like a demon, and if they ever hold a speed classic in Indianapolis for women, I'm sure she'll win it hands down!

At MGM, we strode directly into the office of producer Joe Pasternak—at least, the outer office, anyway. June was escorted into Mr. Pasternak's inner sanctum, and I waited in the reception room. Within two minutes, Mr. Pasternak came out and asked me to join them inside. I was flattered no end.

The producer then began to tell June the story of her next picture. I sat on a long, low, leather couch, lost temporarily in the massiveness of all this luxury, while he flailed his hands, described all sorts of characters, explained bits of dialogue and, in general, carried on the way producers are supposed to carry on.

I tried to listen attentively, but I couldn't understand what Mr. Pasternak was talking about. He has, or at least had at that time, a thick German accent that couldn't be swept away by a tractor.

After narrating the story, Mr. Pasternak turned to me and asked a few questions. I couldn't understand him, but I didn't want to appear too stupid, so I just nodded yes, and smiled my most toothy smile. I was sure I was doing the correct thing, playing the sweet, agreeable young girl.

embarrassing moment . . .

En route to June's apartment, however, June burst forth with a typical gusty, lusty roll of Allyson laughter. I couldn't see what was so funny. "Gwen," she asked, "did you find it difficult to understand Mr. Pasternak?"

"Frankly," I admitted, "I did. Why?"

June laughed some more. "Because," she explained, "when he asked you if you thought the story was very bad, you smiled and said, 'Yes.'"

I went home that day so embarrassed that I felt I could never face June again, let alone preside over her fan club. But the next day, she called me and said, "Gwen, I just wanted you to know that I had a lot of fun with you yesterday, and I just know you're going to be the best fan club president an actress ever had. You go ahead with all your plans and I'll cooperate as much as possible. In fact, you be sure and come up to my place some day this week."

I did, of course—and between us we made an arrangement whereby June personally signed all the membership cards and club photographs. We used to spend one night a week together while she signed and I blotted. On these nights, formality was forgotten. We just lay sprawled on the floor, wearing blue jeans and sloppy sweaters and comfortable loafers, and after the work was done, we'd talk or listen to records or just watch the fire.

June loves a fire, and even on the warmest nights, she'd start one going in the fireplace. And it's not because she's cold-natured, either!

As I look back on those many nights I spent with June, they seem so wonderful, and I remember with what strict and rapt attention I would listen to her every word and hang on to her every sentence. I got to know her ways and habits and moods, and I learned that it was best never to ask her any personal questions —especially about her love life. But like all girls, she betrayed the state of her heart in a dozen different little ways.

I remember one night when she seemed particularly moody and she looked as if she had been crying. I didn't have to be a Sherlock Holmes to figure out that June and Dick Powell (with whom she was going at the time) had had a spat.

Sure enough, the story came out. In her characteristically frank manner, June had said to Dick, after seeing him regularly for five months, "What are your intentions?" Dick had replied with a smile, "Why? Have you had a couple of other offers?" And June had said, "Yes, I have."

Well, Dick went on to explain that his divorce from Joan Blondell wouldn't be final for months. And after two marriages, he thought he'd better go slow about a third. He had two children to look after and a lot of other responsibilities. The upshot of the whole thing was that June had said, "Please take me home."

The Allyson-Powell romance was apparently over that night, and June showed it. But a week later when I dropped by, June was all smiles and sparkle. Dick had thought the whole thing over and had raced to June's place 24 hours after their "falling out" and had taken her in his arms and said, "I love you, June. I love you." June had started to smile and cry, all at the same time, and mumbled into his chest, "Oh! I love you, too, Tommy. I love you so much." (Tommy was June's favorite name for Dick.)

Then Dick had proposed marriage, and June had accepted, saying, "I'll make you the most perfect wife in the world, honestly I will, darling. We'll share everything, our work, our play. It'll be heaven. I know it will."

June and Dick were married in August, 1945. But the marriage didn't alter the relationship between June and me. The fan club by this time was going great guns, and so was June's career. Despite the fact that she was only five years older than I, she seemed to take an almost maternal interest in me.

She began to teach me many things. For example, the first meal I ever had served by a maid, was with June. She noticed my little blunders. When the maid came around to me and paused at my right, I started to reach up and take my serving. Just as I did, the girl moved to the correct side, and I blushed with embarrassment. June said nothing at the time. We finished the meal, laughing and joking as usual, but after dinner, we settled down to a lengthy discussion of Emily Post and proper etiquette.

little white lie . . .

It wasn't that I didn't have good manners. At least, I hope I did! But June understood that my family and friends lived under circumstances far different from hers. Her method was never to reprimand, but always to explain. The only time she reprimanded me about anything was when she found out that I had lied to her about my age. I had made myself out to be one year older than I actually was. When June learned the truth, she got angry—the only time I ever saw her genuinely angry—and she let me have some verbal punishment. I deserved it.

All other times, however, she was gentle and kind and understanding. For example, there was a period in our early acquaintance when I would get flustered upon meeting her friends. The first time I was introduced to Peter Lawford, I mumbled a faint "How-do-you-do." I was the same way with Gloria DeHaven and Frank Sinatra and Gene Kelly.

"You must never be frightened of these people," June explained. "When you're introduced, open your mouth and speak distinctly, and when you shake hands with anyone, make sure that your handclasp is firm."

that's hollywood!

"America really is the land of opportunity," Bing Crosby insists. "Look at us," he says pointing to Bob Hope and himself. "Where else could a piece of spaghetti and a meat ball both wind up with so much gravy?"

Irving Hoffman
The Hollywood Reporter

To be perfectly truthful, June's handshake is too firm. It leaves a cramp in your hand. But she's a stickler about it. The same way with grammar. One night, I said, "It's me," instead of saying, "It's I." June carefully explained how the verb "to be" always takes the nominative case. And she should know! She was graduated from Roosevelt High School in New York with the highest average of any student in the school—something amazing like a 97.3%.

Our friendship, though, wasn't completely one-sided. I did a lot of things for June, too. For instance, when newspaper columnists started panning June for the way she dressed, I got my club members to swamp them with our combined opinion. We deluged them with letters and, on one occasion, with a 90-foot scroll that contained more than 19,000 signatures. That was too much for the critics. They retreated.

In one year, the club grew to 2,000 members, all active. We entered a contest run by MODERN SCREEN to determine the best fan club in the United States and Canada. We won, and Hedda Hopper presented us with a huge, beautiful silver trophy cup. June was as thrilled as I. She had the studio take pictures of us with the cup, and she ran around showing it to everyone she knew. I beamed like a strip of newly-polished chromium.

June also took the cup home with her to show Dick, and one night she carried it with her to dinner at Ciro's. She promised to return it to me the next day. She never did. The last time I saw it, the cup was filled with roses and resting on the table next to her bed in her twelve-room Bel Air home. It's one of her most prized possessions, and I want her to keep it.

Christmas always posed a big problem to me, because I never knew what June wanted. The fan club members always sent donations for a gift, the sum usually amounting to more than $100. Before I spent it, I'd always canvass June's friends as to what she really wanted or needed. One year, it was an antique sterling silver coffee-maker, more than 100 years old. Another year, it was two sets of beautifully-bound books. Another, a complete ski outfit. My personal Christmas gift to June was usually a book.

As for June, she gave me some wonderful treasures—but the one I value most is a miniature dual picture-frame made of sterling. It carries the engraving, "Gwenn from June."

June explained the misspelling of my name with, "I know you only use one 'n' but two 'n's' look much prettier."

When I went off to college, I couldn't continue with the June Allyson fan club, largely because I didn't have enough time, what with studies and dates and extra-curricular activities. One afternoon, I started to explain this to June. Before I could, she raised her hand. "Your education comes first," she insisted. "You must drop the club. That's an order."

Before I left June that afternoon, I made one last request. "I've blotted over 20,000 autographed pictures for you," I said, "but I've never had one of my own. May I?"

For a minute, June could hardly believe that. Then she smiled, excused herself, and walked over to her desk. She took out a large photograph and on it she wrote these words: "For Gwenn. Thanks for being so wonderful to me and I'll always be grateful. Fondly, Junie."

Then she took me to the door. As we said goodbye, I took her hand and we hugged—and then I ran out.

And tears were streaming down my face. THE END

HOLLYWOOD'S LOVELIEST CHRISTMAS STORY

(Continued from page 44)

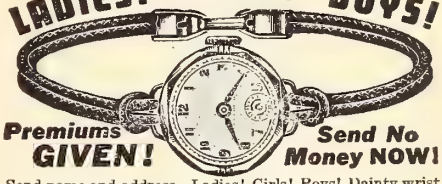
word to describe us. My father was a sharecropper in Texas. He always had a tough time supplying us with food, never mind clothing, and more kids kept coming along through the years. And then one year, I guess it just got too much for the old man. He gave up and walked out on us, and we never heard from him again.

"There were nine of us kids by then, and my mother tried to look after us, but that's an awful lot of kids for one woman all alone. When Christmas Eve used to come around, all of us would hang up our socks, and if we were lucky, we'd find an apple or an orange in one of them the next morning. Sometimes, there weren't enough apples to go around, so only the youngest would get them. We used to go into the woods and cut down a birch branch and use that for a tree.

"I don't mean to bore you with a long story. But my ma died when I was 16. The young kids in the family were put into an orphanage and those of us who were a little older scattered over Texas. Well, the birch branch for a Christmas tree."

Now, all of this was spoken matter-of-factly. There was no self-pity in this boy's voice. He wasn't feeling sorry for himself or mad at anyone. He wasn't leading up to a hand-out. I had reminisced about my youthful Christmases, and that had simply reminded him of his own.

I asked his name.



"Audie Murphy," he said.

I swallowed hard at that one. "Not the Audie Murphy?" But even as I asked the question, I knew the answer. Yes, this was Audie Murphy all right, the most-decorated foot soldier of World War II, the kid from Texas whose picture had been splashed across the cover of Life, the handsome young kid who'd been signed to a movie contract by Jimmy Cagney. No wonder his face looked so familiar!

"But what are you doing," I asked in astonishment, "dressed like this and bumming a ride? You're a national hero; you've got a screen contract; you should be having Christmas dinner with L. B. Mayer or

PAIN
of headache, neuritis and neuralgia
RELIEVED
incredibly fast
the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend—ANACIN®

Here's why
Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients. Get Anacin Tablets today.

LADIES! GIRLS! BOYS!

Premiums GIVEN! Send No Money NOW!
Send name and address—Ladies! Girls! Boys! Dainty wrist watches, pocket watches, alarm clocks, flashlights, ovenware sets, blankets—other premiums or Cash Commission easily yours SIMPLY GIVE colorful art pictures with White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE for chaps and mild burns, sold to friends at 25 cents a box (with popular picture) and remit amounts stated for premium wanted as explained in catalog sent with order postage paid by us. Our 55th year. Write now for trial order of SALVE and Pictures on trust to start.
WILSON CHEM. CO., Dept. 10-57A TYRONE, PA.

Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold
FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

FREE PHOTO
Of your favorite MOVIE STAR Large size
Write today for your favorite, direct from HOLLYWOOD. Illus. catalog & SURPRISE offer. Send 15c for handling.
HOLLYWOOD PHOTO PRODUCTS, STUDIO B
Box 1446, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Start high as $3,351 A YEAR!
Men, Women. Prepare NOW for 1950 examinations. Veterans get preference. Write immediately for FREE 40-PAGE BOOK with list of positions and full particulars telling how to qualify for them. (Not Government Sponsored.)
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. Z-108, Rochester 4, N. Y.

BE A Nurse
MAKE $35-$45 A WEEK
Practical nurses are needed in every community . . . doctors rely on them . . . patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 51st yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 231, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Audie grinned. "You should've used the past tense," he said. And then he explained what had happened to him in Hollywood.

He had arrived a year before and Jimmy Cagney had signed him to a contract at $75 a week. He'd been dined and wined by industry big shots, rushed by celebrity hunters, given the Grade A treatment. But then Cagney changed his plans and dropped him—and suddenly, Audie was just an ex-veteran like ten million others. He couldn't find any place to live unless he paid an exorbitant bonus. He had very little money, because he was using the $59 per month he got on his disability pension to support his young brothers and sisters whom he'd taken out of the orphanage in Texas. "To be absolutely honest," he said, "I'm living on a cot in the back of Terry Hunt's gym and Terry is staking me to food money while I'm trying to write a book about my war experiences."

Well, when I heard this from one of the greatest war heroes of all times, my insides tangled into one big knot. "What a sweet way," I said to myself, "we have of showing gratitude to our war heroes. What a great way for this kid to spend Christmas." I reached into my pocket and took out a twenty. "Take this," I said.

Audie pushed my hand away. "No," he said. "I don't need it. I've got enough money. I've got 11 bucks. Terry gave it to me yesterday. It'll last the week."

I tried to get Audie to accept my money. I told him it wasn't a hand-out. It was a loan. He could pay it back any time. "Take it," I said, "and have a Merry Christmas."

"Don't worry," Audie said. "I'll have a Merry Christmas. Could you drop me at Earl McCaskell's filling station? It's near here."

I drove into Earl's filling station on Sunset Boulevard. As Audie got out, two little kids belonging to Al Foster, the mechanic, jumped all over Audie. "Hey, Audie, look what we got for Christmas!" they shouted. And they began to pull guns from holsters, puzzles from pockets, and all sorts of little toys from their persons. Audie joked with them, and in a minute their father came out and shooed the kids inside. As he did, one of the boys dropped a miniature plastic airplane on the sidewalk.

A freckle-faced urchin suddenly dashed from somewhere across the station, picked up the airplane, and started to sprint off.

In three strides, Audie caught and collared the kid. He brought him back and sat him down on the fender of my car. The kid couldn't have been more than eight or nine. "Why'd you take that plane?" Audie asked. "You know it doesn't belong to you."

The freckle-faced little redhead began to whimper.

"You know the penalty for stealing?" Audie asked with mock seriousness.

The kid began to cry. "I didn't mean to take it," he bawled. "It's just that all the other kids around here always get somethin' for Christmas. And I don't never get nothin'."

"Where's your folks?" Audie asked.

"My ma works in a laundry on week days," the kid sobbed, "and in a drive-in on Sundays."

"Where's your old man?" Audie asked.

"I don't know," the kid cried. "He just ran off last year and he never came back." And then tears started to cascade down that dirty little face and the little body shook with sobs.

Whereupon Audie slid his fingers into his cash pocket and came up with two bills, a 10 and a one—all the money he had in the world. He pressed the 10 into the kid's palm. "Here—go buy yourself some toys," he muttered.

The kid stared at the 10-dollar bill in disbelief. He wiped away his tears with a motion of his sleeve. "No, Mister," he said. "I don't need all this."

Audie looked down at the little fellow. I'm sure he saw in him the poor, deserted ragamuffin that he himself had been a dozen years ago. His eyes were misty, and he swallowed hard.

"Take it and spend it," Audie said gruffly. "Today's Christmas. Everyone should have a Merry Christmas."

THE END

You won't want to miss the complete screen story of Audie Murphy's newest movie, The Kid from Texas, in the entertainment-loaded January issue of SCREEN STORIES magazine.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF BURT LANCASTER

(Continued from page 28)

is still taking all her meals privately.

But that still counts up to seven sitting down to a meal—which will have been completely prepared by Norma herself. There is a maid in the house and a woman who comes in by the day to help out, but Norma does all the cooking. She loves to fix food, and so does Burt. Unless otherwise directed he will make the salad before dinner, with his favorite dressing consisting of olive oil, vinegar, grated Parmesan cheese, dash of lemon, a raw egg and a touch of Worcestershire sauce. However, his culinary art doesn't go much beyond salads.

Burt's last fling at making the more important ingredients of a meal happened just recently when Norma was in the hospital having Susan Elizabeth. Burt decided he'd feed Jimmy and Billy, though the maid stood ready to take over.

"Nothing to it," Burt told Nick Cravat, reaching for a box of cereal. "You just pour this stuff in water and boil it a while and it's all set."

"I dunno," said Nick, looking a little worried. "Isn't there more to it than that?"

"Nah," said Burt, pouring until the pot was almost full.

The water boiled. The cereal swelled and swelled. It began rising over the edge of the pot. Burt clapped the cover on and held it down tightly. It was no use. The stuff began to work its way out anyway.

"Where's it all coming from?" the astonished Burt wanted to know.

"I told you," said Nick. "There's more to it."

Eventually Burt got the stove more or less cleaned off, filled two dishes and called Jimmy and Billy to the table. Jimmy tasted his and said, "I don't like it." Then find the two he wanted. "No good!" he pronounced.

Burt made way for the maid.

Following breakfast, Burt will leave for the studio if he's making a picture. Otherwise he may have an acrobatic work-out with Nick or else decide to fix up a few things around the house. In this last decision he never gets much encouragement. Because of his work with acrobatic gear earlier in his career Burt can splice a wire cable or a four-ply rope most expertly. But, he has found, there is remarkably little need for this sort of skill around a home. And Burt doesn't do too well at what is required—simple stuff like wielding a paint brush, repairing a light socket, or beating a nail with a hammer. He paints and he repairs and he hammers, but invariably the paint job is streaky, the fuses blow and the hammer mashes his thumb. This is where Nick has to come to the rescue.

Burt's last attempt at being handy saw him erecting a fence to keep the boys from wandering away or tumbling down the hill. After finishing the job and discovering that the fence sort of weaved around the house, instead of taking straight lines, and also that in places it gave like a springboard, he took the usual step necessary to save the day. He went to the phone and called Nick.

While he may not shine at carpentry, Burt has other duties around the house which he performs most proficiently. Norma, for instance, thinks his judgment about her clothes is infallible. And up to about a year ago Burt was most honest in his pronouncements of that kind. Then it came to him one day that whenever he said he didn't like something Norma had bought, say a hat, she would never wear it again. She'd go out and buy another pered with the truth slightly. He almost always likes Norma's hats now. And whatever other purchases she comes home with.

It is also important that Burt be present when the children play their records. He is expected to sing along with them. Burt, in the opinion of experts, has a pleasant singing voice—but no more than that. There is one man though, who stands in open defiance of the experts. He is Burt's father.

James Lancaster thinks his son has an excellent voice. To quote him exactly: "Not bad, not bad at all. If Burt took up singing he would be better than any of them, Tibbett, John Charles Thomas, Crosby, any of them!"

Burt will wink to his friends at this exhibition of fatherly pride. But what confuses these same friends is Burt's opinion of his singing of his son, Jimmy. Jimmy's voice, according to impartial critics, is loud and clear and youthful—but no more than that.

Says Burt, however: "Listen to him! That's really good! I'll bet that if Jimmy takes up singing when he grows up he'll be better than . . ." et cetera and et cetera!

So father is proud of son, generally around the Lancaster home. But only lately have the younger sons been impressed with their father! Not that Burt hasn't tried to win a little standing with his boys. It was just that he didn't quite know how to accomplish it.

He learned some time ago that his picture work means nothing to Jimmy. (As for two-year-old Billy, very little means anything to him as he is still far too active physically to hold still for any contemplative moods.) Once Burt took Jimmy and Billy to a showing of his latest picture in a studio projection room

The picture had been on for a little while when Burt heard the boys buzzing to each other. He felt a surge of pride within him.

"You like Daddy in the picture?" he asked, as he turned to them. To his surprise he saw that they were not even watching the screen. They had their heads bent down, looking at the floor along the line of seats.

"What is it?" he asked. "Look, boys, Daddy is in the picture on the screen."

They raised their heads for only a fleeting second and then turned back again.

"See, Daddy?" asked Jimmy, pointing and seemingly quite taken with something.

Burt looked. Jimmy was pointing at the little set-in lights strung at floor level along the rows of seats to guide people walking into the room in the dark. It was plain that both Jimmy and Billy were fascinated by this remarkable new method of interior illumination.

A number of times Burt has noticed the boys skipping through the pages of a magazine or newspaper and passing up a picture of him without comment to go on to more interesting possibilities—such as the comics or illustrations of trains.

Burt has understood. He's even big about it and put himself in their places. "Why should they care about seeing a picture of me in the paper?" he has asked himself. "Don't they see me continually in real life? Naturally it means nothing to them."

Yet, when by accident one day he won that bright look of sheer adulation that will thrill any young father when he sees it in his child's eyes, it was a red-letter day for Burt. And he doesn't think he'll ever forget it.

No, no mighty deed was involved. As a matter of fact, he had no idea he had done anything special until he noticed the reaction.

He was shaving one afternoon when Jimmy and Billy wandered into the bathroom. They watched with no particular interest as he scraped away and were still hanging around when he had washed and was drying his face. Then, quite unconsciously, Burt flipped the towel up in the air so as to fall over the shower curtain rail. He has done this for so many years that it is an instinctive motion and one so practiced that the towel always lands just right to hang evenly over the rod.

"Gee!"

Jimmy had said that. His mouth hung open in admiration and so did Billy's.

"Do it again, Daddy," Jimmy begged.

Wondering, Burt pulled the towel down and flipped it up again expertly.

"Gee! How do you do that?" asked Jimmy, who has heard dozens of times that a towel must always be hung up after using but never dreamed that it could be done so nonchalantly.

"Gee!" echoed Billy.

And that's how Burt Lancaster finally came to be quite a somebody in the eyes of his sons.

Recently, with the formation of his own production company, and the beginning of preparations by him and his production partner, Harold Hecht, for the group of pictures they will do together, starting with The Hawk and the Arrow, Burt has had to spend more time away from the house than is to his liking. He has had to take refresher courses in riding, tennis, archery and fencing with The Hawk and the Arrow. There are also long sessions with Hecht and the script writers on Norman Mailer's The Naked and the Dead and on other properties they have in work. But there are certain activities at home that he tries not to miss.

Tossing that dinner salad together is one. But before that, there comes a walk with the boys to a nearby corral where they "feed" the horses the piece of carrot or apple each boy has saved for that purpose from his lunch. After dinner there is the record-playing and singing session, and then—then Burt clears his throat and launches into a sales talk.

Most parents will know this talk. It is an attempt to convince small fry that bedtime has come. Burt has hopes that some day he will achieve real salesmanship along this line, but up to the present, he admits, every talk has had to end with a demonstration—the boys are undressed and put to bed.

Now the evening belongs to Burt and Norma. Almost always it is spent at home. Almost always Burt will put on some of his favorite records, first having had to collect and put away the children's records.

If friends drop in, there will be bridge, with thorough analyses by Burt of each play after the hand is over—a bad habit he has not yet managed to overcome. If enough people gather there will be charades, a game he throws himself into with such enthusiasm that he has occasionally been known to blurt out the answer in the process of acting it out.

When the games are over and the guests are gone, quiet finally comes to the Lancaster home. But Burt and Norma know it is not for long. A new day is on the way, and just about the time it shows its first glimmer Jimmy and Billy will wake up and ride noisily right into their bedroom.

There is no time to lose. Burt and Norma hurry to bed. THE END

YOU'RE ACTING LIKE A CHILD

(Continued from page 40)

ransport Command and the Marines!"

While Mel and Glenn were whooping up downstairs, Larry led a contingent pstairs to view the electric trains. The econd floor is devoted to games, nursery ooks, a party shop, and a mammoth trainack that weaves rails across a 20-foot iniature town.

"Trains always fascinate me," said arry as he turned on the switch and atched the tiny engine start climbing o an incline. "When I was a kid I earned for an electric train. I didn't get for a long time, and when I did I really ept that engine polished and shiny. I still ave it in our garage—just as good as ew . . . say, maybe I'd better get it oiled o for Garrett."

Garrett is the name he and Betty have picked out in case the new addition is a boy—as Larry is confident it will be. But if it should be a she, then she'll be called Laurie.

Larry probably would have spent the entire evening up here if Betty hadn't come up from downstairs to join us. She was carrying a tiny figure wrapped in a blue blanket. Larry did a double-take when he saw the bundle.

This "baby" turned out to be a rubber doll. But Larry decided to sit down for awhile.

When Uncle Bernie announced it was time to eat, we all rushed downstairs.

The sandwiches were round, square, oblong and delectable. There were also

ARE YOUR "DIFFICULT DAYS" DRIVING HIS LOVE AWAY?

It's true—Monthly Blues just don't go over with a man! So don't let nervous tension, periodic headache and cramps play havoc with your romance! Instead — help relieve those symptoms with wonderfully effective Chi-Ches-Ters Pills. Be sure to take according to directions, a day or two in advance. 3 convenient sizes. Ask your druggist today for

The Improved

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

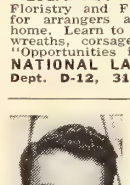
For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Co., Dept.14E,Philadelphia 46, Pa.

SHORTHAND in 6 Weeks at Home

Famous Speedwriting system. No signs; no symbols; no machines; uses ABC's. Easy to learn; easy to write and transcribe. Low cost. 100,000 taught by mail. For business and Civil Service. Also typing. 27th year. Write for free booklet to:

Speedwriting



Dept. 801-A, 55 W. 42 St., New York 18 ®

Learn FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

Floristry and Floriculture. Big demand for arrangers and lecturers. Study at home. Learn to make professional sprays, wreaths, corsages, etc. Send for folder "Opportunities in Floristry."

NATIONAL LANDSCAPE INSTITUTE

Dept. D-12, 310 S. Robertson Blvd., Los Angeles 36

Montgomery Clift

★ ★ ★ FREE!!!

Do you want a REAL PHOTOGRAPH of your FAVORITE MOVIE STAR?

Send fifteen cents for handling and mailing and receive a lovely photo direct from Hollywood and our beautifully illustrated catalog listing hundreds of STARS. ALSO ASK for COLORED BROCHURE describing most unusual OFFER yet made to movie fans. LIMITED SUPPLY ON ABOVE OFFER —SEND TODAY.

★ HOLLYWOOD STARS ★

4633 Hollywood Blvd., Box 9865
Dept. DS Hollywood 27, Calif.

For Quick Earnings SELL Everyday Cards

Fast profit-maker for you! Everybody buys these smart Everyday greetings for Birthdays, "Get-Well", etc. 14 beautiful folders retail $1. You make fine profit. Many other big value assortments that pay you extra income the year 'round. No experience needed. Write NOW for samples on approval.

SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO.
216 S. Pauline, Dept. D-8, Memphis 4, Tenn.

SAMPLES START YOU EARNING

High School Course at Home — Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American Schools, H114, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

ONLY 19¢ EACH

NEW SILK FINISH

ENLARGEMENT

GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement made from your favorite snapshot, photo or negative and mounted in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing for complete information on having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman 19¢ each for the enlargement and frame plus cost of mailing. Satisfaction guaranteed. Limit two to a customer. Originals returned with your enlargement. Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M225, Hollywood 38, Calif.

dozens of hors d'oeuvres. For beverage we had either pink lemonade from the lemonade tree (you squeeze a lemon and the lemonade comes gurgling out) or orangeade from the falls.

This orangeade falls has been Uncle Bernie's pet scheme for some time. It covers half of one wall. An illuminated wall painting depicts a group of industrious elves sawing oranges in half, squeezing them in a press and pouring bucketsful of juice into the orangeade pool that supplies the falls. There's a little doo-dad in the forest-green rocks beneath which you press—and the orangeade comes spouting forth.

Vera-Ellen and her date, Johnny McKee, came late. The gang at once clamored for Vera to dance for her supper. An obliging gal, she did. Picking up a mammoth rag doll, Vera pirouetted gracefully about the shop. She twirled by the buffet table and in so doing picked up a sandwich. We all applauded and let her have a full-sized meal.

Peter Thompson and Nancy Davis sat down in front of Santa's Workshop to eat their dinner. Nancy was brought to Hollywood by MGM to play Glenn Ford's sister in The Doctor and The Girl, and since her arrival she's had to move three times. Peter pointed to Santa's castle and suggested, "Maybe you could rent this place."

Nancy wasn't interested. She thought a workshop might be a bit noisy to live in. Anyhow, she was moving to a fine new place the next day—and Peter had promised to bring over his jeep and help. "I've just had all my furniture shipped here from New York. There are so many boxes and items, I'd forgotten I even owned some of them."

Pete groaned. "How many boxes did you say?" Before she could break his spirit by telling him, her attention was diverted by Uncle Bernie. He was carrying in a two-foot-long cake.

Among its extensive decorations was a miniature waterfall which had a tiny angel skiing down it. There was also a truck loaded with lemon drops marooned in a winding road of chocolate icing. The sides of the cake were sprinkled with small pieces of peppermint candy, lemon drops, chocolate drops and cherry Life Savers.

It was so large and beautiful that we found it hard to believe it was a real cake. But when Uncle Bernie cut it and gave us a light-as-a-feather slice, we believed.

Barbara Thompson suggested Marshall have a second slice—"he has to play Santa Claus this year and we only have two pillows to stuff the suit." At this Marsh, who will be Santa for his three-year-old nephew, Stevie Long, was given a few pointers from Glenn Denning, who has appeared as the whiskered gent several times on YMCA Yuletide programs.

We began reminiscing about Christmas experiences. The Don Taylors recalled the first Yuletide after their marriage. "We were in Chicago with the roadshow of Winged Victory," Don said. "We were staying at a hotel and it didn't seem too happy away from friends in a strange city."

"But Don fixed that," put in Phyllis. "He went out and bought a 10-foot Christmas tree and carted it right through the lobby up to our room. What with wartime shortages, you couldn't get ornaments at that time so we sat up most of the night cutting out cardboard decorations and hanging them on the tree."

This year is certainly different. The Taylors have a nice home and are busy fixing up the nursery for the expected baby. Don cornered Uncle Bernie and asked if he would give him copies of some of the storybook characters that line the walls of the store. Uncle Bernie said he'd be delighted. Don plans to trace them on wood and make four-foot figures gaily skipping along the border of the nursery.

Johnny McKee volunteered to help cut them out. He'd had lots of experience making toys. Besides chalking up 52 missions with the 8th Air Force, he also managed to fashion makeshift toys out of old plane parts which helped to brighten several British tots' holidays.

Betty Garrett and Larry Parks also had a Christmas they'll never forget. They were 3,000 miles apart. She was on Broadway in Call Me Mister and he in Hollywood making The Jolson Story. But they still managed to give each other a Merry Christmas. Larry received from Betty a motorcycle all wrapped up in red cellophane. Larry air-expressed Betty her gift—an engagement ring. "We'd been married for two years," Larry explained, "but I had just got a raise and since she didn't have an engagement ring I splurged my salary on one."

Uncle Bernie too had his Christmas memories. It wasn't many Christmases ago that he was making toys and childrens' plaques in the basement of his home in Brooklyn. They were so unique and educational and so in demand that he soon expanded into a chain of toy-manufacturing companies on Long Island. Then he came to California to retire. "But once a toyman, always a toyman," says Uncle Bernie—and soon he had opened up the Toy Menagerie. That was two years ago, and it's been going strong ever since.

Everyone seemed to finish eating at the same time. We decided on an after-dinner concert. Each picked out some kind of a toy instrument, which we were assured would really play—and started on a different tune.

Mel Tormé was at the miniature piano, Candy and Nancy on the xylophone, Larry beating the drums, Betty squeezing the accordion, Marsh on the clarinet, Barbara thumping a ukulele, Reba on the slide trombone and Peter, Bonnie and Glenn playing—well, they're still hunting for the names of their instruments. Glenn just blew into his nameless object, turned a handle, and it played, "I'm Popeye the Sailor Man"—which sounded great, since the rest of us had by this time gotten together on "Home Sweet Home."

With all this mad melody going on, Larry Parks seemed too content. "Must be tone deaf," suggested Peter Thompson. We finally learned that the helmet Larry was wearing was just another two-purpose toy: It contained a built-in radio, and Larry was listening intently to the prize fights.

Uncle Bernie suggested a little "real" music for a change. He slipped a carol onto one of the miniature phonographs.

And as the small, clear strains of "Silent Night" filled the toyshop, it was a stilled and lovely place—a place waiting for Christmas. THE END had achieved what appeared to be a pinnacle of happiness. This was her marriage to Arthur Farnsworth, an aeronautical engineer who seemed a perfect mate. He was handsome, considerate, strong enough to control her flashing moods, tender enough to make her a blissfully contented young wife.

IS BETTE DAVIS AFRAID OF LOVE?

(Continued from page 20)

In August 1943, barely two-and-a-half years after the wedding, Farnsworth was stricken suddenly while walking on Hollywood Boulevard. Three days later, he died. It was discovered that in an earlier fall he had suffered a skull fracture. For a time Bette blamed herself for not having realized he had been so dangerously hurt.

Undoubtedly, this tragedy deepened her haunting fear of relaxing herself in happiness—"something might happen. . . ."

Actually, Bette Davis has been afraid since she first came to Hollywood. Striving to remain worthy of the critical opinion that brought her the title "Queen Bess," she has worked more strenuously on each succeeding picture. Scornful of failure, she has driven herself to that point of exhaustion which makes normal living with people—especially husbands—nearly an impossibility. Once, when told that she must take things easy, she retorted, "I've never relaxed in my life. And I guess I'll never learn to."

At the time of the announcement that she was seeking a divorce from Sherry, Bette said that his violent fits of temper, during which he sometimes would break up furniture, had caused her to fear that if she remained with him she, and perhaps their baby daughter, Barbara, might suffer bodily harm. Sherry admitted his violent tendencies, but said, "It's just a matter of controlling my awful temper. We can patch this thing up if we can see each other again and talk it over." He then announced that he was going to consult a psychiatrist to see if something could be done toward helping his disposition.

Whatever temper Sherry has, it could hardly exceed in fireworks the explosive temperament of Bette, who has alternately shocked, amazed and delighted her friends in Hollywood for years with her beautifully-timed outbursts. When she is angry, she chooses the most important man in any conference and verbally lashes him unmercifully. But, until recently, she had never done battle except with those who could afford to fight back, never did anyone hear of Bette becoming sarcastic or unreasonable with the average run of studio workers.

Yet, as a master of illusion in her profession, Bette has never kidded herself. She once told a writer, "I have one of the homeliest faces that I've ever seen. . . . I loathe my mouth. It resembles, of all things, a small rosebud. It is ineffectual meaningless, skimpy." And another time she said, "My neck is long, like an ostrich's. . . . If I could only look in the mirror one fine day and find something else reflected there!"

She might never have become world-famous if it hadn't been for her fear of being considered by others the way she considered herself. "If I have anything to offer to the world," she said, "it's certainly not any raving beauty. It is, if anything, reality."

The complete screen story of Bette Davis' latest film, Beyond the Forest, is one of the many dramatic features you'll enjoy in the January issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

Yes, fear seems to have been the dominant driving force in Bette's life. It has driven her far, to great professional success and fortune. Can it be that now it is beginning to have a destructive power, to upset her to the extent of damaging her personal relations?

"I've never relaxed in my life," she has said. Perhaps if she could do so now, she could find her domestic difficulties not insurmountable, and come to an understanding with her husband that might banish her fears of herself and the future.

It might be wise for both Bette and William Sherry to read again what they said about each other on the pages of MODERN SCREEN not too long ago.

"Sometimes," Bette declared, "to see the two of us together you'd think we were having a fist fight."

Said husband Bill: "In one basic way we differ. My theory is that most things work themselves out. You work, you eat, you sleep, you take the good or bad as it comes, and do the best you can with it. Bette does not feel this way; she worries about the universe. In worrying about others she hasn't time to solve her own problems . . . single-handed she'd like to mould the scheme of things closer to her heart's desire. But I am curing her of her brooding —she laughs more than she used to. The baby makes so much that used to be important seem unimportant. Barbara smiles one of her enchanting smiles and it's magic. Bette's face lights up, her troubles drop away. That's my favorite picture of Mrs. Sherry."

Perhaps he'll still be able to enjoy that picture again. He has said, "We were made for each other and I am not going to let her go."

But will one fundamental fear of his wife's make that impossible? Though she may not herself realize it, is Bette Davis afraid of love?

THE END

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 18)

casional murder doesn't mean the law should be broadened to allow women the same privilege. Spencer's a serious believer in law; he thinks it should be more generally respected. Besides, he's supposed to prosecute this pot-shot-crazy woman, and he doesn't want his own wife defending her. ("We'll look like uncivilized nuts," he says.) Katie's got a cause, though, and there's no stopping her. But the bare outline can't convey the charm of the picture. Spencer and Katie are a marvelous married couple—warm and relaxed. Judy Holliday is the last word in injured wives (she got her gun in a hock shop, along with a free instruction book on how to use it); Tom Ewell is her equal as the luckless husband-target. ("I want her put away," he cries in the hospital. "She's a fruitcake!"); and Jean Hagen, a homewrecker de luxe, completes the triangle in elegant style. David Wayne has a sizeable part as Katie's and Spencer's next-door neighbor, who loves Katie. "Lawyers shouldn't marry lawyers," he tells her seriously. "It's inbreeding. Makes for idiot children, and more lawyers. Lawyers should marry song-writers and piano-players." That's because he's a song-writer and piano-player.) There's a magnificent parody of home-made movies; there are a million other sparkling tidbits, too.

THAT FORSYTE WOMAN

Cast: Errol Flynn, Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Robert Young.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Here we have a movie based on Book I of the monumental "The Forsyte Saga" by John Galsworthy, and I'm ashamed to admit I don't remember if the movie is faithful to the book. This being the case, I'll just talk about the movie. It's set in the 1800's. Greer Garson is a beautiful, impoverished music teacher, with the soul of a captive bird. She once loved a gay, useless young man, and he spoiled her for more solemn types. Like Soames Forsyte. Rich, handsome, stuffy, Soames (Errol Flynn) is a fine catch. He collects works of art, and he wants to add Greer to the collection. They marry, but it's not a good idea. Greer doesn't act as dignified as Soames thinks she should, the clannish, elderly Forsyte family appalls her, the only comfort she has is Soames' niece, June (Janet Leigh). June is young and high-spirited, and also Forsyte-smothered. Her father (Walter Pidgeon), Soames' brother, was cut off by the family when he ran away to Paris with a lady friend, shortly after the death of his wife. He'd left June with the Forsytes because they could give her advantages he—a struggling artist—could not. June meets a young man (Robert Young) and falls in love with him. When Robert meets Greer, he falls in love with her. Stark tragedy and several broken hearts result, and the Technicolor is something gorgeous. Myself, I like a period piece now and then, and this is one of them.

BEYOND THE FOREST

Cast: Bette Davis, Joseph Cotten, David Brian, Ruth Roman.
Warners

Bette Davis goes to the dogs in a long black wig for Warner Brothers. She's married to a nice small-town doctor (Joseph Cotten) but he bores her. She wants to be rich, she wants to hang diamonds all over her bosom, and dance the black bottom in Chicago. (Or whatever they're dancing in Chicago when our story takes place.) To this end, she seduces a rich businessman (David Brian) who has a hunting lodge on the outskirts of town. He seduces easy, but marriage is something else again. "I could marry anybody," he says. Bette marches around town prying money loose from all the poor souls who owe her doctor husband, and then pursues her rich lover to Chicago. He tells her to run away and roll her hoop, he's engaged to a society lady, and Bette realizes all is lust (pun). She goes home. Joseph binds up her wounds, they're about FREE—Amazing new cake decorator free. Make flowers, loops, names, leaves . . . new easy way just like professionals. Also decorate jello, salads, desserts, pastries. ALSO FREE—seven delicious cake recipes—all new and different, plus lovely icings and whips for decorator. We make this amazing free offer to introduce our heart-shaped cake pans or jello molds. Size 9 by 1¼ inches. Bake a sweetheart layer cake for birthday, anniversary or special occasions. Set of two pans only $1.00 plus postage and C.O.D. handling. SPECIAL OFFER: Double order (4 pans and two decorator sets) only $1.69 plus postage and C.O.D. handling. SEND NO MONEY, just mail a card today. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED or your money back. The free gifts are yours to keep regardless. Don't delay. Act now. Royal Industries, Dept. 5038-A, Mt. Vernon, Illinois.

ITCH CHECKED IN A JIFFY

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D.D.D. Prescription.

"How to Make Money with Simple Cartoons"

A book everyone who likes to draw should have. It is free; no obligation. Simply address FREE BOOK

CARTOONISTS' EXCHANGE
Dept. 431 Pleasant Hill, Ohio

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in EVERYDAY CARDS

MAKE Extra MONEY FAST

Show rich Satin and Velour Greeting Cards. Never before offered. Get easy orders FAST! Astounding value—16 for $1. Up to 100% profit. Imprinted Stationery, Floral Charmettes, Napkins, 25 other Assortments retail 60c to $1.00. SAMPLES ON APPROVAL. No experience needed. Start now—earn all year 'round. WRITE TODAY!

Satin and Velour Designs

PURO CO., 2801 Locust, Dept. 05-A, St. Louis 3, Mo.

FREE TO ALL NEED MONEY WHO

I'll help you get extra cash to fill your pocketbook—to live on. Supply my food and household products to regular customers. No previous experience or capital needed. I'll send FREE an assortment of fine, full-size products to test and show. Start near your home, full or spare time. Gift premiums, big monthly premiums. Rush your name and home address today for free outfit. Hurry!

BLAIR, Dept. 360-FA, Lynchburg, Va.

FREE PHOTO DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo, you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c handling.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309, Dept. 0-10, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

Beyond the Forest: Bette Davis, married to small-town doctor Joseph Cotten, hankers after gay living, and takes up with a rich city man.

The Reckless Moment: James Mason, a blackmailer gone soft, has just killed his partner to protect their intended victim, Joan Bennett.

to have a baby, when rich lover reappears. "It's you I really want," he mutters. "Fly with me—" Now there's the question of the baby. In order to keep David from finding out, Bette coolly murders a man, visits an abortionist, and rolls herself off a cliff. She doesn't die on any of these accounts, but justice catches up with her, never you fear. The best performance of the picture is given by Dona Drake, as an Indian servant in Joseph and Bette's house. She's sensational. Bette seemed a trifle hammy—like one of those imitations of Bette, in fact—and David Brian and Joseph Cotten appeared to be embarrassed by the proceedings. Not without reason.

THE RECKLESS MOMENT

Cast: James Mason, Joan Bennett, Geraldine Brooks, Henry O'Neill.
Columbia

Joan Bennett's husband is in Germany, building a bridge. Joan Bennett's daughter (Geraldine Brooks) is a problem. She loves an unsavory gambler (Shepperd Strudwick). With no husband to take care of such nasty matters, Joan herself goes to see the unsavory gambler. He offers to stay away from daughter—for a sum of money. He's so pleased with this idea he makes the mistake of repeating it to daughter, later that night, when he meets her by the boat house in her back yard. Daughter's shocked, offended, furious. She whops gambler over the head with her flashlight, and goes on home. Little does she dream he's going to walk out, fall off the dock, and decease himself by running a motorboat anchor through his throat. Poor Joan finds the body in the morning, is afraid daughter killed the man, takes the corpse out in the boat and dumps it across the bay. When the police find the body, they call it murder. Now James Mason shows up. The dead man had borrowed some money from Mason and his racketeer partner, Nagle, on a group of letters written to him by Joan's daughter. Mason and Nagle want their money. Joan says it's blackmail, Mason says he knows. But she doesn't want her child mixed up in a murder, does she? And the police might like to get those letters. While Joan's trying to raise the money, Mason's falling in love with her. In the end, there's a big blow-up between him and Nagle, he kills Nagle, and is himself fatally injured while disposing of Nagle's body. He manages to get daughter's letters back for Joan, before he dies, and also to tell police he killed the anchor-in-the-neck man, thus gallantly clearing up the matter. Mason's very appealing as the black sheep with the gentle manners and the soft heart. He raises the picture to a level it couldn't possibly have attained without him.

CHAIN LIGHTNING

Cast: Humphrey Bogart, Eleanor Parker, Raymond Massey, Richard Whorf.
Warners

During the war, Humphrey Bogart's a bomber pilot, Richard Whorf is a plane designer, Eleanor Parker's a Red Cross girl. Bogart and Parker fall in love, but nothing comes of it. Years later (postwar) they all meet again, at a party given by Raymond Massey, a flashy operator who's planning to make a pile of money by manufacturing a new jet plane for the Air Forces. Eleanor's currently working as Massey's secretary, Whorf is working as Massey's right arm. Naturally Bogart ends up working as Massey's test pilot. He's glad to have the job, he's been bumming around since the war without finding his proper niche; he's glad to see Eleanor, he's always loved her, he was just never sure he was the right type for a nice kid to get mixed up with. Bogart tests the new jet successfully, but Whorf begs him to wait another 60 days before telling Massey the plane's ready to fly. Whorf's perfecting a safety device—he calls it a "pod"—which ejects the pilot from the cockpit and brings him down with automatically released parachutes. Bogart isn't one to worry about safety, though, and when Massey offers him $25,000 to make an over-the-Pole flight, Nome to Washington, he accepts. Massey figures the publicity will bring Navy orders for the jet. Whorf and Eleanor disapprove heartily; they don't think it's ethical to sell planes before the life-saving pod is ready. Bogart makes the flight anyhow, and makes it successfully, but Whorf, who's off somewhere testing the pod, is killed. Eleanor's mad at Bogart now. Thinks he let Whorf down. So against everybody's wishes, advice and orders, Bogart himself tests the pod, vindicates old Whorf (the pod works dandy) and gets the girl.

THE BIG WHEEL

Cast: Mickey Rooney, Thomas Mitchell, Michael O'Shea, Mary Hatcher, Spring Byington
United Artists

A story about that grisly sport, auto racing. Somebody gets burned to death every 20 minutes, but it's all yours if you can take it. Mickey Rooney's father is the first victim, and him we don't see killed, we just hear about it. Father was known as "Cannonball," and he was quite a famous racer. Mickey's determined to go and do likewise, so Mom can come out of the kitchen. Mom (Spring Byington) is understandably hysterical about his choice of professions; auto racing took her husband, she has no illusions about its sparing her son. Old beau Thomas Mitchell, ex-racer, and present owner of racing cars, tries to calm her nerves and explain things. Racers have to race, is the gist of the explanation. Spring marries Mitchell (now she won't be alone in the world, after Mickey gets his) and Mickey races his fat little head off until the day he's blackballed. He's been acting terrible, anyhow—drinking, kissing women, staying out late—and then he tries to help a pal whose car is out of commission, he only succeeds in burning his pal to death, and nobody believes it's an accident. They think Mickey was trying to win the race by "driving over" the other man, and they call him "Killer." The only person who believes in him is young Mary Hatcher. Her faith is vindicated, so don't you worry. The dialogue in The Big Wheel is tough, fresh, and curiously realistic. The acting is also high-level, especially Spring Byington's, Richard Lane's (he's the track owner) and Michael O'Shea's (he's a racer). There's humor, too. Mary steals a super-charger out of father Richard Lane's car. O'Shea looks at Lane, and shakes his head. "I warned ya not to have them kind of children," he says dourly.

PHOTO CREDITS

Below are page by page credits for photographs appearing in this issue.
6 T. Lt. Bob Beerman, T. Rt. Bert Parry, Bot. Lt. Warner Bros., Bot. Rt. 20th Century-Fox—7 Lt. Stork Club, Rt. Acme—8 T. Wide World, Bot. 20th Century-Fox—10 20th Century-Fox—12 Bob Beerman—14 Acme—20 Acme—22 Bob Beerman—24 Lt. MGM, Rt. Paramount—27 M. S. Staff—28 T. Wide World, Bot. Bob Beerman—29 Bob Beerman—30 MGM—31 T. M. S. Staff, Bot. Bob Beerman—32 T. M. S. Staff, Bot. Bert Parry—33 T. & Bot. Lt. Bert Parry, T. & Bot. Rt. Bob Beerman—34-36 Bob Beerman—37 Bob Beerman—38-40 Bert Parry—41 M. S. Staff—42, 43 Bert Parry—46, 47 Nelson Morris—48 MGM—49 Bert Parry—50 T. Bob Beerman, Bot. Bert Parry—51 Bert Six—52, 53 Bob Beerman—54 T. Wide World, Bot. Bob Beerman—55 Bob Beerman.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

THE IMPORTANCE OF A SENSIBLE BEAUTY ROUTINE IN WINTER

Too often beauty care is regarded as mere frivolity. But a smart woman knows that the right kind of beauty care contributes to her health, happiness, and general well-being.

This is especially true when we consider the care of the skin, for it does important health and beauty work. Eliminates waste material . . . regulates body temperature . . . and the tiny oil glands keep your skin lubricated so it can function effectively.

In winter, due to modern living conditions, most of us are apt to abuse the skin. We live in artificially heated rooms where the air is overly dry. We step outdoors and face biting winds and an extreme temperature change.

Now, a sensible beauty routine can help the skin overcome these winter handicaps. The basis of such a program is daily soap-and-water care—a daily bath, as well as night and morning complexion care. Every single day your skin should have dust and waste materials removed from its entire surface so that the pores and the oil glands can continue to function properly.

Don't make the mistake of thinking that your skin would be less dry if you bathed less frequently! To be sure, harsh soap would dry and roughen skin and rob it of its natural oils. But the reverse is actually true when you're sure of the purity and mildness of your beauty and bath soap.

That's why I have such confidence in recommending SweetHeart Soap to women who ask my advice. Its lather has a gentle Floating Lift action. Countless tiny bubbles actually lift off and float away dirt, waste material, and the tiny rough skin flakes that winter weather promotes.

In fact, SweetHeart Care is so exquisitely gentle that it helps prevent chapping and reveals your skin's alluring natural smoothness. Moreover, after your SweetHeart bath the surface of your skin is so thoroughly, beautifully clean that pores and oil glands are free to do their important beauty work. You look lovelier! And you feel more comfortable all winter!

Barbara Brown

Beauty is my business—

says PHYLLIS BERGQUIST, Alluring Cover Girl

and SweetHeart is my Beauty Soap

9 out of 10 Cover Girls Use SweetHeart Soap

• We asked all the lovely girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year, "What beauty soap do you use?" And 9 out of 10 replied, "SweetHeart Soap."

"I Marvel at SweetHeart Care!"

—says Phyllis Bergquist, adorable cover girl, "because it helps prevent chapping. Chapped skin would be fatal to my modeling career. That's why I couldn't afford to use anything but gentle SweetHeart Care. All winter it keeps my skin soft and smooth as bridal satin—looking radiantly young—so sparkling fresh!"

• Enjoy a happier winter without rough chapped skin to mar your loveliness! Like 9 out of 10 cover girls, make pure, mild SweetHeart your beauty soap.

You'll quickly see the thrilling beauty benefits of gentle SweetHeart Care. For just one week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

• One of the cutest models of the year is little Hope Malin, 11 months old! Like grown-up cover girls she enjoys her daily bath with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap. It's so kind to her delicate rose-petal skin!

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

• Today get gentle SweetHeart Soap in the new, large bath size.

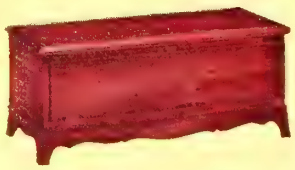
Dreams come true with a Lane



Give yourself a LANE with your Christmas gift money!

Now is the time to choose this best of all Christmas gifts. She'll be glad you chose a Lane! It's the only pressure-tested aroma-tight cedar chest in the world. Moth Protection Guarantee, underwritten by one of the world's largest insurance companies, included with every Lane Chest upon proper application.

Write us for your Lane dealer's name. The Lane Company, Inc., Dept. P, Altavista, Virginia. In Canada: Knechtels, Ltd., Hanover, Ontario.

No. 2268 Stunning modern chest in American Walnut. Tray included..... $49.95

No. 2218 Traditional design in hand-rubbed Mahogany veneers. Tray included. $59.95

No. 2221 18th Century Style in Honduras Mahogany. Drawer in base.... $79.95

No. 2375 An attractive waterfall design veneered with Avodire. Tray included.

CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

$49.95

(All prices slightly higher in the West and Canada)

No. 2368 Front has matched American Walnut Stump at each end and four-piece matched American Walnut center.

The real love-gift for sweetheart, mother, daughter, wife, sister

★ ★ ★

For each room in your home... for every space, there's a Lane to make it a prettier place!

Copyright 1950, The Lane Company, Inc.

For sale at furniture and department stores

LANE
Cedar HOPE CHEST

IVORCE - the Shame of Hollywood! see page 52

©OlB 226483

modern screen

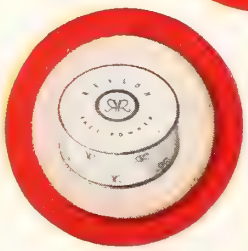
15¢
MAGAZINE • A DELL MAGAZINE • MAGAZINE •

Esther Williams and her son

JAN 17 1950

Smooth it on... your skin blooms! Your powder clings for hours!

Revlon's "Fashion Plate"



the only cream-wafer face make-up in the world

You've never known a make-up base like Revlon's Fashion Plate! Just fingerstroke it on ever so lightly...no more than a misty film. Instantly your skin seems flawless, blemish-free! Now...fluff on matching Revlon face powder. When have you had such an ultra-velvet glow!

Smooth it on, light as a mist.

Apply matching Revlon face powder.

Fashion Plate, new purse size 1.00* Dressing table size 1.50* Face Powder in genius colors 1.00* *PLUS TAX

Revlon makes the fabulous difference in make-up!

HAT: MR. JOHN. PHOTO: RAWLINGS ©REVLON PRODUCTS CORP.

DENTAL SCIENCE EXPLAINS HOW IPANA FIGHTS TOOTH DECAY!

No other dentifrice—paste or powder—has been proved more effective than Ipana in fighting tooth decay. For dental science says that tooth decay starts with acid-forming bacteria trapped in a sticky coating on your teeth. Every time, any time you use Ipana, it fights tooth decay by helping remove this bacteria-trapping coating.

DENTISTS SAY THAT IPANA CARE PROMOTES HEALTHIER GUMS!

In thousands of recent reports from all over the country, 8 out of 10 dentists say the Ipana way promotes healthier gums. That's just as important as fighting decay, for dentists warn that you can't have healthy teeth without healthy gums! Try this dentist-approved Ipana care—for healthier teeth and healthier gums both.

HERE'S THE DENTIST-APPROVED IPANA WAY—EASY AS 1, 2:

The Ipana way is doubly effective. 1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all tooth surfaces with Ipana at least twice a day. (Ipana's own formula helps prevent tooth decay—leaves teeth cleaner.) 2. Then massage gums the way your dentist advises. (Ipana's unique formula also stimulates circulation—promotes healthier gums.)

GUARD AGAINST TOOTH DECAY AND GUM TROUBLES BOTH!

Dentists warn you must do both to save your teeth.

You can help prevent tooth decay as you guard your gums—with doubly-effective Ipana care!*

You realize, of course, that fighting tooth decay is vitally important.

But you may not realize that fighting gum troubles is just as important! It's true—for leading dental authorities warn that most tooth losses are caused by gum troubles.

You can help prevent tooth decay and gum troubles BOTH—with doubly-effective Ipana care.*

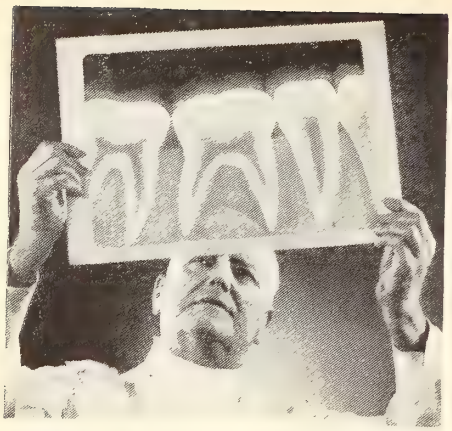
No other dentifrice—paste or powder—has been proved more effective than Ipana in fighting tooth decay. And no other leading tooth paste is specially designed to stimulate gum circulation—promote healthier gums.

So get Ipana for double protection—for fighting tooth decay and gum troubles both.

HEALTHIER TEETH, HEALTHIER GUMS

IPANA for Both!

Products of Bristol-Myers



Refreshing Ipana leaves your breath cleaner, your mouth fresher, too!

THIS BEAUTY GUARDS TEETH AND GUMS BOTH—WITH IPANA CARE!

With a smile like this, popular Jean Fritz of Long Island, N. Y., never risks halfway dental care. As a highly successful junior model, she knows that healthy teeth and healthy gums are both essential to an attractive smile. So Jean (like thousands of other smart girls) fights tooth decay and gum troubles, too—the pleasant Ipana way. Give yourself this same doubly-effective dental care. Get Ipana Tooth Paste today!

P.S. For correct brushing, use the DOUBLE DUTY Tooth Brush with the twist in the handle. 1000 dentists helped design it!

NOW! PROOF THAT BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

Exhaustive Research by Eminent Dental Authorities Proves How Using Colgate Dental Cream Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

Now, the toothpaste you use to clean your breath while you clean your teeth, offers a proved way to help stop tooth decay before it starts! 2 years' continuous research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay! Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation! And no change in flavor, foam, or cleansing action!

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of These Results!

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed helps remove acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices between teeth where food particles often lodge. No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth with Colgate Dental Cream as directed is a safe, proved way to help stop tooth decay!

FEBRUARY, 1950

modern screen

stories

SOMEWHERE OVER THE RAINBOW (Judy Garland) ..... by Arthur J. Rawlson 16
SOMEDAY HER PRINCE MAY GO (Rita Hayworth) ..... by George Fisher 24
BAREFOOT BOY WITH SHOWS ON (Montgomery Clift) ..... by Arthur L. Charles 28
MY PREDICTIONS FOR 1950 (Kirk Douglas, Susan Hayward, Farley Granger, etc.) by Hedda Hopper 30
MY NEW GUY ..... by Esther Williams 32
THE HOUSE THEY LOVE IN (Bill Holden-Brenda Marshall) ..... by Duane Valentry 34
MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED ..... by Van Johnson 37
HALLELUJAH! WE IS BUMS (Ruth Roman, Bob Stack, Lon McCallister, etc.) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 38
THIS LOVE OF OURS (Betty Garrett-Larry Parks) ..... by Larry Parks 41
I DON'T RUN BETTY'S LIFE (Betty Grable) ..... by Lillian Grable 42
MY KIND OF MAN (John Derek) ..... by Pati Behrs 44
HOLLYWOOD'S 10 BEST CITIZENS 46
HOME IS WHERE YOU HIDE IT (Rory Calhoun-Lita Baron) ..... by Tom Carlile 48 DIVORCE—THE SHAME OF HOLLYWOOD ..... by Cynthia Miller 52

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: This Is Your Year (Wanda Hendrix-Audie Murphy) 27
MODERN SCREEN'S HOLLYWOOD PICTORIAL 54

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 18
NEW FACES 25
YOUR LETTERS 61
FASHION 62
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 76

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Esther Williams and Benjamin by Eric Carpenter of M-G-M
Other picture credits, page 10

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
JUDITH G. FIELD, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CARL SCHROEDER, western manage:
BEVERLY OTT, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
BERT PARRY, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 3, February, 1950. Copyright, 1950, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious—if the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

"I was married to a man other women pursued!"

There are two sides to anybody's town—the high hat side and the lowdown side, and the two rarely meet—in public places that is. But when they do, and they do in M-G-M's new picture—you get a drama like this! Barbara Stanwyck plays the woman in it, a woman who knows the heartbreak of dream street. She's one of the dazzle girls of the social columns married to a man other women pursue. Watch James Mason play this part! Of course there's the other woman—there usually is—but not like this other woman. Ava Gardner plays the role. Watch her go for James Mason!

Yes, this is the story of night life, the kind of night life that leads to newspaper headlines—and once in a while to murder! Marcia Davenport's exciting best-seller has come to the screen with stars that make it live!

M-G-M presents

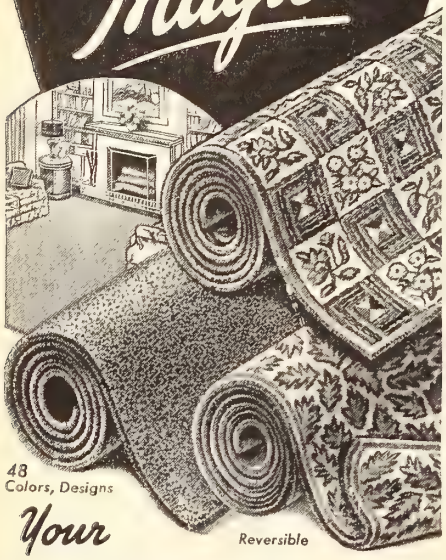
BARBARA STANWYCK · JAMES MASON

VAN HEFLIN · AVA GARDNER

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE

CYD CHARISSE · NANCY DAVIS · GALE SONDERGAARD

A MERVYN LeROY PRODUCTION



Screen Play by ISOBEL LENNART

Based on the Novel by MARCIA DAVENPORT

Directed by Mervyn LeROY · Produced by Voldemar VETLUGUIN

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

Olson Rug "Magic"

48 Colors, Designs

Reversible

Your Old Rugs, Clothing Save You up to ½

It's All So Easy! Write today for big Free Olson Rug Catalog (and Decorating Guide) that tells how your materials are picked up at your door and shipped at our expense to the Olson Rug Factory, where . . .

By the Olson Process we sterilize, shred, merge materials of all kinds—reclaim valuable wools, etc., then bleach, picker, card, spin, redye and weave deep-textured in sizes for all needs up to 16 ft. seamless, any length, in:

New Reversible BROADLOOM RUGS

Solid Colors — Florals
Two-tones — Ovals
Tweeds — Leaf
Early American, Oriental Designs

FACTORY TO YOU

Our 76th Year!

We guarantee to please, or pay for your material. Over 2 million customers. We do not sell thru stores or agents.

Write today for the beautiful 40 page Olson Book of rugs, model rooms and decorating hints.

Chicago New York S. Frisco

FREE Catalog in Colors

MAIL COUPON or 1¢ POSTAL to OLSON RUG CO., A-39, Chicago 41, Ill.

Please mail the Olson Catalog FREE to:

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

TOWN_____ STATE_____

© ORC

WHEN ESTHER WILLIAMS married Ben Gage, she married a hazard. He's not a hazard to her, you understand. He's one to himself. You see, he's six-feet-five and what with bumping his noggin on door jambs, taxi roofs, and headboards, he's lived dangerously. But Esther has a new fella now—a little guy called "Benjy," with enormous eyes and hands. Only trouble is he's only a foot-and-a-half tall and she keeps worrying that he might go out with the laundry. You'll find further details on My New Guy on page 32.

HEDDA HOPPER, that fearless lady, is living way out on the breezy end of a limb these days. We got her to climb out by daring her. "Go on!" we dared. "Predict what'll happen in Hollywood in 1950." And darned if she didn't—with My Predictions for 1950, on page 30. She has some fine—and some surprising—things to say about Farley Granger, Susan Hayward, Ruth Roman and a whole passel of others.

SEVERAL MONTHS AGO, when Rory Calhoun felt the great out-of-doors beckoning to him, he did not, as you might suspect, shut the window. Instead, he bundled wife Lita into their roadster and took the high and lovely road to Ojai. Seventy-five miles from Los Angeles, in a beautiful valley, they found a dilapidated ranch house and fell in love with it. With a combination dude-ranch and resort in mind, they've been dusting beds, installing swimming pools and currying favor with the horses. If you can't drop in on the Circle-B ranch, try reading Home Is Where You Hide It on page 48. It's better than a vacation.

WE'LL BE BACK on the newsstand next month with a terrific, sparkling new issue—a special Elizabeth Taylor issue, with an entire section devoted to her life and times. Then there's a fine love story about the Ricardo Montalbans, and more on your other favorites and ours—such as Kirk Douglas, Jane Powell, Joan Crawford and Lana Turner. Please, please don't miss this!

AS WE STRODE by our row of files the other day, a hand suddenly reached out and clutched us. "Want some hot facts, huh, bud? They're new, never been used before." "Henry Malmgreen," we said, "what does all this mean?" So he wiped away the dust and told us. It seems that he and Al Delacorte—MODERN SCREEN's former editors—have been working on their Hollywood Yearbook and now have it crammed with everything important that happened in Hollywood or to a Hollywood star for the past 12 months. Sections for newcomers, best movies, a pictorial on night life—all kinds of wonderful things. Only in Hollywood Yearbook will you find The Most Dangerous Marriage of the Year. Look for it on your newsstand now! It costs a quarter, and it's something you'll want to keep.

with HUGH MARLOWE • GARY MERRILL • MILLARD MITCHELL • DEAN JAGGER • ROBERT ARTHUR • PAUL STEWART • JOHN KELLOGG • BOB PATTEN

Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK Directed by HENRY KING

Screen Play by Sy Bartlett and Beirne Lay, Jr. • Based on the Novel by Sy Bartlett and Beirne Lay, Jr.

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD

■ Princess Irene Ghica, who will marry Errol Flynn, is slim, green-eyed, attractive and titled. But it wasn't her obvious sex-appeal or the "Princess" in front of her name that made the fascinatin' Flynn fall for her like a ton of bricks.

The Princess is mad about children and nothing could have struck a more potent blow at Errol's heart. He adores his little Rory and the older child, Diedre.

The first time Errol met the Princess was at the Paris apartment of his good friends, the Freddie McAvoys. Freddie has a little daughter (by a previous marriage to Irene Wrightsman) and his new French bride also has a small child.

The Princess could not have made a more smashing hit than she did romping and playing with the youngsters and chattering with them in French. They are just as devoted to her as she is to them—also well noted by Flynn, plenty lonesome for his little Rory at that time.

The girl who has succeeded in taking Errol off the bachelor lists is Rumanian-born and before the advent of the Commies her family was wealthy and very high in social circles. She is 20 years old and just LOOOOVES emeralds.

That is the main reason her engagement ring is a big emerald. I can tell you first-hand, because I spent quite a bit of time with them when I was in Europe last summer.

* * *

The gay and glittering parties which always start the holiday season, came with a rush, each one seeming more festive than the last.

Your friend and mine, Clifton (Belvedere) Webb, said he was too old for anybody but his mother, Mabelle, to remember his birthday —so he tossed himself a party in his beautiful Spanish home.

It was the first social appearance of the Tyrone Powers since their 18-month absence from Hollywood, and vivacious Linda was the center of all eyes in what was the most elaborate gown of the evening, a white, embroidered satin, created in Rome by the fabulous designer, Fontana. It was really the most beautiful dress I ever saw—entirely strapless and sleeveless and embroidered in flowers with rhinestone centers.

She and Ty seem so happy and so in love. He was constantly coming over to her to plant a kiss on her cheek or on the top of her pretty hair.

At the height of the party, many of Clifton's friends adjourned with him to the den to

JANE POWELL BECOMES GEARY STEFFEN'S BRIDE WITH

Three of the bridesmaids enter the church. Left to right: Marjorie Dillon, Jane's stand-in; star Elizabeth Taylor, a close friend; Betty McDowall, Roddy's sister. Roddy, who was an usher, has been a friend of Jane and Geary for many years.

Jane Powell Steffen proudly shows her wedding band to Geary's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Steffen, as bride and groom and their respective parents stand at the head of the reception's receiving line. Jane's parents are at her left.

NEWS

ALL THE CUSTOMARY WEDDING GAIETY

Smiling happily, the bride-to-be steps toward the church, escorted by her father, Paul Burce, and one of her friends. Jane's dress is white taffeta with lace sleeves and bodice.

After the ceremony, a rather nervous Jane holds firmly to her bridegroom's arm as they leave together for the wedding reception at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Geary and Jane met three years ago, but delayed marrying until he had established himself.

Looking pleased about the whole thing, Geary and Jane help themselves to wedding reception champagne. The big day was preceded by pre-wedding parties for them.

Jane tosses the handsome bridal bouquet with an energetic swing while the wedding attendants watch to see which lucky girl will catch it. Standing next to Liz Taylor is Jane's young matron of honor, Barbara Steffen Covington, Geary's sister.

You can lose him in a minute!

IT has happened to thousands of girls . . . it can happen to you.

One little moment's carelessness and he will be through with you that quick! You will probably ask yourself over and over again, "Why? Why? Why?"

How About You?

Never let halitosis (unpleasant breath) nullify your other charms. Never, never omit Listerine Antiseptic before any date where you want to be at your best.

Listerine Antiseptic is the extra-careful precaution against offending because it freshens and sweetens the breath . . . helps keep it that way, too . . . not for seconds . . . not for minutes . . . but for hours usually. Get in the habit of using Listerine Antiseptic night and morning, and, we repeat, always before any date.

While some cases of halitosis are of systemic origin, most cases, say some authorities, are due to the bacterial fermentation of tiny food particles clinging to mouth surfaces. Listerine Antiseptic quickly halts such fermentation, then overcomes the odors fermentation causes.

LISTERINE ANTISEPTIC

. . . the extra-careful precaution against Bad Breath

Cold coming on? Gargle early and often with Listerine Antiseptic . . . it kills millions of germs on throat surfaces . . . often helps head off much cold misery.

Who's the Santa about to go on the air with Louella Parsons? It's jolly old Dan Dailey! Dick Riggs, show's producer, is the other jolly soul.

listen to his album of South Pacific songs. This elicited a cry from Lauren Bacall in pseudo-melodramatic-romantic fashion "Gimme Pinza!"

"Did she say 'Panda'?" yelled her ever-lovin' man, Humphrey Bogart. The Bogarts are another very happily married couple with a wonderful recipe for staying that a-way. They howl at each other's jokes. "Baby" Bacall looked very cute in a short, but très elaborate evening gown.

Among the other Hollywood lovelies, I saw Patricia Neal in severe black, Gertrude Lawrence in delicate pink and that lovely character actress, Gladys Cooper, in pale gray. I thought Miss Cooper one of the most charming women present.

However, the party spotlight was really stolen by Clifton's mother, Mabelle, who brought down the house when she did a solo dance to "Happy Talk" from South Pacific —and was so good she should be in the show!

* * *

If Dr. Peter Lindstrom was totin' a torch a mile high and eating his heart out over Ingrid Bergman, he's succeeded in dousing his heartache rather noticeably. No longer a recluse, he has been stepping around a little—and his favorite date seems to be Signe Hasso, another Swedish charmer. He certainly sticks to the Scandinavian belles.

I heard a very funny story about the Doctor's social habits. He is crazy about dancing, even on crowded floors in over-heated night clubs. But he is fastidiously neat, and always carries along two extra shirts!

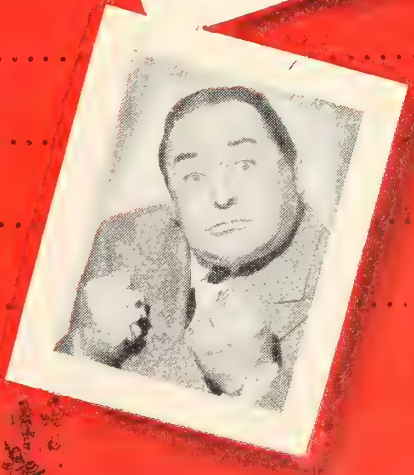
At one party, where he did not know there would be dancing, he forgot his "spare" linen —and borrowed two shirts from his host!

* * *

Personal Opinions: I've heard more than one attractive bachelor opine that Janet Leigh has more sex-appeal, off screen, than any other belle—including Ava Gardner! . . . Just when some Hollywood reporters (not me) were blaring the news that Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini had cooled, and Ingrid was on her way home, Joe Steele was talking from Hollywood to Ingrid in Rome. He point-blank asked her how things were. "I am still deeply in love," Bergman told him, "and I am not returning to America." Hope this ends that! . . . I'm worried about Judy Garland's health again. I'm afraid she tried to come back to work too soon. And it is unfortunate that she had to take off those 10 pounds she needed so much, because she registered too much poundage in front of the

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR—
HELP THE MARCH OF DIMES
IN ITS CRUSADE AGAINST POLIO!

We've Gotta Tell The Truth...



It's MORE FUN Than "Dear Ruth"

"Dear Wife"

FOR THE HOWL OF YOUR LIFE!

starring

WILLIAM HOLDEN ..... Bill Seacroft

JOAN CAULFIELD ..... Ruth Seacroft

BILLY DE WOLFE ..... Albert Kummer

MONA FREEMAN ..... Miriam Wilkins

EDWARD ARNOLD ..... Judge Wilkins

All the wonderful people who made "Dear Ruth" such a riot . . . are back—to invite you to come along on this hilarious honeymoon!

with

ARLEEN WHELAN

MARY PHILIPS

Produced by

RICHARD MAIBAUM

Directed by

RICHARD HAYDN

Written for the screen by Arthur Sheekman and N. Richard Nash as a sequel to Norman Krasna's "DEAR RUTH"

Which Twin has the Toni?

Jany and Joey Pope of Los Angeles, popular U. C. L. A. majorettes. Can you tell which has the expensive salon wave and which has the Toni? See answer below.

Attractive hair styles in this picture by Don Rito, famous Hollywood Hair Stylist.

Now! Toni with SPIN curlers twice as easy—twice as fast!

Now it's doubly easy for you to have a flattering Toni Home Permanent. For new patented Toni SPIN Curlers save half the time and work of winding curls. They grip the hair, spin up curls . . . lock with the flick of a finger! No more rubber bands. Fewer curls to wind, for you wind more hair on each curler. And SPIN Curlers fasten curls closer to the head—give you a better, longer-lasting wave.

What's more, with Toni Home Permanent you'll get the most natural-looking wave you've ever had! Because Toni Creme Waving Lotion is so different. An exclusive, gentle formula that coaxes your hair into soft, springy curls. So gentle and fast. No other home permanent waves hair faster yet leaves it so natural looking—so easy to set and style. Jany, on the left, has the Toni.

At the game all eyes are on Jany's spinning baton—and her shining, natural-looking curls. Jany says, "The new SPIN Curlers have spin action, too. They grip—spin—and lock with the flick of a finger!"

Toni Refill $1.00

Special Combination Offer

Refill Kit and complete set SPIN Curlers $3.00 value Only $2.29

Still the center of attraction at the dance. And Jany knows her hair has a lot to do with it. She says, "Even after a strenuous day, my Toni waves are still in place and look just as soft and natural."

Barbara Stanwyck gets no rise from Robert Taylor as she tells him at Mocambo's that she's about to dance with newsman Armand Archer.

cameras. . . . That rising lass, Joan Evans, who is 15, has to look 21 in Edge of Doom. After experimenting with all kinds of hair-dos, they found she looked older with a very short hair cut. Which is just opposite to why most of us trim our hair short!

* * *

Getting back to the social whirl—the return of Sir Charles Mendl from France was the occasion for many dinners in his honor, one of the most charming being given by Mrs. Dolly Walker, whose father planned and developed most of beautiful Beverly Hills where most of our stars live.

Sir Charles arrived with Joan Fontaine on his arm. She was completely exotic in a bright red Parisian gown, and to set off this daring ensemble, Joan had cut her blonde locks almost as short as Mary Martin's. Joan told me she had done the snipping herself!

Red was certainly the favorite color of the evening for the gals' gowns. Ann Miller, in flame-colored chiffon, was escorted by good-looking lawyer William V. O'Connor. Mrs. Walker, the hostess, was also in red—almost matching the colorings of her drawing room.

Just by way of being different, red-headed Arlene Dahl, one of the town's great beauties, wore emerald green—but it remained for Janet Gaynor to appear in the most startling frock of all.

Inspired by her recent trip to Africa with her husband, the noted designer, Adrian, Janet's silk and clinging gown resembled a tiger skin, stripes and all. On her, it looked good—but on anyone else, it would have been terrible.

PHOTO CREDITS

Below are page by page credits for photographs appearing in this issue.

6, 7 Bert Parry—8 American Broadcasting Co. —10 Bob Beerman—12 Wide World—16 MGM —24 Acme—27 AP Wirephoto—28 Max Coplon of Paramount—30 Lt. Bert Parry, T. Cen. Warner Bros., Bot. Cen. Wide World, T. Rt. Ted Weisbarth, Bot. Rt. MGM—31 Rt. Universal, T. Cen. Ted Weisbarth, Bot. Cen. Bert Parry, T. Lt. 20th Century-Fox—32, 33 Bob Beerman —34, 35 Bert Parry-Bob Beerman—36 Cen. Bert Parry, Bot. Bob Beerman—37 MGM—38, 39, 40 Bob Beerman—41 Bob Beerman—42 M. S. Staff—43 Wide World—44, 45 M. S. Staff—46 T. Lt. Am. Airlines, T. Cen. & T. Rt. M. S. Staff, Bot. Wide World—47 T. Lt. & Bot. Lt. Wide World, T. Rt. National Broadcasting Co., Cen. Rt. & Bot. Rt. M. S. Staff—48, 49, 50 Bert Parry—53 Pagano Studios—54 Bob Beerman—55 Warner Bros.—56 T. Lt. & Rt. Bob Beerman, Bot. Lt. & Rt. Bert Parry—57 T. Lt. & Rt. Bob Beerman, Bot. Lt. & Rt. Bert Parry.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

THE WAVE THAT GIVES THAT NATURAL LOOK — TONI

1950'S 'TEN-BEST' LIST WILL START WITH Warner Bros.'

Hasty Heart

WAS IT LOVE... WAS IT PITY...?

"So good it tops the stage play! A new star is born!" — LOUELLA PARSONS

"Richard Todd gives the greatest performance of the year!" — HEDDA HOPPER

"Bravo! An 'Oscar Contender'!" — EARL WILSON

"'The Hasty Heart' will win your heart!" — LOUIS SOBOL

"The comment's terrific! Richard Todd's sure to be nominated for an oscar!" — DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Chosen as Redbook's Picture of the Month

"One of the best pictures I've seen!" — FRANK FARRELL

"It's No. 1 on my Movie-Hit Parade!" — GUY LOMBARDO

Winner of Parents' Magazine Medal Award

"It's enormous!" — PHOTOPLAY

MOST TALKED-ABOUT, RAVED-ABOUT PICTURE SINCE 'JOHNNY BELINDA'!

STARRING

RONALD REAGAN · PATRICIA NEAL · RICHARD TODD

DIRECTED BY VINCENT SHERMAN SCREEN PLAY BY RANALD MacDOUGALL

Are you in the know?

To win attention, which should you be?

☐ Stand-offish ☐ A specialist ☐ The helpless type

Feel like a little lost sheep, in your crowd? Learn to shine at something. Whether your specialty's skating, boogie, or beating up delish cookie batters, you'll find it's a magnet to males. Buoys your poise! You needn't retreat on "those" days, either. Not when you have the cushion-soft comfort of the new Kotex. This softness holds its shape . . . for Kotex is made to stay soft while you wear it! What's more, your new Kotex Wonderform Belt won't twist, curl, cut. It's made with DuPont Nylon elastic!

Is a gal most likely to see green—

☐ When a new cutie comes to town
☐ On March 17th
☐ Under her charm bracelet

For some gals, the wearin' of the green isn't just reserved for St. Patrick's Day. They're the belles who live in their charm bracelets—come sleep or showers. Does telltale green lurk beneath your bangles? Remove it—if you'd rate in grooming! Dabbing your wrist with cleaning fluid does the trick. As for banishing telltale lines (on trying days), that's no trick at all, for Kotex. You see, those flat pressed ends prevent revealing outlines . . . keep you super-poised!

What does "campus copper" mean to you?

☐ A monitor
☐ A prom chaperone
☐ A sharp shade

Pst—Big Bother is watching you! So? Ten to one he's admiring that bright-as-a-new-penny outfit of yours: the new copper color that's wowing the school. Add copper pearls, coral lipstick—it's knockout! You're fashion-right with any shade of the russet family, if it becomes you. And on problem days, you're right (protection-wise) with any of the Kotex "family" of 3 absorbencies. Whichever you choose, you'll have extra protection with that special safety center.

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

Louis Jourdan and Jack Agar, flanked by bagpipers, attend the New York première of The Fallen Idol during their Eastern p.a. tour.

Vivacious Ann (Mrs. Jack) Warner, whose dress was much admired, confessed that she had taken a very expensive Paris gown of a few years ago and shortened it to give it that chic 1950 look.

At our table was Patricia Kennedy, daughter of our former ambassador to the Court of St. James. She is crazy about Hollywood and its people.

I asked her if she had heard anything about Princess Margaret's proposed visit to Hollywood. Pat said she hadn't, but she assumed if the attractive little Princess is given permission, she will visit here with her close friend, Sharmon Douglas.

The British Consul General at Los Angeles, R. H. Hadow, told me he had a book of enchanting pictures of Princess Margaret, actually a pictorial biography commencing with babyhood and carrying on up to her 19th birthday. Mr. Hadow said he hoped King George would permit the Princess to visit America.

"She would be a great ambassador for England," he added. "Her youth and vivacity are positively contagious and would strike a warm response from the American people—just as the Duke of Windsor did when he was Prince of Wales and visited the United States."

Among the glamorous beauties who came to Dolly's party was Myrna Loy—unescorted, because her husband, Gene Markey, is still abroad.

* * *

The night of the opening of Hollywood's new little intimate revue, A La Carte, was an evening to drive the autograph hounds mad. It was also the night of the première of All The King's Men and, I swear, every star in Hollywood attended one event or the other.

Dining at La Rue's in pre-theater dinner parties, I saw:

Jimmy Stewart and his pretty wife, Gloria; Margaret Sullavan with Bill Dozier (Maggie's been getting around with Joan Fontaine's ex-husband, lately), and Van Johnson and Evie.

Across the room, good-looking Bob Stack was at a table for two with Elizabeth Taylor—and those two were an eyeful!

Out on the terrace, Jimmy Cagney was buying dinner for his relatives—quite a tableful of them.

I had already seen All The King's Men, so I went on to A La Carte to get a look at Gale Robbins and Bill Shirley, borrowed from the movies, who were making their stage debut in A La Carte. Gale reminded many people of Rita Hayworth. She's a beautiful girl who can sing and dance—and you'll be seeing more and more of that lady on the screen.

Want to know what the Inspector General inspects?

DANNY KAYE

is the Inspector General

The All-time Comedy Kayo from WARNER BROS.

IN COLOR BY Technicolor

WITH WALTER SLEZAK BARBARA BATES ELSA LANCHESTER

PRODUCED BY JERRY WALD

DIRECTED BY HENRY KOSTER

Screen Play by Philip Rapp and Harry Kurnitz • Suggested by a Play by Nikolai Gogol • Lyrics and Music by The Associate Producer SYLVIA FINE • Musical Direction and Incidental Score by Johnny Green

LEARN THE SECRET OF "PERMANENT" PIN CURLS ...even in damp weather set your hair tonight with DeLong bob pins

stronger grip—won't slip out

Yes, you can set your permanent in this chic salon style. Just be sure to use stronger-gripping De Long Bob Pins for lovely long-lasting curls that resist drooping—even in damp weather. Rounded smooth ends slide in and out easily. And De Long pins stay in day or night! Look for the blue De Long card on your counter.

The brush bob by Enrico Caruso, famous hair stylist to New York stage stars. Set top in 4 rows—turn front row toward face, back 3 rows away from face. Begin at right, set vertical rows, turning curls toward face, around head to back of left ear. Set left side counter-clockwise. Brush in all directions, then up in back, down from crown and up off face with rotating motion.

You're always "set" with De Long Hair Pins • Curl Setting Pins • Safety Pins • Hooks and Eyes • Snaps • Pins • Hook and Eye Tapes • Sanitary Belts

Top producers Sam Goldwyn and Joseph Schenck were on hand in the second row.

Ginger Rogers, with one of those small black hats perched on one side of her head, was with Greg Bautzer—natch. I noticed that, like Joan Fontaine's, Gloria Swanson's hair is so short that Mary Martin will have to look out for her "most shorn" honors.

Red Skelton laughed longest and loudest at the comedy antics. Red was with both his present and his ex-wife, Edna. Edna's escort was Merrill Pye—they're quite a romance these evenings. Oh, yes, Jack Oakie was there—at least 60 pounds thinner.

When Mrs. Zachary Scott gets her divorce, no one will be surprised if she becomes Mrs. John Steinbeck. But I'm certainly not hinting that the famous novelist had anything to do with the surprising break-up of the Scotts. Elaine and Zach were practically estranged before she ever met Steinbeck.

In fact, the Scotts had had one of their tiffs when Elaine decided to accompany Joan Crawford on a 10-day jaunt to Carmel. Joan met Steinbeck at a party and introduced him to Elaine.

Since the official rift between the Scotts, the famed author and Elaine have seen a lot of each other.

* * *

And now—the Letter Box scores for this month: For the third month running, Glenn Ford is the actor most mentioned in your letters—but just barely topping Montgomery Clift, who's red-hot again since the release of The Heiress. Answering Anne Loven, of Astoria, N. Y.—I agree with you about Glenn and all the letters I receive about him are as flattering as yours.

Janet Leigh is gaining in fan attention—you seem to like her "natural" and unaffected type of beauty.

A few brickbats flew about Peter Lawford—not at Pete but at the writers (not this one) "who are picking on him!"

Also, plenty of "disillusioned" letters about Shirley Temple's divorce.

That's all this time—see you next month!

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

If you can't be first, at least you can be among the first 500 to return this questionnaire to us. We receive thousands each month, but only 500 can be the winners of our free three-month subscription to MODERN SCREEN. All we want to know is which stories you liked in this issue and which stars you'd like to read about in future issues. It's so simple, we'd like to send back a questionnaire ourselves—but we're not allowed. Remember—the March, April and May issues free to the first 500.

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our February issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2, and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices.

Somewhere Over the Rainbow (Judy Garland) ☐
Someday Her Prince May Go (Rita Hayworth) ☐
Barefoot Boys With Shows On (Monty Clift) ☐
My Predictions for 1950 by Hedda Hopper ☐
My New Guy (Esther Williams) ☐
The House They Love In (Bill Holden-Brenda Marshall) ☐
My Prayer Was Answered (Van Johnson) ☐
Hallelujah! We is Bums (Bob Stack, Ruth Roman, Lon McCallister) ☐
This Love Of Ours (Larry Parks) ☐
I Don't Run Betty's Life (Betty Grable) ☐
My Kind of Man (John Derek) ☐
Hollywood's Ten Best Citizens ☐
Home is Where You Hide It (Rory Calhoun) ☐
Divorce—The Shame of Hollywood ☐
Hollywood Pictorial ☐
Modern Screen Fashions ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN

BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

"External-caused blemishes were a real problem," says Cover Girl Carmen Lister. "Then a friend recommended Noxzema. I used it as my powder base and in no time my skin looked so much softer and smoother. Now it's my regular beauty aid."

"I had dry skin before I started using Noxzema," says pretty Doris Moore of Houston, Texas. "Now my skin feels so smooth. I always use Noxzema to help keep my complexion looking soft and lovely. It's a wonderfully soothing hand cream, too."

LOOK LOVELIER IN 10 DAYS ...OR YOUR MONEY BACK

Red, Rough Hands! A professional pianist must have lovely-looking hands! Mrs. Carolyn Suiter of Kansas City, Mo., says, "I use Noxzema on my hands every night to help keep them soft and smooth."

Doctor Develops New Home Beauty Routine! Helps 4 out of 5 Women in Clinical Tests!

● Practically every woman has some little thing wrong with her skin. If you're ever bothered with dry rough skin, externally-caused blemishes...if your hands are red and rough from housework—here's real news!

A famous doctor, using one cream—medicated Noxzema—developed a New Beauty Routine. In clinical tests it helped 4 out of 5 women! Here is the Doctor's Simple 4-Step Routine.

Morning—1. "CREAMWASH WITH NOXZEMA." Apply Noxzema all over your face. With a wet face cloth actually wash your face with Noxzema—as you would with soap. Note how clean your skin looks and feels.

2. After drying face, smooth on a protective film of greaseless Noxzema as a powder base.

Evening—3. Before retiring, again "CREAMWASH WITH NOXZEMA." See how easily you wash away make-up, the day's accumulation of dirt and grime—how really clean it leaves your face.

4. Now massage Noxzema into your face. Pat a little extra over any blemishes to help heal them. Noxzema is greaseless—no messy pillow smears!

Remember—this new "Home Facial" was clinically-tested by doctors with amazing results!

Softer, Whiter Hands

And if your hands get red and rough from dishwashing, housework or painfully chapped from exposure—try medicated Noxzema. In clinical tests, 7 out of 10 women showed softer, whiter-looking hands in 24 hours!

Money Back Offer

So sure are we that Noxzema's results will delight you, we make this sincere money-back offer. Tonight—smooth Noxzema on your hands. Tomorrow—start using this New Home Facial. See if your hands don't look softer, whiter in 24 hours. See if your complexion isn't smoother, softer and lovelier looking in just 10 days. If not completely satisfied—return the jar to Noxzema, Baltimore, Md.—your money cheerfully refunded. But you will be delighted! Try Noxzema. Remember—it's clinically tested—used by millions.

Special Trial Offer: To win new friends for Noxzema, we offer you the regular 40¢ size jar for only 29¢ plus tax. But you must hurry—time is limited. So get your jar right away.

Chapped Hands! "I use Noxzema as my regular hand cream to help them look soft and lovely," says Mrs. Lois Heerdt of Buffalo. "I like Noxzema because it's not greasy—and it vanishes so quickly."

"Housework Hands!" "Two business girls and I live together—and share household chores," says Doris Hamilton of Boston. "We all use Noxzema to help keep our hands looking soft and white."

She was a little girl destined for great things. But, gaining them, Judy Garland lost one of the greatest things of all—her childhood.

BY ARTHUR J. RAWLSON

somewhere over the rainbow

Judy Garland embraces her daughter, Liza. Judy returned to work soon after her illness.

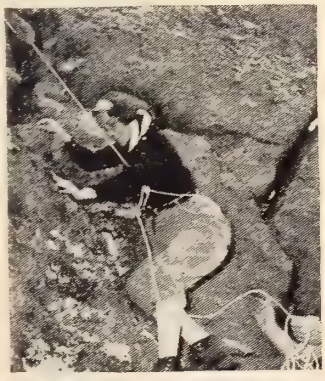
Once again, there have been rumors of trouble between Judy Garland and her studio. Whispers of temperamental outbursts, whispers of dissension have appeared in various columns. In the following remarkable story, the true nature of Judy Garland is examined with penetration and sympathy.—THE EDITORS.

■ Thirteen years ago a chubby-cheeked, bright-eyed youngster stood on an MGM sound stage, gazed earnestly into the heart of a heavily blanketed camera and sang these words. "Somewhere over the rainbow, 'way up high. . . . There's a land that I heard of once in a lullaby. . . ."

The stage was crowded with veteran movie-makers—grips, electricians, gaffers, assistant directors, men immune to the a-la-carte emotions displayed daily by the cardboard characters of Hollywood. As though a spell had been cast on the set, these workers stood silently rooted to their posts listening to the little girl sing.

"Somewhere over the rainbow, skies are blue. . . . And the dreams that you dare to dream really do come true. . . ."

The child sang the song in a rich, thrilling voice, mature in quality and splendid in tone. But there was something more rare in her singing, something that held her hardened audience enthralled. It was a cry, a prayer, a belief in the words, an inner warmth—a feeling that the singer really understood what she was singing and believed in the words.



"Someday I'll wish upon a star, and wake up where the (Continued on page 79)

"I took two days to climb three feet!"

says VALLI, starred in RKO's "The White Tower"

WE MADE "THE WHITE TOWER" IN THE ALPS. TO GET ONE SCENE, I SPENT TWO DAYS CLIMBING THE SAME THREE FEET!

LATER, I had to claw my way up a "chimney" barehanded . . .

EVEN RESTING, my hands were burned by the hot Alpine sun . . .

I LOVED the way Jergens Lotion kept my hands soft . . .

BEAUTIFUL HANDS are so important in romantic close-ups . . .

BEING A LIQUID, Jergens is quickly absorbed by thirsty skin.

CAN YOUR LOTION OR HAND CREAM PASS THIS "FILM TEST"?

To soften, a lotion or cream should be absorbed by upper layers of skin. Jergens Lotion contains quickly-absorbed ingredients doctors recommend — no heavy oils that merely coat the skin. Proof? Water won't "bead" on hand smoothed with Jergens Lotion (left hand) as with a lotion or cream that leaves a heavy, oily film (right hand).

YOU CAN PROVE it with this simple test described above . . .

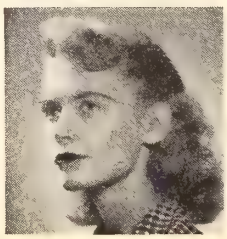
YOU'LL SEE why Jergens Lotion is my beauty secret . . .

Jergens Lotion

used by more women than any other hand care in the world

still 10¢ to $1 plus tax

AND IS USED by Hollywood stars 7 to 1 over other hand cares!



Picture of the Month

Betty Garrett, Frank Sinatra, Ann Miller, Jules Munshin, Vera-Ellen and Gene Kelly have a wonderful time in MGM's great musical, On the Town.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

ON THE TOWN

■ People who love New York in the spring will go for this; so will people who like good dancing, gay music, high spirits, and innocent merriment. The adventures of three sailors let loose in the big city with a one-day pass leaps from a Broadway run to the movies, still as fresh as an April morning. Don't expect too much plot. Gene Kelly (sailor number one) falls in love with Miss Turnstiles (Vera-Ellen) whose picture is in all the subways, and whom he thinks is a big celebrity, but who's really a cooch dancer at Coney Island. Frank Sinatra (sailor number two) gets tangled up with a lady cab-driver (Betty Garrett) with man-eating instincts, and Jules Munshin (naval hero number three) falls prey to Ann Miller, a passionate scientist. More passion than science, really. Every time she kisses Munshin, she claims it's for a survey, and Munshin's pals all call her, "Dr. Kinsey, I presume." I guess that's quite a bit of plot, after all. But mostly, On the Town is music, and wonderful Technicolor shots of the Brooklyn Bridge, the Battery, Times Square, the East River, the skyline, and a terrific cast kicking up its heels and acting as if it's having a wonderful time. The stars are all swell; so is a featured player named Alice Pearce, who plays an ugly and delightful girl named Lucy Shneeler. On the Town should contribute vastly to the gaiety of the population.

LOOK! 1950's Most Beautiful Cottons COST YOU LESS

SAVE! ORDER DIRECT BY MAIL FROM FLORIDA FASHIONS

NOW! MORE FOR YOUR MONEY! More Beauty! More Style! More Value!

2.98 Sizes 14 to 42

NEW! PARIS COLLAR AND POCKETS
Flattering new collar and pockets in white pique. Smart striped pattern, perfectly matched in front and back. COLORS: Blue, Red, Grey. SIZES: 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 206
Only 2.98

2.79 Sizes 12 to 40

CHECKED CHARMER
Bold checks flatter the winged collar and cuffs, the big Paris pockets, the full swirling skirt. Simulated leather belt. COLORS: Dark Green, Navy, Brown. SIZES: 9, 11, 13, 15, 17; 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 901
Only 3.98

3.98 Sizes 9 to 17, 12 to 40

Two-piece
LACE-EDGED BEAUTY
Lovely-to-wear solid color pastels set off by rich eyelet embroidery. Double peplum all around. Graceful flared skirt, cap sleeves, square neck. COLORS: Aqua, Pink, Light Blue. SIZES 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44, 46.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 980
Only 3.98

3.98 Sizes 12 to 46

WHIRLING, SWIRLING PLEATS
Peek-a-boo pleats all around, in floral pattern on two-tone stripes... Beautiful! Button front, notched collar; truly amazing value! COLORS: Pink, Lime-Green, or Blue predominating. SIZES: 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 600
Only 2.79

2.98 Sizes 12 to 42

STRIPE JACKET DRESS
for all year-round wear
2-piece outfit . . . wear it 2 ways . . now with the brief jacket, later as a smart sunback. Unusual contrasting stripes get wider and wider down the skirt and jacket. COLORS: Wine with Pink; Navy with Copen-Blue; Steel with Light Grey. SIZES: 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 202
Only 2.98

(A)

DOUBLETONE
florida fashions
Terrific Two-Tone Fashion Hit!
...NOW in MIMIKINS* too!

2.59 Sizes 12 to 44

1.98 Sizes 7 to 14

1.69 Sizes 3 to 6 X

(B)

(C)

2.98 Sizes 14 to 42

BRAID BEAUTY PRINCESS STYLE
16 Flashing Rows of Braid
Smart, comfortable cape sleeve. Flattering princess lines. Easy-on button-front style. Two roomy pockets. Ties in back. COLORS: Black, Green, Blue. SIZES: 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 208
Only 2.98

THE ZIP-FRONT FAVORITE
Gorgeous Roses-'n-Lace Pattern
Sweetheart neckline, two roomy pockets, set-in belt. Quick and easy zipper closing to way below the waist. COLORS: Navy or Black background with multicolor print. SIZES: 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42.
Guaranteed Washable
Order STYLE 204
Only 2.98

2.98 Sizes 14 to 42

Lovely 2-tone solid colors in our own fashion success . . . flattering for grown-ups, cute as a wink for Big and Little Sisters. Contrasting yoke and insert gores in light colors make you feel slimmer, look smarter. COLORS: Dark Green with Light Green; Brown with Pink; Navy with Light Blue.

(A) Coat Style SIZES: 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44.
Order STYLE 304 Guaranteed Washable Only 2.59 ea.

JUST LIKE MOTHER'S*

(B) Big Sister SIZES: 7, 8, 10, 12, 14.
Order STYLE 1705 Guaranteed Washable Only 1.98 ea.

(C) Little Sister SIZES: 3, 4, 5, 6, 6x.
Order STYLE 1705-L Guaranteed Washable Only 1.69 ea.

FREE! Write for our newest style catalog!

TESTED FOR QUALITY — O.K.
TESTED — High-Count Cotton Fabric — O.K.
TESTED — Washable . Fast Color — O.K.
TESTED — Full Cut — Correct Fit — True-To-Size — O.K.
ALL OF THESE DRESSES ARE MADE TO FLORIDA FASHIONS' HIGH STANDARDS OF QUALITY AND WORKMANSHIP

MONEY BACK Guarantee
You can make an exchange or get an immediate refund . . . no questions asked if you are not 100% thrilled with your dresses

© F. F. Inc., 1950 S-9

SO QUICK 'n EASY TO ORDER! . . . and what fun you'll have opening your FLORIDA FASHIONS package!

florida fashions, inc.

FLORIDA FASHIONS, INC., SANFORD 196 FLORIDA
Please send me these dresses on approval at the price listed plus postage and C.O.D. charges. If not delighted I may return purchases within ten days for refund. (You may enclose purchase price plus 20 cents postage, saving C.O.D. fee. Same refund privilege.)

Quan.	Style	Size	Color	2nd Color Choice	Price	Total

(C)

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Zone _____ State _____
PLEASE PRINT CLEARLY

PINKY

Cast: Jeanne Crain, William Lundigan, Ethel Barrymore, Ethel Waters.
20th Century-Fox

As a child, Pinky (Jeanne Crain) is sent North from her Southern home by her Negro grandmother (Ethel Waters) to be educated. Pinky looks entirely white, and no one at school knows differently, so she has no contact with prejudice while she's there, learning to be a nurse. But she falls in love with a young white doctor (William Lundigan), and since she feels she can't tell him she's a Negro, and she can't marry him without telling him, she runs home to her grandmother the minute her training is completed. Being proud and sensitive, she now finds the South even more intolerable than she'd expected, and she's planning to leave again, when her grandmother begs her to help out a lifelong white friend and employer, Miss Em (Ethel Barrymore), who's dying. Crotchety old Miss Em lives alone in a big old house. Pinky thinks she doesn't like the white woman, but eventually they become good friends, and before Miss Em has her final heart attack, she wills her house to Pinky. Now there's trouble. The town claims Pinky doped the old lady, and Miss Em's only relatives sue for the property. Despite the local prejudice, Pinky wins the case, and she starts a nursing home in Miss Em's old house. Lundigan, still in love with her after chasing her all over the country, and discovering the truth, begs her to marry him and come away. Pinky says she can't run away, she has to be what she is, she has to stay and fight where there's fighting to be done if she's to keep her self-respect. She says goodbye to Lundigan, and he leaves. It's a touching picture, and Fox has bent over backwards to give the South a break. Many of the townspeople are shown to be lewd, ignorant and cruel, but the doctor, the judge—the few educated men—are fair and decent. There's a magnificently savage portrayal of a bigoted, faded aristocrat by Evelyn Varden, and there's a courtroom scene which is spellbinding.

INTRUDER IN THE DUST

Cast: David Brian, Claude Jarman, Jr., Juano Hernandez.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

This is the story (based on the William Faulkner novel) of a near-lynching, in the deep South. It concerns an elderly Negro, Lucas Beauchamp (Juano Hernandez), jailed for the murder of a no-account white man named Gowrie. The Gowrie boys are drinkers and fighters; by and large they deserve to be murdered, but that's not the point. Lucas' color is the point. Lucas is proud. He owns a little house and a stretch of land, he refuses to be put "in his place" by the white townspeople. So even if he says he didn't kill anybody, it's a good idea to lynch him. But an adolescent boy named Chick (Claude Jarman, Jr.), believes Lucas was framed. "They have to make a nigger of him just once," he says bitterly. When his family teases him, Chick loudly denies that Lucas is his friend (his upbringing has taught him that colored people should act respectful to white people, and Lucas' dignity is an insult) but he's determined to save Lucas' life, nonetheless. He and an ancient lady named Miss Habersham (Elizabeth Patterson), who also wants to see justice done, go rattling off through the night to dig up the grave of the recently-murdered man, check the kind of bullet that killed him, etc. There's excitement, suspense, and marvelous acting from everybody involved. Claude Jarman lays bare the seething, complex emotional structure of a growing boy, David Brian is excellent as the boy's lawyer uncle, Porter Hall is excellent as the murdered Gowrie's father, the Sheriff (Will Greer), Miss Habersham, the blood-thirsty lynch mob—they're all fine.

THE STORY OF SEABISCUIT

Cast: Shirley Temple, Barry Fitzgerald, Lon McCallister.
Warners

Barry Fitzgerald, a horse trainer, arrives from Ireland with his niece, Shirley Temple, a student nurse. Shirley hates racing (her brother was killed in the Grand National, when his mount missed a jump) but Barry, whose heart is with the horses, takes a job on a breeding farm. He falls in love with a knobby-kneed colt called Seabiscuit, per-

Doctors Prove Palmolive Soap Can Bring You A Lovelier Complexion in 14 Days!

Not just a promise—but actual proof from 36 leading skin specialists that Palmolive Soap facials can bring new complexion beauty to 2 out of 3 women

Never before these tests have there been such sensational beauty results! Yes, scientific tests on 1285 women—supervised by 36 leading skin specialists—proved conclusively that in 14 days regular facials with Palmolive Soap—using nothing but Palmolive—bring lovelier complexions to 2 out of 3 women.

Here is the easy method:

1. Wash your face three times daily with Palmolive Soap—each time massaging its beautifying lather onto your skin for sixty seconds.
2. Now rinse and dry—that's all.

Remarkable results were proved on women of all ages, with all types of skin. Proof that Palmolive facials really work to bring you a lovelier complexion. Start your Palmolive facials tonight!

Look for these Complexion Improvements in 14 Days!

- Fresher, Brighter Complexions!
- Less oiliness!
- Added softness, smoothness—even for dry skin!
- Complexions clearer, more radiant!
- Fewer tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads!

DOCTORS PROVE PALMOLIVE'S BEAUTY RESULTS!

For Tub or Shower Get Big Bath Size Palmolive!

suades the farm's owner not to sell him, despite the head trainer's advice. Then jockey Lon McCallister falls in love with Shirley, but she won't let herself think of him That Way because of his line of work. Seabiscuit, meanwhile, does nothing. Even as a two-year-old, ridden by top jockey Lon, he can't win a race. Barry, who's sickly, goes West, takes a job with William Howard (Pierre Watkin) on his ranch, persuades Howard to buy Seabiscuit, and also Lon's contract. First thing you know, Seabiscuit's winning races. Second thing you know, Seabiscuit's the most popular horse in the country. At one point, he pulls a ligament, is expected never to run again, but confounds everybody by getting better, and breaking a world's record the next time he races at Santa Anita. Shirley and Lon work out their problem, too.

THE GREAT LOVER

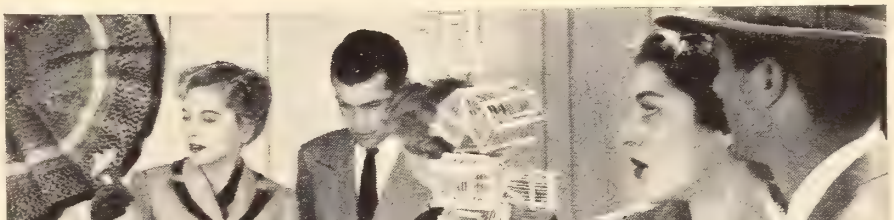
Cast: Bob Hope, Rhonda Fleming, Roland Young, Roland Culver.
Paramount

If you're a Boy Forester, you aren't supposed to drink, smoke, or kiss females not your mother. This is very hard on Bob Hope, in charge of a group of Boy Foresters (they've been touring France on bicycles) and subject to the same rules. One puff at a cigarette, and a certain rat of a Boy Forester named Stanley will surely squeal to his rich old man, and lose Hope his job. Next prospect: Starvation. When we meet them, the happy Foresters and their repressed leader are returning to America on a luxury liner. Also aboard are a Duchess (Rhonda Fleming), her father, a Grand Duke (Roland Culver) and a cardsharp-murderer (Roland Young). Hope falls madly in love with the Duchess (she rests his eyes, after all those spindly-limbed boys) and since she's a female not his mother, there's danger ahead. The Duchess thinks Bob's a millionaire, and Bob thinks the Duchess is a millionairess, but they're both really impoverished, and after awhile they sing a song about being plain Mr. and Mrs. Jones, and living on love. "Jones?" says the Duchess. "What's Jones?" "Oh, that's just a very common name in my country, like, say, in your country, Slobbovitch," Bob explains gallantly. Meanwhile, Roland Young, the viper, is murdering detectives, and playing crooked poker. That he gets caught is a tribute to Bob Hope's stout—uh—heart.

THE LADY TAKES A SAILOR

Cast: Jane Wyman, Dennis Morgan, Eve Arden, Robert Douglas.
Warners

Jane Wyman's a regular one-woman Good Housekeeping Institute (they call it Buyers' Research Institute in this picture) and anything she puts her seal of approval on is guaranteed to last a hundred years. To crown her triumphant career, she's just won a permanent endowment for the Institute (and a confirmation for herself as Director) from rich eccentric John Tyson (Robert Douglas) and the trustees of the Tyson Foundation. But Jane



CONTRIBUTE TO THE MARCH OF DIMES!

JOAN FONTAINE soon to be seen in Hal Wallis' "SEPTEMBER", a Paramount Picture

Don't look now...

So you're wandering through the Farmer's Market—on your first trip to that Hollywood landmark. Joan Fontaine's at the next stall! She's looking at curios so you can steal a glance. Even if she catches you, do you think she minds? Not at all! It's part of being a star! And she knows the Woodbury Powder she wears (in lovely Rachel) helps her look her beautiful best!

there's Joan Fontaine ...

In Hollywood, where women are easy to look at, stars chose Woodbury Powder their favorite 6 to 1*. And no powder can make you look lovelier! A new ingredient gives a satin-smooth glow to your skin. And u-m-m! The exciting fragrance clings like this unbelievably fine-textured powder! For every skin type ... in seven heavenly shades. 15¢, 30¢ and $1.00 plus tax.

I dreamed
I went skating in my
*maidenform bra

A figure eight! Wonderful! But my Maidenform figure . . . spectacular! I never knew how much a bra could do 'til I tried Maidenform. Improves my form, gives me a lift I love. How wonderful if only I could skate so dreamily! One dream, at least, is real . . . a bra with perfect fit . . . my Maidenform.

Shown: Maidenform's Maidenette* Strapless in white satin and lace designed for young uplift.

This is only a hint of a come-hither collection! For strapless, hug-me-close support, for fuller figures, it's Maidenform's Hold-Tite.* Inter-lude* for classic roundness, deep-down cut And for deep, deep down necklines, your bra is Dec-la-tay.*

There is a Maiden Form for Every Type of Figure

*REG U. S. PAT. OFF.

The Lady Takes a Sailor. Jane Wyman goes for a little sail in a sailboat and gets picked up by submarine skipper Dennis Morgan.

goes for a ride in a sailboat, and gets capsized by a submarine, and picked up by the submarine's captain, a man who says his name is Davey Jones. He shows her an octopus, and gives her some sleeping pills, and plants her on the beach, some hours later. When she's found by the Coast Guard, naturally nobody believes that story. The newspapers call her crazy, she gets an award as Liar of the Year, and her endowment is imperiled, since truth is the keystone of her business. But Jane took some pictures while she was down in that sub. If she could produce them, she'd be cleared. But Davey Jones (Dennis Morgan) has swiped the film out of her camera. (Truth is, he's a Navy commander, doing secret underseas work, and he's responsible for the security of his mission. He's sorry for Jane, but he could not love her, dear, so much, loved he not honor more.) Jane hires a private detective who's part crook and part maniac to help her trace Morgan, and the rest of the picture's a series of pursuits, with the roll of film changing hands periodically. In the end, Jane sees the light, and lets her career be ruined (she doesn't want the country to go to pot on her account) and Dennis is so grateful he marries her.

HOLIDAY AFFAIR

Cast: Robert Mitchum, Janet Leigh, Wendell Corey, Gordon Gebert.
RKO

I've been sitting around trying to analyze the charm of this one—and it's unusually charming—but why bore everybody? It's enough to say Holiday Affair's characters are nice, its dialogue is extra-good, its acting is warm and real. Janet Leigh, widow of a soldier, is trying to bring up her little son (Gordon Gebert) to be just like his father. Janet's more-or-less engaged to a lovely man (Wendell Corey) who wants to take her away from the pots and pans and buy her a dishwasher. With a built-in wedding ring. But Janet thinks it's disloyal to her late husband to get serious about romance. At which point she meets Robert Mitchum, who's working in a department store, and loses him his job. (She's a comparison shopper; Mitchum fails to turn her in, so the store turns him out.) Mitchum's not backward, he gets to know Janet, and he and Corey now form two sides of a highly civilized triangle. Mitchum doesn't approve of Janet's obsession with the past;

Holiday Affair. Janet Leigh is more interested in the department store clerk than the merchandise. Naturally—he's Robert Mitchum.

Janet doesn't approve of Mitchum in general (he eats with seals in the park), but they fall in love anyway. Janet's little boy's crazy about Mitchum too, and when man buys boy an electric train for Christmas, boy hauls it clear back to the store for a refund because he doesn't think man can afford it. Other man (Wendell) behaves admirably throughout, though he gets the short end of things. There's a gay, Christmassy feeling about the whole picture. But little Gordon Gebert is the real thing to talk about. That kid could open an acting school, just like Madame Ouspenskaya, if he wanted.

PRINCE OF FOXES

Cast: Tyrone Power, Orson Welles, Wanda Hendrix.
20th Century-Fox

Paramount recently made a movie called Bride of Vengeance in which the small Italian state of Ferrara successfully turned back from its gates the armies of Cesare Borgia (the Renaissance ruler who ran most of Italy). Now Fox comes along with a little duchy called Citta del Monte, and permits said duchy to triumph over Cesare's forces. What with all these small towns beating him right and left, the wonder is that Cesare ever got to be a big shot. But that's not our story. Our story has Cesare (Orson Welles) sending his trusty aide (Tyrone Power) on a series of messy missions—the most important of these missions being to get the wife of the Duke of Citta del Monte all starry-eyed about him and then murder the Duke. Tyrone's reward will be the lady (Wanda Hendrix) and the duchy. The Duke of Citta del Monte (Felix Aylmer) is an old man, and he's not especially averse to dying, but he doesn't want his wife made love to, and he doesn't want Borgia's armies putting their big feet all over his flower beds. Tyrone, who's not really a bad sort, comes to see the Duke's point of view, and ends up fighting his former master. This is a typical semi-historical-swashbuckling-adventure movie. The only thing particularly notable about it is that the Italian scenes were shot in Italy. (In fact, the whole picture was shot in Italy, at Heaven knows what fearful price.) There's a nice gruesome moment where an assassin pops Tyrone's eyes out, too.

Wonder-working lotion brings new beauty to your WHOLE HAND!

1 SOFTENS CUTICLE. Nails look neater with New Hinds helping to keep cuticle pliable. No ragged edges to "catch." Your manicures stay lovely longer!

2 SMOOTHS KNUCKLES. Dry knuckles yield to the smoothing action of New Hinds. Effective emollients "sink in." Hinds dries fast—never feels sticky!

3 SATINIZES PALMS. Even rough palms are soothed and smoothed. New Hinds' "skin-affinity" ingredients actually help to soften calluses.

4 BEAUTIFIES SKIN. New Hinds is enriched with lanolin to make your hands feel softer instantly—protect them longer. Works wonders on rough, dry skin!

WORKS WONDERS! Lanolin-enriched for extra effectiveness, New Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream keeps your whole hand feeling soft in spite of ravages of work and water. Use it to smooth elbows, arms and legs...try it as a powder base. Use Hinds to help protect babies' and children's tender skin from chapping! 4 sizes, 10¢ to $1.00.

Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream

NOW IN NEW LARGER BEAUTY BOTTLE

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

someday her Prince may go

Is Rita Hayworth still happy? If she should cease to be a princess, would Hollywood still have a place for her? Her father answers frankly.

BY GEORGE FISHER

■ If you like movie stars, and I certainly do, it's tough to watch their lives unfold over the news teletype, which chatters away endlessly, spilling over with such items as:

THE ALY KHAN TODAY DENIED THAT HE AND RITA HAYWORTH WERE HAVING MATRIMONIAL TROUBLE. . . . LONELY RITA HAYWORTH TELEPHONES FATHER FREQUENTLY. . . . RITA HAYWORTH HAS SENT FOR AUNT AND CHINESE SERVANT TO BE WITH HER.

Every day, just before my broadcasts from Hollywood, I go to the news room, tear the news sheet from the machine and step before the microphone to relay the latest movieland events to the public. Sometimes, on a hunch, I pocket the latest lowdown and wait until I have a chance to check an authoritative source.

Such was the case when the flash came that serious developments were pending in the household of Aly and his Princess, my old friend (Continued on page 95)

new faces

HUGH MARLOWE had been to Hollywood twice before he finally clicked in 20th Century's Come to the Stable. The third time he came straight from his Broadway hit in Voice of the Turtle. He decided on being an actor just after graduating from high school and did some little-theater work around Chicago where he spent his boyhood. Hugh is 6 feet tall, weighs 170 lbs. and has brown hair and blue eyes. He married K. T. Stevens, who was once his leading lady, and they have a son. Hugh's next is 12 O'clock High.

DONA DRAKE was born Rita Novella in Mexico, on Nov. 5, 1920. She began her theatrical career at the age of 13 and soon after organized her own orchestra. They played theaters, hotels, college dances and anything else they could find. The road was long but it finally led to Hollywood. There Rita, who had become Dona, got her first break in Louisiana Purchase. Dona is five-feet-one and weighs 100 pounds, and has blue-green eyes. Her latest is Beyond the Forest.

MARIO LANZA comes from a very musical family. They were too poor to give him music lessons, so they bought Caruso records and when he was old enough—he got a job moving pianos. He moved one for Serge Koussevitsky and sang at the same time. Serge was very impressed and thus Mario began his formal training. After serving in the war, Mario began making records and radio appearances. MGM discovered him at the Hollywood Bowl and he was signed for That Midnight Kiss. Mario was born in New York; has black eyes and is married to Betty Hicks.

LINA ROMAY, whom you'll soon see in The Big Wheel with Mickey Rooney, has been in show business for quite a few years. She was discovered by a Detroit newspaperman who found her singing at a party and arranged a radio audition for her. The radio people signed her for a weekly show and that's where Xavier Cugat heard her. She appeared with him in You Were Never Lovelier and Week End At The Waldorf. Lina's five-feet-three, weighs 110 pounds and has brown eyes. She's divorced from John Adams.

Beauty is my business—

says

GILLIS MacGIL,

Enchanting Cover Girl

And SweetHeart is my Beauty Soap

9 out of 10 Cover Girls Use SWEETHEART SOAP

• All the glamorous girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year were asked, "What beauty soap do you use?" And 9 out of 10 replied, "SweetHeart Soap."

"I Owe My Success to SWEETHEART CARE"

—says Gillis MacGil, famous cover girl, "because it helps prevent chapping. I couldn't face the camera with rough, chapped skin. That's why I play safe with SweetHeart Care. It leaves my complexion like soft, smooth velvet—with a fresh young glow that photographs radiantly."

And now you, too, can guard your delicate skin's true fresh beauty. Discover pure, mild SweetHeart Soap that helps prevent unsightly chapping.

You'll adore the beauty benefits of gentle SweetHeart Care. For you'll quickly see results! One week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . younger.

Beauty is my business, too!

• Donna Lee Archibald, at the early age of 6 months, has already started her modeling career. And, like so many grown-up cover girls, she has a lovely SweetHeart complexion. For Donna's mother always bathes her with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap.

SWEETHEART The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

• Today get gentle SweetHeart Soap in the new, large bath size.

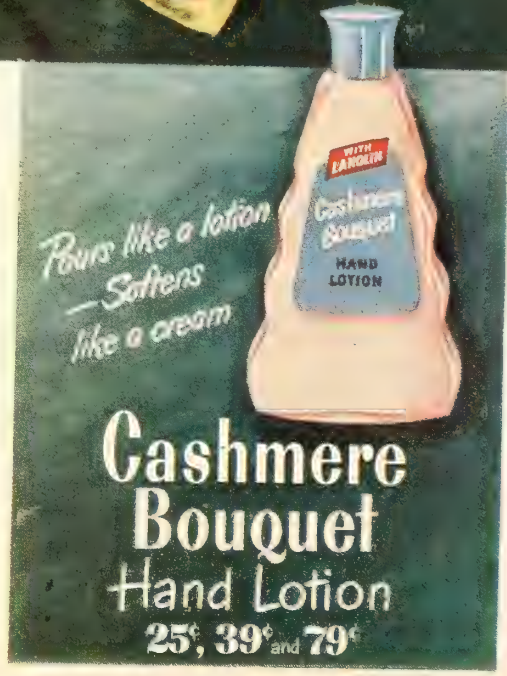
Caressable Hands in just Seconds!

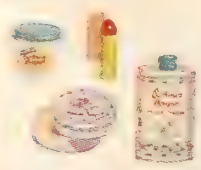
—with this fragrant new Lotion that Dries Fast, without Stickiness!



Prove It for Yourself with This 10-second Test!

Want hands that are soft as any flower petal? Just as fragrant, too? Then it's New Cashmere Bouquet Hand Lotion (with lanolin) for you! Do this and you'll understand why!

Use Cashmere Bouquet on one hand, any old-style lotion on the other. Wait, then compare.



Your "Cashmere Bouquet" hand? This fast-drying lotion that softens like a cream has already done its wonderful work. Not a trace of stickiness or tackiness. Your hand feels smooth, is excitingly fragrant, excitingly soft to the touch!

Your other hand? No comparison, of course! In just 10 seconds you've seen for yourself, that caressable hands call for Cashmere Bouquet!

Remember!

There's a Cashmere Bouquet Cosmetic for Almost Every Beauty Need!

LIPSTICK
Creamy, clinging—in 8 fashionable shades!

FACE POWDER
Smooth, velvety texture! 6 "Flower-Fresh" shades!

ALL-PURPOSE CREAM
For radiant, "date-time" loveliness—a bedtime beauty "must"!

TALCUM POWDER
A shower of spring flowers!

this is your year!

an open letter to wanda and audie— and some others

Dear Wanda and Audie:

As 1950, the half-way point of the century, rolls around, it's an occasion for reflection—and for hope.

During 1950, we hope you two young people will make a success of your recent reconciliation. You, Wanda, and you, Audie, represent a bright young dream for many thousands of persons. It seems to us that, in facing squarely the issues between you, you stand as an example for many young couples.

We also hope the numerous published rumors of domestic trouble between Glenn Ford and Eleanor Powell are as false as they were in 1949, and that this fine couple will continue to make the whispers of dissension sound silly.

We hope that June Haver, after the heartbreaking tragedy she suffered because of the death of Dr. John Duzik, will be able to rise above it with the shining courage she has already demonstrated.

We hope that Ingrid Bergman, despite the strange situation into which her heart has led her, will forget her announced decision never to return to Hollywood. The film world is Miss Bergman's world; she can't renounce her citizenship in it without causing unhappiness both for herself and others.

We hope Bette Davis will not find occasion to press her action for divorce from William Sherry—an action which, despite their current reconciliation, she has not withdrawn.

We hope that Joan Evans, having shown she is an actress of stature in her first film, Roseanna McCoy, will continue to develop toward the high position she seems destined to occupy.

We hope the stories we hear, which give the impression that Lana Turner is jealous of the build-up given Elizabeth Taylor, turn out to be idle rumors. There's plenty of room at the top.

We hope Montgomery Clift and Guy Madison will see the wisdom of adopting a friendlier, more cooperative attitude toward the public and press.

We hope Bing Crosby will get through 1950 without hearing that he is (1) washed up, (2) slipping, (3) sick, (4) selfish, (5) uncooperative.

We hope that John Derek will go forward to even greater accomplishments than those already achieved in such films as All the King's Men.

We hope that Van Johnson continues to get roles such as he had in Battleground—roles that give him an opportunity to demonstrate his considerable and hitherto underrated acting ability.

We hope Frank Sinatra will continue to keep the chip off his shoulder. Chips belong in woodpiles.

William B Hartley

EDITOR

Barefoot boy with shows on

He just won't live his life the way a movie star's supposed to— yet Hollywood accepts Monty Clift's individualisn It's the only way they can have him.

BY ARTHUR L. CHARLES

■ "You'd think the guy was a derelict. I've seen sharecroppers dressed better than he. And the places he lives in! That sixth-floor walk-up apartment he lives in in New York, a soda-jerk would want to move out of. And over at Paramount, you know, they were so embarrassed by that 1939 junk heap he drives around they begged him to get a new one—but he's still driving the wreck. What a barefoot boy!"

The speaker was a Hollywood starlet. She was referring to a young actor who, after being seen by the public in three pictures, has become a major star, with a major star's income—Montgomery Clift.

Gus Goetz, who, with his wife, wrote the screenplay for The Heiress, was stunned the first time Clift walked on the set.

"He was wearing," Gus says, "a pair of tattered blue jeans, a T-shirt and a jacket full of holes. He looked like a bum. 'Good Lord,' I said to myself, 'is this the fellow who's going to play the suave, elegant character of Morris Townsend? This will be ridiculous.' But when Monty got into costume, the transformation was really startling—he seemed the most fastidious youth you ever saw. Still, it took me a couple of days to get over my first impression of him."

Why does Montgomery Clift seem to choose deliberately to appear a vagabond? The answer is simple. In a sense, he is a vagabond.

"I like to travel," he says. "I like to keep going. People who have lots of possessions—big houses, Cadillacs, swimming pools, lots of clothes—usually are tied down. Without a huge clutter of worldly goods, and wearing old clothes, I feel the way I want to be—comfortable and free."

Aside from his trip to Germany to make Two Corridors East, Clift has in recent months been on the move from Los Angeles to Paris to Switzerland to Italy to Israel to London to New York to Los Angeles to New York and to numerous way-stations. "Why does he travel so much?" people ask. "Is he (Continued on page 74)

Here they are—Hedda Hopper's favorites for 1950. These are the golden ten whom she KIRK DOUGLAS. Dynamic, virile and canny, Kirk followed up his sensational success in Champion with a million-dollar contract at Warners. Excellent roles will keep him rising.

RUTH ROMAN. Playing it smart, this ex-carnival girl took small parts in order to learn. Now she'll get roles planned for Bette Davis.

PAUL DOUGLAS. Plain-faced, 45-year-old Paul's warmth and charm have put him solidly in the glamor-boy class.

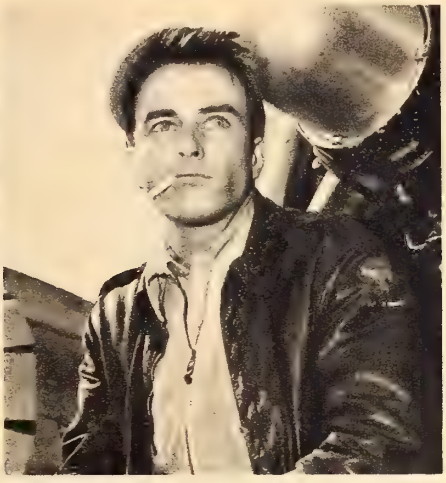
JANET LEIGH. A natural-born actress, Janet worked hard and kept her head after her Cinderella break. MGM has big plans for her.

MARIO LANZA. This sweet-natured boy from across the tracks sang his way to singing stardom with one picture.

MY PREDICTIONS

From her intimate knowledge of the Hollywood scene, Hedda Hopper ventures prophecies of things to come. What new stars will emerge in the next twelve months . . . which romances will flourish and which will fail?

■ Anybody got a 1950-model crystal ball handy? Or a few magic tea-leaves? Anybody around who's the seventh son of a seventh son? I could use you right now—and a transfusion of gypsy blood, too. Because the editors of MODERN SCREEN have just pitched this puzzler at me:



"How about telling what's going to happen in Hollywood during the next year, Hedda? How about your own private star-predictions for 1950?"

Me, predict the unpredictables? Prophesize filmland's Fantasia for a full year ahead? What do they think I am—crazy?

ects to come out on top in the Hollywood race for fame and fortune during the new year.

SUSAN HAYWARD. Her great triumph n My Foolish Heart was final proof r her top-drawer talent and appeal.

MONTGOMERY CLIFT. Matinee-idol allure and shrewd script-selection are raising him sky-high, but his performances must measure up.

SHELLEY WINTERS. Colorful Shelley combines a socko personality with dramatic talent, which she's working eagerly to develop. Only her temperamental streak can jinx her now.

BARBARA HALE. Friendly, sincere and wholesome, she seems set to succeed Myrna Loy as the perfect screen wife.

FARLEY GRANGER. He has the deep emotional insight of the great stars, has never muffed a part, gets one of 1950's strongest roles.

FOR 1950 by hedda hopper

They do. "Anyway," they say, "we dare you."

Well, could be they're right about my state of mind. Sometimes n my dizzy beat I feel ripe and ready for a strait-jacket. Also, I aven't taken a dare since I jumped off the chicken shed back in Altoona, Pennsylvania, with pretty sad results. That's sort of the way I feel now—set for a bump but willing to try. So out goes ny neck—where it's often been before—and on goes my swami hat o peer into the future and up at the stars.

Let's see—which Hollywood Forty-Niners will strike 1950's onanzas of fame, fortune and popularity at this momentous mid-century mark? The prize nuggets are already uncovered and shining bright. They line up for me like this—with ladies, naturally, first:

Susan Hayward—Barbara Hale—Ruth Roman—Shelley Winters—Janet Leigh.

And the men: Kirk Douglas—Farley Granger—Montgomery Clift—Paul Douglas—Mario Lanza.

New? you ask. What's new about those? Most of those Hollywood hot-shots are already up in lights. Well, they're my New Year's prize babies just the same, because (Continued on page 58)

Proud parents Ben Gage and Esther Williams, from the stairway of their Hollywood home, listen happily to the sounds coming from the nursery above.

■ Motherhood? Girls, as the old phrase goes, I "just sailed through it." True, there was a little "tossing" of a morning or two (or 20!), a bit of wallowing around and not seeming to make any headway, a time here and there in which I thought I'd founder completely, and in between the old engine clanking and knocking. But outside of these tiny (what am I saying?) inconveniences—well, I just sailed through it. Oh, my, yes!

Away back (it seems ages ago now) when I first got the idea that I was being followed by something that could easily turn out to be a stork, I didn't know exactly what to think.

It was a happy prospect except that at the studio we were getting ready to start on my latest picture, Neptune's Daughter. Pictures, especially big musicals, can sometimes take as long as five or six months to finish. How would this work out for me? Now, you see, I had something to think about.

I kept hoping the producer would hurry preparations—and I also kept wondering if maybe I was wrong, maybe I wasn't being followed. Maybe I was seeing an exciting shadow that wasn't really there. Having sold myself on this possibility one night, I went to bed convinced all was as before . . . only to wake up the next morning with absolutely no appetite. In fact, I had no

In this delightful story, written in her own words exclusively for Modern Screen, Esther Williams tells for the first time of her emotions as a mother.

MY NEW GUY

by Esther Williams

This is how Esther and her Ben were "caught" for our cover.

Benjamin Stanton Gage, all freshly bathed and talcumed, merrily grasps his adoring mother with what she fondly describes as his "great, big hands." Benjy was born soon after midnight on August 6, and weighed seven pounds, nine ounces.

appetite retroactively—I seemed to be regretting everything I had eaten for the past week. This was strange, I thought—yet sort of promising, too. I dressed quickly, kept well away from the kitchen, and hurried to the studio.

The next day I seemed better. In time the picture got under way and we began our swimming sequences. Every time that old bothersome thought came up, I would neatly drop a (Continued on page 77)

At the fireplace side of their huge living room (above), Brenda and Bill Holden have a reading session with sons Scott and West. At the opposite, picture-window side (below), Bill drapes his feet on the antique coffee table. All the Holden furniture can—and does—take wear and tear.

Like their deep devotion, Brenda and Bill Holden's home is a creation of happy sharing, and warmth, and much laughter.

BY DUANE VALENTRY

The house they love in

■ A house can be many things. It can be walls around you and a roof above you—and not much else. Or it can be a happy, echoing place, filled with children's shouts, and the whisper of memories shared, and things lovingly acquired.

In Hidden Village, in the San Fernando Valley, Bill and Brenda Holden have that kind of house—a house that love built, room by lovely room and hour by remembered hour. The glow that touches the front door and lingers over the upstairs windows is the sunshine, but seems more to be the warm radiance of that intangible thing that makes Home.

The dogs greet you first, and walk with you up the hedge-bordered, red brick pathway. Two great, gentle beasts, Duke and Rex wag their tails hospitably, then make off over the soft green lawn.

The imposing house is a French Provincial type, with shake shingles and fine stonework. Boxed shrubs stand on either side of the wide doorway. The letter box is of well-shined brass.

As you enter the spacious entrance hall with its rose-beige carpeting, there's an ornate, old-fashioned hatrack, quaintly complete with umbrella racks. Bill and Brenda have a passion for antiques. They're constantly hieing themselves to towns near and far to hunt for some old piece that has the feeling they both want in furniture.

After Bill and Brenda have greeted you and taken you into the large living room, (Continued on next page)

In the den, Bill enjoys a moment of quiet triumph over Brenda in the course of a game of Canasta—to which they're addicted. The den, their favorite spot, is where they usually entertain.

Above: Brenda waters a plant in the old lavabo—or washbasin set—that she uses as a potted-plant holder. Below: She and Bill in the bar, with its antique two-and-three-seater stools.

Brenda Holden, wearing the white-and-gold hostess gown Bill likes, combs her new, short hair-do in the small, green-and-red powder room off the den.

Bill and Brenda pause on the stairway for an affectionate moment. Audubon prints line the light green walls here; the carpeting is a rose-beige.

Three-year-old Scott and six-year-old West get a steadying hand from their parents on Scott's new bike. Virginia, 11, was off taking a ballet lesson you notice other fine old pieces. There are 18th-Century tavern tables, holding huge brass lamps, on each side of the gaily-patterned sofa. And a sturdy, seven-foot coffee table. "If this," says Bill of it, "has stood the wear and tear for 200 years, I figure it can stand rough treatment for another couple of centuries."

"And a good thing, too," says Brenda with a smile. "Bill's always got his feet up on it. . . . We never get old furniture just because it's old. First of all, it's got to be comfortable and sturdy. We want a place we can really live in."

That's what you'd expect from the Holdens—two solid citizens who haven't got a nickel's worth of sham between them, and who make you think of one possible answer to the question of what's wrong with Hollywood marriages: Maybe the other couples don't laugh enough.

Bill and Brenda laugh a lot—at and with each other. Their eyes meet often in silent, happy agreement. Then you get the impression they're saying, "This is our house, and we love it."

They take turns telling you about the things they plan to do with the house—as quickly as the budget allows. "We've been slowly doing the house over ever since we bought it from Leon Errol two years ago," Bill tells you. "It's on a strictly 50-50 basis—nothing is added that we don't both agree on, and have thought about until we're completely sure we want it."

One side of the living room is taken up by a picture window that looks out over the garden. Opposite it is the large fireplace. There are bookshelves that contain a number of first editions, a grand piano on which stands a bowl of crimson gardenias and, at the living room's far end—dominating all else—is the painting.

This, the pride and joy of the Holdens, is the wonderfully alive portrait by Paul Clemmens of Brenda and the three children. Done in leisurely fashion over a six-month period by the artist, a close friend, it is one of the things they most wanted.

An 18th Century cupboard is below the painting. On this, until a few months ago, the television set rested. It isn't there any more—and for a very good reason.

It was a Sunday afternoon and a particularly wild and woolly Western was unfolding on the television screen. The Holden small fry—Virginia, West, and Scott—and several of their small friends grew more and more loudly anguished with each scene of derring-do. Finally came an unbearable moment when the fuse was lit—burning nearer . . . and nearer . . . and nearer to the prone figure of the cowboy hero.

"Put it out! Put it out!" yelled several of the young ones, jumping up and down in near hysteria.

It was too much for Scott, aged three. Dressed in full Western regalia—as are most of the neighborhood children most of the time—he pulled his toy gun from its holster and hurled it with all his three-year-old might at the screen. Fortunately, his aim was wild—but the missile struck with a bang a scant two inches below the painting.

The television set is now upstairs in the boys' room.

"Before," says Bill, "you could hardly get through the living room, the way the kids would be packed in here! And it's still a thoroughfare, any summer day, for 17 or 18 of 'em playing cowboys and Indians—with the dogs right behind them!"

Brenda laughed. "Remember the (Continued on page 84)

FIFTH
in a series

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

by Van Johnson

A life whose purpose was destroyed seemed to lie ahead for me—even if I survived. And then I learned how God works His will with those through whom His love flows.

■ I was one of the happiest actors in Hollywood, playing my first important role. How I had hoped and dreamed of getting that role in A Guy Named Joe.

When Fred Datig, of MGM's casting office, told me I was to test for the picture with Irene Dunne, herself, I stayed up most of the night studying the script. Just to make certain I wouldn't miss a cue, I memorized everybody else's lines as well as my own. The next morning I was in my tiny dressing room on the set bright and early. I was in there when Miss Dunne walked onto the set. I watched her across the stage and saw her looking in my direction. It was clear she was curious as to what I was like.

The minute we started shooting I got so nervous I couldn't get my words to match my actions, and I rattled off my lines like a machine gun.

Miss Dunne was wonderful. She took me aside and told me to relax, that I would be all right so not to worry. She gave me confidence in myself. If she had complained about me, I would probably have lost the part. But she put up with my awkwardness and gradually I lost my self-consciousness.

For two weeks everything was wonderful. And then, in a few nightmarish seconds, everything was changed: I was in an automobile accident.

I lay on the curb, blood pouring from my head. I heard a woman whisper, "He's dead." Dimly, I wondered how long it would be before her words were true. Death—just when I was beginning to live. A feeling of terror surged over me—then I lost consciousness.

The next thing I knew, I was in a hospital bed. A doctor was bending over me. I felt as though my head would explode and I gripped the sides of my bed, trying to forget the pain.

From what seemed a great distance, I heard a doctor's voice saying, "It's a question whether he can pull through. He's lost three quarts of blood."

Maybe I wouldn't live. Somehow, I now faced the prospect with a strange calmness. Maybe (Continued on page 83)

Lon McCallister strums the evening's theme song, 'Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?' on his guitar as his hobo-party guests listen politely.

Bob Stack unsuccessfully tries to startle Nancy Olson in the backyard in the course of festivities. Nancy's outfit, borrowed from Paramount, was one worn by Marlene Dietrich in Golden Earrings.

Ruth Roman, Diana and John Lindsay and Ruth's date, Ivan Volkman, line up for some of Lon's Mulligan stew, which they'd taken turns stirring. Sadly enough, it was so burned they couldn't eat it.

hallelujah! we is bums

by reba and bonnie churchill

The highway beckoned, the night was clear. So tattered and battered but gay as larks, we hit the road to Lon McCallister's rollicking hobo party.

■ The night was elegant in black velvet and diamond stars, crowned with a new moon. The people were inelegant in patched cast-offs and battered hats. In fact, they looked like a bunch of bums.

In fact, they were Diana Lynn and her husband, John Lindsay; the Donald O'Connors; Ruth Roman and Ivan Volkman; Nancy Olson and Robert Stack; John Barrymore, Jr.; Lon McCallister, and we Churchills —all dressed up, or maybe down, in gunnysacks, levis and assorted tatters appropriate to the hobo party Lon was giving.

It must have been an interesting sight to see the shiny convertibles skim up the hill to the three-story Spanish apartment building Lon owns and lives in—and then observe the grimily disreputable-looking drivers get out to open the doors for their equally unsightly dates.

On the wall of the building, by the flight of steps leading up to his first-floor apartment, Lon had posted a sign—"Hobo Haven." With Diana Lynn and John Lindsay, we were the first arrivals. Diana sported John's old levis, which were secured at her waist with a flashy red tie. Her plaid shirt was decorated—or, as she preferred, "given the Park Avenue touch"—by a wilted orchid corsage.

"It was a birthday gift from John," sighed Diana fondly, stroking the shrunken brown petals. Eyeing it, we (Continued on next page)

As Lon pours hobo-style coffee right from the can for latecomers Don and Gwen O'Connor, Reba stands by with the cake that was donated by Lon's grandmother.

Ruth Roman, in levis and bare feet, takes advantage of a lull in the evening's hilarities to admire John Barrymore, Jr.'s less-than-classic profile. His blooming nose, like his monstrous feet, was of course, strictly artificial.

John Barrymore, Jr., gallantly assists Diana Lynn (now in Paid in Full) with the king-sized snack she constructed at the hobo party.

Foolishly allowing his curiosity to get the best of him, Lon McCallister leans forward to examine Bonnie Churchill's boutonniere—and is rewarded by a well-aimed squirt of milk.

hallelujah! we is bums continued

Gwen O'Connor holds out her tin cup for a handout while husband Don suddenly realizes his sandwich filling consists of Lon's fingers.

Still the perfect host, Lon doesn't want his guests to go. "I hate to tear myself away," says Bob Stack—as Nancy helps him tear.

asked, "When was your birthday?" "Two weeks ago," she replied.

There was a tapping at the window. It was Ruth Roman and Ivan Volkman. "Hey," they called, "let us in! We can't find the doorbell."

Lon opened the door. "No one ever uses the doorbell," he said. "I can usually hear my guests puffing before they reach the porch." The apartment building stands on a steep hillside and Lon's apartment is reached only by panting up 35 steps.

Ivan is an assistant to director Mark Robson and met Ruth while they were working on Champion. Ruth now introduced him to the others. Lon shook hands with him, but kept his distance from Ruth. He eyed her like a wary prizefighter. They sparred around for a few minutes, making idle conversation—then both burst out laughing.

Everyone else wanted in on the joke. Lon obliged. According to Lon, this Roman gal carries quite a wallop. They first met on the Warner lot when Ruth was working in Always Leave Them Laughing and Lon was in The Story of Seabiscuit. Ruth was hurrying from the set to the make-up department, and Lon was just leaving Make-up for the sound stage. They collided in the hallway. Ruth remained vertical, but Lon went sprawling down the corridor. "From that meeting on, I've regarded Roman as a dangerous gal," he said.

Diana and Ruth soon appointed themselves the de-beautifying squad and set to work to make sure each guest was facially "in character" with the outfits they wore. Diana studied Ivan for a second. "He's definitely the beard type, don't you think?" Ruth nodded and fished out a flaming-red walrus moustache and beard from Lon's prop box—which contained a collection of false faces, patches, whiskers, and so forth that Lon has been accumulating since junior high-school.

But when John Barrymore, Jr., arrived, they just couldn't improve his appearance. Johnny, who makes his screen debut in The Sundowners, had his classic profile disguised with a putty nose and wore a giant pair of false feet and a pint-sized orange opera hat.

While we girls busied ourselves stirring and sampling judiciously the Mulligan stew Lon had cooking in an open kettle over the fireplace, the men started an involved discussion of automobiles.

After a while, stirring that stew began to be warm and heavy work. Diana looked sternly at the boys. "Why is it," she asked pointedly, "that fellas always get so talky (Continued on page 90)

This love of ours

Our joys are small and tender—our clouds have silver linings.

by Larry Parks

■ No, it wasn't love at first sight. Nor did I ask Betty Garrett to marry me the first time I took her out.

Indeed not. I fell in love with the sound of her voice, minutes before I saw her. It was at a party shortly after Betty came to Hollywood. That same night I blithely told her that she was the girl I was going to marry. I didn't really have a date with her until the next day.

Comparing notes later, we discovered that Fate had shuffled us around in the same New York environs for a long time without letting our paths cross. We had both worked in the theater in New York, had many mutual friends, had attended parties in the same apartments but never at the same time.

That night in Hollywood when we finally met, I out-maneuvered three other actors, one lawyer and a radio producer to squire home the future Mrs. Parks. On the way, we stopped on a high hill to look down over Hollywood in its jewelled evening (Continued on page 86)

eighth in a series

The bright faces of Betty and her two scamps, Vicki and Jessica, clearly show the harmony of their life. She's raised them on love and common sense.

I don't run Betty's

by Lillian Grable

This is the story of a mother who guided her daughter—but never meddled. It's also the story of her deeply affectionate daughter who trusted her wisdom.

■ I was minding my own business that day when MODERN SCREEN telephoned and asked, "Mrs. Grable, would you give us a story on how come you and Betty are such good friends?"

At first I thought it was a gag. Then I became a little annoyed. "Why shouldn't we be good friends? We're mother and daughter."

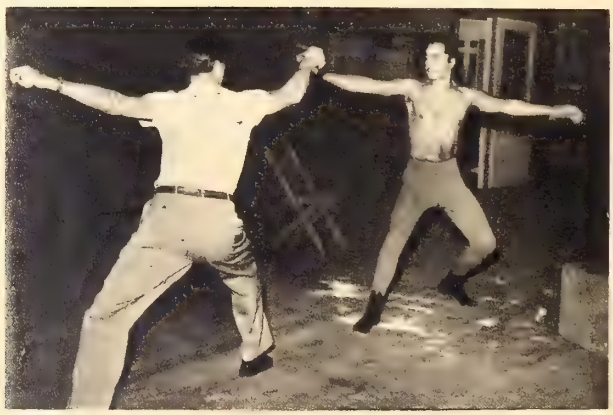
In the next few minutes I was given a statistical rundown on family feuds, inside Hollywood and out. I was told about the gulf that separates two generations, about the inevitable friction between children and their elders, about why Mary leaves home and Mother turns gray. My jaw dropped. When people throw figures at me, I've got nothing to throw back. It sounded as if parents and children were natural enemies.

Well—this is something I don't believe. From personal experience, I know too many families who get along fine. On the other hand, I'm not so naïve that I don't realize there are problems. I also realize that I'm a very fortunate woman. Because with my daughters, such problems never came up. Except for their illnesses, neither of them ever caused me a moment's worry.

I'm not an analytical person, so I can't put my finger on any one reason for this state of affairs, except that I'm blessed with a couple of grand girls. What holds true (Continued on page 60)

Betty has dinner with her parents, Conn and Lillian Grable, at the Brown Derby.

life



My kind of man

by Patti Behrs

Love can change your mind about a lot of things. I didn't know that until I met John Derek and lost my heart for keeps.

John Derek and Pati Behrs clinch expertly—they've been rehearsing love scenes ever since they discovered each other at a studio dramatic school. (Today, their love scenes aren't acting!)

Preparing for his swashbuckling role in Rogues of Sherwood Forest, John skillfully parries a thrust from his fencing master. He's no longer bothered by his former "pretty boy" tag.

■ Marriage, I told myself, was out of the question. I was in love—but with my career. Men were merely incidental, being an actress was all that really mattered. "Pati Behrs," I kept informing myself, "you are a very sensible girl."

This was back in 1946, when I'd just arrived from France clutching a 20th Century-Fox contract, all set to become another Sarah Bernhardt. My ambition and I went steady every morning in drama class on the Fox lot. It was a fine romance—until the day a set of eyelashes came between my ambition and me. The eyelashes belonged to a young actor named John Derek.

Helena Sorrell, the studio dramatic coach, made the dramatic announcement to me that was completely to disrupt my plans: "You are now going to meet a new classmate with the most beautiful eyelashes of any actor in existence."

I thought, "A fine recommendation for an actor!" Then I turned and glanced up—and into a pair of the most expressive eyes I'd ever seen. As we were introduced, I thought further, "He is wonderfully handsome—but can he act?" I was conscientiously trying to shake the fascination I instantly felt.

Later, I discovered that John was also wondering if he could act. He'd given it a fling once—at the wild young age of 17, when David Selznick had chosen him from a group of 20 prospects to play a scene with Jennifer Jones. After a four-hour make-up job, John was converted into a wounded soldier and placed on a hospital bed where he watched Jennifer do all the acting. This great role of his became merely another phase on the cutting room floor, but John won a contract anyway.

Did he then work hard to rise in his profession? Scarcely! Every seven days, he'd pick up his check and romp (Continued on page 88)

Bob Hope, here with Jerry Colonna on an Air Force benefit trip, has travelled tirelessly to entertain servicemen at home and abroad, works hard for many causes.

Jack Benny makes one of his regular visits to the paraplegic ward of an Alabama hospital. He accompanies his contributions to charity with constant personal efforts, presides at fund-raising affairs continually.

Loretta Young plays hostess to L.A. orphan asylum girls. She devotes herself intensively to a hospital for unmarried mothers, helped Father Peyton get his Family Theater program started on the air.

HOLLYWOOD'S TEN BEST

The General Federation of Women's Clubs honors these ten players for

■ On these pages, the editors of MODERN SCREEN proudly present one of the most important features ever published in a magazine reporting the Hollywood scene.

The men and women pictured here have been chosen as Hollywood's Ten Best Citizens. This honor has not been bestowed upon them lightly or carelessly. For more than 16 months, researchers have painstakingly studied the civic activities of hundreds of Hollywood players.

Why did MODERN SCREEN undertake this tremendous project? The answer is simple: the editors have long believed that too little emphasis is placed, in newspapers and in magazines, on the positive contributions of Hollywood players to civic life.

To make certain the judging would be unbiased and in no way influenced by the personal friendships of MODERN SCREEN's editors with various Hollywood stars, the General Federation of Women's Clubs was asked to make the final choice. Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the organization, agreed to cooperate in the project. As judges, she suggested the Federation's Motion Picture Committee, whose members are Mrs. Joseph R. Chesser, Chairman; Mrs. Dean Gray Edwards, Chairman of the Eastern Preview Division, and Mrs. P. E. Willis, Chairman of the Western Preview Division. Their task, obviously, was a difficult one, in view of the splendid records of each Hollywood individual in the group from which their final selections were made.

Space limitations make it impossible for (Continued on page 73)

Irene Dunne with Archbishop Mitty and Monsignor Sheen at the dedication of a center for homeless boys. She's been cited for her inter-faith work by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Jean Hersholt shows his wife some orchids to be sold at a charity event. Famous for leadership in welfare organizations, he is president and a founder of the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

These officials of the General Federation of Women's Clubs made the selections.

Mrs. Joseph R. Chesser,
Chairman, Motion Picture Committee, G.F.W.C.

Mrs. Dean Gray Edwards,
Chairman, Eastern Preview Division.

Mrs. P. E. Willis,
Chairman, Western Preview Division.

CITIZENS

outstanding service to their community.

Red Skelton trades yarns with servicemen who were his guests at a broadcast. He is a leading supporter of a Kiwanis home for delinquent boys, and he is noted for the extent of his personal generosity.

Roy Rogers introduces Trigger to a group of enthusiastic youngsters with Dale Evans' assistance. He spends much of his time cheering up sick children, has been honored for his national work in child safety.

Bing Crosby greets two young victims of polio with Jimmy Dorsey before a Sister Kenny appeal broadcast. Crosby hardly ever permits publicity on his many civic and philanthropic activities.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello at a party given for Lou's daughter. Their Youth Foundation medical clinic and play center was founded in memory of Lou's son.

High in the far-flung mountain country where he grew up, Rory Calhoun and his bride have embarked on a great adventure

BY TOM CARLILE

Home is where you hide it

Lita and Rory Calhoun lead his favorite mount out of the barn on the long-neglected ranch they bought last spring. It lies along a hidden valley in mountains 90 miles north of Hollywood.

Lita, a city girl until her marriage, brings Rory some cool water as he works on clearing sage-brush around the house. They hope to start operating their 155 acres as a $10-a-day guest-ranch next summer.

After a busy day, Rory and Lita settle down before a cozy fire in the living room of the 75-year-old pine lodge. Rory had set his heart on the Circle-B from the time he came upon it as a youngster.

■ It was a whippy cold day in late February one year ago, and in the mountains above Ojai, the wind was especially sharp to anyone riding in an open car. Lita Baron, bundled up in a hooded parka, looked anxiously at her husband, Rory Calhoun, as he plummeted their hot-rod roadster over the bumpy dirt road in the back country of the Los Padres Forest. For 20 minutes, they bounced in and out of chug-holes until they came upon a sagging gate which blocked the road. It was locked with several chains and prominently posted with an immense sign which fairly shouted, "KEEP OUT."

But the sign didn't seem to bother Rory. Producing a key, he unlocked the chains and swung open the gate as though he owned the place.

Lita repressed her strong urge to ask where they were going. She'd been on this sort of mysterious Sunday drive with her handsome husband before, and she knew better. Rory liked to keep his secrets intact until the last moment.

She drew in her breath as Rory shot the car ahead, up a tiny road which (Continued on next page)

home is where you hide it

twisted and bumped up the mountainside. She closed her eyes a couple of times when the car skidded. Finally, somehow, they reached the summit. Rory stopped the car, and dramatically, like a master of ceremonies introducing a headline act, exclaimed, "There it is, honey!"

Lita looked down. Below her, at least a thousand feet, lay a beautiful hidden valley, surrounded on every side by snow-capped ridges. A gently-winding stream, fed by melting snows, flowed down the valley floor and out of sight around a canyon wall. In the pasture to the right, a few scattered horses, shaggy in their winter coats, grazed on the first spring grass.

Shivering against the mountain wind, Lita filled her eyes with the view, and said, "It's simply breath-taking, Rory. But—where are we, for heaven's sake?"

"Shangri-la," Rory answered, his eyes dancing. "Hang on and we'll drive down to it." He kicked in the clutch and the car started downhill.

A few minutes later, they rolled into a dilapidated ranch yard at the very foot of the mountain. To Lita, the place looked simply awful. An old, weather-beaten lodge, a number of scattered cabins, an unpainted pitch-roofed barn, and a stunted apple orchard. There was rubbish everywhere—tin cans, boxes, old auto tires. A real mess. From eye-level, it seemed as though the valley were an endless expanse of barren loneliness. After the car motor died, there wasn't a sound. But she decided to let Rory give her the cue. He obviously had something on this mind, for he was looking at her with a strange, inspired look.

"Come on," he said. "Let's get out and look around."

"All right," Lita replied, after a slight hesitation.

They walked onto the porch of the lodge. Two giant elk-heads hung from the heavy pine-log wall. As Rory absently picked a piece of chinking out of the wall, Lita noticed that that look had come into his eyes again.

"This cabin," he confided, "is more than 75 years old. It was built by the Lethrop family, who originally homesteaded this valley in 1879. Fine people. It's a real shame the place has deteriorated so badly."

Then Rory conducted her through the old lodge. It consisted of two adjoining bedrooms, a bathroom, a big living room with an immense rock fireplace, a barroom, a huge dining room, kitchen and pantry. Yet all Lita could see were the cracked boards, the broken furniture, and the two inches of dirt which covered everything.

Outside, Rory started talking again, as he took her arm and began walking her down to the barns.

"Honey, this is the old Circle-B ranch. There are 155 acres of it, running all the way down the valley." He stopped to make a sweeping gesture with his arm, like the last (Continued on page 92)

PLENTY OF WORK. Rory Calhoun, working hard to get his mountain ranch into sound repair, discourages the crows with a slingshot. Assisting him is Ralph Mantiz, a JOB FOR A COWBOY. Rory practices with his lariat—this afternoon, he'll be roping two calves which are to be branded. He has always liked cowboy life

PLENTY OF FUN. Lita Calhoun shows Rory how well her horse-shoe pitching has come along under his instruction. Lita, a night-club singer and dancer since her college chum of Lita's brother, Pete. Pete, the Calhouns' partner in the Circle-B Ranch, helps Rory repair one of many fences blown down last winter. They devote almost all their spare time to fixing the place for its opening as a guest-ranch. With Lita standing by, Rory mends one of the saddles in the tack room—the ranch has 17 saddle horses. Also on the long work agenda are planting, painting and plastering.

and, though still a novice, he hopes to grow expert in the skills of a working rancher. After a chase of half an hour, Rory finally pulls down the bigger calf. Pete (left) holds the animal still, and Ralph (right) stands ready to help as Rory tightens his lasso. Then, while Ralph keeps a grip on the rope and wife Lita watches proudly, Rory presses a branding iron on the calf's leg. His try at a cowboy's job is a success.

early teens, has taken to the outdoor life with gusto after initial misgivings. She enjoys the relaxed pace, loves the happy give-and-take at the evening meal when the hungry, hard-working men sit down to simple, solid food. Lita and Rory, newlyweds of little more than a year, go off for long walks and rides through the lovely country—a perfect setting for the honeymooners they still very much are.

By Cynthia Miller

DIVORCE

—the shame of Hollywood

The real tragedy of divorce is always this—that its cruelest blows almost inevitably Statistics do not necessarily prove that there are more divorces among Hollywood players than among other sections of the U. S. population. Yet the vast publicity that invariably accompanies the divorces of screen personalities has resulted in a rising tide of criticism against the entire film industry. Modern Screen recognizes that this criticism may or may not be justified. The following challenging article is concerned with what is, not only in Hollywood but everywhere else, one of the most unfortunate aspects of the divorce problem—the involvement of those innocent, tragic victims, the children.—The Editors.

■ The boy was seven years old, the child of a Hollywood star divorced from her husband. Christmas was coming. His parents had agreed that he should spend Christmas Day with his mother, Christmas Eve with his father. He ran to tell his news to the cook, his confidant.

"I bought a tree with Daddy today," he told her excitedly. "Tomorrow I'm going to buy a tree with Mommy."

"Well, isn't that fine!" said the kindly cook. "Just think, you'll have two Christmas trees."

With that the light died out of the small face, the eyes that had been so eager looked suddenly lost. "I'd rather have only one," he said. He turned and went slowly from the room. . . .

This little story, and others like it, speak a poignant commentary on the subject of Hollywood divorce—the tragedy of which is so much deeper when there are children concerned. Now Hollywood, of course, didn't invent the divorce court, and the John Agars of Hollywood have the same right to dissolve an unhappy union as the John Joneses of Kansas City. But in either case, if children are involved, the children are the real victims.

Shirley Temple herself put her finger on the spot. "The worst thing about my divorce from Jack is Linda Susan. She adores her daddy."

Psychologists tell us that children thrive best in the warmth of harmonious homes. They also tell us that, even for the children, divorce is preferable to the tensions of constant discord. Yet with patience and understanding, people can sometimes mend a broken love. Sometimes, with all the good will in the world, they can't. Apparently the all on the innocent heads of the children.

Agars couldn't. As an inescapable result, Linda will suffer.

Here are two strong-willed people, with a child as their only remaining bond. "I want our divorce on a high and dignified level for our little daughter's sake," Shirley told the press. But all the height and dignity of Mt. Everest wouldn't serve to conceal the bitterness behind this break. With more than a trace of condescension, Shirley announced that Jack was a nice boy but a little mixed up. She assured one reporter that careers had nothing to do with it. Yet a month earlier, she'd been telling Louella Parsons: "I've grown up with the motion picture business. Jack hasn't, and he can't understand the difficulties of a career. He doesn't like the publicity that's a necessary part of any star's life. You don't know how hard it is when you go out to a nightclub and everything you say is magnified into something important. Sometimes after a quarrel, Jack doesn't come home, and it's very heartbreaking. . . ."

Her friends say that Jack neglected her, that she was a golf widow, that he was rude to her in public. His friends say that the marriage never had a chance, that he was expected to act as first gentleman-in-waiting to (Continued on page 70)

hollywood's divorce statistics

★ about 500 players currently are active in motion pictures.

★ approximately one out of every six has been divorced.

★ of the 500, 48 have been divorced once.

★ of the 500, 24 have been divorced twice.

★ of the 500, 8 have been divorced three times.

modern screen's hollywood pictorial

■ Last month, MODERN SCREEN started a new pictorial series made up of exclusive picture stories and outstanding news photos of the month. Here is the second in the series. It contains more of the same kind of unusual photographs—which reveal with swift drama the underlying character of a personality. These pictures have been selected from the best current work of the best photographers covering the Hollywood scene. The final basis of selection was, as it will continue to be, the impact of the varied emotions which the camera succeeded in capturing.—THE EDITORS.

Romantic Elizabeth Taylor gets interested in a new beau.

Vic Damone and Elizabeth Taylor, a new twosome, arrive at the opening of the Chianti Restaurant, where they celebrated with other screen and night-club celebrities. Elizabeth, who is said to regret the spotlight thrown on her romances, has been seeing a great deal of the young singer. She's been going to the Mocambo to hear him, and they've gone on many horseback rides together.

Kirk Douglas contributes some hot licks on the trumpet at a jam session with the nation's top jazzmen at Eddie Condon's New York club.

Musical Kirk Douglas gets fascinated by a new pastime.

Eddie Condon (left), famous hot guitarist, and trombonist George Brunis give eager-to-learn Kirk the lowdown on how mouthpieces work.

"Pucker up your lips—so," instructs Brunis, as his willing student complies. Kirk visited Eddie Condon's for briefing on his Young Man with a Horn role.

To his teachers' delight, Kirk succeeds in making enough musician-like sounds to indicate that he's a potential jazzman.

more pictures on following pages

when some hollywood stars go to Palm Springs, it's for a Joanne Dru, who is in Palm Springs to perform in location shots for Wrong Guy, happily greets husband John Ireland at the airport. John, having just finished Cargo to Capetown, is here strictly for fun.

Joanne helps John unpack—and, with wifely indignation, finds that he's managed to bring along a sock without its mate. John defends himself as most husbands would—he looks helpless.

but most movie folk go to the famous resort to sit in the Ginger Rogers and Greg Bautzer, seen everywhere else together recently, are tennis partners at the Palm Springs Racquet Club—where they wait for their turn to play in the Pimm's Cup Tournament.

They've reached the finals—in which they're matched against Pat de Cicco and Gussie Moran, the gal who made lace-edged panties famous last year at Wimbledon. Ginger gets set to play the net.

combination of work and play.

While a scene is set up by the pool, John hears Joanne's lines. For a gag, during the shooting he got in camera range—he thought. He hadn't, but they got even with him by then telling him he'd ruined the shot.

Though John spent all his time having a holiday, Joanne could relax only a part of the time—for she and her Wrong Guy associates even worked a number of nights. Here she does a scene with Edmond O'Brien.

sun, enjoy sports and parties.

After a titanic battle, Rogers and Bautzer finally emerged triumphant—11-9, 4-6, 6-2. William Powell presents the silver trophies, watched by the Racquet Club's beaming owner, silent film star Charlie Farrell.

That night, Ginger and Greg—obviously interested in each other beyond the tennis court—have a victory dinner. (Joan Crawford, who'd been at Palm Springs the week before, filming The Victim, was not present.)

the end

MY PREDICTIONS FOR 1950

(Continued from page 31)

they've all got new deals, new prospects, new pictures, new promise. It's been slow going for some of them and fast for others. But right now they all stand at the doorway of their rich rewards. They're fit and ready for 1950.

Let's see why.

Personally, I'm mighty pleased to pick a redhead from Brooklyn to lead the grand promenade. I've watched Susan Hayward for a good many seasons now, and always I've thought, "If that girl ever gets the right part—watch her go!" All the time Susan was ripe as a pink-skinned peach for her big break—and now she has it. Her sad-sweet triumph in My Foolish Heart will, I predict, set her off toward a top-notch starring career at long last and someday an Academy Award—which she just missed once before, in Smashup. I'm not the only one who's betting on Susan, either. Darryl Zanuck—and they don't come cannier—has just shelled out an even $200,000 for the privilege of hiring her for seven long years, special scripts are in the works for Susan and her prospects couldn't be rosier.

Barbara Hale, after Jolson Sings Again, is my candidate to succeed Myrna Loy as the screen's perfect wife. In person, too, Barbara's the perfect wife—sweet and wholesome as they make 'em, warm, friendly, sincere. Those are qualities Hollywood has never lost on and they'll not lose a nickel on Barbara Hale from now on out. She's worth a million dollars in the bank.

stars are made . . .

Ruth Roman hit Hollywood with exactly $100 to her name, and not a friend in town. She lived in a tiny hotel over a drug store while she set out bravely to bat down the studio gates. Suddenly she showed up as the sleeper gal in The Window and came through with a solid smash in Champion.

Could it all be a flash for Ruth, and will that flash blind her eyes? Listen—Ruth grabbed at a small part in Beyond the Forest when her agent and all her friends told her it was too dinky. "Think what I can learn, acting with Bette Davis," came back Ruth. Next, she played a straight girl to Milton Berle in Always Leave Them Laughing, again not for a splash but because "I think the experience of working with Milton might be darn good for me." Then Ruth mixed her shots to play a dipsomaniac in Rock Bottom. What will the ex-carnival kid do next? It looks as if she'll be Gary Cooper's leading lady, no less, in Bright Leaf, and she'll be getting all the stories Warners had planned for Bette Davis, before Bette walked out. Ruth is on a ride to a star's throne where not even a bulldog will be able to shake her loose.

Shelley Winters is—let's face it—a screwball. But a talented, bouncy, cute and sassy one. And Hollywood has always had room for a girl like that, when she could act, since before the days of Clara Bow. Shelley caught on like the one-girl bonfire she is, when she played the sexy waitress with Ronald Colman in A Double Life. Since then, Shelley has scored bull's-eyes in Larceny, The Great Gatsby and A Place in the Sun.

Shelley's eager as a beaver to make a name for herself, dying to learn her job and learn it right. She's a member of Charles Laughton's Shakespeare study group, which means that every night, including Saturday nights, she works hard to gain real acting ability, because Charles doesn't fool with them a minute unless they do. Has it paid off? Well, George Stevens, who can direct any day for my money, picked Shelley for the tragic little factory girl in A Place in the Sun (the remake of An American Tragedy), a part with twice the guts and opportunity of the role drawn by everybody's pet and bet, Elizabeth Taylor. I'll predict that Shelley will get right to the top—if she'll watch her step, which is inclined to be high, wide and handsome. Anyway, she's on my first team for 1950.

Now, what about Janet Leigh? The girl Van Johnson named and started off in Romance of Rosy Ridge has made more pictures this past year than any other young star in Hollywood—and every one with prize leading men, including Robert Mitchum, Glenn Ford, Van Heflin and Peter Lawford. I happen to know that Louis B. Mayer puts her right up with Elizabeth Taylor as his biggest bet for 1950. She's made the best of her opportunities, worked hard, kept her head. 1950's her great year for sure, with Holiday Affair following up The Red Danube and That Forsyte Woman, and Jet Pilot—with John Wayne—all set to send her zooming.

You can't overlook Elizabeth Taylor, of course—and I'm certainly not, with the whole world looking her lovely way. At 18, which she'll be in February, Elizabeth can never be more beautiful. Next spring she'll do Quo Vadis, in Rome, MGM's biggest picture from all standpoints since Ben Hur, filmed back in 1924. I, for one, can't wait to see Elizabeth as Lygia strapped to a bull's back and fought for by Roman gladiators.

There are others who can come through this year to make big names for themselves. I think Ava Gardner will make the really stand-out star grade with James Mason in East Side, West Side. You may hate her in that slutty part but if she clicks, Ava's in—and Carriage Entrance with Bob Mitchum can keep her there.

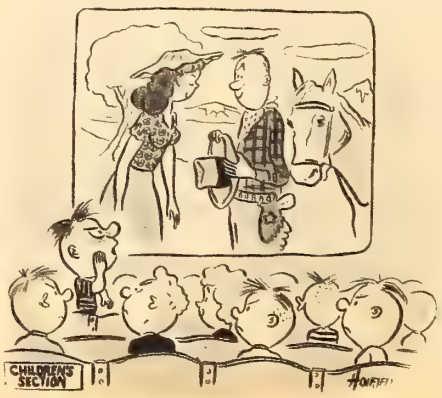
Virginia Mayo, whom Jimmy Cagney uncovered as a real actress in White Heat, shows signs of making a serious bid for stardom at Warners. And don't overlook teen-age Joan Evans, either, who came through beautifully in her first test, Roseanna McCoy. Joan is Sam Goldwyn's pet and Sam can pick 'em—and build 'em. Our Very Own, her latest, and Edge of Doom are Joan's big-time career insurance for 1950. I'll also place side bets on Ann Blyth, Audrey Totter and Betty Garrett.

Now, what about the men in your Hollywood life for 1950? The five I'm picking are loaded and couldn't miss if you aimed them in the dark. First on that list, of course, is Kirk Douglas.

Today, the movie world is absolutely Kirk's oyster. He has Champion behind him, the more sensitive Young Man With a Horn ready to tear at your heart and The Glass Menagerie shooting as I write. He has a million-dollar contract at Warners—which gives him the right to make other films for any other studio he chooses. Nothing can stop that guy. He's still calling his shots as cannily as he ever did. He picked a comparatively small job in The Glass Menagerie, when he could have had the biggest. Why? "Gives me a chance at a comedy character," he said—right after he'd played a brooding, complexed trumpeter in Young Man With A Horn. And that after Champion, which was all muscle and action.

Kirk hasn't a pebble in his path to the all-time Hollywood greatness I predict he'll reach in 1950. The only puff in his sky is a mixed-up marriage, and in 1950 he just might straighten that out, too.

all hits, no errors . . .



But who's next—Montgomery Clift? Not for my money. Before Marvelous Monty hits the top rung he'll have to climb past Farley Granger. So far, Farley hasn't given a bad performance, hasn't missed in one single flicker of film. I can't say that about Montgomery. He was swell in Red River and The Search. But he missed in The Heiress, especially in the scene that should have wrapped up his part in the picture—the important one with Olivia de Havilland's tough old pa, Ralph Richardson. Monty played that wrong and in so doing lost what might have been a decisive star in his crown. (Incidentally, right here let me predict that Olivia will cop an Oscar for her performance.)

I know Monty's shrewd about his scripts and I know he'll be a big rave with millions of girls everywhere. I'm not running him down as an actor, either, because he's good. I think he's a great star bet for 1950. But I think Farley Granger is better.

Farley's deeper and more sensitive and he's landed a role that could make 1950 an Academy Award year for him, even at his age. In Edge of Doom he'll play a man who accidentally kills a priest and then wrestles with his own soul. Farley will have Mark Robson, who directed both Champion and My Foolish Heart, to guide him. I'm betting on Farley to have the world at his feet when it's over.

Now, you can't exactly call Paul Douglas a boy—he's splitting his forties right now—but just a few years aren't enough to keep him off my glamor boy list for 1950. A lot of the younger charm lads could take a lesson from Paul—and borrow some of his youthful pep, good humor and virility. Ever since A Letter to Three Wives, Paul has romped away with female hearts from six to 60. Everybody loved him in that whacky Everybody Does It, he's got Two Corridors East coming up and Darryl Zanuck, a fervent Douglas fan, is going to throw his best scripts Paul's way. Why? Paul isn't good looking—in fact, he's a big, dog-faced Joe. He's got a voice like a buzz saw and manners you could call uncouth if you wanted to. He's a scamp for sure. When I was in New York last, Paul was also present, and in happy hot water as usual. He'd asked two girls to meet him there—one from Europe and one from Hollywood—and when they both showed up, Doug was having one heck of a time keeping them apart! Behind the brass,

MODERN SCREEN

"Get a grip on yourself, Mac, and kiss the dame!"

though, Paul's definitely a sterling actor.

But Mario Lanza is pure gold through and through, which makes it a thrill for me to include that wonderful Italian boy from across the tracks who made America's unbounded dream come true. Mario studied under Caruso's old voice coach—and he showed it in his first movie, That Midnight Kiss. I predict Mario will be Hollywood's new Nelson Eddy in 1950. Kiss of Fire, his next, looks too much like his first one—too frail a story for his golden voice. But when MGM digs deeper, as it will, and comes up with a real plot to mount Mario's voice, then watch for something which I, for one, have sadly missed—another golden age of song on the screen.

But I don't want to miss a mighty strong second string of fast-stepping young stars who'll sprint to glory in the year to come. Arthur Kennedy, for instance, whom Kirk Douglas calls "the best young actor of them all"—including himself. Richard Basehart, whose contract was worth $75,000 to Darryl Zanuck the other day. Mel Ferrer, whose performance in Lost Boundaries was superfine. David Brian who's first-rate in another MGM bid for the Academy Award, Intruder in the Dust. Since Joan Crawford discovered David in Flamingo Road, every star in town has been dying to get him—but there's just not enough Brian to go around. And keep your eye on John Derek, Richard Conte and Scott Brady—they've all got big steps ahead and the stride to make them. One really hot picture and they'll be off.

Now, let's turn from careers to Cupid and see what the outlook is for the little guy in the months ahead. What romances look altar-bound and what couples will tell their troubles to the judge? Well, my crystal ball gets a little cloudy here.

To start off, however, I can say that Bette Davis and Bill Sherry look a very good bet to stay together after their reconciliation. Bette's trouble is that she has always taken her career too seriously. When she's in a professional stew she takes it out at home. When she comes to her senses, she's sorry. But Bette's never had a baby in her former marriages and I predict her baby's father, temperamental as he too may be (after all, he's an artist), is too real an emotional tie to give up. And I also predict that her peace and happiness will fluctuate along with the luck Bette has in getting the right roles.

state of the unions . . .

I'm not too sanguine, though, about Kathryn Grayson's chances with her Johnny Johnston. Betty Hutton's marriage with Ted Briskin has been saved once, but if the pressure of her greatest career year—which, with Let's Dance and Annie Get Your Gun, it's bound to be—proves too much for Betty, there could be another, and a permanent, separation. There are clouds of misunderstanding that Alexis Smith and Craig Stevens must fight free of, and the same goes for Linda Darnell and her Pev Marley. Don't worry, though—I'm not—about Dan Dailey and his Elizabeth. Dan has got whatever bothered him out of his curly hair and has come to his senses—I have Dan's word for that. The Sinatras are set to grow old together, now that Frank appreciates Nancy for keeps. All that Mark Stevens has to worry about with Annelle is that touchy temper of his. All's well with Rory Calhoun and Lita Baron. Guy Madison and his Gail Russell couldn't be cozier—Guy even took suspension from Selznick because he just couldn't tear himself away from Gail for a personal appearance tour.

There've been all kinds of silly rumors about Lana Turner and Bob Topping since they came back to Hollywood. But I happen to know Lana wants this marriage to last and she's dedicated herself to that. I've never seen her look lovelier or happier—and, by the way, I'll predict right here that her career will blossom bright again in 1950.

It's always orange-blossom time in Hollywood, and there'll be plenty of new brides and grooms by 1951 that you'd never guess now. I'll predict three who'll stay bachelors, though, in spite of all the moonlight and beautiful girls in the world: Lew Ayres—because he likes his fun with no strings attached; Peter Lawford—because he prefers freedom to play the field; Cary Grant—because he's too contrary, Betsy Drake or no.

But I have the word of one young man that he's mighty eager for the girl to say "yes." That young man is Farley Granger and the girl is Shelley Winters. They don't add up as a team, as they come at you on the screen, but I've a hunch they'd be mighty good for each other. At any rate, I'm doing my darndest to make a match!

And how would you like to see Ava Gardner become Mrs. Howard Duff, in spite of her protests, sometime before 1951? I know Howard will go for that idea and, while Ava's said she doesn't love Howard enough, when you don't love a person you don't keep fighting and making up and have him hanging around all the time, do you? You get rid of the guy—which Ava has never done. I'm predicting she'll weaken before next New Year's Eve. He's a mighty stubborn man, that Duff.

And what about Ginger Rogers and Hollywood's beau boy, Greg Bautzer—wedding bells for them? Not in 1950, I'm afraid—but only for legal reasons. Ginger hasn't got her divorce yet, and that takes time, even if Greg is a lawyer. But I'll say this: If she were free right now, at the turn of the New Year she'd be Mrs. Bautzer. Greg's a mighty hard fish for the girls to net, and dozens of our best sirens have tried unsuccessfuly before. But I think he's met his match in Ginger.

That same legal barrier is Clark Gable's greatest protection against a married man's fate. Paulette Goddard is still married to Burgess Meredith—otherwise, I think that clever gal would have been the King's queen by now. I never sell Paulette short in getting whatever she wants, and it certainly looks as if she wants Clarkie. I'm keeping my fingers crossed there for a long time to come, because I think Clark secretly longs to be wed again and he's going to fall pretty hard when he does at last.

Joan Caulfield will marry Frank Ross, Jean Arthur's ex, that's certain enough. Janet Leigh and Arthur Loew, Jr. have wedding plans that can come true. And whenever Doris Day's manager, Marty Melcher, is free from Patti Andrews of the Andrews Sisters, Doris and Marty are fairly sure to make a home together. And what about Ruth Roman and Bill Walsh? Not from what Ruth tells me—but there's a hint of yes, yes in her eyes.

But there are others who might take that lover's leap in 1950, so I'll boost their chances along by holding the thought: Jane Wyman, because she's lonely and beautiful—to somebody, but not to Lew Ayres, Hedy Lamarr, if she can find the right man. And, for sure, a romance for lovely Elizabeth Taylor—it could well be Bill Pawley again. When he came out to Hollywood for Jane Powell's wedding, he talked long and seriously with Liz, and I do know that heart affair was very, very deep. They've never stopped their long-distance calls. But whoever it is, I know Elizabeth will fall in love and, if she can, get married. Her parents are for it and so is Elizabeth. I don't know any star who is more ripe-and-ready for mature life and a home of her own.

Well, there you are—that's how the movieland merry-go-round looks to me as I watch the chubby kid with "1950" on his diaper climb in the window and heave that wizened and worn 1949 character out. Another year of Hollywood history is written and the book closed for keeps on the stars' lives, loves, and luck.

But another is wide open and the pages blank. I'm just crazy enough to try to fill in a few in advance, when I should know better by now. Maybe I'll never learn. Oh, well—come along, 1950, and cross me up good. I double dare you! THE END special issue • special issue • special issue • special

modern screen is celebrating the 18th birthday of elizabeth taylor
next month!

It's a special Elizabeth Taylor issue.
It has lovely Elizabeth on the cover.
It has pages and pages about Elizabeth in a big special section crammed with pictures and stories . . . that tell you known, little known and, until now, unknown facts about her childhood,
homelife, young girlhood, romances.
It has the complete Elizabeth Taylor story as it's happened up to now!

march modern screen on sale february 11

special issue • special issue • special issue • special

I DON'T RUN BETTY'S LIFE

(Continued from page 43)

of Betty holds just as true of Marjorie. But this is about Betty, so I'll stick to her.

We've never been a gushy, demonstrative family, but we've always known where we stood with each other. Children feel your love, even if you're not forever making a to-do. We loved our kids, and wanted to do our best by them. That's why we sent them to dancing school—not with any career in mind, but for poise and grace. Marjorie was just average. Betty took to it like a duck to water. By the time she was five, people were asking me to let her go on in this review or that. From the first, she had a professional attitude. She hated showing off for friends and relatives, but let her get up on a stage, and she seemed to love it.

I'd always been a little stagestruck myself. As a girl, I had a good voice and hoped to be able to use it professionally. Nothing came of that. Also, my father was a student of Shakespeare, and he'd have me playing Juliet to his Romeo, which must have been pretty funny, though to me it was divine. However, a career for Betty never entered my head till her teachers and others began telling me she had talent. Even then, all I did was have her go on with her dancing. She was so little, and the future seemed far away. But I did insist on the lessons. And like any child, Betty would sometimes say: "Oh, I'd rather go out and play."

That's where I could have made my first mistake, by using—or abusing—parental authority. Only I don't believe that, just because you're older and stronger, you have the right to be arbitrary with children. As clearly as I could, I'd explain why the lessons were important, mix some judicious praise with the explanation, and wind up saying: "Of course you don't have to go, Baby. But I'd be awfully pleased if you did."

Loving me, she wanted to please me. Besides, she was born with a sense of responsibility. Already she felt somehow that dancing was her job. "That's all right, I can play tomorrow," she'd say, and off we'd go. The minute she got her dancing shoes on her feet, she was happy as a lark.

We spent a couple of vacations in Hollywood, so she could study with dancing teachers there. But St. Louis was home, and we always bought round-trip tickets as a matter of course. One summer we were all packed to return, when some of the kids from dancing school dropped by. "Mrs. Grable, they're holding auditions at Fox for a musical. Why not let Betty try out with the rest of us?"

"That's silly", said Betty. "I'm only 12."

I felt the same way. Then on an impulse, I said, "Let's go anyway. Of course they won't take you, but we've never seen the inside of a studio. That'll be something to tell the folks about."

Well, I was wrong. Out of 500 girls, ranging from 16 to 22, my 12-year-old was the first one picked. When they offered us a contract, I didn't quite know what to do. I asked Betty how she felt about it. It was her life, and she certainly had the right to help make a decision. What's more, I trusted her judgment just as she trusted mine. I could see she was pleased, but not wild with excitement the way some girls would have been. She thought it over, and came up with a characteristic answer. "I guess I'd like to stay, Mother. After all, I've put in a lot of work on dancing, and the idea is to get somewhere with it. Maybe here's my chance."

"Okay, honey, but we'll have to talk to Daddy first."

I called Mr. Grable, and gave him the story. He said, "If you'll promise to stay with Betty all the time, it's fine with me." And that's how the whole thing started. Marjorie went back to college, and we two stayed.

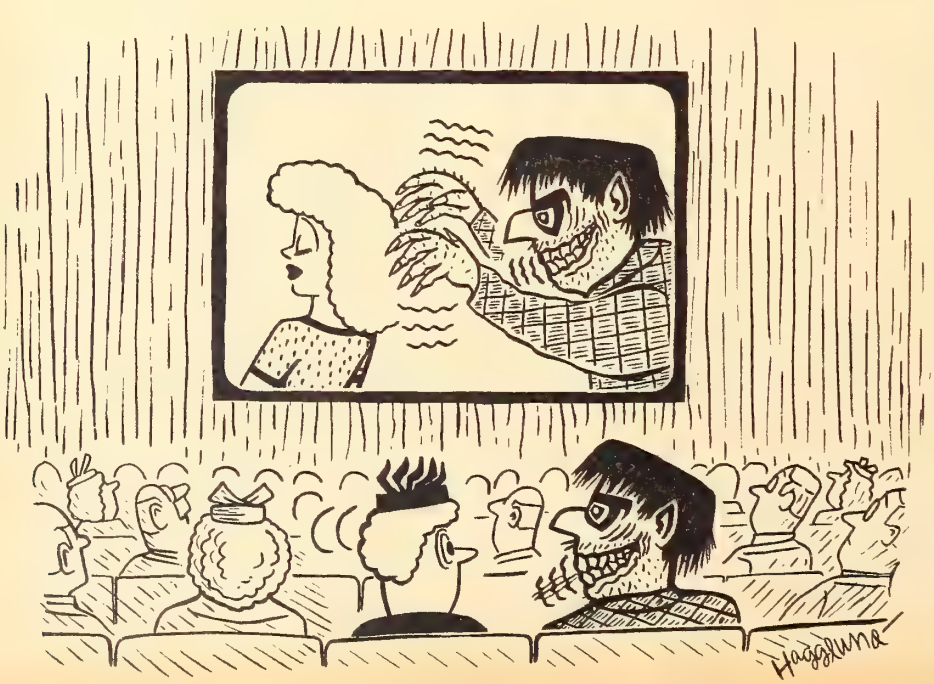
Through the next eight years we had plenty of ups and downs as far as the career went, and more downs than ups. Yet, in our relationship as mother and daughter, I look back and recall nothing but pleasantness. Naturally, I devoted myself to Betty. That was my job, just as dancing was hers. I'd get up at 5:30, fix breakfast, then drive her to the studio in our little Ford that leaked so badly when it rained we had to cover our heads and laps with newspapers. Then I'd sit on a hard bench all day long while she worked, take her home, cook dinner, have her in bed by nine, and set the alarm for 5:30 again next morning. Sunday was a big day for us. We'd go out to dinner and a picture show, and that was the extent of our social life.

Two things seemed to motivate Betty—her desire to please me and to "get somewhere" with her dancing. Not that she was crazy to be a star—that's the funny part—it was more of a practical angle. "It would be a shame", she'd say, "for all those hours of effort to go for nothing." I never saw her bothered about her work, except when she thought her career was bogging down. Otherwise, no matter how tough it got, she was always happy. If she hadn't been, believe me, we'd have quit.

Another reason Betty was satisfied with our quiet life is that she's a quiet person, reserved, and definitely shy. To this day she avoids big parties, because she hates walking in on a roomful of strangers. But what made me realize she was a born trouper was the way she'd lose all her shyness up on a stage.

too down-to-earth . . .

Betty's always maintained that she wasn't ambitious, and gives me the credit for egging her on to success. That's true up to a point. She wasn't ambitious the way some girls are—with that terrific drive that won't let anything stop them. Also, glamor never meant anything to her, she's too down-to-earth. If you pay her a compliment, she gets embarrassed. I remember a newspaperman asking her once about all the proposals she's supposed to get in the mail. She laughed. "They don't say, 'Fly with me'. That's only for movies. They say, 'Give me $5,000 and I'll marry you.'"



Actually, she always wanted the solid values of love and home and children that she's found with Harry. That was her real aim in life. At the same time, she had plenty of grit and persistence and, given the chance, she'd dance her feet off. What she couldn't do was push herself. She'd never say at auditions, "I can do so-and-so." But if they asked her, she'd get up and do it. And she's no different today. Betty devoted more time to the study of ballet than anything else. But has she ever used it in a picture? No. Because they didn't ask her. Some players in her position would have said, "Look, I like ballet, why don't we put in a ballet number?" She lets it go. Not from lack of interest, but because she hates to make demands.

Now I'm not exactly a pushy person myself. But I had absolute faith in Betty's talent, and I feel that a talent ought to be used. I encouraged her and helped her all I could. I'd be the one to find out where auditions were being held. I'd say, "Would you like to go, Betty?" She was perfectly willing as long as I was there to do the talking for her. I guess you might have called me sort of a liaison officer. It was to me Ted Fio-Rito came after seeing her in Tattletales. "Would Betty be interested in singing with a band?"

"Oh, Mother, I can't sing," she said when I told her.

Fio-Rito talked her out of that. "With your looks and personality, it doesn't matter how you sing."

And I've got to admit that I came in handy on DuBarry. All through rehearsals Betty was miserable. Her part was inferior, her costumes were nothing to brag about. And as usual, she wouldn't go to bat for herself. "I can't, Mother. Mr. De Sylva's tops. I can't go complaining to him."

"Would you like me to go?"

"No, Mother, please don't. He's got enough on his mind and I'm not a very important part of this show."

Naturally I disagreed with her. But I hesitated to approach Mr. De Sylva against her wish, so I kept my mouth shut till Louis Shurr, the agent, walked into the theater one day.

"What's wrong with Betty? She doesn't seem happy in her work."

"Well, I'm supposed to keep mum, but as long as you ask me, I'm going to tell you. She's not happy." I explained why. He went straight to Buddy De Sylva, and right away the whole picture changed. New routines were ordered, new costumes designed, and my daughter was a new girl. She sparkled. After the opening, even Betty couldn't doubt that all those hours of practice had paid off.

no questions asked . . .

Close as Betty and I were, I made one rule for myself and stuck to it. I think everyone's entitled to the privacy of his own thoughts. I think mothers who try to force the confidence of their children defeat their own ends. If Betty came home cross or upset, I'd ask no questions. In her own good time I knew she'd tell me what was wrong. If I'd tried to pry, she'd have closed up, and in her place I'd have done the same. Being a mother gives you the privilege of standing by to help, it doesn't give you the right to meddle.

There was one boy Betty went with, whose driving I wasn't crazy about. "I'd appreciate it," I'd say when they left on a date, "if you'd call me when you get there." And Betty would always call and say, "Mother, we're here." That's as far as I ever went in making demands.

And I never exacted but one promise from Betty. She was 16, and got the first crush of her life on a boy in the band. I'd watched it coming, but waited for her to tell me about it. One night, after the lights were out, she did. "Mother, I think we're in love. Maybe—someday—we'll want to get married."

Every mother knows how she feels when this happens, especially with a girl so young. In my heart I felt pretty sure it was puppy-love, but puppy-love can be very real while it lasts. I wasn't going to spoil it for Betty. I listened and sympathized exactly as if I thought it would last forever. After a while I said, "Betty, will you make me one promise? You're only 16, and he's not much older. Just to make sure, will you promise me not to marry till you're 21?"

"Oh yes," she said dreamily, "I can promise you that. I'm in no hurry."

Then I knew it was puppy-love.

When Betty's picture career started after DuBarry, it was like old times. The alarm would be set for 5:30, and I'd fix her tray. She protested at first, but I asked her to look at it my way. "If you can get up this early to go to work, the least I can do is give you your breakfast and see you off."

Now, if there's a thing I just can't abide, it's an interfering in-law. I think half our broken marriages could be saved, if parents learned to stay on their side of the fence. I'd no more dream of dropping in on Betty uninvited than on anyone else. I don't think it's fair and I don't think it's courteous, and I think you owe your children at least as much courtesy as you'd show a stranger. Sometimes, if I have something special to see her about, I'll phone to find out whether or not it's convenient. Otherwise, I wait till I'm asked.

I make no suggestions about how she should run her home or bring up her children. That's her business, and she doesn't need my suggestions. She's doing all right. If you want the truth, she's come way above my expectations in that line. As a home-maker, Betty's been a revelation to me. Here was a girl who'd worked all her life on the stage, who could hardly brew a pot of coffee and didn't know a thing about children except how to love them. As a matter of fact, she had me lined up for special duty on the nurse's first day off after Vicki was born. "You'd better change her, Mother. I'll watch." Two seconds later she was telling me how to do it. "That's a new kind of diaper. You fold it square. Here, I'll show you."

She took over from there. I don't know a household that runs more smoothly than hers. I don't know two happier, better-behaved children than the James girls. And they aren't raised out of psychology books. "Common sense," says Betty, "tells you not to disturb a child when she's resting. Common sense tells you not to overindulge her, or she'll get wrong notions of her own importance and grow up to be a pain in the neck."

I remember the time Jessica locked herself into a room. It was quite a while before the locksmith came. All that time Betty knelt outside the door, talked to the baby, told her stories, sang songs, kept her laughing and happy until the locksmith got there. Handled differently, an experience like that could have left its mark on a child. But thanks to her mother, Jessica wasn't frightened. She seemed to think the whole thing was a wonderful game.

No, Betty doesn't need any pointers from me.

She and I still know where we stand with each other. We don't talk about it. Where there's trust and love, talk isn't necessary. No mother could ask for a more thoughtful or generous daughter. She'll go out and buy herself a robe, and send me one just like it. She'll say, "Mother, let's go shopping," and I'll find myself with a half-a-dozen new dresses. Never a day goes by that she doesn't call me two or three times. When she's working, I call her dressing room between 8 and 8:30 to find out how she is and whether she got to the studio all right. If I'm late, Marie, her hairdresser is right on the phone. "Why didn't you call? Betty was worried."

by invitation only . . .

I still go over to the studio to watch her dance numbers. I love them—so I'm certainly looking forward to watching her make My Blue Heaven. But I don't go for lunch unless I'm asked. Betty always eats with Angie, who sets her dance routines, and Marie and some of the other kids. If Betty says, "Mother, will you come to lunch?"—that's fine. Otherwise, I show up around two, and that's just as fine.

I don't understand parents who talk about sacrificing themselves for their children. Seems to me what you do for your children, you do for yourself. If I was helpful to Betty in any way, I'm tickled to death. But for all I know, she'd have gotten along just as well without me. And the truth is, I enjoyed every minute of it.

She doesn't owe me a thing. She's done more for me than I ever did for her, in a hundred ways—but especially by being my daughter and my friend. THE END COMING NEXT MONTH: THE MARCH ISSUE OF MODERN SCREEN—THE BIG ELIZABETH TAYLOR BIRTHDAY BOOK!

your letters . . .

FLIGHTY ELIZABETH

Dear Editor: Elizabeth Taylor is still my favorite screen actress, but I certainly think it's time she began to grow up. A lot of us who admire her beauty, acting talent and sweet personality have grown more than a little disappointed with the flighty way in which she keeps making and breaking engagements. Maybe I'm old-fashioned, but I always thought that a girl who was on the level didn't pledge her word to marry a man unless she really meant it.

SANDRA RAWLEY, ALBANY

SHE PRAYS TO WALK

Dear Editor: Doris Day's story "My Prayer Was Answered" (December M. S.) really touched my heart, because I am in the same situation myself. I hope someday very soon God will grant me the power to walk again. Over two-and-a-half years ago, when I was about 16, I had a fall which developed into tuberculosis of the hip. I have had three hip operations and can safely say I had my share of pain. After reading this story by Doris Day, I feel that I, too, will walk again. God answered her prayers. Let's hope He will answer mine, too!

DORIS LAWRENCE, ROCKAWAY, N. J.

UNMARRIED AVA

Dear Editor: It's amazing to me how a girl can be as shortsighted as Constance Miller, who wrote the letter (January M. S.) rebuking Ava Gardner for keeping Howard Duff on a string. I say three cheers for Ava and every other girl who won't let herself be rushed into marrying someone she's not sure about. I only hope that she sticks to her guns.

MURIEL DURBIN, SEATTLE

LIES ABOUT CROSBY

Dear Editor: We Crosby fans don't like the type of articles you've been printing on Bing lately—"Stop Lying About Crosby," which you had about three months ago, and now "Too Young To Die" in the December issue. These articles were just based on silly rumors, and I think it's unfair to Bing to keep repeating these things. I think these slanders should be ignored, but, instead, you seem to enjoy printing them over again to be sure that no one missed them.

EDNA JAMES, NASHVILLE, TENN.

(Speaking as Crosby enthusiasts, too, we still think that the best way to knock out false rumors is to bring them into the open and show them up for what they are.)

CLIFT'S BUSINESS

Dear Editor: Why can't everyone leave Montgomery Clift alone? The way he eats, cooks, dresses and the things he does are entirely his own business. His looks are perfect and his acting is wonderful, so I can't understand why he needs to live like a king to satisfy some people.

LORENE GOLEN, GRIFFIN, GA.

DISHONEST HOLLYWOOD

Dear Editor: If the movie companies are looking for comedy subjects, why don't they take advantage of something which happens all the time right in Hollywood—the practically constant stream of "perfect" marriages which break up after being hailed as the most blissful unions this side of Heaven. The funniest part would be showing how the public gets taken for suckers—anyway that part of the public which continues to believe what it reads about happy marriages in Hollywood. Boy, is that a laugh!

HARRY MOHRMAN, ST. LOUIS

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

Not a soap, not a cream— Halo cannot leave dulling, dirt-catching soap film!

Gives fragrant "soft-water" lather —needs no special rinse!

Removes embarrassing dandruff from both hair and scalp!

Halo leaves hair soft, manageable— shining with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or oily cream shampoos leaves dulling, dirt-catching film. Halo, made with a new patented ingredient, contains no soap, no sticky oils. Thus Halo glorifies your hair the very first time you use it. Ask for Halo—America's favorite shampoo—at any drug or cosmetic counter!

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

you're the type

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ Are you making the most of your type? The big idea in clothes is to dress your personality as well as your person. Unless your get-up reveals something about the kind of girl you are, you're not doing yourself justice.

Fashion designers understand this, and that's why today you will find clothes suited to your type, in clothes suited to your size. Clothes which fit the junior figure usually fit the junior personality, too; and the same goes for all the other precision sizes that now, thank heaven, make perfect fit easy.

In this issue we concentrate on three examples of perfect type-casting. We begin with Catherine McLeod, opposite, a sophisticated lady in a sophisticated dress you'll love if you like to look grown-up, sure of yourself, and very slick and polished. On pages 64 and 65, we show how even shirts and skirts can look woman-of-the-world, if they're on the right girl.

On pages 66 and 67 we shift to the cute young look with three for you who have a slight young figure and a light young heart.

And on page 68 we wind up with a half-size dress which proves one of our pet convictions: nobody can look prettier than you half-sizes, if your dress is especially designed for your type.

Catherine McLeod dresses to type in sophisticated faille

■ Catherine McLeod, currently appearing in United Artists' Escape If You Can, wears a high-fashion, super-poised dress which perfectly suits her polished looks and divine figure. The dress is navy faille with a capelet collar and very French-looking jut pockets. Wear it to make a dramatic entrance at the smartest spot in town. Rayon faille. Sizes 10-18.

By Henry Rosenfeld. $14.95.

At the Hecht Company, Washington, D. C., other stores on page 71.

Single rhinestones by Coro.

modern screen fashions

sophisticates are slicker tha

■ Grey wool jersey and a slim corduroy skirt, or, the fashion model look. Rib-waisted blouse with Peter Pan collar, in oxford, natural, navy, cream, blue, pink, yellow, green, melon. By Old Colony. $4.95. Slim corduroy skirt with a burst of kick pleats, in green, brown, rose, powder blue, maize or beige. By Korday, $7.98. Where to buy, page 71.

anybody

■ Long sleeved T-shirt and a tweed skirt with huge pockets, or, the cover girl look. Cotton jersey shirt in white, maize, blue, navy, toast, red. By Shepherd. $2.95. Wonderful wool skirt with pockets placed toward the rear, and an inverted pleat in front. Gold, strawberry, sea foam, natural, pink. By Rosecrest. $7.95. Where to buy, page 71.

a modern screen fashion

■ The sailor collar with the dickey fill-in, aided and abetted by a cummerbund waistband and a full skirt, in case you feel like whirling. Carefree young one-piece dress in Sanforized cotton broadcloth —pert as can be. Slate grey, copper brown, emerald green. Sizes 9-15. By Junior Clique—$5.95. Where to buy, page 71.

juniors are cuter

■ The celebrated slipping hip-line of the 20's—when girls were flappers and as cute as girls can be. Washable rayon gabardine middy and accordion pleated skirt, very "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Beige, grey, powder, green, navy, dusty rose. Sizes 9-15. By Zan Tamar—about $7.95. Where to buy, page 71.

■ Two colors to get you twice as much attention. Chartreuse top, buttoned in navy—navy skirt, pocketed in chartreuse. Tucked to a T, definitely dashing. It's a one piece dress in Tegra rayon. Also pink top with navy; beige or aqua with brown; light grey with dark grey. Sizes 9-15. By Zan Tamar —about $7.95. Where to buy, page 71.

than anybody

All jewelry by Coro

the hand-made look... and it's a half size

■ The expensive look of delicate tucks—rows and rows of them—etched with the laciest of lace. Skillfully cut for the half-size figure, fine woven Sanforized cotton dress with lace-edged collar and cuffs, front pleats. In brown, lilac, gun metal, blue, dark green. Sizes 14½-24½. A Westover Wearable —$10.95. For where to buy, page 71.

Jewelry by Coro

Brief Measure puts bouquets on you . . .

FOR THE SMALLER MISS 5'4" OR LESS

Not a Junior, not a Half-size, but specially sized for the Smaller Miss of 5'4" or less.

. . . knowing you'll look irresistibly feminine in flower-fraught, Spring-spirited dresses. Specially sized, enchantingly styled by BRIEF MEASURE to follow your figure . . . to have all eyes follow you.

Left . . . flowers of embroidery. Soap 'n Water Rayon, guaranteed unconditionally washable. Charming Blue, Sunny Rose, Enchanted Green, Daffodil Yellow.

Right . . . flowers of lace in RUM-TUM, a fine FOLKER fabric, hand-washable, permanently crease-resistant, linen-textured Rayon. Pink, Blue, Green, Beige.

Both in sizes 10S to 20S for the Smaller Miss of 5'4" or less.

Under $13

These and other fine stores throughout the country carry BRIEF MEASURE dresses

Woodward & Lothrop ..... Washington, D. C.
Frost Bros. ..... San Antonio, Texas
Ben F. Smith Co. ..... Texarkana, Ark.
Reiss Bros. ..... Mobile, Ala.
Kathleen Mary ..... Daytona Beach, Fla.
Wilson Co. ..... Gainesville, Fla.
C. W. Klemm ..... Bloomington, Ill.
Vogue ..... Fort Wayne, Ind.
Newman's ..... Arkansas City, Kans.
Pegues Wright ..... Hutchinson, Kans.
Cole's ..... Manhattan, Kans.
Crosby Bros. ..... Topeka, Kans.
Walker Bros. ..... Wichita, Kans.
Norman's ..... Bowling Green, Ky.
Sisters ..... Augusta, Maine
J. E. Palmer Co. ..... Portland, Maine
H.W. Pray Co., ... Newburyport, Mass.
Kumin's ..... Brockton, Mass.
Albert Steiger Co. ..... Springfield, Mass.
Mabel's Cotton Shop, ... Saginaw, Mich.
Freimuth's ..... Duluth, Minn.
Christman's ..... Joplin, Mo.
O'Shea's ..... Laconia, N. H.
J. W. Hill Co. ..... Manchester, N. H.
Norby's ..... Grand Forks, N. D.
Wiseman's ..... Lancaster, Ohio
Groff Karnopp ..... Toledo, Ohio
Smith's Women's Shop ..... Eugene, Ore.
Nina's ..... Shelbyville, Tenn.
Old Bee Hive ..... Burlington, Vt.
L. Herman ..... Danville, Va.
Becker's Apparel ..... Roanoke, Va.
Coyle & Richardson ..... Charleston, W. Va.
Dils Bros. ..... Parkersburg, W. Va.
Dickson's ..... Oshkosh, Wis.

Or write to:

BOSTON 18 HUBRITE INFORMAL FROCKS, Inc. NEW YORK 18

you'll love to live in Swirl

A pretty look—instantly! Just walk into it, button once, wrap and tie. Famous Bates combed broadcloth, in flashing precious stone print on black, brown, navy. Sanforized, colorfast, washable! Opens flat for jiffy ironing. Sizes 10 to 20. About $9.

Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, Ill.
B. Altman & Co., New York, N. Y.

Other Swirls, $6 to $9 at fine stores everywhere.

L. NACHMAN & SON, Inc.
1350 Broadway, New York 18, N.Y.
818 S. Broadway, Los Angeles 14, Cal.
COPYRIGHT, 1950

DIVORCE—THE SHAME OF HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 53)

Shirley, the princess, that through four long years his mother was invited to the house exactly twice. They tell how Jack planned to surprise Shirley on her birthday with a small but nifty new car. And how Shirley found out, and because they'd had a tiff, whirled home that evening in the biggest, showiest Cadillac she could find on the market.

Wherever the blame may lie—and, as usual, it's probably somewhere in the middle—what's the outlook for Linda? Behind her dimples, Shirley's a determined young woman. We can't see her making concessions where her child is concerned.

On the other hand, Jack's a stubborn young man, unlikely to yield up his paternal rights. At best, Linda loses the warmth of her father's presence. At worst, she grows up to be a bone of contention, her loyalties divided, her affections torn.

poor little rich kids . . .

It's this kind of conflict that develops neuroses in children of divorce. You don't have to be poor to feel insecure. A certain boarding school in Hollywood caters largely to the youngsters of filmland's broken marriages. Most of the kids go home for the weekend. To one father, the principal said: "Always be on time. If you say you're coming at three, make it exactly three, or a minute earlier. Never a minute later. Because around noon, these children begin to look worried. They gather in little bull sessions, wondering whether they're going to be picked up or not. Sometimes parents get their signals mixed, and a child is left stranded. What that does to the child, I'd hate to be responsible for."

Compound divorce, like a compound fracture of the leg, offers more serious problems than a simple break. A case in point is the Flynn-Eddington-Haymes-Dru-Ireland mix-up. Flynn has a son by Lili Damita and two daughters by Nora Eddington. Three children were born to Haymes and Joanne Dru, Ireland has two by a former marriage. Nora and Dick have announced a blessed event. Eight children and a prospect caught in the net of their elders' tangled emotions!

The original divorce agreement between Flynn and Nora gave her legal custody of both little girls, while Errol retained physical custody of two-year-old Rory, the light of his life. But once she was free, Nora repented her bargain. The two little sisters, she told Flynn, loved one another and should be allowed to grow up together. In tears, she begged him for permission to take Rory to Las Vegas while Errol went abroad. Flynn refused. She could visit the child at home as often as she liked, but Rory was not to be removed from the premises nor from the charge of Nora's stepmother, who'd been caring for her.

The struggle continues. Nora bases her pleas—a little tardily—on what's best for the children. "We have no right to separate them." You can hardly blame her for wanting both her daughters. Neither can you blame Errol, who for the first time has given his whole heart to a child. But even at two, Rory is affected. Her father's return from Europe excited her to the point of illness, so that she had to spend the next day in bed. Perhaps this is partly the reason why Nora's arguments seem to be making some dent. On the point of leaving for India to do Kim, Errol offered a counter-proposal. While he's away, both children go to Nora. When he's at home, both children come to him. Considering the circumstances, it sounds like a fair solution. Considering the children, how can they help being confused and upset by all this?

But Rory and Deirdre are mercifully little, and for the present unaware of many things. It's the older children who take the full impact of these blows. In this whole picture, Skippy, first-born of Dick Haymes and Joanne Dru, presents the most forlorn figure. Regardless of the break between him and Joanne, Dick was an attentive father till he met Nora. To Skippy, he was the sun and moon. When Daddy came home, something wonderful always happened, like going up in a plane or taking a horseback ride. He couldn't understand why Daddy had stopped coming. Joanne tried to explain, but he still didn't understand. "Because he's divorced from you," he asked, "does that mean he doesn't like me any more?"

After marrying Nora, Dick used to have his children come over to the house. Somehow it didn't work out, and the visits were dropped. Skippy missed his father so desperately that often he'd call him on the phone just to hear his voice. Sometimes Dick would be out and, through negligence, the message wouldn't be delivered. After all, what could a little boy have to say that was so important?

John Ireland is wonderful to the children. But to Skippy, John can't take his father's place. Skippy, unfortunately, is old enough for pain, and not old enough to know how to cope with it. . . .

Even with the younger ones, who can tell what things go on in their minds and hearts that could lead them 20 years hence to a psychiatrist's couch? A four-year-old was told that her father would come to take her out that day. Her father had been away for months. He was a stranger. The word meant nothing to her. When he appeared, she shrieked bloody murder. Not till they promised to let the nurse go along, would she budge out of the house with this man, her father. Or take the case of Deanna Durbin's Jessica at a Hallowe'en party. The kids were bragging—"I've got this and my mommy's got that and my daddy's got the other." Jessica listened gravely and supplied the topper: "My daddy's got four mommies." Where she'd picked up the information that Felix Jackson had been married four times has no bearing here. Of course it sounded funny. How funny will Jessica find it in years to come?

life without mother . . .

Originally, Jane Wyman intended taking the children when she went to England for Stage Fright. Ronald Reagan, just back from making The Hasty Heart, advised against it. So did other people. Finally convinced that the small fry would be better off at home, Jane asked Ronald to stay with them while she was gone. Because, cliché or not, these two remain friends. Neither could foresee that at a charity baseball game Ronnie was destined to fracture his thigh in five places and spend nine weeks at the hospital in traction. Those weeks, piled on top of his long stay in England, pretty well dimmed him from the mind of four-year-old Michael. When Ronnie hobbled in at last, Michael stared with more interest at the crutches than at his father. Ronnie went about the business of making friends. Each evening he sat with the child while he had his dinner—till the nurse took him aside. "Mr. Reagan," she said, "Michael doesn't eat when you're around. He's too busy talking."

The following night Ronnie said, "Look, Michael—I'm going out of the room. Here's the reason why: When I stay, we talk to

(Continued on page 72)

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

Capelet dress worn by Catherine McLeod (page 63)
Boston, Mass.—Jordan Marsh Co., Sport Dresses, 2nd Fl., Main Bldg.
Hartford, Conn.—Sage-Allen & Co., Mary Lewis Shop, 2nd Fl.
New York, N. Y.—Franklin Simon & Co., Sport Shop, 3rd Fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker, Moderate Price Dresses, 3rd Fl.
Washington, D. C.—The Hecht Co., Casual Dresses, 3rd Fl.

Jersey blouse (page 64)
Boston, Mass.—Filene's, Washington St.
Columbus, Ohio—F. & R. Lazarus & Co., Collegienne Sportswear, 3rd Fl.
Indianapolis, Ind.—L. S. Ayres & Co., Collegienne Shop, 3rd Fl.
New York, N. Y.—Lord & Taylor, Street Floor

Corduroy shirt (page 64)
Kansas City, Mo.—Mindlin's, Downtown & on the Plaza, Sport & Casual Shops
Newark, N. J.—L. Bamberger & Co., "Separates," 3rd Fl.
New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 W. 42nd St.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Gimbels, Market & 9th Sts., Sportswear, 3rd Fl.

Long sleeved cotton jersey shirt (page 65)
Natchez, Miss.—Raymond's
New York, N. Y.—Saks-34th, 34th St. & Broadway, Sportswear, 3rd Fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—Lousols, Chestnut St., Blouse Dept., Main Fl.
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop, Sportswear, 3rd Fl., Main Bldg.

Wool skirt with hip pockets (page 65)
Columbus, Ohio—F. & R. Lazarus & Co., Popular Price Sportswear, 2nd Fl.
Hartford, Conn.—Sage Allen & Co., Sport Shop, 2nd Fl.
New York, N. Y.—McCreery's, 5th Ave. & 34th St., Sportswear, 4th Fl.
Washington, D. C.—Lansburgh's, 420 NW 7th St., Sportswear Dept., 2nd Fl.

Sailor collar broadcloth dress (page 66)
New York, N. Y.—Stern's, 41 W. 42nd St., Junior Dress Dept., 3rd Fl.
Philadelphia, Pa.—John Wanamaker
Washington, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop, Jr. Misses, 2nd Fl., N. Bldg.

A Middy dress and Two-tone dress (page 67)
Albuquerque, New Mex.—The California Store, 141 Bridge St.
Cairo, Ga.—Rushin's
Caldwell, Idaho, Meurer's, 705 Main Coffeyville, Ka.—Greene's
Lewistown, Mont.—The Leader
Natchez, Miss.—Karls', 604 Franklin

Tucked cotton dress (page 68)
Brooklyn, N. Y.—Abraham & Straus, 420 Fulton St., Women's Sportswear, 3rd Fl.
Columbus, Ohio—F. & R. Lazarus & Co.
Los Angeles, Cal.—The May Co.
Memphis, Tenn.—Goldsmith's, Main & Gayoso Sts., Women's Dresses, 3rd Fl.
Pittsburgh, Pa.—Joseph Horne Co., Women's Sunshine Corner, 2nd Fl.

HOW TO ORDER MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(1) Buy in person from stores listed.
(2) Order by mail from stores listed.
(3) Write Connie Bartel, Modern Screen, Box 125, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y.—for store in your vicinity.

Deep Secret... to a fresher, younger-looking skin

The loveliest, youngest-looking skin your mirror has seen in years! Now it's only a few days away. Days in which you devote minutes, morning and night, to the miracle of deep-cleansing with Woodbury Cold Cream.

Such deep and thorough cleansing is possible only because of Penaten—a new, miraculous penetrating agent. Now in Woodbury Cold Cream, Penaten seeps deeper into pore openings . . . carries the cleansing oils deeper to float out every speck of clinging soil and stubborn make-up.

And through Penaten, Woodbury Cold Cream smooths more effectively too. Rich, softening oils are carried deeper to leave a softer, fresher feel . . . a look that's younger, beautiful as Spring! 20¢ to $1.39, plus tax.

Woodbury Cold Cream

Penetrates deeper because it contains PENATEN

Jonathan Logan

Breath-of-Spring sweetness in a nosegay printed rayon taffeta... party perfect, with tiny bodice, will-o'-the-wisp sleeves. The three tiered skirt widens with each ruffled flounce. Black with purple, black with red, grey with yellow, brown with pink violets. Sizes 9-11-13-15.

12.95

Winner Fashion Academy Award Gold Medal 1950

DIVORCE—THE SHAME OF HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 70)

each other, and when we talk, you forget about eating. If you don't eat, you won't get strong. I'll wait for you in the other room. As soon as you've finished all your spinach and applesauce, I'll come back."

He winked at the nurse and left. Michael hadn't uttered a peep. But out in the hallway, Ronnie heard his clear treble: "You know sump'n? I like him!"

No tribute ever sounded sweeter to Reagan. The pity of it is that because two adults made a mistake, this child will have only a part-time father. But Ronnie and Jane are at least aware of their responsibility. They'll do all in their power to compensate to the children.

Terry is the son of Doris Day's first marriage. He was cared for by her mother—also divorced—so that Doris could go on singing with bands. Once established in Hollywood, she brought them both out to join her. Somewhere along the way, she'd married George Weidler. That proved another flop. The day the divorce went through, she walked into the kitchen where her mother was cooking. "Here we go again," said Doris. "You don't have a husband, I don't have a husband." Her head dropped on her arms, and she bawled like a baby for the end of something that had started in happiness.

man of the family . . .

On this scene Terry entered. Nothing had been said in his presence, but children seem to soak things in through their pores. He eyed his mother gravely. "Don't worry, Mom. I'll look out for you."

She managed a grin. "Sure, sure, you're the man of the house." But after he'd gone, the tears started afresh. "I—I can't help it," she sobbed. "Him and his skinny shoulders, all bowed down with responsibility . . ."

It may seem inconsistent at this point to cite the fact that though Joan Bennett has had four daughters by three husbands, you won't meet a better-adjusted family than that composed of those daughters, Joan, and her third husband, Walter Wanger. Analyze Joan, and the inconsistency vanishes. She's done what some of the others couldn't do—learned through mistakes, weighed the comparative values of family and career, made a clear choice. Family's first. She doesn't take her work lightly, but neither does it tear her to shreds. A part's a part, it isn't a matter of life or death. Whether her name appears among the top box-office 10 or 20 or even 50, it matters not a tinker's dam to Joan. If she never saw a camera again, life would still be rich in the human relationships that mean most to her. Such an attitude in their mother is like sunlight to kids.

As above noted, the problems of divorce can be overcome if you have the will. Joan had the will and found the wisdom.

There's another special hazard to the children of Hollywood divorce, which your child or mine would be safe from—the hazard of publicity.

The child of a certain star, who'd broken with her husband, was too young to read. Some of his playmates weren't. His mother had been trying to figure out the best way of telling him that Daddy wouldn't be back. She was seated at her dressing table one day, when a strange yapping reached her through the open windows. She listened and froze. "Yaa, yaa, your daddy's not coming home, your mother divorced him." A kind of numbness gripped her. She sat and waited, heard the approaching footsteps, saw the small figure enter, somber-eyed.

"You divorced my daddy, my daddy's not coming home!" He flung himself at her. "I hate you, I hate you!"

One way or another, he had to find out, but this was the worst way. Gentleness would have eased the knowledge. As it was, he'd been taxed beyond his emotional strength. A sudden savage thrust had shattered his world, and who was going to put it together again?

Children must be wanted. To grow up whole and sound, they must feel secure in the world of their childhood. Only parents can give them security, be the parents natural or foster. Brenda Marshall's first marriage was unhappy. Perhaps for that reason her daughter was a shy little introvert, timid with people, unsure of herself. Bill Holden loved the child for her own sake as well as his wife's. "I have to make her realize she's important to me," he thought. "Not so much that she's got a new father, but I have a new daughter." Unobtrusively he wooed her, drew her within the safekeeping of his tenderness. Virginia danced well. When work permitted, Bill made a point of taking her to and from classes. After the boys were born, he gave her if anything more attention than before. You'd never know today that Virginia was once a lost kind of little girl. Transplanted to healthy soil, she's blossomed like the rose.

This is a story about children of divorce—but pardon us if we linger a moment on the other side, to mark a contrast. No two people are better aware of the proper emotional environment for youngsters than Mal and Ray Milland. Equally concerned for Danny and Victoria, they explained to their son that they'd wanted a little sister for him and it hadn't worked out, so they planned to adopt one. Mal brought Victoria home from the East to a couple of menfolk who couldn't contain their excitement. Danny insisted that she sleep in his room. Having left for a moment to attend to something, Mal came back and stopped short at the threshold, a lump catching her throat. On his bed lay Danny, chin cupped, an admiring spectator, while Ray braided the long blonde hair of their new daughter. . . .

sharing the pride . . .

This is the stuff of home and family. These are the moments that stay with a child and form the cherished mosaic of his background. Outer and inner stability go together. When Mal and Ray signed the final adoption papers, Danny went along. It meant taking him out of school for a week, but a week's schooling was nothing compared with the value of cutting him in on the deal, having him stand right beside them, so both children would feel through direct experience that he was adopting a sister as proudly as the parents were adopting a daughter. . . .

We're not out to point any morals. Children of divorce become useful citizens. Children of happy homes wind up behind the eight-ball. It happens like that, but the odds are the other way round.

We don't know the answer. All we know is what the kid said at the start. He'd rather have only one Christmas tree.

THE END

JOIN WITH THE STARS IN THE FIGHT ON POLIO—CONTRIBUTE TO THE MARCH OF DIMES!

HOLLYWOOD'S 10 BEST CITIZENS

(Continued from page 46)

MODERN SCREEN to give full particulars of the activities for which the players were thus honored. All of them, if not members of the armed forces in World War II, devoted time and effort to war bond drives, camp and hospital personal appearances in the U. S. and abroad, and related activities. Beyond this, brief mention is made of only a few of the outstanding good works to the credit of Hollywood's 10 best citizens—who, alphabetically, are as follows:

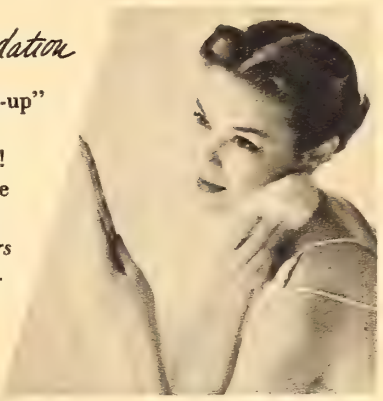
Bud Abbott—who, with Lou Costello, jointly supports the Lou Costello, Jr., Youth Foundation. Since its founding in 1946, they have put about $400,000 into the project, whose annual maintenance is $50,000. Its play center and medical clinic, located in the east side of Los Angeles, has facilities for 10,000 children. One of the results of its operations has been a decline of more than 40 per cent in juvenile delinquency in the district.

Jack Benny—who sometimes presides at fund-raising rallies seven nights a week and to whom a neighborhood charity event is as important as a national drive. Though he insists that no publicity be made of his financial contributions, it is generally conceded that no one in Hollywood has donated more to worthy causes.

Lou Costello—who, with Bud Abbott, is co-supporter of the Lou Costello, Jr., Youth Foundation, which they founded in 1946 in memory of Costello's son, who was drowned in the family swimming pool.

Bing Crosby—the full scope of whose civic and philanthropic activities is not, at his own insistence, public knowledge. But it is extremely wide. For instance, he has contributed $130,000 to Gonzaga University toward a library for that school. His Crosby Research Foundation has been of great help to inventors. Ideas submitted to it are carefully examined by experts and, if they are considered worthwhile, the Foundation assists in their development and in securing financial backing to place them on the market.

with charity for all . . .



Irene Dunne—who, a Roman Catholic, was named "the actress who has done the most to promote better understanding among peoples of all faiths" during 1948 by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. She is a member of The Christophers, a non-sectarian, anti-totalitarian group whose current project is to produce 30 non-profit short films aimed at "throwing out the evil from American life." She received the 1949 Laetare Medal from the University of Notre Dame as the year's outstanding member of the Catholic laity in America. She was appointed 1949 chairman of the National Women's Committee of the American Heart Association by Harold E. Stassen, the national chairman.

Bob Hope—who is one of the most tireless workers for worthy causes in America. Practically every spare moment of his time is devoted to forwarding some civic or philanthropic enterprise.

Jean Hersholt—who is one of the leaders of the movie community in shouldering responsibility. He is president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, of which he was a founder, which provides a home for impoverished, ill or elderly actors and actresses. He is a director of the Screen Actors Guild, of which he was a founder; of the Radio Artists Federation, and of the Hollywood Bowl Association. For four years—1945-49—he was president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He has, in his many years in

For the skin that objects to heavy make-up

A misty-sheer, greaseless foundation

If your skin feels uncomfortably "made-up" in a heavy foundation, then set it free with this sheer, flattering powder base! Before powder, apply a light, protective veil of Pond's Vanishing Cream. It's greaseless! The satiny Cream disappears on your skin, leaving a smooth, adherent finish for powder. No streaking. No shade problem. Your make-up stays charmingly fresh for hours!

1-Minute Mask

Tonight—before you go out—re-style your complexion! Cover your face, except eyes, with a snowy-white 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. The Cream's "keratolytic" action loosens and dissolves off little skin roughnesses and dirt particles. After one minute, tissue off. See the new glow to your skin, feel the new softness. Powder slips on more evenly, more smoothly than ever!

The Countess Jean de Caraman says—"Pond's Vanishing Cream as a powder base gives such a smooth, flattering, natural-looking make-up—helps keep my skin soft in any kind of weather."

Pat's mother spanks!

Pat spills crumbs all over the clean rug, and mother has to drag out the vacuum again. It makes her mad enough to spank!

Pete's mother doesn't!

Pete has crumb trouble, too . . . but his unruffled mother gets the mess quick, with her handy Bissell Sweeper. She saves her vacuum for heavy cleaning, uses her Bissell® for all quick daily clean-ups.

Only BISSELL has "BISCO-MATIC"* BRUSH ACTION

This miracle-action brush adjusts itself automatically to any rug thickness. Picks up every speck, even under beds, with no pressure on the handle. So easy on rugs, and you!

New Bissell Sweepers with "Bisco-matic" Brush Action as low as $6.45. Illustrated: The "Flight" at $9.45. Prices a little more in the West.

BISSELL SWEEPERS

Bissell Carpet Sweeper Company
Grand Rapids 2, Michigan

* Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Bissell's full spring controlled brush.

Hollywood, always been a sort of father confessor to minor workers in the industry. On many occasions, instead of merely channeling relief and medical cases to the proper charitable agencies, he has assisted with his own funds.

Roy Rogers—who is second to none in the motion picture industry in the amount of good he has done for sick children. He is constantly called upon to visit, telephone or send a message to some ailing child, and he always responds. In every town he visits, he makes a personal appearance at the local children's hospital, if there is one. The American Legion awarded him an Americanism citation in 1949 for his nationwide work in child safety.

Red Skelton—who is one of the leading supporters of the Pacific Boys' Club Home, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club for the purpose of giving a home and education to boys who have become subject to reform-school terms. Instead of serving their sentences, these boys are frequently transferred by the court to the Boys' Home and given an opportunity to correct themselves. Besides contributing extensively to the larger charities, he does a great deal of charity work on a personal basis. His "loans" to needy motion picture workers reached such a point at one time that his business agent was forced to limit him to $75 a week in pocket money.

Loretta Young—whose chief charitable interest is in the St. Anne's Foundation, a maternity hospital for unwed mothers to which she has contributed approximately $100,000. She never benefits by any of her radio appearances, since she turns the entire amount she thus earns over to this charity. She is credited with being the first to encourage Father Peyton's Family Theater radio program, which she helped to get on the air.

To all these ladies and gentlemen go MODERN SCREEN's congratulations. In being chosen by the General Federation of Women's Clubs as Hollywood's 10 best citizens, they reflect high credit on a profession, an industry and a community that should be proud to claim them.

THE END

BAREFOOT BOY WITH SHOWS ON

(Continued from page 29)

just restless, or is he trying to find out something?"

He's trying to find out something. He has a deep curiosity about the whys and wherefores of human relationships. By nature, he's a lone wolf. But, while primarily he's a self-contained individualist, devoting his life to his profession with the ardor of the true artist, there's nothing anti-social about him.

"To be convincing," he explains, "an actor must share, or at least be aware of, experiences familiar to the audience. Otherwise, he's making faces in an emotional vacuum and nobody knows what on earth he's trying to express. He must get around and meet the people—people everywhere. Any young actor with the fare should visit Israel. There's one of the few really new nations established since the American Revolution. Everything there is dramatic and challenging—and wonderfully stimulating and broadening.

"I can't stand being in the hothouse atmosphere of Hollywood for more than a few months at a time. People there live such an artificial existence that they lose contact with ordinary people. . . . But please don't misunderstand me! I owe Hollywood a lot, and I know it. I hope I never turn out to be one of those jerks who reap the rewards of Hollywood and then blast the place for ruining their 'artistic integrity.' Guys like that didn't have integrity in the first place if they let that happen to them."

Clift's insistence on maintaining his integrity has been the despair of publicity men. He simply doesn't believe in leading his private life in public nor will he lend himself to the exhibitionistic projects dreamed up by publicists. He's been that way from the beginning of his career.

Several years ago, he was playing on Broadway in Foxhole in the Parlor. The press agent in charge of exploiting the play hired 50 bobby-soxers to lie in wait for the young actor outside the stage entrance of the theater. It was planned that, as Clift came out, the 50 were to "mob" him, camera shutters were to click and, it was fondly hoped, pictures of New York's new "matinee idol" were to be plastered over the drama pages of the newspapers.

Clift was told about the scheme. He was, to put it mildly, lukewarm. The press agent argued earnestly—and Clift reluctantly agreed.

Then, at the last minute, Clift's honesty prevailed. He turned up his coat collar and sneaked out of the theater by a side entrance.

When writers ask him for permission to interview his mother or father or older brother or twin sister for background material, Clift always politely but firmly refuses. "Look," he says, "what could you find out, anyway? What can my mother say to strangers? That I was a cute baby, that I cried at night, that she's proud of me? Nuts! Who cares? Such things don't mean anything. And besides, if I didn't keep my family out of my public life, it would be a terrific nuisance to them. Why should they be bothered?"

To date, Clift's feelings about his family have been honored—largely because, when he does grant interviews, he's quite cooperative in telling all about himself. All, that is, except about something his family probably wouldn't know about anyway: his love life.

"I like girls," he says flatly. "All kinds of girls. But I just won't drag any particular girl I like into the spotlight by talking about her to reporters. And I can't describe what type of girl I like better than another—I just don't know. If I meet a girl I like, then I ask her for a date. That's all there is to it."

In the past year, Clift has been "linked romantically" in the gossip columns with a number of girls. But what male star—with the exception of Lassie, and he's supposed to be a girl—hasn't? Here are the ladies the news-hungry columnists have recently mentioned in connection with Clift: Actresses Peggy Knudsen, Ann Lincoln and Myra Letts; writer Tricia Hurst, and WAC Lieutenant Mary Carter. At this writing, his engagement to none of those ladies has been announced. Any more than it has to Elizabeth Taylor who, through studio arrangement, he escorted not long ago to the Hollywood première of The Heiress.

At the beginning of 1946, Clift was completely unknown to movie-goers. Today, his fan mail is second to none in volume (and probably intensity) and exhibitors everywhere will tell you he's an actor who attracts more profit than even their popcorn machines.

Clift is modest indeed about his phenomenal screen success. "I've been very lucky," he says, "to have had fine directors for all my pictures. I've always felt that ood director is the most important fac- in a good picture."

When he signed with Paramount to ke three pictures for a minimum of 0,000 apiece, he insisted, besides the ht to approve the final script, on having tipulation in the contract that each film uld be directed by one of four top- chers—Frank Capra, William Wyler, orge Stevens and William Wilder. He already finished two of the three pic- es, The Heiress and A Place in the Sun. at his third will be, he doesn't know. t he does know that when he makes it, will be in the masterful hands of a t-rate director.

ney isn't everything . . .

Now, this is definitely an unusual ar- gement. One may well wonder why er actors don't make the same sort of al. Actors like Gary Cooper, for in- nce. Cooper has been around for years, s got great prestige, he's a tremendous x-office draw. Why doesn't Cooper, e Clift, battle and argue over scripts d directors?

The answer is that Cooper's main reason making movies is to make money— 0,000 a picture, with frequently a per- ntage of the profits. To Clift, making ney is strictly secondary to helping ieve an artistic creation.

n 1946, Howard Hawks phoned Clift in w York from Hollywood and offered n a job in Red River. He described the e and the story. Clift turned him down. don't think the part's right for me," he d. And at that moment of superb re- al, Clift was broke and living on un- ployment compensation.

But Hawks persisted. "It's impossible me to give you a fair idea of this pic- e over the phone," he said. "Tell you at: I'll wire you expense money and u come out here and let me talk to u. If you still don't like the part, you u fly back. Fair enough?"

Clift agreed and went to Hollywood. "I s very much afraid of the part," he s. "I didn't think I was physically right it. I didn't believe I could stand up to nan as big as John Wayne. But I liked story and Hawks gave me a good deal, I signed."

n Clift's second picture, The Search, he used to play the role of the GI unless he uld do it as he thought it should be done n a natural, realistic manner. "And the y the part was written," he says, "the racter was a Boy Scout type spreading ility and virtue all over the lot. I was posed to be so darned saintly a special p man would've been needed to polish halo. I felt the soldier had to get mad the kid and yell at him when the situa- n was established, just as any normal ult does with a difficult kid."

When Clift was told the characterization uldn't be changed, he said he'd bow out the picture. He was reminded that he'd ned for six weeks and couldn't bow out. K.," he said. "Suppose the picture isn't shed after six weeks. Is there any- ng to prevent me from bowing out n?"

The script was changed and Clift was mitted to play the role as he saw it. e picture was a success, Clift's artistic science was satisfied, and demands his services arose in every Hollywood dio.

Montgomery Clift may often give a first pression that he's a sort of barefoot boy. he is, he's a barefoot boy with his feet nted firmly on a path going up—a path y definitely of his own choosing.

THE END

THE MARCH ISSUE OF MODERN SCREEN IS THE ELIZABETH TAYLOR BIRTHDAY BOOK

To My Favorite Blonde

Oh, lovely Blonde! My voice I raise,
Your tender, golden charms to praise.

When I am soiled beyond belief,
Your perfume heralds prompt relief.

Beneath your swift and gentle care,
I shun all washday wear and tear.

And when with me you've had your way
I'm cleansed of 'Tattle-Tale-ish' Gray.

All substitutes I now decline,
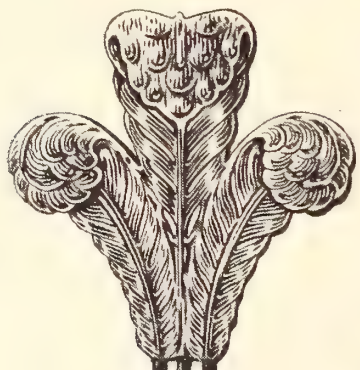
Dear Blondie, be my Valentine!

GOLDEN BAR OR GOLDEN CHIPS

Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"



LITTLE LULU

Wait! Always room for Kleenex* Pocket-Packs!

Little Lulu says: WHEREVER YOU GO, CARRY KLEENEX POCKET-PACK TISSUES! SOFT, STRONG KLEENEX TISSUES (24 SHEETS — 12 PULLS) IN A TINY NEW PACKAGE THAT SERVES ONE AT A TIME, ONLY 5¢

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. ★T M REG U S PAT. OFF.

Pretty plumes, to preen up your hat, suit, coat, whatever your fancy suggests. Pin, matching earrings, $3 each, plus tax. Ask for Coro's Three Feathers at your favorite store, or write Coro, Inc., New York 1.

THREE FEATHERS

Coro JEWELRY ®

Design patent pending © Coro, Inc. 1949

AMERICA'S BEST DRESSED WOMEN WEAR CORO JEWELRY

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

FROM THE MOVIES

BITTER VICTORY—"You're Wonderful" by Billy Eckstine* (MGM).

THE GREAT LOVER—"A Thousand Violins" by Russ Case* (MGM); Paul Weston (Capitol).

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN—Album of six songs (Victor).
A weird assortment ranging from Vaughn Monroe singing Sonny Boy (oh, no!) to Count Basie in After You've Gone, plus Phil Harris, Sammy Kaye, Tony Martin and Tommy Dorsey.

OH, YOU BEAUTIFUL DOLL—Tony Martin-Pied Pipers Album* (Victor).
Six songs from the movie about the late Fred Fisher, American songsmith from Cologne, Germany, including the title tune, which oddly enough Fred didn't write. For Tormé fans, there's a single Capitol platter by Mel, coupling this song with There's a Broken Heart for Every Light on Broadway.

RED SHOES—Ballet music by Easdale, conducted by Muir Matheson with the Philharmonic Orch.* (Columbia long-playing)

SHE WORE A YELLOW RIBBON—Title song by Ralph Flanagan* (Victor); Tommy Tucker (MGM); Andrews Sisters & Russ Morgan (Decca).

WABASH AVENUE—"I've Been Floating Down the Old Green River" by Johnny Mercer (Capitol); "Billy" by Doris Drew (MGM)

POPULAR AND BOPULAR

JUNE CHRISTY—"Get Happy"* (Capitol).
With the help of fine Pete Rugolo backing, Stan Kenton's blonde alumna sounds greatly improved on this and the backing I'll Remember April.

KING COLE—"My Mother Told Me" (Capitol).
Shorn of the vocal groups, elaborate backgrounds and dull Tin Pan Alley tunes Nat sounds like his old informal self in this delightful blues, mated with an equally pleasant Exactly Like You.

ELLA FITZGERALD—"In The Evening"* (Decca)

WOODY HERMAN—"Rhapsody In Wood" (Capitol).
This is the number Ralph Burns wrote to feature Woody's clarinet, and the band in a George Pal Puppetoon.

ROY KRAL-JACKIE CAIN—"Ever Lovin' Blues"* (Atlantic).
This great new group, a sextet with a subtle sound, includes a girl cellist, a terrific girl drummer and vocals by "Mr & Mrs. Bop" (Kral and Cain), formerly of the Ventura band. Reverse is a synthetic treatment of Auld Lang Syne.

ALBUMS

SPADE COOLEY—"Skip To My Lou" (Victor)
Strictly for square dancers—with calls by Roy Rogers.

BILLY ECKSTINE—Eight of the best standard songs from Billy's bandleading era. Long playing record* (National).

OSCAR LEVANT—Gershwin's "2nd Rhapsody," variations on "I Got Rhythm," and three "Preludes"* (Columbia).

MY NEW GUY

(Continued from page 33)

little wall between it and my consciousness and behave as if it wasn't there at all.

Well, a person can go on pretending away a lot of things—but not one certain thing. There came a morning when I woke up and didn't feel at all like Neptune's daughter. On the contrary, I felt like somebody's mother! I was both thrilled and confused.

It was time to share with my husband the responsibility of what might be going on, so I did. "But Ben," I said, after the first cheers and excitement were over, "don't say anything yet! I want to be absolutely certain before we make any announcement. I don't want to have to pull any of this 'I guess I was wrong, ha-ha!' stuff. And I don't want to be running into friends months after breaking the news and have them say, 'Good heavens! Haven't you had that baby yet?'"

He promised—but it was tough on him, because he wanted to tell the world in a full campaign including use of stenciled sidewalks, handbills and skywriting. And it was tough on me, too, because I had to contend with Charlie at the studio, who was the assistant director on our picture. I had to contend with him because there came mornings when I couldn't get to the studio on time; I would drag myself in sometimes an hour or more late.

long-term cold . . .

"This isn't like you, Esther," Charlie would say disapprovingly. "What's wrong?"

"Uh—it's a cold," I would tell him, and snuffle busily. But after several weeks of this . . . well, how long can you have a cold? He would eye me suspiciously.

"That cold sure is hanging on," he would comment.

"Snuffle! snuffle!" I would snuffle, miserably. "Isn't it, though?"

But worst of all was the pool. We spent such a long time in it for the big scenes that it was sometimes kept heated up to 88 degrees. Between this suffocating warmth and the chlorine in it—ugh! In the middle of a number I would feel myself getting woozy and would start dreaming of drinking a big pitcher of ice water, or wonder why I hadn't taken up ice-skating in the first place instead of swimming.

No sir, my "cold" soon wore out its usefulness as an excuse. It was time to find out about myself exactly so I could tell the world if it was true. Besides, from the way some of those mermaids were flipping their eyes around when I went past I had a hunch I wasn't fooling them anyway. (I wasn't, as I later learned from the busy little know-it-alls!)

Came the official verdict—and, as they say in Washington, I was able to declassify my secret. "The first person I'm going to tell about it, outside of the immediate family, is Charlie," I told Ben.

I arrived at the studio late as usual the next day and there was Charlie waiting for me in my dressing room with a big medical book in his hand. In my condition, the sight of it scared me.

"What's that?" I asked.

"I've got a whole chapter on colds here," he said severely. "It says that colds either get better or turn into pneumonia. Yours hasn't been getting anywhere for weeks."

"Charlie, we can write a new chapter for that book," I said. "My cold turned into a baby."

From then on everybody understood, and working was a little easier for me

"PLEASE, DAVE..PLEASE DON'T LET ME BE LOCKED OUT FROM YOU!"

Often a wife fails to realize that doubts due to one intimate neglect shut her out from happy married love

A man marries a woman because he loves her. So instead of blaming him if married love begins to cool, she should question herself. Is she truly trying to keep her husband and herself eager, happy married lovers? One most effective way to safeguard her dainty feminine allure is by practicing complete feminine hygiene as provided by vaginal douches with a scientifically correct preparation like "Lysol." So easy a way to banish the misgivings that often keep married lovers apart.

Germs destroyed swiftly

"Lysol" has amazing, proved power to kill germ-life on contact . . . truly cleanses the vaginal canal even in the presence of mucous matter. Thus "Lysol" acts in a way that makeshifts like soap, salt or soda never can.

Appealing daintiness is assured, because the very source of objectionable odors is eliminated.

Use whenever needed!

Yet gentle, non-caustic "Lysol" will not harm delicate tissue. Simple directions give correct douching solution. Many doctors advise their patients to douche regularly with "Lysol" brand disinfectant, just to insure feminine daintiness alone, and to use it as often as necessary. No greasy aftereffect.

For feminine hygiene, three times more women use "Lysol" than any other liquid preparation. No other is more reliable. You, too, can rely on "Lysol" to help protect your married happiness . . . keep you desirable!

For complete Feminine Hygiene rely on . . .

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A Concentrated Germ-Killer

Product of Lehn & Fink

NEW!...FEMININE HYGIENE FACTS!

FREE! New booklet of information by leading gynecological authority. Mail coupon to Lehn & Fink, 192 Bloomfield Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

DM-502

during the shooting of the picture. But toward the end of it, some four-and-a-half months later, things got a little frantic. Baby was beginning to make himself quite evident, there was still one more scene to be shot and there was a delay in the preparations for it. It turned into a race—and ended in a dead heat. If you should see me in Neptune's Daughter, you might take note of the dressing-room sequence just before the finale of the picture. I'm in it, face and shoulders only. That, in case anyone wants to know, is because we could only get the upper portion of the robe buttoned.

So that's how I sailed through motherhood in my professional life. My private life? Ah, that was a cinch. There were good days (there must have been, I'm sure) and there were the other kind. Some of the latter just couldn't get started early enough, it seemed. I used to find myself awake at three and four in the morning, lying there just communing with nausea. A lovely way to pass the time. On one such dawning, I got an irresistible desire to eat something that I knew would make me feel better—but I couldn't think of what it was. For an hour I probed into every little alley and wrinkle in my mind trying to nail down the pesky thing that was tantalizing me so, and . . . finally I hit upon it! So simple, too.

But I just wasn't able to get out of bed and fetch it. The only thing left was to have Ben get it for me. But wake him up in the middle of his sleep and make him do that? I couldn't. Still, I just had to have it. So I compromised. I used thought power on him—telepathy. I concentrated as hard as could. "Ben, you can't sleep any more," I said in my mind. "You just can't because you know I want something and you must go downstairs and get it for me." And I repeated and repeated. Suddenly he started to stir!

How wonderful, I thought. And then, just to make sure, I spoke aloud. "Oh, Ben. While you're downstairs, will you pick me up a cold peach from the refrigerator?"

There was more stirring—and then a deep, steady breathing. He'd just turned over in his sleep! It was perfectly disgusting!

Morning came at last. As Ben was dressing, he turned to me and said, "You know, honey, you talked in your sleep last night."

"I did?" I asked. "Are you sure?"

how ridiculous! . . .

"Sure," he replied. "I woke up for some reason and was just shifting around when I heard you. Something silly about wanting me to go downstairs and get you a cold peach. Imagine that!"

Yet, of course, I couldn't have gone through the whole thing without Ben's understanding and help. There were days when he used to recite dozens of dishes, one after the other, to help me think of the one that something inside of me was shouting for. There were mornings too, when he would have warm tomato soup for breakfast because warm tomato soup was the only thing I wanted and I couldn't even think of sniffing anything else—particularly the bacon that he ordinarily would have had.

But on the other hand there was the time . . . hmmm! . . . I can just feel myself getting mad at him all over again! It was toward the end of my expectancy and baby was no longer being subtle about his existence. Far from it. Far, far, far from it! As I waddled into the living room one evening, Ben looked up from his newspaper. When he saw me an almost frightened expression crossed his face. He said, "Wow!"

I drew myself up to my full height (so I would look taller than rounder). "What do you mean, sir, by that?" I demanded. "Wow, what?"

"Oh, nothing," he said, folding up the paper quickly and slipping it to one side of him. I didn't like the way he did that. So I went to pick it up. He grabbed it and put it on the other side of him. That was enough for me.

"I demand that you give me that paper!" I said.

"It's just a paper," he answered.

"Give it to me."

He did. I opened it up. Right over almost half the page was a big ad for Neptune's Daughter. In the ad was a picture of me, in the gold bathing suit I had worn, looking wonderfully slim and sitting on a diving board. Slim! SLIM! My eyes filled with tears and Ben hastened to say something.

"It was just the contrast for the moment when I saw you," he tried to explain. "That 'wow!' came out before I thought."

"How could you?" I sobbed. "How could you!"

That was positively the low of my life then. Oh, well—there's nothing like a good cry. But only a few days after that, Ben came down suddenly with something rare which the doctor called a ruptured Meckles Diverticulum. It required immediate surgery. I was at his bedside when he awoke after the operation.

"The doctor says you should feel quite exclusive," I said. "Few people get what you had."

Ben groaned. "I know what it is," he said. "It's something you catch when you kid your wife about her figure when she's going to have a baby."

Poor Ben. We laughed at that till he hurt and had to stop. Later he got an idea to take my picture in the same pose as in the ad so we could have an imperishable record of the contrast. But I said no, thanks, that I didn't even want to remember myself that way, let alone have it around for everyone else to see. Anyhow, I wasn't going to climb onto any old diving board in my condition—I had finally lost an argument with my doctor on the subject of swimming as a pre-natal exercise.

It was O. K. with the doctor until the last couple of months, when he wanted me to stop it in favor of walking. I didn't want to walk. It jogged me, and besides, it meant going outdoors and wincing every time I passed a small boy for fear he would yell out something like, "Hey, Joey! Look-it! I thought they didn't allow trucks on the sidewalk!"

So I swam. Then one day after a meeting with the doctor, I stopped suddenly. The main reason for this was that he pointed out that he was a poor swimmer himself and would find water a strange medium in which to work should there be a sudden emergency. That was enough for me.

Eventually there came a day when the doctor said, "Esther, you are starting on your last week." Ben and I fell all over each other in preparations. First I packed my little bag so it would be all ready. I put in bedjacket, best hairbrush, nightie, a bottle of cologne, two of this and three of that and so on. We called off all our engagements for the week, sat down and waited.

The day passed. Evening came on. "A whole week like this?" I thought. I got up and went to the telephone and called the doctor. "Really!" I said. "This is getting ridiculous. We're just sitting and looking at each other."

just like that . . .

"All right," he replied. "If you're so impatient, have Ben drive you to my office now. I'll examine you and possibly you can go to the hospital and have the baby tonight."

"Wha-wha-what?" I stammered. "Just like that?"

"Sure." And he hung up.

Ben took me over. The doctor said everything was favorable. I was to go to the hospital immediately. Whew!

We could have gone right then and there but first I insisted on Ben driving me home. I don't know why. Just to look around, maybe. Then I insisted that he see some of his business associates and tell them he might not be around for a while. I wouldn't mind waiting at all, I assured him. I thought of other ways to stall, too. But, in the end—well, there was nothing left to do but go!

We were just leaving the house when I stopped and told Ben that I was hungry.

"Oh, no!" he said. "You're not supposed to eat."

"But you're hungry, too," I said, hopefully. "Don't you want to eat?"

"Well," he said, "I'll get something to eat after I get you to the hospital."

I was staggered. "You couldn't!" I protested. "You just couldn't eat then!"

---

hollywood cook book

by nancy craig, american broadcasting company women's editor

■ When svelte, sophisticated Marta Toren sat down in front of our ABC microphone to talk about her latest picture, Death on a Side Street, I immediately concluded that here was a young lady whose tastes were definitely Continental. Toward the end of our interview when I asked her what her favorite dishes were, I certainly expected her to recommend some exotic souffle or perhaps one of the delicious smorgasbord recipes of her native Sweden. Imagine how surprised I was when Marta said that her favorite dish was ham and eggs. And Marta was really serious. "Good American ham and country fresh eggs are a delicacy that we didn't get much of in Europe—especially during the war. I could eat ham and eggs three times a day." However, more surprising was the unique way that Marta has of frying eggs. It's a simple little trick, but I have tried it and I can tell you that it really is wonderful.

As soon as your butter starts to simmer, drop your eggs sunnyside up into the pan, which is over a medium flame. Immediately cover the frying pan with one of your kitchen dishes so that none of the heat escapes. After about a minute, remove the dish and using a butter brush spread some prepared mustard lightly over the hardening whites and drop a dab on each yoke. Then put the dish back over the pan and allow the eggs to cook for another minute or however long is necessary to suit your personal taste.

Covering the pan gives the eggs a baked quality—makes them taste more elaborate than simple fried eggs. Not only that, but it saves you the trouble of having to turn them over, since they cook on both sides at once. The mustard gives them a nice tang. Serve the eggs by placing them on top of your favorite type of ham and garnish with parsley. This is really an attractive, simple dish.

"Couldn't I?" he asked. Then, catching himself suddenly—"Oh, of course not. I couldn't think of it!"

"Oh, yes, you could!" I accused . . . and so on until we got to the hospital. I had been looking for something to start the tears, and I had found it. . . .

A little after midnight—at 12:46 a.m.—on August 6, the baby was born. A few hours later I regained consciousness to hear myself delivering a long lecture to my nurse on lubrication of automobiles—which I know nothing about. It must have been a very dull talk, because it put me right back to sleep again.

The next night a television set was put into my room and I watched Ben do his regular weekly television show. He came on looking tired, and I realized that he had propably been up all night, what with hanging around at the hospital, phoning relatives and getting his show set. The first thing he did as he made his entrance was open up his coat. Around his waist was a big sign that said, "IT'S A BOY." He turned around and lifted the back of his coat to reveal another sign. This one read, "SEVEN POUNDS, NINE CUNCES!" Then he started to sing "Mighty Lak a Rose"—and when I heard the line, "Sweetest little feller," I broke out in tears. . . .

So you see, there was nothing to it. I just sailed through motherhood. And now that it's over, what have I got to show for it?

Well, here he is in my arms—Benjamin Stanton Gage. My new guy is a blue-eyed little man with dark, reddish hair and great, big hands. I brush his hair with his own little brush. I smooth his little shirt. And I do other things for him, besides. And when I am all through, I bend low for my reward—and I get it. In a most bored manner, he looks up at me and hiccups and hiccups and hiccups!

That's what I've got. And, girls, take it from me—everybody should have a baby!

THE END

SOMEWHERE OVER THE RAINBOW

(Continued from page 16)

clouds are far behind me . . . Where troubles melt like lemon drops, away above the chimney tops—that's where you'll find me. . . ."

The throb in the child's voice rose with hope, and there were tears in the eyes of the workmen. The thin whirring of the camera sounded loud in the utter quiet of the stage.

"Somewhere over the rainbow, blue birds fly. . . . If birds fly over the rainbow, why, then—oh, why, can't I?"

There was a long moment in which nobody moved or spoke, then a sniffle or two and an embarrassed cough broke the silence. Finally the director took a deep breath.

"That's all, Judy," he said. "That was swell."

Judy Garland bowed and skipped away. She didn't know it then, but she was a star. Maybe her name wasn't important enough at that moment to put up in lights, but everyone on that stage knew he had heard and seen a great artist—and that it was just a matter of time and the usual inter-office memos until Judy got her due.

That was a long time ago, and a lot of water has passed under the bridge, and many things have happened. Judy Garland is no longer the child she was that day, she doesn't bow and skip away when she finishes a scene any more. Her eyes are not as starry when somebody says, "That's swell." There have been too many years of disillusionment and heartbreak for

Dream girl, dream girl, beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl.

Hair that gleams and glistens from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!...Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

EXCLUSIVE! This magical secret-blend lather with LANOLIN!

EXCITING! This new three-way hair loveliness . . .

Not a soap! Not a liquid! But Kay Daumit's cream shampoo with lanolin. Jars: $2, $1. Jars and tubes: 49¢, 25¢.

1 LEAVES HAIR SILKEN SOFT, INSTANTLY MANAGEABLE. That's the first wondrous result of a Lustre-Creme shampoo. Even in water hard as nails, Lustre-Creme's lavish, lanolin-blessed lather ends the problem of unruly, soap-dulled locks . . . leaves hair soft, obedient, ready for any style hair-do.

2 LEAVES HAIR SPARKLING WITH STAR-BRIGHT SHEEN. No other shampoo has the same magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin to bring out every elusive highlight. Lustre-Creme leaves hair aglow with natural sheen and shimmer. With no special rinse needed!

3 LEAVES HAIR FRAGRANTLY CLEAN, FREE OF LOOSE DANDRUFF. Famous hairdressers insist on Lustre-Creme, world's leading cream shampoo for "down-to-the-roots" cleansing action. Yes, tonight, show that man in your life how much lovelier your hair can look after a Lustre-Creme shampoo!

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

BABY, IT'S COLD OUTSIDE . . . but I managed to find myself a cozy corner by the radio last Friday night and cuddle up to what I think is a pretty terrific, warm-hearted family . . . OZZIE, HARRIET, DAVID and RICKY NELSON. Along about 9 o'clock (Eastern Time) the nifty NELSONS gladden your local ABC station's airwaves with their happy-go-lucky humor and spontaneous good cheer. The wonderful wizard of OZZIE, his cute double-check-mate HARRIET, their bumptious boys DAVID and RICKY . . . all add up to a grand way to spend a Friday evening . . . joining in the entertaining "ADVENTURES OF OZZIE AND HARRIET." (And if you're still cold, you might try one of the H. J. Heinz Company's hot-delight soups. To quote a note from OZZIE: "At noon, at night, at other times . . . warm up with soups by H. J. Heinz!")

SOUP-TO-NUTS DEPT. . . . dished out along with more glamorous gimmicks such as minks, diamonds and trips-around-the-world . . . await winners on the fabulous "CHANCE OF A LIFETIME" program. What a purseful of prizes they've given away! M.C. JOHN REED KING (he's one King I'd like to be ruled by) put's plenty of zing into proceedings every Sunday night at 9:30 (Eastern Time) when "CHANCE OF A LIFETIME" comes your way on your local ABC station. I've already sent in my phone number to be eligible for some of that heavenly haul . . . why don't you? It's a real "CHANCE OF A LIFETIME" . . . sponsored by the nice Bretton Watch Band people.

ON THE HOLLYWOOD GRIDDLE . . . who? . . . why? . . . what? . . . when? . . . how? . . . where? . . . get all the gossip straight from Hollywood's first lady of the luminary set . . . LOUELLA PARSONS on her Woodbury soap-box Sunday nights at 9:15 (Eastern Time) on your local ABC station. Lolly, by golly, knows the ins-and-outs of the movie industry and its starry inhabitants . . . and does a colorful, juicy job of reporting the latest about the greatest!

I'M "DATED" FOR A GREAT TIME FRIDAY NIGHTS . . . starting with THE LONE RANGER and ending with the FIGHTS:

The Lone Ranger	7:30 P.M. et
The Fat Man	8:00 P.M. et
This Is Your F.B.I.	8:30 P.M. et
Ozzie and Harriet	9:00 P.M. et
The Sheriff	9:30 P.M. et
Harry Wismer	9:55 P.M. et
Cavalcade of Sports	10:00 P.M. et

Joan Lansing

an idle compliment to please her. Perhaps, you say, it's because Judy Garland grew up. But you are wrong. That's what's the matter with Judy Garland. She never grew up. She never had a chance to grow up. She never had time.

All past experience has proven to the movie producers that a dim light, called talent, must shine somewhere below all the obvious characteristics in an embryo star. For that reason the screening for future stars is more severe. And when the light is spotted, at the age of five or fifty, the studios hold on to the actor as tightly as possible.

The first man to realize that Judy was to rise to great things was George Jessel. (At the time, Judy's name was Frances Gumm.) Jessel was master of ceremonies at a benefit when Judy and her sisters played. In introducing Frances Gumm, Jessel stopped for a moment in his talk and tried to picture that name in lights. It didn't look so good, so George changed his pitch.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I want to introduce next a little lady who is destined for great things. A kid with a voice that is going to start America singing her songs. A child with a name I want you all to remember. Miss Judy Garland."

a star is born . . .

Movies were no hop, skip and jump from there. An agent became interested in her and took her out to MGM. The executives looked her over, heard her sing, and made their decisions. Sure the doll could sing, sing fine. but she was short, plump, apple-cheeked, not too pretty and her eyes were too big for her head. But the agent was important enough to be able to get Judy an audition with L. B. Mayer. Mayer heard her through and sent downstairs for a contract.

There was plenty of opposition to that contract. All of the other executives objected and wanted to go on record as being opposed to the deal. Mayer listened to them, let them all go on record, then handed Judy's agent a pen. She was in.

Just a polite little drama of minor conflict, eh? No. It was more than that. Put yourself in the place of a girl of twelve who wants a job and has ninety percent of the brass in command against her. In her adolescent mind two camps were set up, those who wanted her and those who didn't. The big brass became enemies, bosses, people to cope with warily. Mayer became her friend and mentor.

And Judy Garland became MGM's biggest money-maker. But she never forgot that first day when nobody wanted her—and a lot of other things.

Time breeds intolerance, as well as some of the good things. When Judy Garland was taken out of Annie Get Your Gun almost a year ago she was practically friendless in Hollywood. The press spanked her soundly and at every opportunity. The studio issued formal statements explaining its stand, and it took no supreme court justice to see that it was quite justified.

Judy had been late for work time after time. The cast had been assembled ready to work on several occasions when she didn't even show up. MGM had given her every consideration but she just wouldn't cooperate. It was, therefore, the studio heads' duty to the stockholders to remove her from the picture before the added costs went beyond all hope of reclamation. It was a field day for the papers. A big studio publicly denouncing a big star!

But in all this racket there was one small voice that didn't quite get through. It was tiny and tear-choked. Judy Garland's voice. And it wasn't making excuses, or asking anyone to hear her side of the story. It just said, "They are right. What they say is true."

Let us assume for a moment, say, Greer Garson had fallen into a fit of temperament and decided to take things easy for awhile. Her home or her dressing room would have been instantly filled with executives, each with his own formula for squaring the beef—or Clark Gable, or Van Johnson, or any of the other MGM stars. When the big shots upstairs decided that Judy Garland was out of line, however, they did it another way. They sent a messenger down to the set to hand her a note which said, in effect, "You are hereby suspended from your contract until further notice."

After fifteen years, a note! Then, before you can catch your breath, a formal announcement of your sins to the newspapers.

Judy Garland went home and cried. If it hadn't been for a single friend who came to her side at that time, heaven knows what she might have done.

A careful investigation of the events taking place after that tells an interesting story. Carleton Alsop, Judy's manager and friend, went to see her at her home. He watched her cry and listened to her story. Then he drove out to MGM and asked for a conference with the studio heads.

They all sat there impassively, the top men of MGM, businessmen with obligations to the company. Louis B. Mayer sat at the head of the table. Alsop pointed out the value of Judy Garland as an MGM asset, her past earnings and her future potential. Then he turned to the white-haired head of the studio.

"Mr. Mayer," he said, "you have earned a reputation as the most brilliant executive in Hollywood. You know Judy Garland is an asset of this corporation. She is ill, she needs help, medical attention. Let her go away, invest some of your money in her, make her well and you'll be doing your duties to your company."

There was a murmur of approval around the table. Alsop, known as one of Hollywood's most lucid talkers, then told them the story of Judy Garland and MGM—and when he was through, there wasn't a misunderstanding heart in the room.

studio childhood . . .

The tale of Judy and MGM is the story of almost any family association. She came to the lot when she was twelve years old. MGM was her life. She didn't go to school down the block like other kids; she got all the education she ever had in the studio school house. When other kids were playing games, Judy Garland was working. When she was naughty, no stern parent took her into the woodshed for a serious talk or a workout with a hickory switch. She was called up on the carpet and lectured by an executive.

Sure, she was wrong a lot of the time. No kid with such talent could be without temperament. She was an artist, a kid bringing millions of dollars into the bank account.

The effect of the first meeting with the people who were to dominate her life was still upon her. They were bosses, and she was an employee. Like any other kid in the same position she had developed a fear of the ogres upstairs, and found understanding in the other lesser lights on the lot. Then, as she grew older, she developed a neurotic resentment, without meaning to, against the people who had stolen her childhood. That was when Judy Garland began to give trouble. Without any malice, actually, but it was the only way that Judy could protest her robbed youth.

Now, at twenty-seven, she had really kicked over the traces and time for strong action against her had come. But destroying her was not justice.

With MGM money, and her friend, Carleton Alsop, at her side, Judy slipped out of Hollywood one night on a train bound for Boston and a good hospital. Six months later, she returned to Hollywood, sound in health and soul. Those who saw her at private parties or laughing gaily in the front row of a night-club audience, said she never looked better. Her marriage, which had gone on the rocks, seemed all right again. She devoted a lot of time to her daughter, and she yearned to go back to work.

Then a few weeks ago, the trouble started again. Judy hadn't shown up for a recording date. The dance director and his chorus people had waited all day for her and she hadn't turned up at all. The papers got hold of the story, and it was said she was due for another suspension.

But L. B. Mayer remembered the spanking he and the other executives had taken the last time it had happened, and he sent for Judy.

the way of a friend . . .

The day she went to the studio to listen to the score of her next picture, she slipped into a side door and went directly to the stage. Her manager was there, and he told her that Mr. Mayer wanted to see her. Judy trembled in fright.

"I can't." she said. "I just can't go to see him."

The manager got on the phone and tried a desperate measure. He informed Mayer's office that Judy was on the recording stage if the boss wanted to talk to her.

The composers were sitting at the pianos, the director was checking the score, the technicians were taking a last level on the mikes and Judy was sitting alone in the front row of seats. The door opened and L. B. Mayer came in. The air was tense for a moment, as everyone waited for the fireworks.

Mayer smiled and walked over to Judy. He sat down beside her and told the people to go ahead—he wanted to listen. For an hour, the busiest man in Hollywood sat there and heard the score. Once he reached out and patted Judy's hand. Then it was over.

Mayer turned to Judy and looked at her with a lot of affection in his eyes. And then he did something that probably no other executive has ever done in Hollywood. Like a father he began to talk to Judy, a father trying to cheer up a sad child. He talked about a humorous incident that had taken place that morning. He got to his feet and told a long story that required a lot of very funny acting, and he played all the characters to the hilt. The workmen were goggle-eyed—but Judy was laughing. She laughed until she cried.

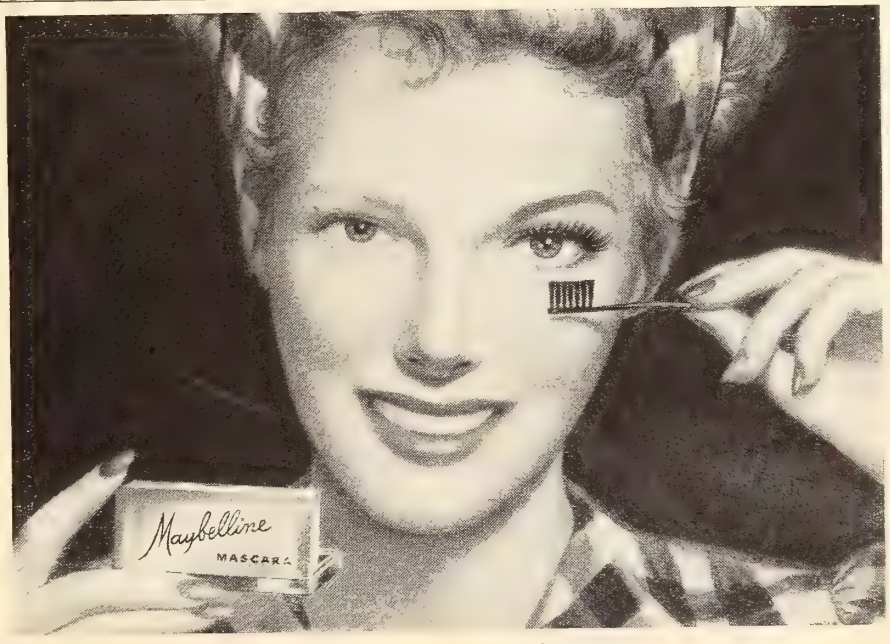
Then Mayer put his hand on her shoulder. He told her that there had been a lot of opposition to her when she first came to the studio, fifteen years before, but that he had fought against it and won. He told her that there was a lot of opposition to her now, but that he would stick by her and they'd win together again. He said that the weight she had put on was becoming, and that a rose in her cheeks was more important to him than how she looked to a camera. He said that she must keep her health above all—and that they'd stick together with that uppermost in mind.

When Mayer left the stage, Judy got to her feet and wanted to go to work. She's been different ever since. She may kick over the traces again, because she is an artist, but she knows that she has a friend, and that a star making $6,000 a week need never tremble before the mighty.

And all Hollywood is behind her. When she appears in public now, she waves at people instead of trying to slip by un-

Veto — Colgate's Deodorant — Gives You

DOUBLE PROTECTION!



1. CHECKS PERSPIRATION...
Quickly, effectively! Veto safeguards your loveliness night and day. Rubs in easily and checks perspiration at once. Yet Veto is mild, gentle for normal skin . . . safe for clothes.

2. STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY!
Veto's scientific formula was perfected by the famous Colgate laboratories. Veto works like a charm, is always delightfully smooth and creamy. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto Lasts and Lasts From Bath to Bath

Something beautiful happens

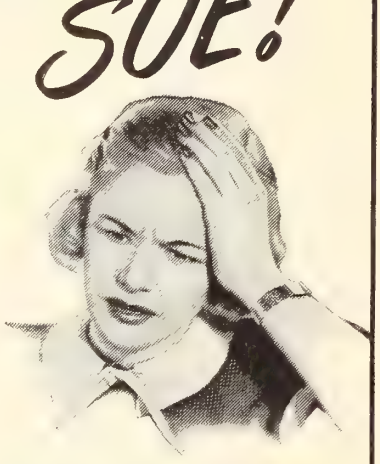
...AND IT CAN HAPPEN TO YOU



...IN THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

JUST TRY Maybelline

WORLD'S FAVORITE MASCARA AND EYEBROW PENCIL

SAD SUE!

PERIODIC PAIN

Midol brings faster relief from menstrual suffering—because it acts three ways. It relieves cramps, eases headache and chases "blues". Sue now takes Midol at the first twinge of menstrual pain or distress.

FREE 24-page book, "What Women Want to Know", explains menstruation. (Plain wrapper). Write Dep't. C-20. Box 280, New York 18, N. Y.

GLAD SUE

FOUND OUT ABOUT

MIDOL

All Drugstores have Midol

seen. She is happy for the first time in the only home she has ever known—the Culver City studio.

But there is one thing that MGM must never forget. Whatever Judy Garland is today, MGM made her. They took her childhood—and they owe it to her. If she becomes ill again, there is only one thing MGM can do. Forget that Judy is a married woman and a mother. Forget she is a star. Remember the chubby kid who parked her youth in the front office, and that someday she may have to come and pick it up—and go away for a while and live it. You see, she has never had the time before.

There is one thing that can always overcome despair, and that is friendship. This story is illustrative, for it shows that friendship and kindness can work wonders. It is what brought Judy back to Hollywood the last time.

Judy and her friend, Carleton Alsop, were alone in Boston when she was living at the hospital. She was restless, but much better. However, the thought of having to go back to entertain again was frightening. A note came from an old pal, song writer Hugh Martin. He was in Falmouth, Mass., not too far away, with a summer theater group. Would she like to come down and see the show?

Judy wasn't sure, but decided it would be rude not to. She sat in the audience when suddenly she realized that she had been spotted. She crouched low in her seat, just waiting until the performance was over—then she ducked out.

A messenger from Martin was waiting for her. Hugh had asked if she would come back into the theater and say hello. It was impossible to avoid, so Judy went back inside.

The house was empty of the last of the audience. A huge, bare work light stood on one corner of the stage, supplying the only illumination. Judy walked down the aisle alone and she saw the entire cast of the show gathered behind the footlights. Martin went to her side and told her they had asked if they could put on an extra performance for her alone. Judy dropped into a seat.

She sat in the semi-darkness while those summer troupers sang and danced for her. All for Judy Garland. Show people paying tribute to an all-time great. When they finished Martin came with another request. The cast wanted to know if Judy would sing for them.

Judy walked down to the piano while Hugh took his place on the bench. The players crowded the footlights again and Judy started to sing. She sang for two solid hours—every song she could remember, and those who heard her in that small Cape Cod playhouse said no one ever sang better. It was the greatest performance they had ever witnessed. Finally there was only one song left.

"Somewhere over the rainbow, skies are blue. . . . And the dreams that you dare to dream really do come true. . . ."

The throb in Judy's voice rose with hope. Almost fifteen years had passed, but the silence was there again. Only the buzzing of the night's insects against the work light broke the spell.

"Someday I'll wish upon a star, and wake up where the clouds are far behind me. . . . Where troubles melt like lemon drops, away above the chimney tops—that's where you'll find me."

The voice was rich and mellow—and the singer believed the words. When she was finished, there was silence again for a long moment, then prolonged applause—and Judy turned and walked out of the theater with it ringing in her ears.

Her manager was waiting outside near the car. Judy walked to his side and took his arm.

"Let's go," she said. "I'm well again. Now I want to go back. I want to go back to Hollywood. I want to go home. . . ."

THE END

(The song lyrics quoted in the above story are from "Over the Rainbow," lyrics by E. Y. Harburg, music by Harold Arlen, copyright 1939 by Leo Feist, Inc., and are used by special permission of the copyright proprietor.)

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

(Continued from page 37)

I wouldn't live. In that case, well, there was nothing more to worry about. A feeling of peace and relaxation stole over me. And with it came an impulse to pray. Prayer has been defined as "a devout petition to, or any form of spiritual communion with God." Close to death, I felt I was in communion with God and I felt His presence closer than ever before. I didn't pray for my life to be spared. I just repeated the most beautiful prayer in the world—the Lord's Prayer. Then I fell asleep.

When I awoke, my head was swathed in bandages. I could see very little, but I overheard a voice in the hospital corridor. "Too bad," it was saying, "about Van Johnson's accident. That's the end of his career. He's lucky if he pulls through, but he'll never make another picture."

You can stand pain. You can stand the thought of death. But when you face the prospect of living without being able to do the thing to which your life has been dedicated, you know real despair.

Then I thought, "If this means the end of me as an actor, perhaps with God's help I can become a technician or an assistant director."

I have always believed that religion is a universal thing. When I go to church, I find peace. But I believe that God is everywhere—in the schools, in the hospitals, in our homes. We have only to reach out with our thoughts, and He will hear us.

So now I prayed, "If I can never act again, please God, let me be a part of movie-making, somewhere, somehow."

Maybe it seems strange that I should have prayed like this about my life when no one really thought I'd pull through. But, as I've said, it wasn't the fear of death that stirred me. Being cut off from the work I loved would be like a living death.

My prayer was answered. For while I lay there in the hospital, Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne went to Director Victor Fleming and to Everett Riskin, producer of the picture, and asked them to hold up production. Although MGM could easily have hired someone to replace me, the executives decided to wait for me.

There is a point during convalescence from a serious accident when you can go either forwards or backwards. I had just reached that point when Irene and Spencer came to my bedside with their wonderful news. Afterwards other members of the cast and crew visited me. Their kindness made me feel I had to get well—and fast.

It was four months before I was able to step in front of the cameras again. When I resumed work, I knew I was with friends who had all helped me and given me my chance. Those friends were the instrument through which my prayer was answered. I am convinced now that men's prayers are answered by means of human beings through whom God's love flows.

Shakespeare wrote, "How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The good deeds of men and women are like candles shining in the darkness. Through those good deeds, men's prayers are answered, but the goodness is inspired by God—which is another word for Love, human and divine. THE END time, Bill, when you were giving out that really earnest interview, sitting there on the sofa, and you stuck your hand down in the cushions and came up with an old apple core?"

THE HOUSE THEY LOVE IN

(Continued from page 36)

Bill smiled. "Oh, yes indeed! And then there was the time when we were ushering some new friends through the living room and out to the patio. They were really startled when all of a sudden eight little girls' heads popped over the top of the sofa and popped down again! I know I did a double-take."

This is a house that has been invaded, like many others through the nation that include television sets, by the Wild West. Boots, jeans, cowboy hats and shirts, to say nothing of attempts at rope-twirling, are part of practically every hour of the day. If West—the six-year-old son named West, that is—enters the room when visitors are present, precariously twirling a circle of rope, Bill will say sternly, "Stop that, West!" But it isn't until he adds, "Hopalong wouldn't waste his strength indoors that way!", that the point really goes over, and relieved visitors can sit back, unlassoed.

When Brenda made her film return after four-and-a-half years away from the screen, she was featured in a television trailer for Whispering Smith, her comeback movie. Bill rounded up the youngsters and sat down eagerly to watch.

Came the trailer, and the luminous features of the lovely-to-look-at Brenda. Bill gazed in delight, a proud smile on his face. West gave one look and turned away.

"Aw, I don't want to see Mama, I want to see Hopalong!"

One of the cherished things the Holdens have acquired is their beautifully-toned Meissner record-playing system. Sharing a similar musical taste for both popular and classical, and with an excellent collection of long-playing records, they can have a house full of music whenever they want it—which is most of the time.

The Holdens' dining room is French Provincial, in dubonnet tones. "But we want to do it over," Brenda says, "in Early American . . . deep reds and blues . . . with a Revolutionary War scene on one wall . . ." Her gaze is faraway.

"We give small, informal dinner parties in the dining room once in a while," she says, returning to the present and leading the way into the cheerfully bright breakfast room. "But actually, we eat in here much of the time, with the children. They have a way of upsetting things, and this room is more used to it!"

Salon Luxury in a Home Shampoo

It's the real egg* that makes the magic in this luxury shampoo . . . the very same smooth liquid creme used in the famous Richard Hudnut Fifth Avenue Salon to make hair more manageable, tangle-free, easier to do, and permanents "take" better. Whisks in and out like a dream, removes loose dandruff, leaves hair extra lustrous because it's clean, clean, clean! Try this gentler, kinder, luxury shampoo today. Wonderfully good for children's hair, too! $1.00

*From the famous Richard Hudnut Fifth Avenue Salon

Richard Hudnut

ENRICHED CREME

Shampoo

with egg

It's the real egg in Hudnut Shampoo that makes hair more manageable. Home permanents "take" better

*powdered, 1%

Listen to Walter Winchell, ABC Network Sunday Nights.

as you guard your complexion

"I keep my hair lovely looking and healthy with Glover's," says Georgena Brannon, attractive PAN-AMERICAN WORLD AIRWAYS stewardess.

(Note how the soft lustrous beauty of her hair matches her flawless complexion.)

You do something instantly if blemishes, clogged pores, flaky crusts appear on your face—ruining your complexion. You want your skin to glow with healthy, radiant vigor. YOUR SCALP IS SKIN, too! Dandruff, dry flaky crusts can be your warning that you are not giving it the same careful attention you give your complexion. All too often, neglected scalp invites skin trouble and loss of hair. Yet neglect is unnecessary! Use a time-tested MEDICINAL SCALP TREATMENT . . . leaves hair gleaming, lovelier, healthier—in only 36 minutes. Ask today for Glover's Mange Medicine, Glo-Ver Beauty Soap Shampoo, Glover's Imperial Hair Dress—all used in GLOVER'S 3-WAY MEDICINAL TREATMENT—at Drug Stores and Drug Counters everywhere!

FREE PERSONAL TRIAL OF GLOVER'S 3-WAY MEDICINAL TREATMENT

Your Free sampler kit contains:

Glover's Mange Medicine—the MEDICINAL compound for flaky, scaly scalp and excessive falling hair. With colloidal sulphur and oil of pine tar—the same ingredients prescribed by many dermatologists for aid in treating psoriasis and similar chronic scaling scalp conditions.

Glo-Ver Beauty Soap Shampoo contains no hair-drying detergents—no free alkali—no alcohol. Gives a penetrating, creamy foam of quick cleansing—quick rinsing—shampoo suds. Removes loose dandruff. Imparts natural life-like softness and highlights.

Glover's Imperial Hair Dress conditions both hair and scalp for day-long, dandruff-free, good grooming. Non-Alcoholic and ANTISEPTIC. Kills Dandruff Germs* on contact.

Free Booklet by eminent research authority on hair beauty and scalp health. All sent to you by return mail in plain wrapper. Mail coupon NOW!

(*Pityrosporum ovale—is recognized by many scientists as a cause of infectious dandruff.)

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Glover's FAMOUS 3-WAY
Medicinal Treatment

FREE TRIAL APPLICATION

H. CLAY GLOVER CO., INC., Dept. 852
101 W. 31 St., New York 1, N. Y.

Send FREE Sampler Package in plain wrapper by return mail—Glover's Mange Medicine, Glo-Ver Beauty Soap Shampoo, Glover's Imperial Hair Dress—in 3 hermetically-sealed bottles, with free booklet. I enclose 10¢ to cover cost of packaging and postage.

Name.....
(Please Print Name)

Address.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

COPYRIGHT 1949 H. CLAY GLOVER CO., INC.

Close friends of the Holdens include the John Lunds, the Richard Carlsons, Helen Conway, the decorator, and Paul Clemmens, the artist. Since all are Canasta lovers, that game is played a good deal at the Holdens'—usually in the den, with a fire blazing in the fireplace.

This part of the house is where most of the lounging and living is done. The walls, panelled in light wood, hold bookcases and cupboards. There are many lamps and inviting furniture—including a brightly-patterned couch that follows the wall around—and a vastly interesting collection of photographs on the walls.

The walled garden, with thick English ivy and just the right number of trees, invites Bill out to do a spell of gardening every now and then. He likes to rake up leaves and burn them, or point a hose at the lantana bushes. Or just relax, in a long, low chair. Relaxing has lots of charm after you've done 43 straight weeks of picture-making. Bill has been one of the most-in-demand actors in town. His last two films have been Sunset Boulevard for Paramount and Father Is a Bachelor for his home lot, Columbia.

"Not that I mind being so busy," he says, "considering the months I didn't work after I got out of the Army. But it sure is a wonderful feeling now to sit back and realize I won't have to work again until the first of the year!"

Brenda waited two years after Whispering Smith to do another picture. She has just finished Iroquois Trail, and admits she has the acting bug—but loves home life just as much, or more. Her decision, and Bill's, is that she ought to do a picture once in a while, but firmly refuses to sign any contracts.

"We have an extra piece of ground we hope to build a swimming pool on for the children—maybe I'll do a picture to pay for that," says Brenda. "Then we're doing Vinny's room over for her this year. She's always wanted a dressing table since she was a little girl. I told her that her dingy old shell collection would have to go—it was that or the table. So the shells go out to the garage, and she'll have her room re-done—in the way she thinks a young lady's ought to be!"

As in any household with children, there are sudden, unexpected crises. When six-year-old West was a year or so younger, he was scolded for playing with some older boys around a bonfire in a nearby lot. Pouting, West came home, sat in the den awhile, and then scuffed his way out to the yard. Moments later, Brenda and the cook came through the living room and

HOW TIME FLIES

In spite of her success in Intermezzo, her first American picture, Ingrid Bergman is in no hurry to return to Hollywood. When she came here, the Swedish star left her two-month-old daughter, Pia, at home with her husband. "At that age, babies don't miss their mothers so much," she said, "but I shall never again spend more than a few days away from her. So if I come back, it will have to be when Pia's old enough to come along."—Modern Screen, January, 1940.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED
and
COLORED IN OILS
to size 8 x 10 on double weight paper
89¢
3 for $2.50

Same price for full length pictures, busts and groups. Your original photo returned with enlargement. Give color of eyes, hair and clothes. Just mail photo, negative or snapshot, regardless of size, and on those 89¢ per picture. Pictures mailed postpaid within 7 days. Satisfaction guaranteed. Payment must accompany order.

Send your photo NOW.
LEIGH'S Art Studio, Dept. 2
130 West 42nd St. New York 18, N. Y.

YOU ARE IN DEMAND IF YOU CAN Draw!

If you like to sketch, write for FREE TALENT TEST. Splendid opportunities for trained artists. Find out if you have talent worth developing.

Free

ART INSTRUCTION, INC.
Dept. 1690, Minneapolis 15, Minnesota

Send me your FREE Talent Test.

Name_____ Age_____
Address_____
City_____ Zone_____
County_____ State_____ Occupation_____ Phone_____

were horrified to see flames shooting up from the chair in the den. Bill's favorite chair!

"We dragged the chair outside—it was ruined—but we were so thankful to have caught it! We never knew whether West carried a hot coal home in his pocket, or what. Besides the ruined chair, there was a big hole in the rug!" Brenda sighed. "But the biggest hole was in our budget."

These are the days when, with the two older children at school, Brenda worries just a little about Scott, her youngest, loafing resignedly about in his mite-sized blue jeans, kicking at gravel and leaning against posts—bored as only a young fellow can be with everybody else at school.

"Sometimes I watch him," says Brenda, "and you can almost tell he's counting minutes until he's old enough to go, too!"

Virginia studies ballet, and loves it. Recently her father made some slow motion home-movies of her dancing. This film is her treasure.

still another antique . . .

One of Brenda's favorite parts of the house is the little powder room and half-bath which opens off the den. Here the carpeting is deep green and shaggy; the flower-patterned walls are done in tiny red and green figures on oilcloth; there are frilly curtains and a dream of a dressing table, long and luxurious; and the plumbing fixtures are pink. Even here there's an antique—a man's brass shaving stand, unique and handsome.

Upstairs, the landing with its large Audubon print and two striped window-seats leads on to three separate, colorfully-furnished suites. Brenda and Bill have one, the boys another, and Virginia the third—with a sun porch for everybody.

All over the house are the bright little faces of the Toby mugs Brenda used to collect. Bill's former hobby was collecting guns. According to Brenda, they're both between hobbies right now, until new fancies strike.

Though practically everything in the house is something they have bought together, Brenda and Bill each have something they especially prize, the selection of which was entirely the choice of the other. Brenda's is an ancient silver-fox jacket—one of Bill's first presents to her.

"I took it down to a tailor the other day." Brenda related ruefully, "with the idea of giving the old jacket a new look, and surprising Bill. The tailor handed it right back to me. 'You couldn't pay me enough to work on that, Mrs. Holden—it's falling apart!' he said. It was, too, so I just put it away again, with the same old look."

Bill's special prize is worn on the third finger of his left hand. It's a wide wedding band which he has had inscribed with Roman numerals for each year of their marriage. He never wore any rings at all until one day during the war, when a lonesome and tearful Brenda travelled East to see him, and half-fearfully gave him the ring. It's never been off his finger since.

"When the Roman numerals go all the way around," says Bill with a loving light in his eye, "I want a little diamond for a period. By that time we ought to have everything we want for the house—and we'll be able to afford it!" THE END

If you like to laugh, you'll want to read the hilarious screen story of William Holden's newest movie, Dear Wife—which you'll find in the entertainment-filled February issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES magazine.

How a wife's false modesty can "freeze" her husband's affection

If Only You'd Read Here Scientific Truths You Can Trust About These INTIMATE PHYSICAL FACTS!

A wife's ignorance or false modesty about these intimate facts of life often leads to an increasing coolness on her husband's part.

If only every young woman could realize from the beginning of her marriage how important vaginal douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, health, charm and happiness—how necessary it is to combat one of woman's most offensive deodorant problems. And what's EVEN MORE IMPORTANT—why she should always use ZONITE in her douche. Here's why:

NO OTHER TYPE LIQUID ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE OF ALL THOSE TESTED FOR THE DOUCHE IS SO POWERFUL YET SO SAFE TO TISSUES AS ZONITE!

Developed by World-Famous Surgeon and Scientist

A famous surgeon and skilled scientist developed the ZONITE principle. What better assurance could you want! ZONITE's scientists have tested every known germicide they could find on sale for the douche. And NO OTHER type proved SO POWERFUL yet SO SAFE to tissues as ZONITE. So why be old-fashioned and continue to use weak or dangerous products? ZONITE is positively non-poisonous, non-irritating. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as you wish without the slightest risk of injury.

ZONITE's Miracle-Action

ZONITE eliminates odor, removes waste substances and discharge. You feel so dainty and refreshed after your ZONITE douche. Helps guard against infection. And ZONITE is so effective—it kills every germ it touches. It's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, but you CAN BE SURE ZONITE DOES IMMEDIATELY KILL every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying. Buy at any drugstore.

Zonite FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products, Dept. MR-20, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____ STATE_____

CITY_____

*Offer good only in the U. S.

Pleasant
TO TAKE

Pleasant
IN ACTION

Pleasant
FOR CHILDREN & GROWN-UPS

When Nature 'forgets' remember
EX-LAX
THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE
10¢

Amazing Offer—$40 Is Yours FOR SELLING ONLY 50 BOXES
Also entirely different, new Deluxe All-Occasion assortment with feature television card. Floral scented stationery, Little Pearls, Hankie Gift Greetings, other surprise items. Samples on approval. Write today. It costs nothing to try.
CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-26, White Plains, N. Y.
Free Samples Imprinted Stationery

THE NEW SITROUX
...say SIT-TRUE
TISSUES
SOFTEST, FINEST, STRONGEST YET!

THIS LOVE OF OURS

(Continued from page 41)

dress of twinkling lights. Perhaps I should have led up to my proposal gradually . . . talked shop . . . discussed her career or mine . . . chattered adroitly of life and love and the best methods of pursuing happiness. But I by-passed all that, and said, as nearly as I can remember, "Look . . . there's something I think you should be the first to know. You and I are going to get married."

We had had a fine time at the party. There had been lots of laughs, some horse play and crazy gags. Betty evidently thought this was just another gag, so she laughed.

Not so many months later, I could have uttered a smug, "I told you so!" We stood in the quiet sanctuary of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church in Hollywood and Betty said, "I do." To this day, I don't know what kind of a dress she wore, because I never took my eyes from hers.

brideless bridegroom . . .

Being highly impractical, both of us, we started our married life on an appropriately unorthodox basis. To assure a successful marriage, the two persons involved are supposed to be within shouting distance of each other. It is true for about a week we honeymooned during the days, but nights I had to go to the studio for some after-dark shots in Counter-Attack. Two weeks later, Betty was called East to start rehearsal for Laughing Room Only, leaving me with the melancholy distinction of being Hollywood's only brideless bridegroom.

Even now, it seems like a bad dream to recall those months when we wanted to be together but could snatch only an occasional brief rendezvous in New York whenever I could get away from the studio. Once, literally flying into each other's arms, we almost staged our own private comedy of errors. With a few days' rest before starting rehearsal for the musical, Call Me Mister, Betty decided on a spur-of-the-moment visit to Hollywood. Shooting on The Renegade was completed about the same time, and I had just bought a plane ticket for New York and a similar surprise for Betty. Luckily, just before taking off, she phoned me long distance from LaGuardia Field. And we didn't need to toss a coin to see who'd make the trip. Betty's plane took off two hours before mine, so that solved that. We still laugh, picturing how that double-barrelled surprise almost boomeranged.

Separations those two years before Betty signed her first movie contract with MGM, brought us even closer together in spirit. Every reunion was another honeymoon—short, cherished holidays in New York, which we both love, or in the small Hollywood apartment where the Parks' started their sketchy housekeeping. We never neared its cheery white door without reviewing our wedding day and the sad plight of the happy bridegroom who had planned to carry his bride over the threshold in the best romantic tradition. The project bogged down when I discovered that, in my eagerness to reach the church, I had forgotten the door-key. I had to climb in the window and open the door from the inside, dishevelled and smudged on the chin where I bumped into a flower pot. Betty enjoyed this immensely and still cites it as one of the most striking entrances in my career as an actor.

Maybe because our time together was

NEW! Creamy Home Shampoo!
Contains ANDIUM—Makes Hair Lighter—Gives It Lustrous Shine
Make it yourself—FRESH—as you need it
If your blonde hair is darkening, use this sensational new creamy shampoo (containing Andium) that you make at home—FRESH, each time you use it. Called BLONDEX, it is a fragrant powder that needs only water added to make a rich, cleansing shampoo. BLONDEX washes hair shades lighter. Its Andium brings flattering lightness, gives hair wonderful extra luster and SHINE. Safe for children. Get BLONDEX at 10c, drug or toilet goods counters.

Learn here the TRUTH about
PSORIASIS
IS IT A SKIN DISEASE OR INTERNAL?

For the past several years a number of Physicians have reported amazing success in treating Psoriasis with LIPAN—a new medical wonder taken internally. LIPAN (registered U.S. Patent Office) is a combination of glandular substances that treat certain internal disorders which many medical men now agree to be the cause of Psoriasis. Clinical results show LIPAN successful in over 90% of the cases treated. Even stubborn lesions are alleviated to a degree almost beyond belief. Absolutely harmless! Ask your druggist for LIPAN, or write direct for free booklet. Or send for month's supply (180 tablets), enclosing check or money order for $8.50.
SPIRT & COMPANY, DM-20, Waterbury, Conn.

Take This Easy Step To BIG MONEY!
Sell EVERYDAY CARDS
Earn extra cash this easy, proven way. Take orders from folks you know for exquisite new Southern Greeting Cards for all occasions. Just show samples we furnish. Fast $1 sales pay you up to 50c cash profit! Also show PLASTIC and Foil Cards, Gift Wraps, Stationery, others at 60c to $1.25. Easy plan for organizations too. Write now for Samples on approval. SOUTHERN GREETING CARD CO., 216 S. Pauline Street, Dept. D-8 Memphis 4, Tenn.

FREE PHOTO
LARGE SIZE of your favorite
MOVIE STAR
Direct from Hollywood
INTRODUCTORY OFFER
Also FREE list decorated with all the latest stars and poses. Send name of YOUR FAVORITE and enclose 10c to cover handling and mailing.
Hollywood Screen Exchange
BOX 1150—DEPT. D-2
HOLLYWOOD 28, CALIF., U. S. A.
Roy Rogers

BE A Nurse
MAKE $35-$45 A WEEK
You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. 51st yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men, women 18 to 60. High school not required. Easy tuition payments. Trial plan. Write today.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 232, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name _____
City _____ State _____ Age _____

so frugally rationed in those first years, we could spare none of it for petty bickering or the frequent inconsequential differences that arise in what marital soothsayers call the "adjustment" period. Another overworked theory is that no marriage is big enough for two careers. Not as experts, but just as a happily married couple, Betty and I would like to debunk that one.

We believe our work is the fundamental basis of our ever-growing understanding and pleasure in each other. And our careers themselves are looking healthier. Contrary to popular belief, I did not descend from a pink cloud just in time to get in on The Jolson Story. I had slashed through a solid wall of 30 "B" ("B" as in "bad") pictures, before getting a chance at my first "A" production, Counter Attack, just about the time Betty and I married. And while Betty had made a start on Broadway in Cole Porter's Something For The Boys, her first starring role in Call Me Mister came shortly after the wedding and just about the time The Jolson Story began rolling.

As a bachelor, I couldn't have explained why I always wanted to marry an actress, but I did. There was one other requisite . . . she had to be a good actress. I would hate to go through life married to a bad actress. As a happily married guy with his dream a reality, I think I know why my heart was set on an actress-wife. When I come home from the studio with my day's problems, Betty is not only sympathetic, but she understands from her own experience exactly what I'm talking about.

I never could have weathered the gruelling, endless months of production on both The Jolson Story and its sequel, Jolson Sings Again, without Betty to come home to. One night just about the time Jolson Sings Again was finished (or so we thought) the studio brain-trusters added three more songs. Along with the news of weeks more of rehearsing, recording, rehearsing again, everything on the set went wrong that day. Betty listened to my fuming and growling while she fixed hot soup and cold chicken sandwiches that evening for dinner. As usual, she said all the right things to soothe my ruffled spirit. Sitting there on a high kitchen stool, almost drowned in a voluminous blue apron and with a stray blonde curl bobbing just above her nose, she looked like a tired little kid as she buttered slices of my favorite crusty bread.

"How'd you do today, honey?" I asked her, sorry I'd been so grumpy. "Did they shoot your dance number?" That particular dance number was her current pride and joy.

"Not so good," she said, wrinkling her nose ruefully. "They cut it out. Too many dance numbers."

Here I was, complaining about a couple of extra weeks' shooting (but also an added chance to build up the picture) and Betty had been working just as hard, only to see her best spot cut out.

Then in my comprehensive denunciation of everyone even remotely connected with Betty's disappointment, I completely forgot about my own peeve. After I had consigned all of MGM's executives, directors, producers, and cameramen to permanent box office oblivion and Betty had fashioned countless scathing appraisals of Columbia's unreasonable campaign to overwork her husband, we both felt much better. All the pent-up tension was gone. Betty soaked her poor dance-weary feet and I gargled my blistered tonsils which had emitted about 45 renditions of Sonny Boy that day. Then we both fell into bed for a sound ten hours of sleep. Waking in the morning, we weren't mad at anybody. Jolson Sings Again would be my best performance and Betty's remaining numbers would stand out even more brilliantly because there weren't too many! It was a new day—acting was our dish—and tonight, reunion!

opposite outlooks . . .

For a pair who see eye to eye on practically everything, Betty and I are poles apart in temperament. I am a worrier. I worry about leaking faucets, overacting, underplaying a scene, the state of the world, and the chances of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Betty is as carefree as a kitten, refuses to worry and keeps on hand an enormous supply of silver linings with which she outfits every cloud that appears on her daily horizon. I'm cautious and methodical about work when I'm rehearsing or learning a part. "Stuffy" is her specific adjective for this sterling trait.

Timetables, curtain-time and other institutions of immovable habit have never intimidated my wife. Once when I went back to New York for the opening of Call Me Mister, she had me in a cold bath of perspiration as curtain-time moved nearer and nearer, and we hadn't yet left the hotel. When we reached the theater at last, the curtain was going up and Betty had about eight minutes to change, make up, and be onstage. She made it, and as always was poised, calm and terrific.

Now take me. I would have been pacing the dressing room for hours, going over every word, every gesture. And would mine be a better performance? I should say not.

Some day Betty and I want to do a play on Broadway together. This will probably take ten years off my life. I will certainly work myself into a nightly lather, just wondering if we'll make the opening curtain. Betty insists the experience will be good for me, and guarantees that under her guidance, I will soon be shaving, dressing, racing to the theater, changing clothes and singing the second chorus of my opening number—in four minutes flat.

If in all this, I've conveyed the impression that I think my wife is the swellest girl in the world, then this is a true story. And when you hear people say that Larry Parks got his lucky break in The Jolson Story, will you tell them for me that he got his real lucky break the day he met Betty Garrett? THE END Larry Parks' current film is Jolson Sings Again; Betty Garrett's is On the Town.

that's hollywood!

Carl Schroeder tells it:

Those in Hollywood who know Father MacDonald of Notre Dame are exceedingly fond of him. "You know, Father," a Hollywood press agent said to him recently, "I am sick of the problems of those $3,000-a-week actors. I have ten of them under contract and every day they come into my office to tell me their troubles. I don't know how I stand it."

"Do you think that's tough?" the priest asked. "How'd you like to be one of God's press agents?"

Irving Hoffman in
The Hollywood Reporter

it takes a Woman to understand

Only a woman can appreciate what the invention of *Tampax means to her while passing through those "certain days" of the month. . . . This modern monthly sanitary protection is worn internally. . . and the user is not aware of its presence. This fact alone should give her poise and reduce her embarrassment and mental anxiety. . . .

A call to freedom!

The Tampax method has been called the freedom method because it gives a woman freedom from the pin-belt-pad harness as well as freedom from odor. Also, Tampax gives freedom from bulging or wrinkling beneath sheer dresses and freedom from trouble in changing or disposal.

A doctor thought it up

Tampax was perfected by a physician and is made of pure surgical cotton compressed in dainty applicators. You cannot even feel the Tampax when in place. Three absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Ask for Tampax at drug stores, notion counters. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

HELEN NEUSHAEFER SHOWS YOU how to win hand beauty

Helen Neushaefer's hands are the center of attention at a famous Hollywood night club. Do your hands look their loveliest when they're in the spotlight? If you're not completely sure, send for Helen Neushaefer's FREE booklet on hand care. You'll be delighted to see how much daintier hands can become, with just a little care at home.

NEU NAIL AND LIP Beauty

Helen Neushaefer lipstick in 6 glowing shades in the case with the color-teller-tip, 39c.

Helen Neushaefer Nail Polish with exclusive chip-proof Plasteen in 12 shades, 10c & 25c sizes.

At your favorite five-and-dime and drug store. Money back if you're not satisfied

Helen Neushaefer
College Point, N.Y.

CHINA LADY BLOUSE

High mandarin collar and cap sleeves smartly trimmed in non-tarnishing gold embroidery, studded with brilliant oriental gems. Rayon crepe romaine.
Dragon Red, Jade, Lotus White, Black.
Sizes 32 to 38.

$4.95

exclusively at SAXON'S
Broadway at 9th, Los Angeles 14, California
Dept. 202K

	Quan.	Size	Color	2nd Color
China Lady Blouse – 4.95

☐ C.O.D. ☐ Check or Money Order

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

Californians please add 3% state sales tax; 3½% in L.A.

ORDER BY MAIL FROM SUNNY CALIFORNIA

MY KIND OF MAN

(Continued from page 44)

merrily away to squander it until time to collect another one. When you're 17, you can have a high old time on $125 a week. And John had one. He'd report to the Selznick dramatic coach, all right, but he never felt compelled to listen to what she had to say. A growing boy needs sleep, so he slept—straight through classes.

I wouldn't have liked that John Derek. But when he went away to war, he began to listen and learn, and he grew up the hard way—under fire. Consequently, it was a very serious John Derek who walked into my class that day—determined to become a truly good actor.

I came to respect the man with the impressive eyelashes. We had the same ambitions, the same ideas about careers coming first. We often studied together and occasionally we'd do a love scene together. Love scenes are very difficult to do before the camera. Time and practice are required to perfect them and in doing them you can learn much about acting in general. So if our romantic scenes became more frequent, that seemed natural enough. John would earnestly come up to me with a script. "This love scene has real dramatic scope," he'd say. "Want to try it?"

torrid love . . .

It would turn out to be, say, a sequence from an old film in which Ty Power and Loretta Young had once set the celluloid to burning—with more action than talk.

Love scenes or no, a few months passed before we had our first date. I accidentally arranged for the invitation and I was sure I wouldn't live to regret it. Before class one morning, I happened to mention that there were two things I hadn't yet seen in Los Angeles—a circus and Ken Murray's Blackouts. The circus wasn't due in town for months, so John declared, "You shall see the Blackouts—tonight!"

"Not tonight," I wanted to cry. I had a cold that seemed on the verge of pneumonia. My nose was red, my eyes were bleary. But somehow I couldn't refuse. I just sneezed happily.

That evening, in the middle of the show, I began to cough. I tried to be considerate and cough softly. Then John tried to be considerate and started hitting me on the back. Tears streamed down my cheeks. I was choking. We crept out of the theater.

Once on the sidewalk and in the fresh air, I recovered and apologized. John was very sympathetic, but in my misery, I knew our date was doomed—and it was only 10 o'clock. "It doesn't matter," I consoled myself bravely. "I am a career girl. I belong at home with my cold capsules."

But actually it mattered a lot. I didn't want our first date to end on a note of agony.

On the way home we stopped at a place called Jerry's Joint. "Cheer up and have a hearty appetite," I told myself—and managed to order a rare steak.

John asked for the same. When the waitress left, he said, "You like rare meat, too?"

He said it as if we were the only two people in the world who liked our meat barely warm. It was a wonderful discovery. I nodded my head. Then I relaxed and had a good sneeze.

After that night, we found that we shared a thousand likes. Traveling was one. In the months that followed, we visited Arrowhead, Yosemite, Las Vegas, Laguna—dozens of places. If John weren't serious about acting, I think he would roam the world. However, our short excursions

NOW! make... Hollywood Beauty Cream (Formula 99) at home and save!

Used and recommended by
NONA CROFT
Nationally-syndicated fashion editor, whose column is endorsed by every major Hollywood movie studio.

Nona Croft writes: "I've used Formula 99 Beauty Cream ever since I was 23—and I love it! It's thrifty, making my own Beauty Cream—and my friends say my complexion is just like a young girl's. I recommend Formula 99 without reservation."

Now you, too, can make Formula 99 Beauty Cream at home, using simple ingredients. Use it lavishly on face, neck, hands, arms—even on your feet! —to cleanse, condition, and stimulate—you'll be beautiful! with clear, healthy, glowing complexion!

Order your "Formula 99" today—includes Beauty Cream Formula 99, complete instructions, "Beauty Hints" booklet, and written money-back guarantee, all for

$1 POSTPAID

ZENITH COMPANY
1001-C NORTH VERMONT AVENUE
HOLLYWOOD 27, CALIFORNIA

SELL DISTINCTIVE NEW GREETING CARDS AND STATIONERY

MORE MONEY SO EASY!

Fast sellers galore! Amazing Plastic, Metallic, 3-dimension Floral, 21-card $1.00 All-Occasion assortments. Your profit to 50c per $1.00 box. Exclusive Gift Wraps. Novel 2-in-1 cards. Animated Books. Bon Bon Dishes. Bonus. Special offers. Write for free samples exclusive Name Imprinted Decorated Stationery and feature All-Occasion samples on approval.

FREE SAMPLES IMPRINTED DECORATED STATIONERY

ELMIRA GREETING CARD CO., Dept. 1141, Elmira, New York

TOMBSTONES DIRECT TO YOU

Genuine Beautiful Rockdale Monuments, Markers. Satisfaction or MONEY BACK. Freight paid. Write for our FREE Catalog and compare prices.

$9.95 up
EASY Terms

ROCKDALE MONUMENT CO.
Dept. 809 JOLIET, ILLINOIS

ENDS GRAY HAIR WORRIES IN 5 SECONDS

50c PLUS TAX

Quick, easy Tintz Touch-up Pencil colors gray, faded hair at roots, parting, temples. Like lipstick. In metal swivel case. Won't rub off, but washes out. SEND NO MONEY. Deposit with postman on delivery 50c or $1 for 2 plus tax and C.O.D. postage on guarantee of satisfaction or Money Back. State shade: Black, Dark Brown, Dark Warm Brown, Med. Brown, Light Brown, Auburn or Blonde. Mail order now to:
TINTZ CO., Dept. 3-R, 349 W. Ontario St., Chicago 10, Ill.

Head Noise Misery?

Try this simple Home Treatment

Many people have written us that our home treatment brought them blessed relief from the miseries of Hard of Hearing and Head Noises due to catarrh of the head. Many were past 70! For proof of these amazing results, write us today. Nothing to wear. Treatment used right in your own home—easy and simple.

Send now for proof and 30 day trial offer.

THE ELMO CO.
Dept. 345 Davenport, Iowa seemed partially to satisfy his wanderlust, while they served to introduce me to the Western scenery—and John's sweet thoughtfulness.

I'm still sentimental about one of his touring gallantries. Wherever we'd go, he'd stop along the highway if he saw a flower stand. And he'd buy me one perfect red rose. . . .

Then, on an afternoon some months after our first date, we were driving home from Santa Barbara when John suddenly pulled over to the side of the road. I was puzzled. There wasn't a flower stand in sight. Then the reason for his stopping became clear. He wanted to say a few words—only a few—but they were enough for me. "You're wonderful," he said. "Let's go to Mexico and get married."

Thereupon, Pati Behrs—that logical, calculating, career-minded girl—and I had a fight. She won. But the thought of a career wasn't the reason for the victory.

"Let's wait," said that sensible girl to John. "We've known each other such a short time—really not long enough."

"But—how long is long enough?" asked John. "When do you think that'll be?"

"I'll tell you when I think the time has come," I promised. "Then I'll propose to you!"

how she proposed . . .

Six months later, I proposed. "I think now we can get married," I proposed.

I was in for a shock. "Sorry, darling," said John. "But right now I have nothing to offer a wife. It's best for us to wait a while."

He was right, of course—as I had been right when I first suggested a postponement. But all the same, I was insulted!

Things looked pretty grim. John left Fox, for there were no roles for him. There wasn't much consolation in being secretly engaged. Then, along came our big break—John's role in Knock On Any Door.

We set a date for the wedding and the day arrived. I was working on a picture. John was supposed to pick up the ring, then wait for my call to let him know what time I'd be finished. When I finally called, it was to tell him that I'd be at the studio until late afternoon. Too late for a wedding!

"Good thing we aren't easily discouraged," he laughed.

He could say that again. However, the next day found us in Las Vegas, all ready for the ceremony, with friends Candy and Bob Brand, who were going to stand up with us. "What luck, what wonderful luck!" John and I kept telling each other.

We were practically on our way to the chapel before we realized something was missing. The ring! It was a very special one. John had searched for weeks until he found just the gold link chain he wanted. He'd made arrangements with the jeweler to pick it up. And he'd forgotten. We both wanted that ring and no other would do.

Two nearly-weds placed a frantic call to the jeweler, an understanding man who dashed to the airport to send the ring on the first flight to Las Vegas. John was sheepish when he met the plane. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" the stewardess teased as she handed him the box. He was.

After our marriage, I realized just how absent-minded he can be at times. For instance, one night for dinner I fixed cheeseburgers, which he adores—but instead of using the usual American cheese, I used Swiss.

"Best cheeseburgers I've ever eaten," said John, after his third.

"Thank you, dear," I replied, putting another on his plate. He took a bite—then looked unhappy.

"Say," he said. "This one's got a different kind of cheese. You know I only like them with American cheese.'

"Then you've certainly been very brave," I informed him. "You've been eating Swiss cheeseburgers all evening."

John grinned. "Well, what do you know!" he said. And he finished his cheeseburger in contented silence.

reforming john . . .

Gradually, I'm reforming his appetite, I think. When we were first married, I'd set some delectable French dish on the table and John would look at it for a moment, and then say apologetically, "I don't think I like this very much."

"Have you ever had it before?" I'd ask.

"No."

"Well, try just a bite."

He would. Then, "Hmmm . . . uh . . . well, it's not bad," my husband would admit—and have three helpings.

If John had his way, he'd sleep at least 12 hours every day. And its really a job to awaken him. Once I tried sprinkling water in his face. I was very pleased with my efforts when he jumped right out of bed. Then he raced into the bathroom, turned on the shower full blast, and raced back to the bedroom. "Forget something?" I asked.

"No," he said, "but you did—you forgot your husband should be treated with respect!" And with that he lifted me off my feet and, grinning fiendishly, deposited me, in my robe and pajamas, under the shower. Then he went back to bed.

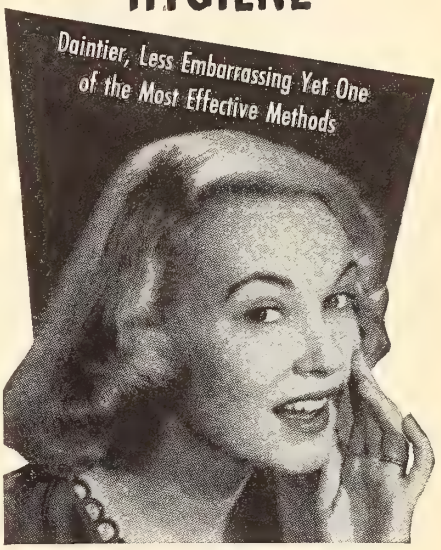
My husband really has practically no temperament, and it takes a lot to make him fighting mad. His fisticuff days are over now, but there was a time when he had to hold his own. He was a pretty child and he often found it necessary to establish himself in school by roughing up a fellow classmate. However, he still follows a bit of advice he received when he was small: "Find out if the offender is kidding. If he is, take it that way. If he's serious, let him have it."

Through the years, John has come to realize that being as handsome as he isn't a handicap. That thought that he was a "pretty boy" had haunted him throughout his teens. But, after all, if he hadn't looked the part of the good-looking, brooding Nick Romano, he and I might still be playing our love scenes in class. Even worse—I might be just another career girl!

Now I've learned. I've learned that a career isn't everything. Of course, John wouldn't demand that I give it up, but we both want a family—a good-sized one—and one career in the family will do.

Making a home for John is every bit as fascinating as being at the studio. That's his doing. For example, he leaves notes for me all over the house. Just the other day, he left one in the refrigerator. It was written on a check. It read: "Pay To The Order Of: Pati Derek. One Million Kisses." Some hours later he got around to cashing it for me. I couldn't help smiling between payments.

"Why the grin?" he asked.



"I was just thinking," I answered smugly, "what a very sensible girl I am."

I gazed fondly at him for a minute—then started for the kitchen. Bernhardt had to put the dinner on. THE END

SPECIAL ATTRACTION: THE MARCH MODERN SCREEN IS THAT SPECIAL ELIZABETH TAYLOR ISSUE!

YOUNG WIVES-LISTEN!

get these 'extra' advantages in INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Greaseless Suppository Gives Continuous Medication for Hours

Zonitors are one of the most important steps forward in intimate feminine cleanliness. They provide a modern scientific method of continuous medication—so much easier, less embarrassing to use yet one of the most effective methods. So powerfully germicidal yet so absolutely safe to delicate tissues.

How Zonitors Work . . .

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories—each sealed in a separate glass vial—so easy to slip in your purse and carry if away from home. When inserted, Zonitors release powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties for hours. Positively non-poisonous, non-irritating. All you need is this dainty suppository. No extra equipment.

Destroy Offensive Odor

Zonitors actually destroy offensive odor. Help guard against infection. They kill every germ they touch. While it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, you can depend on Zonitors to immediately kill every reachable germ without the slightest risk of injury to delicate tissues. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-20, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

*Offer good only in U. S.

QUIET!

"MODERN ROMANCES"

radio's great daytime program

IS ON THE AIR!

Broadcast daily over the ABC network

For real listening enjoyment "Modern Romances" is ahead of them all. Like MODERN ROMANCES magazine, upon which it is based, each program dramatizes the joys, loves and sorrows of real people. The same experiences you yourself might face.

Don't miss the thrills you will get from this great program. Tune in "Modern Romances"—TODAY!

Have you heard?

That now "Modern Romances" is sponsored by GOLD MEDAL FLOUR, famous product of General Mills, Inc.

The American Broadcasting Company, General Mills, Inc. and Modern Romances Magazine combine to bring you a thrill every day on

"MODERN ROMANCES"

See your newspaper for local time

HALLELUJAH! WE IS BUMS

(Continued from page 40)

whenever there's cooking to be done?"

Johnny took the ladle from us, bowed gallantly, and announced, "I'll finish cooking this. I'm really a pretty good chef. If I don't like what I concoct, my dog always does."

"He's got the fattest dog in town," Lon remarked.

The cooking was interrupted by a loud pounding at the back door. We all followed Lon to the kitchen and discovered Robert Stack and Nancy Olson at the back door holding out a tin cup and a pie tin for hand-outs.

Lon stroked his chin for a second—then decided they were honest-looking hobbes and let them in. Bob and Nancy, both appearing with Bing Crosby in Paramount's Mr. Music, had come right from the studio.

Nancy said, "We made a slight detour to the wardrobe department where Bob picked up his tramp outfit and I borrowed this—the costume Marlene Dietrich wore in Golden Earrings. She wore it in the fight scene." Sticking her fingers through some of the holes in the skirt, she observed, "It's well ventilated."

nice diggings! . . .

Lon showed Bob and Nancy around his apartment. He decorated it himself. It has steamship-blue walls, rough-beamed ceilings and low, chartreuse couches.

What really caught Bob's eye was a three-foot table that fits snugly into one corner. Lon has covered the top with Charles Addams cartoons from The New Yorker magazine. The table holds a two-foot ship's lantern that Lon picked up at an antique shop and had wired as a lamp.

On the way back to the living room, Bob picked up Lon's guitar and started tuning it. "Play for us," coaxed Diana. "Never touch the stuff," said Bob, and promptly turned the instrument over to Lon.

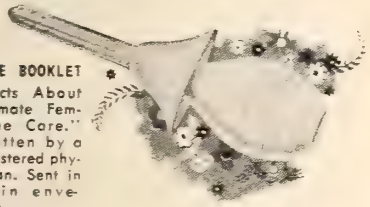
Lon strummed a few bars, then started to plink out the appropriate strains of "Brother, Can You Spare A Dime?" John Lindsay and Ruth Roman joined in with a stirring duet. They finished the song minus accompaniment, for Lon stopped plinking to go off to answer the phone.

He returned in a few moments. "That was Donald and Gwen O'Connor," he told us. "They were a little detained, but they'll be over in 15 minutes. Don said he couldn't explain, because there was a crowd gathering outside the phone booth. Said he couldn't understand it—hadn't they ever seen a guy in a gunnysack sweatshirt before?" Lon laughed. "He also said they were starting to throw pennies into his pie plate. I advised him to collect while the collecting was good."

Then Lon noticed we were all holding our noses. "The singing?" he asked. "The stew," we replied—pointing to the burnt remains in the pot. The potatoes and beef looked as if they were cemented in a field of tar. One taste, and Ruth Roman said the diagnosis was quite accurate.

Lon and Reba went scurrying for substitute food. This took them upstairs: Lon has divided his triple-decker building into apartments and his folks live on the second floor. His grandmother had just baked a cake and a pie—and she generously turned them over to Lon and Reba for the party.

When they returned below, Lon placed the apricot pie on a window sill to cool, and we all pitched in to make sandwiches. All, that is, except Ivan Volkman. He, still sporting that sinister red beard, was in the process of liquidating the pie when the



"Send for free booklet described below"

be confident of your

Feminine Daintiness

THE FAULTLESS Feminine Syringe

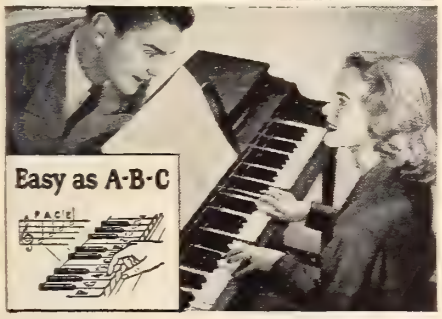
Designed specifically for personal hygienic care, Faultless Feminine Syringes assure gentle, but thorough flushing action. Simple, quick, convenient to use . . . no accessories to handle . . . inconspicuous, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

FREE BOOKLET "Facts About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-20,
The Faultless Rubber Company, Ashland, Ohio



EXTRA INCOME
From A Spare Time Business!

Sell Greeting Cards to folks you know. It's easy! Amazing value 14-Card Everyday Assortment for all events sells itself at just $1; pays you up to 50c CASH! PLASTIC Greetings, Gift Wraps, Stationery, many others increase income all year. Extra funds for churches, organizations, too. Write for Samples on approval NOW!

Samples Start You Earning

WETMORE & SUGDEN, INC.
749 MONROE AVENUE, DEPT. 77-B, ROCHESTER 2, N.Y.

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS QUICK MONEY-SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Then you play it yourself and hear how it sounds. Soon you are playing popular music. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1442 Brunswick Bldg., New York 10, N. Y.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1442 Brunswick Bldg., N.Y. 10, N.Y.
Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Instrument..... Have you Instrument?.....

Name .....
(Please Print)

Address.....

O'Connors arrived by way of the back door.

We had been approaching starvation while waiting for Don and Gwen—so the minute they appeared, we started the eating activities by shoving a sandwich into their hands. "Hello," we said, "do you want mustard on it?"

"Is this what's referred to in hobo circles as the bum's rush?" inquired Don.

The O'Connors couldn't help being late. They'd had to attend a preview of Don's latest movie, Francis, with some of the Universal-International executives at the studio.

"We wore these hobo outfits into the projection room," said Gwen, "and one producer asked, 'How come the tramp get-up, angling for a raise?'"

Most of us kept shuttling between the living room and the kitchen. The kitchen was like a steamship office. For the party, since hoboes are supposed always to be afflicted with wanderlust, Lon had hung all sorts of posters which invited tourists to visit "Beautiful England in the Autumn" or "Italy in the Spring." There were also maps behind the stove and refrigerator.

Most of the latter Lon had accumulated on his four trips across the country in the past 10 months.

A hobo party wouldn't be quite complete without a train, so Lon had dusted off his electric train and set it up in his bedroom.

In between eating and playing with the train, we learned that Lon is quite a business man. He's associate producer on his starring film for Ventura Productions, Blaze of Glory. Besides owning his apartment building, he's the landlord of a beach house at Malibu and a house in Bel-Air.

He's an easy landlord to deal with. Every time his tenants need an item of furniture, Lon takes it from his apartment. He'd just donated his bed. That's why we had so much room for the train and tracks in the bedroom. There were only a desk and a chest of drawers left.

But soon we moved the train into the cozier living room and laid out the tracks before the fireplace. The firelight glinted across the tiny engine and made the 10-year-old train look shiny and new. John Lindsay, who'd brought along a harmonica, started playing "Blues In The Night."

"Being a hobo might not be so bad." said Ruth Roman dreamily. "No worries, plenty of travel, out in the sun all day . . ."

"Not to mention the rain, sleet and snow," put in Lon, less dreamily.

But sitting there around the open hearth, we were a pretty contented group. A nicer bunch of bums we've never met.

THE END

MODERN SCREEN

"That's the director who always sneaks into one of his own scenes."

IS THIS YOUR WALLFLOWER WEEK?

Why "sit it out alone" while your friends go bowling or dancing? Unless there are underlying organic conditions, Chi-Ches-Ters Pills offer blessed relief from "monthly blues". They tend to relax muscular contractions that often induce pain and nervousness. For best results take them as directed two or three days before your time. Ask your druggist for

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

For relief from "periodic functional distress"
FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Company, Dept. 15-E, Philadelphia 46, Pennsylvania.

ONLY $7.98

Another of our Hollywood originals fashioned of rich, rayon crepe with enticing lace yoke over flesh colored marquisette. Floating side panel makes a perfect frock for your dress-up days and nights the year 'round. This miracle low price is possible only because we have our manufacturer's entire output. No middleman's profit. This savings is passed on to you. Same high quality fabric and needlework always sold for much more.

Sizes: 9-11-13-15-12-14-16-18-20
Sizes: 38-40-42-44 46-48—$1.00 more

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE—Wear this newest dress for 10 DAYS ON APPROVAL! If you're not thrilled and delighted, return for refund.

SEND NO MONEY—EACH DRESS GUARANTEED

HOLLYWOOD MODELS, Inc.
7052 Laurel Canyon Blvd., North Hollywood, Calif., Dept. 313-B

Rush "PANEL CREPE." I'll pay mailman amount due plus C. O. D. postage. I may return dress in 10 days for refund if not satisfied.

Colors: Black, Medium Gray, Kelly Green, Aqua

How Many?	What Size?	1st Color Choice	2nd Color Choice

Send Money With Order — We Pay All Postage

Name_____
Please Print Plainly

Address_____ Apt._____

City_____ Zone____ State_____

BUY WITH CONFIDENCE — WE SHIP IMMEDIATELY

FASCINATING MONEY-MAKING art careers open to women!
America's 12 Most Famous Artists SHOW YOU THE WAY!

● 12 world-famous artists teach you professional secrets and know-how... at home ...in your spare time. Write today for big illustrated brochure—"Art as a Career for Women". It's FREE!
FAMOUS ARTISTS COURSE
Institute of Commercial Art, Inc.
Dept. B-47, Westport, Conn.
Please send me booklet "Art as a Career for Women"
Name_____ Age____
Street_____
City, Zone, State_____
Phone No._____

TUMS Beat BAKING SODA for Acid Indigestion
Tums neutralize almost twice as much excess stomach acid as the same amount of baking soda. Very important, Tums can't cause acid rebound. That's why Tums give you fast—longer lasting relief. You can eat your favorite foods without suffering from heartburn, gas due to acid indigestion. Get Tums from your druggist today. On y 10¢ a roll; 3 roll package a quarter.
EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS 10¢ STOMACH DISTRESS for the tummy
NEED A LAXATIVE TOO?
Try a 25¢ Box
Nature's Remedy NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

HOME IS WHERE YOU HIDE IT

(Continued from page 50)

Mohican pointing out the lands of his forefathers. "I used to come up here deer-hunting with my grandfather back in 1927. I always wanted to come back when I was old enough to enjoy it. Isn't it the most beautiful country you've ever seen?"

"Oh, it is!" said Lita, to be agreeable.

"Well, let me tell you about the place," Rory went on, sitting her down beside him on an empty water-trough. "The other day, I heard that this ranch was for sale." He paused for emphasis, and then launched into more nature study. "Why, there are trout 12 inches long in the stream down there. Deer come down from the mountains and graze in the pasture. Did you ever see a place that was more serene and peaceful?"

"Ye-es," said Lita. "But—but isn't it awfully run down?"

"Exactly!" Rory exclaimed, as if she were getting the important point. "That's exactly what's the matter. Some years ago, this place was a very successful guest-ranch. But the last few owners have let it fall apart. Just imagine that field planted in heavy pasture, the barn painted, the lodge and cabins cleaned and patched up. It would be a gold mine!" He wound up breathless.

emphatic negative . . .

"You don't mean you want us to—buy it?" The idea slightly stunned Lita.

"Well, yes," said Rory. "I was thinking that maybe we could buy it—as an investment! It's a real steal, honey."

"I never heard of anything so silly," she replied, putting on the brakes with both feet. To emphasize her point, she got up and started walking back to the car.

The 16-mile ride back to Ojai, up the mountainside and over the bumpy dirt road, was a chilly one. And not wholly from the weather. Under her breath, Lita worriedly kept repeating, "It's silly . . . it's silly." Rory didn't say anything. He quite wisely held his peace.

By the time they pulled into town, Rory had Lita talked out of her silence—but no more had been said about the Circle-B. That afternoon, they drove back to Hollywood.

Nearly a month later, when Lita's family was forced to sell their home in Hollywood to make way for the giant freeway which is being cut through the city's heart, it was Rory who had the solution. He took them back to Ojai, which is a sleepy old-world town 75 miles north of Hollywood, situated in a fertile agricultural valley just 15 miles from the ocean. There they bought a livable modern home with eight acres of orchard, stables, and two small guest-houses. It was just right for the folks, and Lita loved it. To Rory, the little valley was a second home. He had spent a great part of his boyhood there with his grandfather, and it was filled with pleasant memories.

One Sunday morning, less than a week after Lita's family had moved into their new home, Rory and Lita's brother, Pete, drove off in the hot-rod. They were very mysterious and non-committal when they left—but when they returned that afternoon, Lita knew immediately where they had been. She could tell from Pete's beaming face that the Circle-B was about to become an issue again.

At dinner, the boys both tackled the subject with well-rehearsed fervor. They had great plans for the ranch. Pete would manage it. They would offer an inexpensive good time to hunters and fishermen. There would be saddle horses for pack

ONLY 19¢ EACH
NEW SILK FINISH ENLARGEMENT
GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement made from your favorite snapshot, photo or negative and mounted in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing for complete information on having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman 19¢ each for the enlargement and frame plus cost of mailing. Satisfaction guaranteed. Limit two to a customer. Originals returned with your enlargement. Offer limited to U. S. A.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M234 Hollywood 38, Calif.

MAKE MONEY
ADDRESSING ENVELOPES
Do this profitable easy work in the privacy of your home in spare time, experience unnecessary. Our complete instructions show you how, and also reveal names and addresses of many firms who constantly address thousands of envelopes. Send only $1—with your name and address and we will send you everything to get started immediately.
The Congress Co., Dept. 450, 1019 Congress Bldg. MIAMI, FLORIDA

HEMSTITCHER

Hemstitch on any sewing machine with this handy attachment. Does two piece, criss-cross, inlaid, circular and hemstitching for pleats, also tucking, smocking and picoting. Makes rugs, comforters, slippers, etc. out of any material. Easy directions included
Both for $1.00
BUTTON HOLER

Makes button holes on your sewing machine instead of by hand. Also darns stockings, sews buttons, zippers; and can be used for quilting. Sews in any direction—front, back or sideways
SEND NO MONEY—Merely send your name, address and pay postman $1.00 plus postage on arrival. Or, send $1.00 with order, and we mail attachments postage paid. You risk nothing. Satisfaction guaranteed or $1.00 back
LELANE CO. Dept. DM-20 Box 571 Kansas City 10, Mo.

EXTRA MONEY FOR YOU!
SELL NEW GREETING CARDS AND EXCLUSIVE STATIONERY NOT OBTAINABLE ELSEWHERE
...atest newest and best! Complete line covering plaques, metallics, "stand-up" and amazing "double" cards. Exclusive REGAL Imprinted and Engraved Stationery 100% profit. Bonus. Send for sample Kit on approval.
FREE SAMPLES EXCLUSIVE NAME IMPRINTED STATIONERY
REGAL GREETING CARD CO
19 W. Woodruff St., Dept. DM-12, Hazel Park, Mich.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER
TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH

ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS
SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET
NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU
MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-B, Providence 15, R. I.

Lesley Williams
MOVIE STARS PHOTOS
8 x 10 SIZE
DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD
6 for $1.00
8 x 10 photos 25¢ each or 6 for 1.00
Thousands of beautiful poses of highest quality.
Practically all stars available
We supply what you order — NO SUBSTITUTIONS.
Glamour portraits or pin-ups.
FREE Beautiful Illustrated Catalog with Order
STEWART-CROXTON STUDIOS
P. O. Box 2390 Dept. D-2
Hollywood 28, Calif.

NOW! TRAIN FOR THIS WELL PAID CAREER
DENTAL ASSISTANT

A new career for YOU! Skilled dental assistants needed everywhere . . . full or part time. New complete training plan starts you at home—finish at Wayne School. Learn X-Ray, Lab, Chairside assisting, personality development. Placement Service for Graduates.
Yours FREE This Illustrated Booklet with complete facts
YOUR FUTURE
Write Today!
WAYNE SCHOOL
WAYNE SCHOOL 2525 N. SHEFFIELD AVENUE LAB. D3, CHICAGO 14, ILL.

Foot Relief

Instant-Acting, Soothing, Cushioning Foot Plaster

To instantly relieve painful corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, tender spots, burning on bottom of feet—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex. You cut this soothing, cushioning, flesh color, superior moleskin to any size or shape. At Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ stores.

Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

THERE'S MONEY FOR You in PLASTICS

No Experience Necessary!

Here's CASH for you...easy! Show friends, neighbors amazing laundry-saving tablecloths, aprons, draperies, rainwear, babies' needs, etc. Tremendous demand. Sell on sight. BIG PROFITS, full or part time. Write for FREE Outfit.

LORAINE PRODUCTS, Dept. DM-258
844 West Adams Street Chicago 7, Illinois

AT LAST! SOMETHING NEW and SENSATIONAL in EVERYDAY CARDS

MAKE Extra MONEY FAST

Show rich new Satin, Velour, Metallic Cards. Never before offered. Get easy orders FAST! Amazing values low as 24 for $1. Up to 100% profit. Scented Stationery, Charmettes, Napkins, Kiddie Cards, 25 other Assortments, retail from 5¢ to $1.25. SAMPLES ON APPROVAL. No experience needed. Start now—earn all year 'round. WRITE TODAY!

Satin Velour Metallic

PURO CO., 2601 Locust, Dept. 05-B, St. Louis 3, Mo.

WANT A U.S. GOVERNMENT JOB?

START AS HIGH AS $3,450 YEAR

Get Ready NOW for 1950 exams.
Veterans Get Preference.
Mail Coupon today SURE.

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. A-108, Rochester 4, N. Y.
Not Government Controlled
Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 40-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
Name .....
Address ..... Tel .....

trips back into the mountains. Lita listened until her head began to swim. Finally, she agreed to go back for another look next Sunday. But she warned them that she wasn't sold. Not by any means.

Both Lita and Rory had a hectic time in Hollywood the following week—parties, rehearsals, television shows, dates with agents—all the nerve-wracking little things which make an acting career so difficult. When they returned to Ojai on Saturday night, Lita was tired and slightly fed-up with the pace of Hollywood. The boys couldn't have found a better time to take her back to see the Circle-B.

When they looked down on the valley again, the full coloring of springtime had taken over. The open pasture-land was green and vibrant. The trees along the stream were bright with new foliage. Even the old ranch-house somehow looked fresher and cleaner.

the big idea . . .

They sat on the porch for several hours, eating the lunch they had brought with them, and talking seriously about the ranch's real possibilities. Pete and Rory pointed out the swimming pool, a big 30 x 50 concrete affair that could be inexpensively modernized. They showed her the cabins which could sleep 23 people. They told her about the 17 saddle horses that went with the ranch. And with as much pure business logic as they could muster, they tried to explain the economics of their great plan to operate it as a guest ranch.

Maybe it was the calm peace of the place after her frantic week in Hollywood. Or maybe it was simply the odds of 2-to-1. But anyway, the idea began to make sense to Lita. She finally said yes.

This was one of the most difficult decisions Lita ever had to make. It wasn't simply the thought of the boys losing the money they'd have to invest. It was the whole business of outdoor living. Lita wasn't sure she could take it. After all, she was a city gal—a night-club singer who had never been more than shouting distance away from a major city before she married Rory. Born in bustling Detroit, dancing in theaters at 13, singing with Cugat at 15, acting in movies at 18—what sort of preparation is that for being a rancher's wife? That was what really worried Lita. That and realizing, on the other hand, how much the out-of-doors meant to Rory.

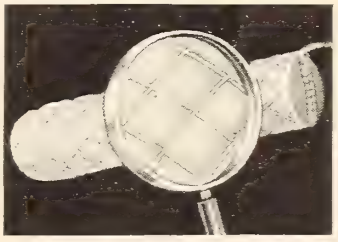
She made her choice, though. It had to be yes. So the boys went into the guest-ranching business then and there.

All during the summer months, Pete and Rory worked at cleaning up the lodge and the cabins. They didn't bother opening the place for business, except for two weeks in July, when they played host to 33 boys from the California Rangers group. During September, a few deer-hunters dropped by and rented Circle-B horses to pack into the back country. But that wasn't too profitable, either. A trigger-happy hunter accidentally shot one of their best mounts and it had to be destroyed. They don't want any more business like that. In fact, until they finish their repairs and remodeling this winter, they don't want any business at all.

When they first took over the Circle-B, Rory bought two spirited cow-ponies for Lita and himself and brought them up to the ranch. His own horse, "Diablo," is a tricky, high-stepping mount, trained for working cattle. Lita's is a pretty little sorrel mare named "Duchess," and she was the first horse Lita had ever ridden.

"Two years ago I never dreamed that I would be riding on horseback through brushy trails, inhaling dust, and letting the sun burn my skin," Lita says, now that

Recently Wed



Beverly Simonsen, lovely Chicago bride, uses famous Italian Balm daily to keep her hands honeymoon-soft and chap-free.

Soft, lovely hands need Italian Balm's sure protection against winter weather. This rich, concentrated lotion protects where thin, watery lotions fail. Prevents chapping—softens roughest, driest skin overnight. So economical, because only one drop serves both hands! Try it—see the amazing difference! 25c, 50c, $1 per bottle.

Campana
Italian Balm
for CHAP-FREE HANDS

To Tampon users...

Fibs*

is the Tampon with rounded ends... the only Tampon "Quilted" for comfort... "Quilted" for safety...

Next time try Fibs
(internal sanitary protection)

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

How do some women achieve that PROFESSIONAL LOOK in a HOME MANICURE?

▶A beautiful manicure is not just a matter of filing nails, nor a matter of applying polish ▶ These women use SOFTOL, to quickly and easily push back, shape and remove cuticle without cutting. SOFTOL adds that final touch—gives your nails that trim, well groomed look, never achieved by polish alone. SOFTOL softens, shapes, lubricates and removes cuticle on both hands without cutting in 3½ minutes ▶ Easy to follow directions in every SOFTOL package. Enough for 85 manicures. Only $1.00 plus 10c fed. tax. Invest in SOFTOL today at your favorite cosmetic counter. You'll gloat when you see the smart, professional looking manicure Softol helps give your hands.

W. B. ASSOCIATES
NEW YORK 17, N. Y.

In Canada:
Handman Ag'cys Ltd. Montreal

NEW! SOLD ONLY BY MAIL!

No Time Limit HOSPITAL PLAN

GOOD ANYWHERE IN U.S.

Protects You in Case of
SICKNESS & ACCIDENT
COSTS only 3c a DAY

More coverage! Less cost! Individual or family eligible, birth to age 70. Policy pays Hospital Room and Board as long as you remain confined. NO TIME LIMIT! You get Doctor Benefits in case of accident . . . Cash Benefits for 74 Surgical Operations . . . Compensation for Loss of Time in case of accident (age 18 or above) . . . Cash Payment for Loss of Eyes, Hands, Foot . . . Lump Cash for Accidental Death . . . special Infantile Paralysis coverage. Only 3c a day for adults; 1½c a day for children to age 18. Sold direct. No agent will call.

POLICY PAYS

HOSPITAL ROOM AND BOARD FOR SICKNESS OR ACCIDENT
Per Month $150.00
(No time limit)

DOCTOR VISITS IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)

74 SURGICAL OPERATIONS
$10 to $100

LOSS OF TIME IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)

ACCIDENTAL DEATH
$1000 to $3000

LOSS OF EYES, HANDS, FOOT DUE TO ACCIDENT
$250 to $3000

INFANTILE PARALYSIS
Maximum $1500

AMBULANCE SERVICE
$10.00

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. DM 2-5b, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

the open spaces have become her home. "Everything in my life has been different since I married Rory. He's taught me a healthy, wonderful way of life that I never knew existed before."

The Circle-B will undergo a complete face-lifting this winter. Pete has invited an old college buddy, Ralph Mantiz, out from Michigan, to help him with the job. Much of the work they will do themselves, with Rory lending a hand when he's free from making movies in Hollywood. Between now and opening day they plan to paint the barns, repair the fences, plant a permanent pasture, cultivate the apple orchard, clear off the weeds, build outdoor furniture, fix the plumbing, overhaul the generator for the lighting system, replaster the swimming pool, re-rig the saddles in the tack room, dam up a section of the creek for irrigation, line the fireplace with new rock, modernize the kitchen, repack the water pump, tighten the bedsprings in all the beds, install a badminton court, sand the floors, put in a lawn around the lodge, and build a grandstand and arena for amateur rodeos. (Whew!)

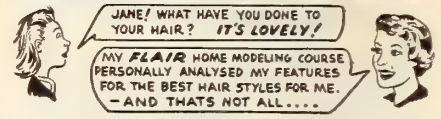
Rory and Pete don't plan to run a fancy dude ranch. But the beds will be soft and the meals hearty. The price will be the same to all comers—$10 a day for room, board, and the use of horses to ride anywhere in the valley. Long pack trips into the back country will cost $5 per day extra for each rider.

With Hollywood less than three hours away, the Circle-B should do a brisk business from the day it opens its doors to the public. Rory is pretty sure of that now that he's checked on what other guest ranches have to offer. He'll take his Los Padres Forest country any day.

Lita will, too. She's become the most enthusiastic rancher of the lot. "A woman's touch," she tells them, "is important even in a log cabin."

Since Rory finished his last picture for 20th Century-Fox, A Ticket to Tomahawk, the Calhouns have spent very little time in Hollywood. So little, in fact, that their friends have begun to wonder what could possibly have happened to them. During the past month or two, they have been driving hurriedly down to Hollywood on Mondays to attend the television show on which Lita is the singing star. It's their one big night in town and they make the most of it—a fancy dinner with all the trimmings, a show, or perhaps a few hours at a nightclub. But unless urgent business keeps them in town, the Calhouns head back for the hills on Tuesday morning.

They figure that if anything important comes up, they can be back to Hollywood in a flash. And if it doesn't, they can spend their time hoeing weeds. There sure are a lot of them on the Circle-B. THE END



I SAW IT HAPPEN

One day while my friends and I were going to school, a car stopped and a man asked us where a certain church was. My friends and I looked again and saw it was Bing Crosby. After we told him, he asked us if we would enjoy a ride around the block. We were too thrilled to speak. But we got our ride and I'll never forget it.

Mary Malone
Chicago, Ill.

BE A GLAMOUROUS
Learn at HOME! MODEL

FLAIR now offers a Complete Personalized, Home Modeling Course designed to transform YOU into a new vibrant and chic personality—A revolutionary way to lose or gain weight . . . personalized hair and make-up analysis . . . clothes . . . modeling techniques . . . streamlining and figure development . . . and much more for only..... $3.00 COMPLETE COURSE

Enroll TODAY and acquire the Poise and Charm that is the Model's trademark. Send cash, check or Money Order. No C.O.D.'s please.

FLAIR School of Modeling
505 Fifth Avenue New York 17, New York

NERVOUS STOMACH ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of "nervous stomach"—heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas. ALLIMIN has been scientifically tested by doctors and found highly effective. World famous—more than a ¼ billion sold to date.

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American School, H-214, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

NEW! BIRTHDAY PARTY PACK

Be first! Sell this sensational new assortment. Contains everything but the food. . . . The invitations, table cover, napkins, nut baskets, place cards, snapper hats, cups, plates, game booklet and six different games; a complete party for eight. Write today. ELMCRAFT, 5930 S. Western Ave, Chicago 36, Illinois.

EARN EXTRA MONEY SELL GREETING CARDS, STATIONERY & NOVELTIES to friends, neighbors and others. The country's outstanding line. Write for samples. Prompt service.

LIBERTY BELL STUDIOS—Dept. 16, 1013 Filbert St., Phila. 7, Pa.

MAKE MONEY SELL DRESSES FROM NEW YORK

Specially Priced $5.95 to $19.95
5th Ave., N. Y. firm desires women to sell Dresses, Suits, Lingerie. As seen in "Vogue", "Mademoiselle". Featuring the New York Look. Good commissions. Write for sample Book.
MODERN MANNER, 260 Fifth Ave., Dept. D-2, New York

DON'T WAIT for INFANTILE PARALYSIS to strike near you GIVE NOW to the MARCH of DIMES

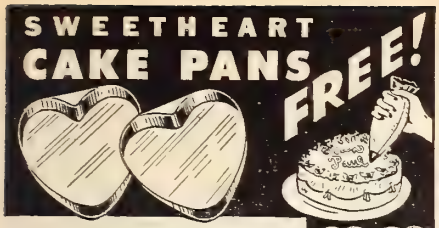
Zircons

DIAMOND-LIKE ZIRCONS; ALEXANDRITES; RUBIES; OTHERS. FIERY SAMPLE ZIRCON $2.00—C.O.D.'s ACCEPTED, $1.00 DEPOSIT. FREE PRICE LIST.



Dept. SMS Imhusex Box 232 White Plains, N.Y.

MONEY FOR YOU—SELL GREETING CARDS—UP TO 100% PROFIT FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1

Big profits showing giant line Everyday All-Occasion Cards. Easter, Plastic Cards. Special items. Complete variety napkins, towels, coasters, stationery with name 50 for $1 up. No money needed to start. Fund raising plan for churches, clubs. Special Offers. Write for samples.

NAME PRINTED NAPKINS, TOWELS STATIONERY AND COASTERS

EMPIRE CARD CO. 210 FOX ST. ELMIRA, N. Y.

FREE! CAKE DECORATOR, FOUR JELLO MOLDS AND RECIPES Amazing new cake decorator makes flowers, loops, names, leaves just like professionals. Directions and recipes for icings and whips included. ALSO FREE —7 delicious cake recipes. We make these amazing free offers to introduce our aluminum heart-shaped cake pans. Size 9x1¼ inches. Bake a sweetheart layer cake for birthday, anniversary or special occasions. Set of 2 pans only $1.00, plus 15c postage; or you may order C.O.D. SPECIAL OFFER! 4 pans for only $1.69 (double order includes free cake decorator and four individual jello molds) plus C.O.D. postage and handling. SEND NO MONEY! Just mail card today. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. Keep Free Gifts regardless. Don't delay. Act Now! ROYAL INDUSTRIES, Dept.5038-B, Mt. Vernon, Ill.

MAKE MONEY FAST! SELL EVERYDAY CARDS

100 MONEY MAKERS

Friends, Clubs, Housewives gladly buy gorgeous, new Metal and Plastic assortments. 21 All Occasion cards for $1. Easter, Relative. Scented Stationery. Gifts. Amazing profits. Bargain Offers. Experience unnecessary. Write today for SAMPLES on approval and money-making plans. HEDENKAMP & CO., Inc. Dept. D-2 361 Broadway, New York 13, N. Y.

TODAY A JOB! TOMORROW A PROFESSION

The opportunities for a Practical Nurse are unlimited. The shortage is acute. Act now for a profitable future. Train at home in spare time. Ages 18-55. High School unnecessary. Easy tuition plan. Write today for free details. Post Graduate Hospital School of Nursing Dept. D-2, 10 East Erie Street, Chicago, Illinois

FREE PHOTO DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE STAR

(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing) SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY With Photo you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c for handling.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER Box 2309, Dept. O-20, Hollywood 28, Calif.

BE TALLER

Men, our SHOE INSERTS for inside your shoes will make you look TALLER and walk more graceful. Increase your height! SHOE INSERTS fit inside all SHOES. Especially made for those who desire to look TALLER. Send now and give your appearance a lift! Fully guaranteed. (Pat. pending). Price $3.00 a set pre-paid or pay postman on arrival plus postage. Please give shoe size. ARCH-BASE INSOLE CO., Armagh, Penna.

$30 FOR YOU! Sell only 50 $1 boxes beautiful everyday cards from FREE sample display! Friends, neighbors, relatives buy on sight! Complete line to choose from—New Metallic Cards—Imprint Stationery —Novelty Gifts—Gift Wrappings—FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOG! Deluxe boxes on approval. CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc. 45 Warburton Ave., Dept. E4. Yonkers, N. Y.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Str[illegible] Station, Dept. 7409 Detroit 27, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

SOMEDAY HER PRINCE MAY GO

(Continued from page 24)

Rita Hayworth. Directly after the broadcast I piled into a car with my assistants and drove to the Cansino Dance Studio on Vermont Avenue, far off the beaten path from the usual swank Hollywood and Beverly Hills establishments.

Here, in a second floor studio, Eduardo Cansino, Rita Hayworth's father, spends his working day. It doesn't matter to him that his daughter is married to the heir to a hundred million or more dollars while he teaches students in a room where the floorboards creak. It matters only that Rita has her happiness and that his students really learn to dance.

As a commentator of some years' standing in Hollywood, I have always hated the idle, often vicious, shot-in-the-dark rumor type of reporting. Whenever possible I prefer to record my interviews word for word—so in this instance I set up my portable tape recorder and this was my conversation with Rita's father:

on the record . . .

FISHER: Mr. Cansino, it's nice to see you again. You know, for some reason or other there seems to be very few movie-star fathers around Hollywood. Or if they are around, nobody pays any attention to them. How do you account for this?

CANSINO: I couldn't say.

(Mr. Cansino, a dark-haired, handsome man who appears to be in his middle thirties, wastes no words. His answers are always preceded by a slight pause, during which he considers the question before giving a short reply in his pronounced Spanish accent.)

FISHER: Mr. Cansino, do you think a father can stay close to a famous daughter?

CANSINO: Yes, I do. Because we're a family and we're always close together.

FISHER: Well, to put it in another way, have you and Rita ever, so to speak, "lost each other"?

CANSINO: Yes, once in awhile we have. We call each other when she's busy and I'm busy. We call each other on Sundays.

FISHER: Did you meet Prince Aly Khan when he visited here in Hollywood?

CANSINO: No, I didn't have a chance to meet him. They just happened one day to call me and that's usually the day I take off. So we didn't meet.

FISHER: Did you ever meet her last husband, Mr. Orson Welles?

CANSINO: Oh, yeah.

FISHER: Were you good friends?

CANSINO: Yes, sir.

FISHER: Did you receive an invitation to Rita's wedding to Prince Aly?

CANSINO: Yes, sir.

FISHER: But you didn't go?

CANSINO: No.

FISHER: You were too busy?

CANSINO: I was busy putting on a show. My own recital.

FISHER: Did she ask your permission to marry Prince Aly Khan?

CANSINO: No, she didn't.

FISHER: Mr. Cansino, recently the newspapers have hinted that there might be some trouble between Rita and her husband. Do you think this is the real love of her life?

CANSINO: I believe so. Yeah.

FISHER: Mr. Cansino, do you think that Rita has ever been disillusioned by Hollywood?

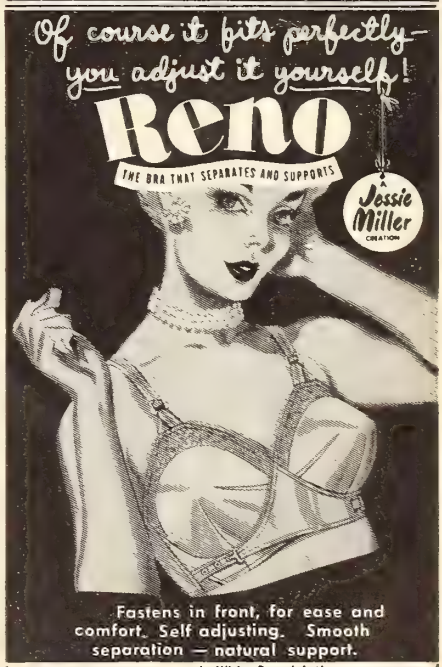
CANSINO: Yes, once when she wanted to do Ramona—she wanted to so badly—she never got to do it.

FISHER: Do you think she wants to come back and make more pictures of the sort

Have "SECOND LOOK" Legs!

Kept smooth and hair-free longer . . . by Nair . . . the safe, odorless depilatory lotion . . . that removes leg hair quickly, easily . . . leaves legs smoother . . . more exciting . . .

Lady, throw your razor away—use Nair, new cosmetic lotion that keeps legs hair-free longer! Dissolves hair skin-close—no ugly razor stubble. Easy to use—rinses off quickly. No clinging depilatory odor, no irritation to normal skin. For "second look" legs —get Nair today!



FOR LEGS THAT DELIGHT USE NAIR TONIGHT 79¢ plus tax

Of course it fits perfectly— you adjust it yourself!

Reno

THE BRA THAT SEPARATES AND SUPPORTS

Jessie Miller CREATION

Fastens in front, for ease and comfort. Self adjusting. Smooth separation — natural support.

A Cup 32, 34, 36, 38	In White Broadcloth	$2.00
B Cup 32, 34, 36, 38, 40	In Pink, White, Blue Satin	$2.50
C Cup 34, 36, 38, 40, 42	In Pink, White, Blue Nylon	$3.00

Plus Postage.—C.O.D.'s accepted!

THE HECHT CO., WASH. 4, D. C.

Quan.	Fabric	Color	Size & Cup	Price

Name.....

Address.....

City.....Zone.....State.....

Add sales tax if you live in taxable area.

Greatest PROFIT-MAKER IN GREETING CARD HISTORY!

JANES ART STUDIOS SAMPLE SET!
11 of the Sensational NEW and Exclusive Assortments of Everyday Greeting Cards and Matched Gift Wrappings, packed in a smart Carrying Carton. Show with Delight—Sell on Sight! See 'em to Believe 'em! Mail Coupon Today.

BIG Money for YOU

JANES ART STUDIOS, INC.
Babylon C-7, N. Y.
Please rush — for FREE TRIAL — big profit-making sample set on approval.
Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

BORROW BY MAIL
Quick! $50 to $300
IN THE PRIVACY OF YOUR HOME
Employed men and women, WHEREVER you live, BORROW $50 to $300 BY MAIL. No signers . . . strictly confidential! QUICK... EASY... PRIVATE! Send us your name and address and occupation . . . application blank will be sent you immediately in a plain envelope. Repay in convenient monthly payments. WRITE TODAY! Absolutely no obligation.
Postal Finance Company
POSTAL FINANCE CO.
Dept. 32 Sioux City, Iowa

CASE OF BIG Money Makers to Help You FREE MAKE MONEY
Big box of full size Blair Food and Household Products will be sent FREE to an ambitious man or woman in your town. We give you the outfit. Just write quick, saying you want to be a money-making Blair dealer. You show samples—take orders for this line of nearly 250 fine quality-guaranteed home products needed by almost everyone in your neighborhood daily. Rush name and address for big assortment. Find out how easy it is to make money supplying our products.
BLAIR, Dept. 360FB, Lynchburg, Va.

DRAW for MONEY
Be An ARTIST!
Use Your Spare Time to Train for a Pleasant, Profitable Career
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 and more a week. Our practical, home study training makes it fun to learn COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in one course. No previous training necessary. Write for details and FREE Book, "Art for Pleasure & Profit." STATE AGE. Course "G.I" Approved.
Studio 802W, WASHINGTON SCHOOL of ART
1115-15th St., N.W. Washington 5, D.C.

SENSATIONAL OFFER!
(For Blondes Only)
Unusual blond products tested over 30 years. Thrilling blond hair any shade golden to platinum. Blondes with "light ends" & "dark roots" will be amazed at the thrilling results. Men love lovely blond hair. Check & return this ad with two dimes for regular dollar box of a thrilling blond product. ( ) I want to lighten my hair just a few shades ( ) I want to lighten dark roots. ONE TIME OFFER.
Address: SAMPLE DEPT. D-2
Box #10, Prince Station New York 12, N. Y.

she did—or do you think she wants to retire?

CANSINO: Well, I don't think she wants to retire, really. I think she's gonna be back and wants to do more pictures.

FISHER: When she comes back, with all this business of being married to one of the world's wealthiest men, do you think she'll be hard to handle?

CANSINO: She's a lot like I am. She's temperamental once in a while, but she doesn't lose her temper for nothing, for no foolish reason. Once in awhile she can fly off the handle good, but there has to be reasons. She wouldn't do anything just because she has money.

FISHER: Do you think that once a girl is a star she can give up all the things that movie fame brings? In other words, are stardom and adulation important to Rita?

CANSINO: I don't think so. It's hard to answer that. If you work in show business you have to have all that. More important even than money, but you don't get it if you don't do your lick.

FISHER: Then, you wouldn't say she was homesick for Hollywood? Getting back to those newspaper rumors, does she seem to be homesick?

CANSINO: She is right now.

family addition . . .

FISHER: Would you like to see her come back here to have her child?

CANSINO: Yes, I would. After all, it's going to be my grandchild. I will have three then. One by my son and two by Rita.

FISHER: What name do you think she will call the baby? After you, perhaps?

CANSINO: If the baby is a boy she should call it after the father. If it is a girl it should be called after the mother.

FISHER: Then you think Rita will do what she wants to do. We hear that Aly runs the show. Is Rita like most Spanish women, who are content to let the husband be the head of the house and never question anything? Or is she the modern type?

CANSINO: I don't think she is very bossy. No, I don't think so.

FISHER: Tell me, would you like to direct Rita again in a dance picture? I mean, do you have an idea about the things she should do?

CANSINO: I like to. You bet. Last time I directed her was in Loves of Carmen.

FISHER: Well, she was evidently a good student. Did she take direction well?

CANSINO: You bet, she always worked hard.

FISHER: You have trained a lot of stars for pictures, haven't you?

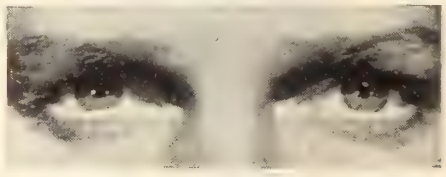
CANSINO: Quite a few. It goes way back. Ramon Novarro, Myrna Loy, Irene Dunne. I taught Myrna the hula dance. Margo studied with me when she was 10 years old. Of course, I did Rio Rita on the stage and in pictures, and I have been doing quite a bit—mostly Spanish numbers.

FISHER: Mr. Cansino, does it mean anything to you in a business way that your daughter is so famous?

CANSINO: People are always calling the studio to see if Rita teaches here. I say no.

(If I had a son who turned out to be a big football player or a girl like Rita I have a feeling I couldn't be so offhand about the whole thing. I told Eduardo that. He smiled a little and showed me the artist's drawings of his new studio. It's a far cry from his present modest quarters. To be erected not far from Beverly Hills, it is a highly modernistic glass-fronted structure—the complete last word in dancing studios. I knew better than to ask who was paying for it. Cansino makes his own living. Always has and always will. Even the sign lettered in above the building proclaimed the name of Cansino.)

FISHER: You know how Hollywood and show business is, Mr. Cansino. Let's say



How will they look to YOU a few years from now?

Your wife's eyes: What will you read in hers when she asks whether you can afford that modest cottage?

Your boy's eyes: What will you see in his eyes the day he asks whether you can afford to send him to college?

Your own eyes: What will the mirror tell you about them when it's time to retire, and take things easier?

There's no better time than right now to sit back and think what you will see in your family's eyes a few years from now.

Whether they glow with happiness or turn aside with disappointment depends, to a very large extent, upon what you do now.

So plan now for that home you plan to buy eventually . . . set aside money now for his college education . . . plan now for the day you can retire.

Insure your future by signing up on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you have a checking account.

Chances are you won't miss the money now, but you certainly will a few short years from now if you haven't got it!!

Automatic saving is sure saving—
U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Contributed by this magazine in cooperation with the Magazine Publishers of America as a public service.

CALLING FOR PRACTICAL NURSES!

EASY TO LEARN AT HOME

Help fill the need for Trained Practical Nurses in your community or travel. Wayne Training Plan, welcomed by doctors, prepares you for experience—at home in spare time. Many earn while learning. NO HIGH SCHOOL NEEDED. Ages 18 to 55 accepted. Nurses Outfit included. Easy payments. Information & sample of lessons Free. Write today.

Excellent Earning Opportunity for Full or Spare Time

Wayne School of Practical Nursing, Inc.,
2525 Sheffield Ave. Desk K48, Chicago 14, Ill.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

MAKE MONEY . . . and Have FUN, Too!

Sell Everyday Cards

Show these adorable Greeting Cards. Friends will be delighted with smart Birthday, Get-Well, Plastics, Metallics, Secret Pal, Eastern Star, Scripture Text and Catholic Everyday, Easter and Relative assortments. They'll buy $1 box of 14 folders in a jiffy. You keep up to 50c PROFIT, BONUS EXTRA. Also Gift Wraps, Gift Items, Kiddy "Pop-Up" Books, Scented Stationery. Write for Samples on Approval.

MIDWEST CARD CO., Dept. 17-V
415 N. 8th • ST. LOUIS 1, MO.

REMOVE HAIR

Remove hair INSTANTLY ABOVE AND BELOW THE SURFACE OF THE SKIN. Everyone loves hair free skin. Your skin can be so much lovelier without that unwanted hair. BE ATTRACTIVE INSTEAD OF ATTRACTING ATTENTION. Remove that ugly unwanted hair at once. Just return this advertisement with 25c and receive prepaid a generous size package of a tried and tested hair remover that will remove hair instantly above and below the surface of the skin. Results guaranteed.

LECHLER LABORATORIES (Hair Removing Specialists)
560 Broadway, Dept. D-2 N. Y. 12, N. Y.

Get Well QUICKER

From Your Cough Due to a Cold

FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

STAMPED LINENS at 1/2 PRICE

FREE 24 PAGE CATALOG

You pay only ½ Resale Prices printed in our catalog. Make money selling, save money buying for your own use. Buy direct from manufacturer: Seamless Tubing Pillow Cases and Bolster Cases, Show Sheets, Scarfs, Vanity Sets, Bedspreads, Luncheon Sets, Banquet Cloths, Show Towels, Fancy Aprons, Infants' Furnishings, etc. Complete embroidery instructions FREE. It's easy. Write:

MERRIBEE ART EMBROIDERY CO.
Dept. 355 22 West 21st St., New York 10, N. Y.

"How to Make Money with Simple Cartoons"

A book everyone who likes to draw should have. It is free; no obligation. Simply address

FREE BOOK

CARTOONISTS' EXCHANGE
Dept. 432 Pleasant Hill, Ohio

Learn FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

Floristry and Floriculture. Big demand for arrangers and lecturers. Study at home. Learn to make professional sprays, wreaths, corsages, etc. Send for folder "Opportunities in Floristry."

NATIONAL LANDSCAPE INSTITUTE
Dept. D-2, 310 S. Robertson Blvd., Los Angeles 36

I MAKE ALL MY EXTRA MONEY IN MY SPARE TIME!

NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED! THIS EASY, PLEASANT WAY ★$50 IS YOURS

for selling 100 boxes greeting cards at $1. Stationery or napkins with name on. Send for selling plan & samples on approval. Costs nothing to try that everything turned upside down some day, and Rita wasn't wealthy and famous any more—would you have a place in your studio for Rita to work and teach?

MERIT, 370 PLANE ST., DEPT. 13, NEWARK 2, N. J.

CANSINO: Naturally, I would help her any time. You bet.

FISHER: You mean that if Rita—and this takes some imagination—were to come back home broke some day and not a Princess any more, you would give her a job? Do you think she'd be a good teacher?

CANSINO: Sure, I would. Be a good teacher? To tell the truth I dunno.

We talked in generalities for a time. One of Cansino's speech mannerisms is to punctuate his enthusiasms with, "You bet!" When I asked him if he'd go out of his way to meet Prince Aly when they returned, his "YOU BET!" seemed to crack the plaster off the ceiling.

As is always the case, I reserved my most explosive question for the last. "About these persistent rumors," I said. There's another one, an item in this morning's paper: 'After the birth of her baby, Rita is going to have an explosive announcement to make.' What about that?"

Eduardo shrugged and looked at the printed words with distaste.

a talk with rita . . .

I suggested that perhaps he might call her long distance in Lausanne, Switzerland, and we could both listen to what Rita had to say personally. I pointed out that a lot of reporters tried to call Rita and as a matter of policy she might not talk to me.

"Will you call her?" I urged.

"Sure," he replied, "But this is personal and I guess I wouldn't want anyone listening in."

I left, and Eduardo Cansino did call his daughter then. It took time to put through the transatlantic message and we didn't talk again for several hours.

"What did she say?" I asked.

"Ha!" he laughed. "We were so hysterical. She shouted at me. I shouted at her. It was several minutes we couldn't even understand each other. She is very happy, that I can tell you. I told her the reports of the Hollywood papers, what some of these writers were saying. She said to me, 'Don't get mixed up with the press. Daddy, believe me, there is nothing wrong. Don't worry about anything. Any kind of bad report is just ridiculous. You know that.'

"Then she said, 'Rebecca (her daughter by her former marriage to Orson Welles) is coming from Cannes tomorrow to join us here in Switzerland. We're just very, very happy.' You can believe me, too—my daughter Rita doesn't fool—or talk that way unless it is so."

Eduardo patted his hip pocket and pulled out a letter. He explained he really didn't have to make that call, but talking about Rita so much had made him want to, although he knew all the time everything was all right. He wouldn't let me read the letter, but he told me that in it Rita had said, "Aly is a wonderful man."

"You see," he declared, clinching the point, "I think that accounts for herself. Do you think so?"

I couldn't help grinning at his blunt conviction, spoken plainly in the language he has never bothered to completely master.

"Yup," I replied. "I think so. YOU BET!"

THE END

(Radio reporter George Fisher, author of the above story, may be heard on his "Confidential Closeups" program each Saturday at 5:45 Eastern Standard Time over an NBC network that extends from the East Coast as far west as Milwaukee.)

RELIEVES HEADACHE NEURALGIA NEURITIS PAIN FAST

Here's Why...

Anacin® is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients that are specially compounded to give FAST, LONG LASTING relief. Don't wait. Buy Anacin today.

FREE SAMPLES $0 for $1.00 PERSONAL STATIONERY

"IT'S EASY—IT'S FUN IT'S PROFITABLE" SELL GREETING CARDS Says C. L. EVANS

America's Outstanding New Plastic and Metallic Assortments

New type "stand-up" cards. Gift wrappings, children's books, Scented Stationery, many unusual novelties. Profits to 100%. Bonus. Request free samples exclusive Name Imprinted and Floral Stationery, free catalog and feature All-Occasion samples on approval. Special offers.

New England Art Publishers, North Abington 206, Mass.

WIFE QUITS SCRATCHING

Sufferers from the torturing itch caused by eczema, pimples, scales, scabies, athlete's foot, "factory" itch, and other itch troubles, are praising cooling, liquid D. D. D. Prescription. This time-proved medication—developed by Dr. D. D. Dennis—positively relieves that cruel, burning itch. Greaseless and stainless. Checks even the most intense itching in a jiffy. A 35c trial bottle proves its merits or your money back. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

Montgomery Clift

★ ★ ★ FREE!!!

Do you want a REAL PHOTOGRAPH of your FAVORITE MOVIE STAR?

Send fifteen cents for handling and mailing and receive a lovely photo direct from Hollywood and our beautifully illustrated catalog listing hundreds of STARS. ALSO ASK for COLORED BROCHURE describing most unusual OFFER yet made to movie fans. LIMITED SUPPLY ON ABOVE OFFER —SEND TODAY.

★ HOLLYWOOD STARS ★
4633 Hollywood Blvd., Box 9865
Dept. D5 Hollywood 27, Calif.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

JUEL CO., 4727 N. Damen. Dept. NOE-983, Chicago 25, Ill.

NOT ONE! NOT TWO! NOT FOUR! NOT SIX! but EIGHT FREE!

ON THIS AMAZING OFFER

YES—all 8 of these best-read books are YOURS FREE . . . to prove how much you will enjoy the thrilling love stories and the exciting adventure novels which Book League members receive regularly at trifling cost.

Ordinarily, you would get your Club Bonus Books at the rate of one free with every two Selections (or alternates) purchased. But on this special offer, we send you ALL 6 right away! AND IN THE SAME PACKAGE you get 2 MORE best-sellers free, as your new membership gift! Read the description of each popular book here. Then mail coupon for your 8 FREE BOOKS today!

Thousands Have Paid $18.00 For These 8 Books— But YOU Get Them FREE

—if you join the Book League Now

PRIDE'S CASTLE, by Frank Yerby—One woman sacrificed honor to win Pride Dawson; the other only PRETENDED goodness to become his wife. By author of "The Foxes of Harrow" and "The Vixens."

LORD JOHNNIE, by Leslie Turner White—The thrilling and passionate story of a dashing rogue. He risked death and torture to possess the woman who married him only because she expected him to die on the gallows!

REBECCA, by Daphne duMaurier—The diabolically clever tale of a strange woman who is never seen—told by an even stranger girl who is never named! The most astonishing plot in modern fiction—packed with suspense, chills and excitement!

THE GOLDEN FURY, by Marian Castle—Caroline Lawlor tried desperately to forget the scarlet secret of her past—yet continued to love the one man who made her remember it!

SHORT STORIES OF DeMAUPASSANT— Over 50 of the most daring stories ever written, by one of the great authors of all time! Amazing tales of love, intrigue, madness, jealousy, and passion that have often been imitated but never equaled!

THE QUEEN BEE, by Edna Lee— Eva Avery's ruthless heart stopped at nothing to destroy all who opposed her—from the rich husband she tricked into marriage, to the lonely young niece she pampered, then crushed!

ARABIAN NIGHTS—The fabulous "thousand-and-one" tales of adventure, magic, and exotic romance which have captivated millions of readers for generations. With new and daring illustrations.

BRIEF GAUDY HOUR, by Margaret Barnes—What shocking secret drove Anne Boleyn into the arms of Henry VIII —and changed the course of history? Here's the throbbing, intimate story of a bewitching girl who arose from nothing to become the Queen of England . . . a gripping historical drama you'll read straight through!

Mail WITHOUT MONEY to
BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA
Dept. DLG2, Garden City, N. Y.

Please send me at once—FREE—all eight of the books described on this page (worth $18 in publishers' editions) and enroll me as a member of the Book League. You may start my subscription with the current selection.

The best-selling book I choose each month may be either the regular Selection or any one of the other popular books described in the Club's monthly "Review." I am to pay only $1.49 (plus a few cents shipping charges) for each monthly book sent to me.

I may cancel my subscription at any time after buying twelve books, or I may continue to take advantage of the Club's book bargains for as much longer as I choose. I will then be entitled to additional bonus books—one for each two Selections or alternates I buy. There are no dues for me to pay; no further cost or obligation.

Mr. / Mrs. / Miss .....
Please print plainly

Address .....

Zone No.
City .....(if any)..... State .....

Slightly higher in Canada. Address: 105 Bond St., Toronto 2

Why "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club" Gives You $18 Worth of Books FREE

BOOK LEAGUE membership is an adventure in exciting reading. You never pay any dues or club fees—and every month you get your own choice of fine new novels of romance and adventure . . . best-sellers by authors like John Steinbeck, Ernest Hemingway, Somerset Maugham. And although the book you select may cost $3 or more at retail, YOU pay only the Club's bargain price of $1.49, plus few cents shipping charges. Imagine the great savings your membership will mean to you on the twelve novels you take during the year. Imagine, too, the pleasure you will get from your 8 free books, pictured above!

You Can Get MORE Free Bonus Books, too!

Moreover, there is NO LIMIT to the number of free bonus books which you may receive! If you remain in the Club, you will CONTINUE to get gift books like these, including not only popular best-sellers by today's great authors, but also masterpieces by writers like Shakespeare, Dumas, Balzac, Poe, etc. These are handsome volumes which grow into an impressive library which you will be proud to own and display to others.

No Need to Take Every REGULAR Selection

The best-selling book you receive each month need NOT be the Club's regular Selection. Each month you get, without extra charge, the Club's "Review," which describes other popular best-sellers; if you prefer one of these to the regular Selection, choose it instead. There are no membership dues; there is no further cost or obligation.

Send No Money— JUST MAIL COUPON NOW

Mail coupon today—without money and receive your BIG membership gift package containing the 8 splendid books described on this page . . . worth $18 in the publishers' editions!

You will also receive, as your first Selection, the current best-selling novel now being distributed to members. Then you will understand why the Book League has been known for years as "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club"! Mail coupon—without money—now!

BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA
Dept. DLG2, Garden City, N. Y.

these lovely new
SPRING DRESSES

Yours Without Cost!

and earn up to $23 WEEKLY BESIDES!

DOESN'T COST A CENT!
Choose any one of 125 dresses. This one is finest silky broadcloth, with a convertible neck and smooth, slim lines.

Imagine! You can take your pick of over 125 beautifully-styled, new Spring dresses without its costing you a cent! Yes, these stunning styles can be yours by simply taking advantage of an unusual opportunity offered right now by Fashion Frocks, Inc., America's largest direct-selling dress company. We have openings for new Representatives, to take orders in spare time and send them to us. We give you lovely dresses for your own use—and you can earn up to $23 a week besides! You get paid cash on the spot, every time you take an order. You work when and where you please—in whatever free time you may happen to have. And because of our special plan, house-to-house canvassing is not necessary!

YOU DON'T NEED EXPERIENCE! It's so simple, you'll wonder why you haven't done it before. Anybody can do it—without any experience of any kind. Just show your friends and neighbors our wonderful collection of beautiful new Spring styles, and you'll take in orders as fast as you can write. No woman can resist these miraculous bargains—many as low as $2.98. You'll show dozens of gorgeous dresses, each one with an original style touch that makes it different and becoming! Every dress carries the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval and our own unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back. There's an amazing variety of colors, weaves, and patterns—famous fabrics that are soft, rich, enduring. And a complete range of sizes to fit everyone you know—Misses, Half Sizes, Juniors, Stouts. When women see these exclusive styles—so different from run-of-the-mill dresses—so easy to buy without going to crowded stores—they just can't help but order 2 and 3 at a time! Isn't this a pleasant, dignified, easy way to earn good money in your spare time—get your own dresses, too, without a penny of cost. Begin now! You'll have a lovely Spring and Summer wardrobe before you know it!

RUSH COUPON — START EARNING The demand for Fashion Frocks is growing so rapidly that we need more Representatives to take care of it. Be sure you're one of them! Remember—you need no experience, no investment of any kind. Your Style Portfolio, with samples of America's finest fabrics, is absolutely free. Don't wait another day! Decide right now to send the coupon. There's no obligation, nothing to pay—now or ever. Paste the coupon on a postcard and mail it today!

Send for FREE Portfolio of Advanced

SPRING DRESSES

AS LOW AS $2.98

NOT A PENNY OF COST!
And you feel so well-dressed in this cool, striped cordspun frosted with embroidered eyelet.

NO MONEY TO PAY for fine-quality dresses like this daring, dashing cotton.

CANVASSING! NO INVESTMENT! CAN MAKE MONEY LIKE THIS:

Marie Patton, Illinois, really enjoyed earning an average of $39 a week, last year.

Mrs. Carl C. Birch, Maryland, says it's easy to take in an average of $36 a week, the way she did!

Mrs. Claude Burnett, Alabama, averaged $31.50 a week right in her home community.

PASTE THIS COUPON ON POSTCARD — mail now!

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Desk D2054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio

YES—I am interested in your opportunity to make money in spare time and get my own dresses without a penny of cost. Send me everything I need to start right away, without obligation.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *Zone*____ *State*_____

Fashion Frocks INC

DESK D2054 Cincinnati 25 Ohio

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT on 30-Day Test of Camel smokers . . .

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS!

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

Lovely Socialite

MRS. THOMAS W. PHIPPS

of Tryon, North Carolina, and New York City, registers her delight in Camel mildness and flavor after making her own 30-Day Test.

"Every puff of my test told me Camels are mild! They agree with my throat... they'll always be my cigarette!"

Start your own 30-Day Camel MILDNESS Test Today!

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

"CAMELS AGREE WITH MY THROAT!"

"Long before I got my doctor's report, I knew Camels agreed with my throat!" Mrs. M. Stelling, housewife.

"My test of Camels has been going on for years. They're a mild, great-tasting smoke." Francis Tyler, bobsledder.

"My test was revealing! I never knew smoking could be fun until I smoked Camels!" Jeane Hoffman, reporter.

Salesman Joe Bayard: "I've tried many brands. The 30-Day test convinced me. Camel is my cigarette from now on!"

"30 days of the mildest smoking I've ever enjoyed! I'm all for that Camel flavor." Miss Edith Stromberg, teacher.

Credit reporter William Ott: "The pleasantest test I ever made! Camels agree with my throat, and my taste!"

LANA TURNER'S Fight for Happiness!

modern screen

RCH
5c

FEB 1 7 1950

SPECIAL
Elizabeth Taylor
ISSUE

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
LEGAL RECORD
FEB. 21 1950

MAGAZINE · A DELL MAGAZINE · MAGAZINE

Lovelier arms Lovelier legs Lovelier you!

The Camay Beauty Bath gives your arms and legs, your shoulders and back the finest kind of complexion care. Yes, you'll be lovelier from head to toes, if you bathe every day with the new Bath-Size Camay. And you'll rise from your bath clean and refreshed, with your skin just touched with the delicate flower-like fragrance of Camay, The Soap of Beautiful Women.

Bath-Size Camay

for your CAMAY BEAUTY BATH!

Keep your WHOLE mouth WHOLESOME!

Your mouth and breath are more wholesome—sweeter, cleaner—when you guard against tooth decay and gum troubles both. So don't risk halfway dental care. Use doubly-effective Ipana care* for healthier teeth, healthier gums—better all-around protection for your whole mouth!

Fight tooth decay and gum troubles Both!

Only one leading tooth paste is designed to give this double protection*

If you want a healthier, more wholesome mouth, dentists warn you to protect your gums as well as your teeth.

For gum troubles not only cause more tooth losses than decay. Unhealthy teeth and gums BOTH breed unpleasant breath.

That's why you need to fight tooth decay and gum troubles BOTH—with doubly-effective Ipana care*.

No other dentifrice has proved more effective than Ipana in fighting tooth decay. For every time you use Ipana, you combat the bacteria that cause cavities.

And no other leading tooth paste is specially made to fight gum troubles, too. For Ipana's unique formula stimulates gum circulation—promotes healthier gums.

So get Ipana's double protection—to help keep your whole mouth wholesome! You'll like that wholesome Ipana flavor, too. It's refreshing.

Here's doubly-effective Ipana care

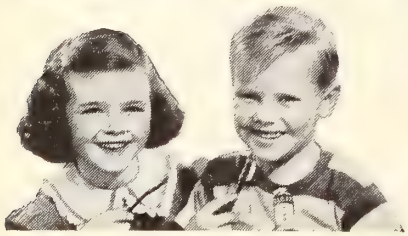
1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all tooth surfaces with Ipana at least twice a day. 2. Then massage gums the way your dentist advises. Ipana's formula reduces tooth decay, promotes healthier gums—helps keep your whole mouth wholesome! Get Ipana today.

NEW!



Big economy size Ipana saves you up to 23¢

A PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

Healthier teeth, healthier gums... IPANA for Both!

NOW! PROOF THAT BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

Exhaustive Research by Eminent Dental Authorities Proves How Using Colgate Dental Cream Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

Now, the toothpaste you use to clean your breath while you clean your teeth, offers a proved way to help stop tooth decay before it starts! 2 years' continuous research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay!

Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation to tissues and gums! And no change in flavor, foam, or cleansing action!

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of These Results!

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed helps remove acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices between teeth where food particles often lodge. No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth with Colgate Dental Cream as directed is a safe, proved way to help stop tooth decay!

MARCH, 1950

modern screen

special elizabeth taylor section

ELIZABETH THE QUEEN 44
HOW LIZ GREW UP ..... by Howard Taylor 46
FAMILY ALBUM 48
ELIZABETH THE TEENAGER 50
RESTLESS HEART ..... by Jim Henaghan 52
NEW ROLES FOR ELIZABETH 54

other stories

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S DIVORCE (complete court testimony) ..... Lloyd Shearer 22
DANGEROUS PARADISE (Ingrid Bergman) ..... by Arthur L. Charles 24
"SPEAKING OF MY SON . . ." (Peter Lawford) ..... by Florabel Muir 28
FIT FOR A KING (Clark Gable) ..... by Cynthia Miller 30
BRINGING UP JOAN (Joan Evans) ..... by Katherine Albert 32
MAN AT LARGE (Kirk Douglas) ..... by Jack Wade 34
LANA TURNER'S FIGHT FOR HAPPINESS ..... by Hedda Hopper 36
STRIKE! (Arlene Dahl, Shelley Winters, Douglas Dick) by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 38
THIS LOVE OF OURS (Ricardo Montalban) ..... by Georgianna Montalban 41
THREE'S NO CROWD (Mona Freeman) ..... by Duane Valentry 42
HOW ROY ROGERS FOUND FAITH ..... by Margaret Waite 56

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: Affectionately Yours (Elizabeth Taylor) 27

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 14
YOUR LETTERS 23
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 25
FASHION 64

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Elizabeth Taylor by Nickolas Muray
Other picture credits, page 97

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

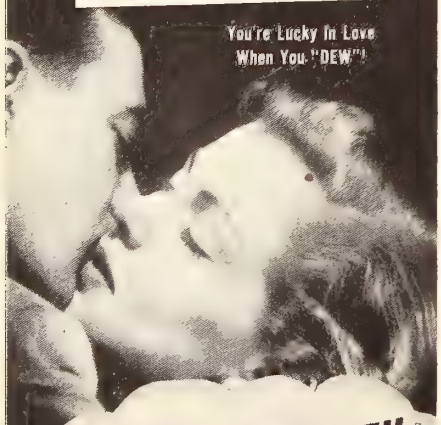
DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
JUDITH G. FIELD, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
BEVERLY OTT, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
GLORIA LAMPERT, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 4, March, 1950. Copyright, 1950, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious—if the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.

FEB 17 1950

with



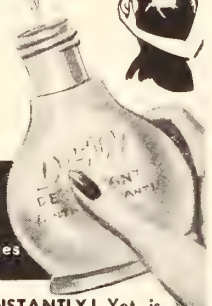
FRANK MORGAN
Marilyn Maxwell
James Gleason
Lewis Stone
Raymond Walburn

Screen Play by Robert Riley Crutcher • Based on a story by Albert Beich • Directed by GEORGE SIDNEY • Produced by Z. WAYNE GRIFFIN
A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

No other Deodorant gives you this thrilling

6-POINT PROTECTION

You're Lucky In Love When You "DEW"!



"DEW"®

SPRAY DEODORANT

JUST SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE! "DEW" SPRAYS ITSELF ON!

Only "DEW" Gives You All 6 Important Advantages

1 STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY! Yet is absolutely safe. Can't irritate normal skin. "DEW" protects you, protects your clothes.

2 CHECKS PERSPIRATION! Keeps you socially secure 24 hours a day.

3 CONTAINS RETSELANE!® Only "DEW" can use this amazing new ingredient.

4 SAVES MONEY! Year's supply only 98¢ plus tax—less than 2¢ a week!

5 DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! Not messy. Never touches hands, nails. Dries quickly. Men, too, like "DEW".

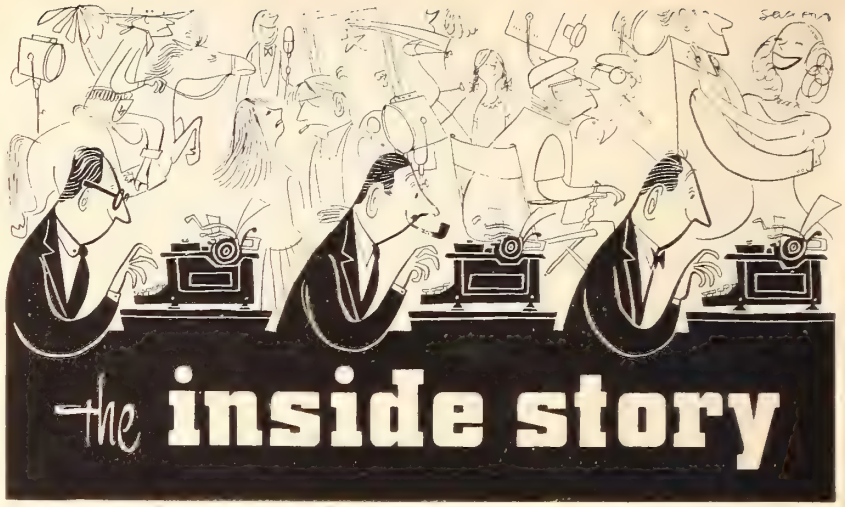
6 MAGICAL SPRAY BOTTLE! Unbreakable, squeezable.

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY ★ Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

WHEN YOU "DEW" YOU DON'T OFFEND

SAFE EYE-GENE

EYE-OPENING TEST THRILLS MANY!



Eyes so tired you want to close them for relief? . . . Clear, expressive eyes are fascinating. 2 drops of soothing EYE-GENE in each eye floats away that tired, strained, irritated look and feeling in seconds—dramatically lights up your whole expression! Safe EYE-GENE is like a tonic for your eyes. Use it every day. 25c, 60c, $1 in handy eye-dropper bottles at Druggists.

2 drops make this striking difference in SECONDS!

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY ★ Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

the inside story

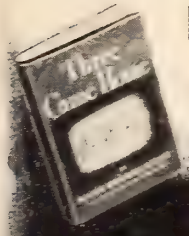
IMPRESSED WITH our great beauty on the day we were born, our fond and foolish parents started a photographic album of us and kept it up in desultory fashion for a few years. One snapshot shows us sitting precariously on a Shetland Pony (stuffed) and as a poignant reminder of our roller-skating days, there is one looking as gap-toothed and charming as a Hallowe'en lantern. We'd grown to love those mementoes of our flown youth—or at least thought them fairly indicative of the human race—but that was before we'd seen Elizabeth Taylor's album. Here was perfection! Here was beauty! Inspired, we forgot all about our ego and decided to devote a whole 12-page section to the lovely star. Beginning on page 44 you'll find stories and pictures about her childhood, her career and—more important—the men in her life!

JOAN EVANS' parents, writers Katherine Albert and Dale Eunson, knew they had an actress on their hands almost immediately. It seems every time she cut a finger or fell off her kiddie car, Joan would go into an act that sounded like the last minutes of Macbeth. Later, in addition to tragedienne-type problems, they had adolescent ones as well. You see . . . But we'll let Katherine Albert tell you all about them in Bringing Up Joan on page 32.

KIRK DOUGLAS is a Man Of Mystery. At least he does things that strike us as mysterious. For instance, out of the black night, he'll appear at a friend's house. Purpose? Oh, he just wants a shower, that's all. Don't think he hasn't a shower at his own house. He's the proud possessor of house, shower and two small boys. Well, maybe you can clear up the mystery. You'll find it on page 34 under Man At Large.

COMING FROM a long, long line of British generals, lance corporals, subalterns and pukka sahibs, Peter Lawford was almost fated to follow in their footsteps. But he saw a movie once and decided that was for him. There was lots of talk about his being "cut off without a penny" but Pete managed to survive nicely, thank you—as his mother relates in Speaking of My Son on page 28.

TO OUR completely unbiased eye (our other eye is just slightly unbiased), our April issue shapes up beautifully. John Derek . . . Ruth Roman . . . Doris Day . . . Betsy Drake . . . Jeanne Crain . . . they're all in it!



ANYBODY WITH two bits is just plain foolish if he doesn't run out now and get his copy of HOLLYWOOD YEARBOOK. It's crammed full of every important fact and event that took place in Hollywood this year. MODERN SCREEN's ex-bosses, Al Delacorte and Henry Malmgreen, have put some wonderful stories and exciting pictures in it for you. We think they've done a splendid, magnificent, glorious, sterling and peachy job, and that you will, too. Remember— HOLLYWOOD YEARBOOK.

What her eyes have seen! what her heart has known! what her love has lived through!

This is a True Story... one of the great personal stories of our time... told the way it happened – to one woman who will live it forever!

From the best-selling Book-of-the-Month and Reader's Digest sensation by Agnes Newton Keith!

DARRYL F. ZANUCK presents a shattering new experience for you!

Three Came Home

starring

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

with Patric Knowles · Florence Desmond · Sessue Hayakawa
Directed by JEAN NEGULESCO · Produced by NUNNALLY JOHNSON Screen Play by Nunnally Johnson · Based on the Book by Agnes Newton Keith

20th CENTURY-FOX

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

Geary Steffen and Jane Powell, obviously finding married life a happy undertaking, attend the Hollywood première of Battleground. Such "big" openings are occurring more and more often.

Janet Leigh thanks a fan outside the Battleground première for his well-displayed admiration. Janet's escort, Arthur Loew, Jr., thoughtfully studies the sentiment—which he probably shares.

Joan Crawford is escorted to the première of The Hasty Heart by daughter Christina and son Christopher. Joan recently complained she spends most evenings at home—wishing for a date!

Ty Power, Linda Christian and the Macdonald Careys turned out for the 12 O'clock High première. With a black velvet dress, Linda wears a turquoise mandarin jacket—and an oriental hair-do.

Cary Grant and Betsy Drake look loving but thoughtful—as is quite appropriate for a couple on the verge of flying to Arizona to be married. The ceremony, at first planned for a week earlier, took place Christmas.

June Haver and Kirk Douglas display the golden apples presented to them by the Hollywood Women's Press Club as 1949's "most cooperative" actress and actor. "Most uncooperative" were H. Lamarr and H. Bogart.

■ I can tell my readers of MODERN SCREEN that the lovely, blonde Lady Sylvia Ashley Fairbanks Stanley had no idea that she was going to marry "King" Clark Gable 48 hours before she did on Tuesday, December 20.

The previous Saturday she and Clark had lunched with Minna Wallis, who'd re-introduced them at a dinner months ago. That night they had dinner with Charles Feldman and agreed to dine with him again Tuesday.

Tuesday morning, the telephone rang and Sylvia said to Charlie, "Something has happened. We cannot have dinner with you, but you'll hear from us later." The "something" was her elopement with Gable! Charlie didn't know a thing about it until he heard it over the radio.

Minna said she was never so surprised in her life. She said that Clark and Sylvia hadn't been with each other very much since their meeting because Sylvia had been in Europe most of the time. She slipped back into town about two weeks before the wedding and then the romance started again.

How did Clark happen to marry the three-times-married Sylvia, called one of the most handsome women in the world and named on every best dressed list? Well, I'll tell you:

Sylvia, I think, reminds me a little of Carole Lombard. When he first married Carole, she didn't like to fish, hunt, and was not an outdoors girl. But she adapted herself to Clark's ways, and I think Sylvia will do the same.

After all, she is English and she enjoys outdoor life, even though she seems to be a hot-house plant and looks so fragile.

Let me tell you a cute little story about the elopement you may not have heard:

The morning of the day they secretly planned to drive up to San Luis Obispo and get their license, Clark called his bride-to-be. "Honey," he said, "We are going to have to use your car. Mine was sideswiped driving home from your house last night, and the whole side is smashed in! And that little English car of mine is too conspicuous—they'll spot it!"

So King Gable had to borrow his Lady's automobile to rush off and get married.

Howard Strickling, head of MGM publicity and Clark's best friend, who was best man, told me: "During the ceremony, tears came into Sylvia's eyes and started to run down her face. When Clark turned to her after the ceremony and started to take her in his arms, he first kissed her eyelids—and if you ask me, that big lug's eyes were moist, too. But happy! I haven't seen Clark that happy in years and years."

The whole thing was so sudden, they haven't made up their minds whether they will live in his house, or her house at the beach, or whether they will buy a new place in Beverly Hills.

But before he left, Clark left word that the master bedroom suite at his house was to be completely redecorated while they are gone. His instructions were, "'Get my hunting and fishing things out of there, make it look more—frilly and feminine!"

All I can add is—I wish them worlds of happiness and joy and I sincerely believe they have found it.

(For further details on Clark Gable's marriage, see page 30.—ED.)

* * *

Another major-star marriage—though of course, by no means the surprise that Clark Gable's was—was Cary Grant's to Betsy Drake on Christmas Day. For many months this marriage had been rumored as being about to take place, but while Cary had definitely said that he hoped to make Betsy his bride, she had refused to say publicly whether or not she'd have him for a husband right up to the time of their elopement. But it had been obvious that Cary was the only man in her life.

The couple was flown from Hollywood to Phoenix, Arizona, by Howard Hughes in his own private plane and they were married very quietly at a desert home 20 miles from the city. The Reverend Stanley M. Smith performed the marriage rites.

The couple had been all set to fly to Phoenix to be married on December 19, but there was such a downpour of rain that flying was unsafe. I heard about this at the time, but considered it to be merely another of the wild rumors about them.

But I did know that they planned to be married sometime in the holidays. I had learned this from something Cary said one afternoon when he and Betsy came to my house for tea.

Cary first met Betsy, and was immediately smitten, two years ago when they were aboard ship returning from England.

For both of them, this marriage certainly have a

"party hair-do"
all day long

with Gayla HOLD·BOB*
bobby pins

Lovely hair-do . . . lovely dress—of course you feel glamorous when you're ready for a party! Now keep that "party look" all day long with Gayla HOLD-BOB bobby pins! So easy to open. Hold better! Gayla HOLD-BOB sets curls beautifully, keeps hair-dos lovely. There is no finer bobby pin.

More women use
Gayla HOLD-BOB than all other bobby pins combined!

GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED
© 1950 G. P. I. • T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. CHICAGO, ILL.

Coleen Gray, Bing Crosby's leading lady in Paramount's Riding High, helps Santa at a N.Y.C. kids' party given by Dell Publishing Co. with cooperation of the Salvation Army. The other assistant is Herb Polesie, panel member of Mutual's 20 Questions radio and TV show.

came as the nicest Christmas present Santa Claus could have thought of! Having such congenial tastes, they should be very happy together.

* * *

When I walked in to Don Loper's cocktail party for newlyweds Janet Thomas and Gogi (he's the famous New York restaurateur) and saw Bing Crosby there, I nearly fell over. For years, Hollywood hostesses have been trying to bait Bing to attend their cocktail parties—and no go.

But I can tell you—when he does show up, he has a good time for himself. No sitting in corners and not mixing for El Bingo. And, believe it or not, he was a picture of sartorial splendor, wearing a dark blue suit, white shirt and gray tie—très élégant.

Soon after Bing arrived, Cornel Wilde came in wearing slacks and a turtle-necked white sweater minus a coat.

Bing took a look at him and cracked, "He looks like I'm supposed to!"

Come to think of it—I think Emily Post should have a word with some of our stars about dressing correctly for the occasion. I've never seen such an assorted array of clothes for this affair, which was quite formal.

Angela Lansbury was in a strictly tailored suit, no hat or gloves. Sylvia Sidney had on a black dress with red chandelier earrings that hung to her shoulders. Mrs. Van Heflin, Mrs. Reggie Gardiner, Mrs. Lee Bowman were all in correct cocktail dresses and looking very stunning.

Judy Garland, too, was all dressed up in a black dress, feathered hat and—something new—a feathered bag to match.

* * *

Esther Williams and Ben Gage opened a Western-type café which serves very good food. You would think the place would be jumpin' and jivin' with fans hoping to see the beautiful proprietress and her star friends, wouldn't you?

But, for some reason unknown to experts, the fans have not yet discovered it and continue to hang around the old standbys, such as Mocambo and Ciro's. So, many well-known stars dine at Esther's minus autograph hounds.

Listenin' Post: Isn't there a secret love in Patricia Neal's life she isn't telling us about? I think there is. . . . Somebody got to Shelley Winters and told her she wasn't the type to go around looking "mousey," minus lipstick and with her hair uncurled. So she is back to make-up and good grooming, thank goodness. . . . Their names aren't too much alike but Macdonald Carey gets lots of mail intended for Wendell Corey and vice versa.

I know how much John Derek hates stories about how super-handsome he is. But this is too good to keep:

The other night, at a dinner party, John was seated next to a beautiful, red-headed glamor girl. That is, he was supposed to be seated next to her.

But, before dinner was announced, the redhead got a peek at the seating arrangement and complained violently to the hostess. "I don't want to sit next to him. He's prettier than I am!"

* * *

So you think you want to be a movie star! Listen to Betty Hutton's daily routine while making Annie Get Your Gun:

Up at six o'clock. Showers, pins up her hair in a bandana, cold-creams her face (because of constant use of heavy studio make-up plus the dry California climate).

A romp in the nursery with her adorable daughters until 6:45. Then breakfast (poached egg on toast, grapefruit and black coffee) promptly at seven.

The studio at 7:30 with the next hour devoted to shampooing and dressing her hair, getting on her make-up and her costume.

If it's a dance or song day, she goes immediately to the rehearsal stage to run through a routine she has already rehearsed for days. Reason for the "run through" is to see how the dance or song goes when she is dressed in the costume she actually wears on the screen. Sometimes it's found that a costume will hinder a dance step, so quick adjustments must be made.

Then on to the set where she works (and how!) until 12:30. Before she has her lunch, Betty lies down for 15 minutes. The rest relaxes her and keeps her from eating on a "nervous" stomach.

"The Indian bit the dust...but the dust bit me!"

says MAUREEN O'HARA, starred in UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL'S "COMMANCHE TERRITORY"

SHOOTING INDIANS IN "COMMANCHE TERRITORY" WAS HARDER ON MY HANDS THAN ON THE INDIANS! DUST TORTURED MY SKIN . . .

I DROVE horses for days with reins rasping my palms . . .

AND GRITTY alkali dust sifting all over my hands . . .

BUT JERGENS LOTION kept them from looking rough and ugly . . .

SO THAT they were soft and lovely for close-ups.

BEING A LIQUID, Jergens is absorbed by thirsty skin.

CAN YOUR LOTION OR HAND CREAM PASS THIS "FILM TEST"?

To soften, a lotion or cream should be absorbed by upper layers of skin. Jergens Lotion contains quickly-absorbed ingredients doctors recommend – no heavy oils that merely coat the skin. Proof? Water won't "bead" on hand smoothed with Jergens Lotion (left hand) as with a lotion or cream that leaves a heavy, oily film (right hand).

YOU CAN PROVE it with this simple test described above . . .

YOU'LL SEE why Jergens Lotion is my beauty secret . . .

Jergens Lotion

used by more women than any other hand care in the world still 10c to $1 plus tax

USED by Hollywood stars 7 to 1 over other hand cares!

Perma-scrub is here!

Makes cleaning pots and pans child's play

You've never known such a quick, easy, pleasant way to clean pots and pans! Perma-scrub actually lifts off burned or caked food or grease in a flash. No more sore fingers from metal particles. No more dishwater hands! Comes in many gay colors. Get a Perma-scrub today and banish scouring bother.

OUTMODES OLD-STYLE SCOURING PADS

AT LEADING VARIETY STORES

Modglin Co., Inc., Los Angeles 65, Calif.
New York 16 • Chicago 9 • New Orleans 13

proud parents of a baby girl

At 9:40 in the morning on December 28, Rita Hayworth gave birth to a five-and-a-half pound baby girl at the Montchoisi Clinic in Lausanne, Switzerland. The baby, Aly Khan announced, will be named Yasmin—which is Persian for Jasmine.

Rita, wearing a mink coat over her pajamas, had been rushed to the hospital seven hours before by Aly in one of his fast automobiles. Like many another expectant father, he rather lost his head when his wife told him the blessed event was imminent. For days he had made elaborate plans with the local police and the management of the Palace Hotel, where he and Rita were staying. When the time came, Rita was to be driven carefully to the hospital with a large police escort. However, in the excitement, Aly forgot all about the escort, helped Rita into his car, and sped to the Clinic at 60 miles an hour.

As soon as they had left, hotel employees locked all the hotel doors—so that none of the small army of reporters and photographers staying there could hold things up. After Rita and Aly had a five-minute head start, the doors were unlocked—and the eager gentlemen of the press started in hot pursuit. Aly, who is famous for his fast driving, easily outraced them. In fact, he also outraced the police escort, who belatedly received the news in the form of a secret password given the chief of police over a private telephone by Rita just before she departed.

Aly, unshaven and rumpled after his hours of walking the corridor outside the delivery room but obviously overjoyed, made the announcement to the press at 11:13 that morning. He said, "Rita is all right . . . There were no complications . . . Everything is all right, but Rita suffered severely. The nurse brought the baby into Rita's room so Rita could see her. Rita is very happy."

A spokesman for Rita's doctor, Dr. Rudolphe Rochat—who has delivered babies for several European royal families—had quoted him a few hours before the birth of the baby as saying that surgery might be necessary to aid the delivery. None was, though ether was administered.

Aly was asked the color of his new daughter's hair. He laughed and replied that the baby was born without hair. (But it soon grew in—dark brown.)

Until a few days of the infant's arrival, Rita had insisted, despite numerous reports that her child was about to be born, that she did not expect it until February. Aly told reporters, "Premature babies are not unusual in my family. My previous children were early babies."

Though Rita was born a Roman Catholic, her new child will be raised in the Moslem faith of Aly.

Back to work from 1:30 straight through until six P. M., when she returns to her dressing room for another 15 minute "cat nap" before starting home.

She insists on being home by seven so she can be with the children while they are being put to bed. The next hour, she and Ted Briskin devote to relaxing and talking over the doings of the day.

At eight o'clock she is in bed where she is served a steak, medium-rare, and a whole sliced tomato. Right after dinner—Lights Out!

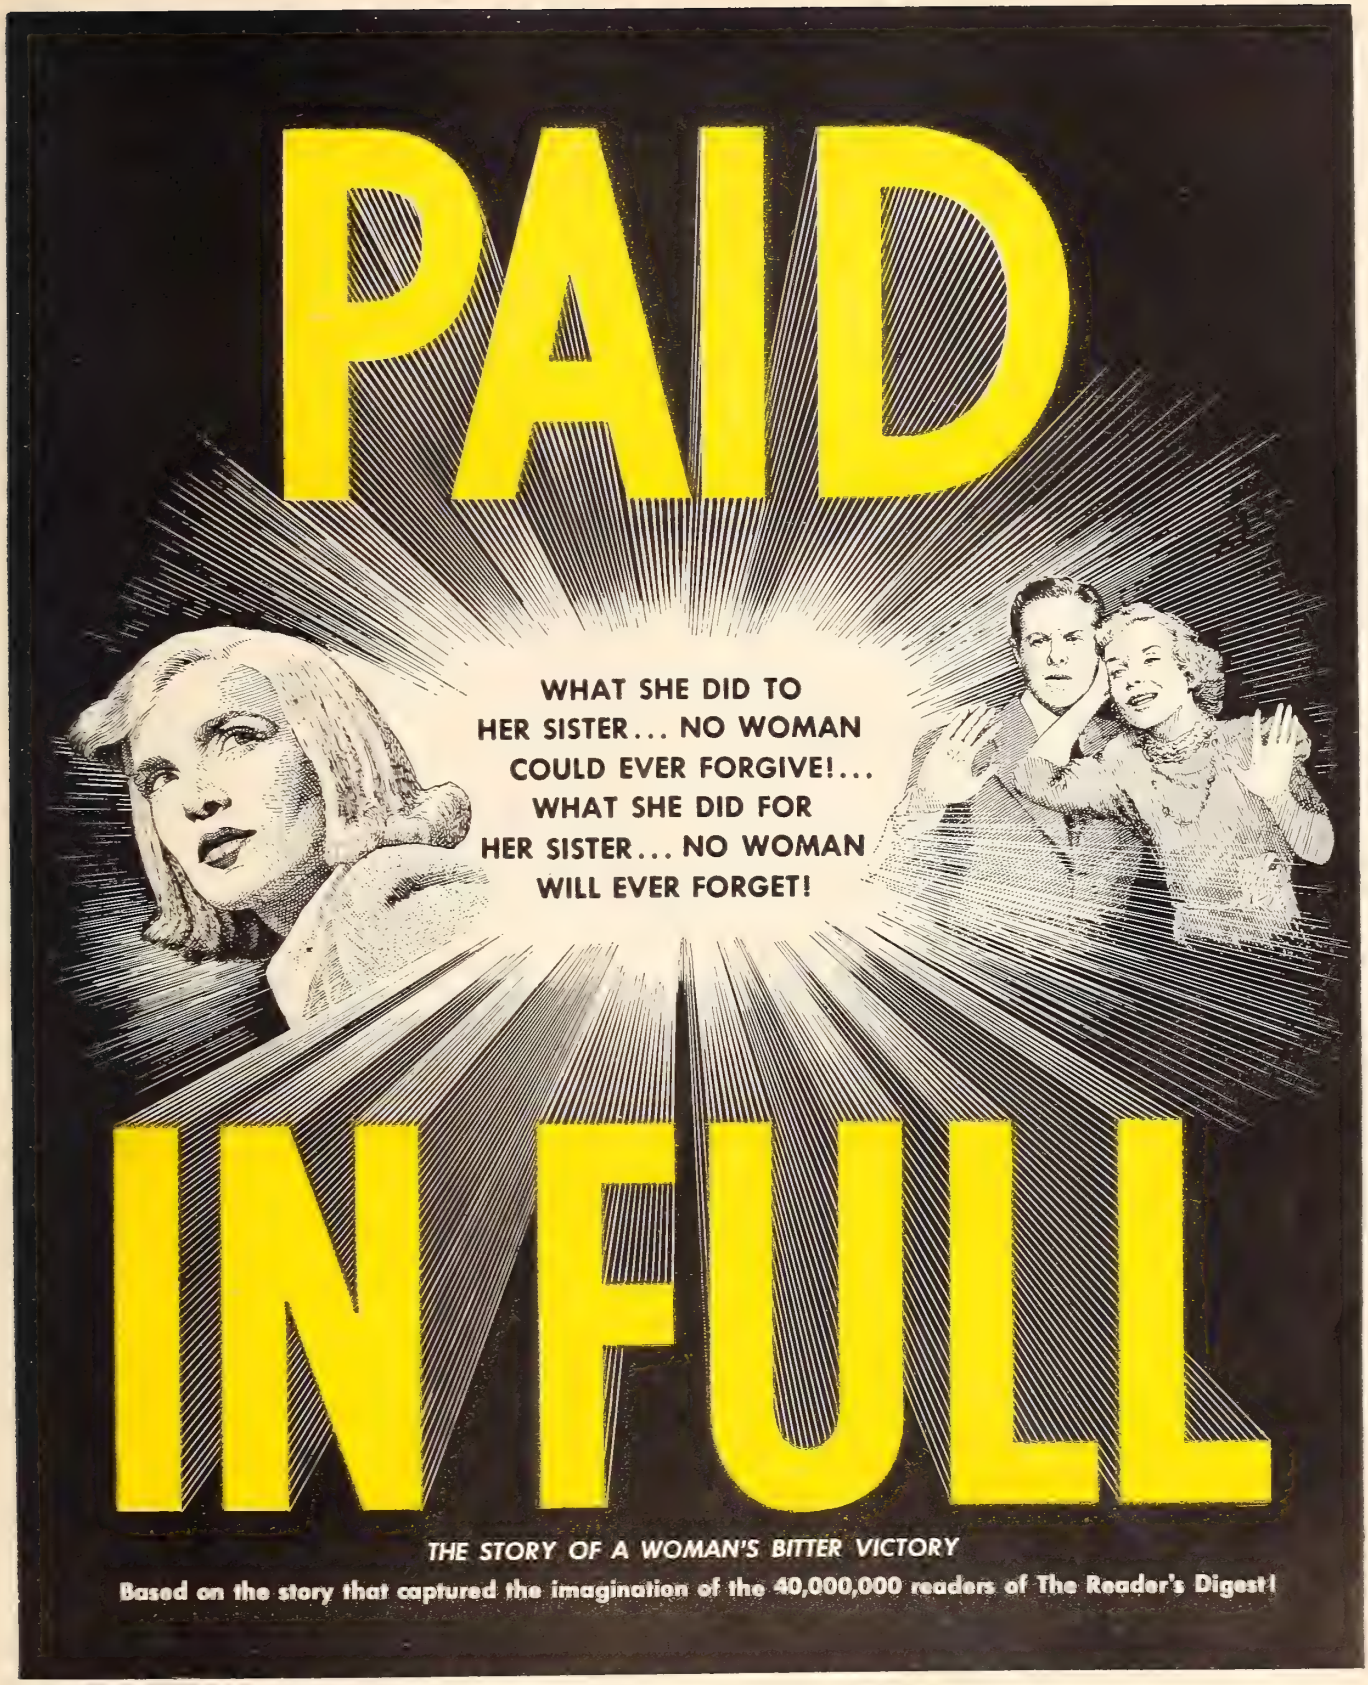
"It's tough to miss out on all the parties and good times," says Betty, "but it's the only way I can do it!"

* * *

I don't know how in the world Arlene Dahl kept from catching pneumonia at her own cocktail party. In a pouring-down rain, Arlene, wearing a décolleté, off-the-shoulder, beige lace gown, insisted on opening the door herself and greeting her guests, instead of leaving it to a maid or a butler.

'Twas a nice hospitable thing to do—but, oh, brrrrrrrr!

It was Arlene's first big party since she clicked as a star and she proved herself a very charming hostess. And original, too. Even though it was the Christmas holiday season, Arlene skipped the obvious decorations and concentrated on a Swedish motif.



Believe me, the hungry gents certainly appreciated the big smorgasbord spread with wonderful cheeses and spiced meats on a huge table. No trays of little hors d'oeuvres for Miss Dahl's guests—and the men particularly enjoyed her idea.

It was hard to tell which handsome bachelor was her beau. Cornel Wilde came solo, so did Lew Ayres and Jack Kennedy, son of former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy.

Two of the prettiest gals there were Esther Williams, in a red velvet cocktail dress, and Maureen O'Sullivan (Mrs. John Farrow) in a stunning blue suit with a matching hat trimmed in red.

* * *

I felt sad talking to John Agar over the phone just a week before Christmas. He had just returned from his p.a. tour (which was

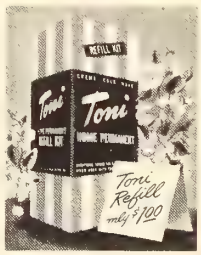
Robert Cummings · Lizabeth Scott · Diana Lynn

in HAL WALLIS' production "PAID IN FULL" with Eve Arden

Directed by WILLIAM DIETERLE · Screenplay by Robert Blees and Charles Schnee

Paramount Pictures

Which Twin has the Toni?



Jean and Jo Ann Corbett of Burbank, Calif. "Toni always gives me a wave that's soft and natural-looking," says the Toni Twin. Can you tell which is she? See answer below.

Hair styles in this picture by Don Rito, famous Hollywood hair stylist.

Toni looks as lovely as a $20 permanent —feels as soft as naturally curly hair*

Now—any day, any time—for only one dollar you can get a wave that's caressably soft—like naturally curly hair . . . and guaranteed to look just as lovely, last just as long as a beauty shop permanent costing $20. (*Including shampoo and set.)

What's Toni's secret? It's the lotion. Toni waving lotion is an exclusive creme formula developed through years of research. This gentle-action formula was especially created to give you a wave that's free of harsh frizziness—a wave that feels and behaves like naturally curly hair. But remember, only Toni Home Permanent gives you this superb waving lotion.

Wonderful results—again and again! What better proof of Toni quality! Toni is the only permanent that has given over 67 million lovely, long-lasting waves. Some women have used Toni ten times or more and say their waves are always soft, natural-looking, easy to manage. Letters of praise come from women with every type of hair—even gray, bleached and baby-fine hair. So whether you are buying your first Toni Home Permanent or your tenth, you can be sure of getting a wave that looks as lovely as a $20 permanent—feels as soft as naturally curly hair. Jean, the twin on the left, has the Toni.

P. S. For complete hair care get Toni Creme Shampoo and Toni Creme Rinse, too.

"I'm not a twin, but since I tried Toni, no other permanent will do for me," says Mrs. Myron Albertson of Los Angeles. "Toni works wonders for my baby-fine hair. Never frizzes it . . . always gives me a soft, natural-looking wave."

TONI SPIN CURLERS

twice as easy - twice as fast

All plastic. No rubber bands. They grip the hair . . . spin up the curls . . . and lock with a flick of the finger.

Available in combination with Toni Refill . . . only $2.29

Robert Taylor gets some authoritative six-gun pointers from old-time Western star Hoot Gibson who visited Bob on the set of MGM's Ambush.

not a howling success, by the way) and he seemed so depressed.

He was also annoyed over stories that he was seeking a reconciliation with Shirley.

"I haven't seen Miss Temple (note the 'Miss Temple') or my baby since I got home." he said. "But I have gifts for Linda Susan and I've been told I can bring them over Christmas."

I told him I had received a good deal of fan mail praising him for his attitude of silence after Shirley's divorce charges.

"Thank you," he said. "But I can't talk about that. I wish you would do me a favor: Please explain to the fans that I can't answer their letters or questions on that subject. It goes," said John huskily, "too deep."

(For a complete account of Shirley's divorce trial, see page 22.—Ed.)

* * *

Ever since Bob Precht was voted "the great lover" of the University of California at Los Angeles campus, and earned the honor of escorting Elizabeth Taylor to Bob Hope's "Great Lover" ball, his life has been just plain hades.

"My fraternity brothers won't leave me alone," Bob reports glumly. "Everybody calls me 'lover-boy'. Lover boy! Every class I step into, they all start singing, 'I Can't Get Started With You'. Ugh—that's all I got to say! Ugh!"

But when he was asked if the date with luscious Liz wasn't worth it, Bob grinned.

"She sure is a swell girl," he said guardedly, "and so are her folks!" I hear he didn't dare go further than that—on account of he has a girl of his own.

I must say Elizabeth did a cute thing to keep Bob in good standing with his campus sweetheart. The night Liz stepped out with Bob, she sent his girl a great big orchid corsage with a note, "I'm sure he had rather be with you!"

* * *

The Way The Fan Mail Goes:

Most of you are still bewildered and puzzled over the break-up of Shirley Temple's marriage and I hardly received a letter last month that didn't mention the break.

Kirk Douglas is becoming more and more popular with all of you. You like the way Kirk answers his mail and treats the autograph boys and girls.

John Derek has the younger girls doing nip-ups—and after having him on my radio show, I can tell you he is just as nice as you think he is.

Guess that's all for this month. See you next month!

"Young Man with a Horn"

HOAGY CARMICHAEL · JUANO HERNANDEZ

DIRECTED BY MICHAEL CURTIZ · PRODUCED BY JERRY WALD

SCREEN PLAY BY CARL FOREMAN AND EDMUND H. NORTH • FROM THE NOVEL BY DOROTHY BAKER • MUSICAL DIRECTION BY RAY HEINDORF

You'll see it soon—following the World Premiere at Radio City Music Hall, New York!

Picture of the Month

In Warners' deeply moving The Hasty Heart, Ronald Reagan, Patricia Neal and some British Army buddies try hard to cheer up Scot Richard Todd.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

THE HASTY HEART

■ The Hasty Heart is an exceptionally moving film. Its hero is a proud and sullen Scotsman named Laughlin McLaughlin, wonderfully portrayed by Richard Todd, an excellent young newcomer—a newcomer to me, at any rate. Lachie, as McLaughlin is called, is a soldier, wounded in Burma. After an operation, he wants to go home to Scotland, but instead he's transferred to a new ward. The doctor speaks to the nurse (Patricia Neal) in charge of the new ward and to the ward's five men patients (one of them's Ronald Reagan) before Lachie arrives. Tells them Lachie is going to die. One kidney's gone, the other's defective. So be nice to him. Lachie's hard to be nice to, though. Doesn't want any friends because he can't stand to feel beholden to anybody. He's saved up his money and he's going to buy a farm in Scotland. He won't even spare enough to get himself a kilt, though he's always yearned for one. He's maddening, but the men are sorry for him, give him a birthday party, complete with kilt. This breaks his shell. He says nobody in his whole lonely life ever gave him something for nothing before. He's a new man, even asks the nurse to marry him, and she promises. The blow falls when headquarters sends word that Lachie can go home to Scotland if he wants, and he discovers that this special favor has been granted because his days are numbered. Now he's sure the men and the nurse have been kind to him only out of pity, and he feels fiercely betrayed. I won't say any more, except that the picture's climax is painfully moving. When I saw it the audience wept buckets.

Dry skin! "My skin was terribly dry before using Noxzema," says pretty Margaret MacKenzie. "Now it's my regular night cream. I like Noxzema because of its soft texture—and because it's greaseless. It's my regular hand cream, too."

Sensitive skin! "I have very sensitive skin—and need a good protective cream," says lovely Effie Sorenson. "Ever since I started using Noxzema as my regular beauty aid and hand cream, my skin seems to look softer and smoother."

LOOK LOVELIER IN 10 DAYS ...OR YOUR MONEY BACK

Doctor Develops New Home Beauty Routine! Helps 4 out of 5 Women in Clinical Tests!

● Practically every woman has some little thing wrong with her skin. If you're bothered with dry, rough skin, externally-caused blemishes, or similar skin problems—here's news!

A famous doctor, using one cream—medicated Noxzema—developed a New Beauty Routine! In clinical tests it helped 4 out of 5 women. Here's all you do:

Morning—1. "CREAMWASH WITH NOXZEMA." Apply Noxzema all over your face. With a wet face cloth actually wash your face with Noxzema—as you would with soap. Note how really clean your skin looks and feels.

2. After drying face, smooth on a protective film of greaseless Noxzema as a powder base.

Blemishes!* "I was very self-conscious about the condition of my skin," says attractive Margaret Young. "Then I used Noxzema as my powder base and night cream. Now my skin always looks so much softer, smoother."

*Externally-caused

Evening—3. Before retiring, again "CREAMWASH WITH NOXZEMA." See how easily you wash away make-up, the day's accumulation of dirt and grime—how clean it leaves your face.

4. Now massage Noxzema into your face. Pat a little extra over any blemishes* to help heal them. Noxzema is greaseless—no messy pillow smears!

After using Noxzema only a day or two—notice how the dead, dry cells on the surface of your skin start to flake off. Good! That's what you want! Try it yourself! See if you aren't thrilled to find your complexion looking softer, smoother, lovelier!

Remember—this new "Home Facial" was clinically tested by doctors with amazing results! Follow the doctor's 4 simple steps for 10 days. If not satisfied with results—return the jar—your money cheerfully refunded. But you will be delighted! See if you don't agree your skin looks softer, smoother, lovelier in 10 days with medicated Noxzema. At all drug and cosmetic counters. Ask for the Limited Time Special—regular 40¢ jar for only 29¢ plus tax. Get yours today!

Want your hands to look softer, whiter in just 24 hrs.?

Are your hands unattractive—or really lovely? If they're red, rough or chapped from dishwashing, housework—try medicated, greaseless Noxzema! In actual Doctors' Tests, this dainty greaseless cream helped 9 out of 10 women to softer, lovelier-looking hands—in just 24 hours!

Money-Back Offer

Try it yourself! Tonight—smooth dainty, snow-white Noxzema on your hands. Look for improvement by tomorrow morning. See if you don't agree your hands look softer, whiter, lovelier—in just 24 hours! If not completely satisfied with results—return the jar—your money cheerfully refunded. Our address is on every jar. But you will be delighted to find your hands look whiter—feel softer, smoother. Try Noxzema Skin Cream tonight—and see!

Sonja Henie says "I do"

How to Lose Weight and Look Lovelier

Now! Reduce—and look lovelier while you are doing it! Lose weight the way Nature intended you to! A quick, natural way with no risk to health. If you follow the Ayds plan you should feel healthier, look better while reducing—and have a lovelier figure!

This is because the Ayds way to reduce is a natural way. When you take Ayds before meals, as directed, you can eat what you want . . . all you want. Ayds contains no harmful drugs. It calls for no strenuous diet . . . no massage . . . no exercise.

Ayds is a specially made candy containing health giving vitamins and minerals. It acts by reducing your desire for those extra fattening calories . . . works almost like magic. Easily and naturally you should begin to look slimmer, more beautiful day by day, when you follow the Ayds Plan.

Women all over America now have lovelier figures with the help of Ayds. Users report losses up to 10 pounds with the very first box. In fact, you lose weight with the first box ($2.89) or your money back. Get Ayds from your druggist or department store, today—a full month's supply, $2.89.

SLIM THE WAY THE STARS SLIM

● "I do recommend Ayds to any woman who has a problem with her figure," says Sonja Henie, Star of the Sonja Henie Hollywood Ice Review. "I keep myself in trim all the time with the help of Ayds. I can't think of a better way to reduce."

The Loveliest Women in the World take AYDS

South Sea Sinner: Shelley Winters is an island singer so popular with the boys she manages to get deported regularly to prevent rivalry.

SOUTH SEA SINNER

Cast: Macdonald Carey, Shelley Winters, Helena Carter, Luther Adler.
Universal-International

Shelley Winters acts mostly like Mae West (only with a crew cut) in a drama of low life on the high seas. Shelley sings in dives in the South Pacific, but she's forever being deported from one island to another because of trouble over men. She's singing on the island of Oraca, in a dive owned by Luther Adler (a greasy cuss) when along comes Doc (a pharmacist's mate in the Navy) and Macdonald Carey (a mystery man). Doc (Frank Lovejoy) quits his ship to stay near Shelley, for whom he's conceived a wholehearted admiration, but Carey's got other things on his mind. Carey's been framed by officials of the rubber company he used to work for. These officials cooperated with the Japanese, during the war, but they'd fixed it for Carey to take the rap, and now Carey's back to discover the truth. Shelley eventually manages to tempt him with her charms (she doesn't hide her light under a bushel) and he even takes her to a fancy society party where the ladies humiliate and insult her. (Why she went to the party dressed—or rather, undressed—like Gypsy Rose Lee, I have no idea. That getup screamed for an insult or two.) Anyhow, Carey's old girlfriend (Helena Carter), a real high-class type, shows up, and she's so gentle and understanding, he doesn't know what to do. Helena's from his world, but Shelley makes his blood berl. Shelley solves the whole mess by gallantly pretending she's been love-making with Luther Adler (the greasy cuss, remember?) so the cops won't find out Luther Adler murdered a man one night. In return for this, Luther Adler helps clear Carey's good name. (Luther knows about the crooked rubber officials.) Carey's good name gets cleared, but he believes that sordid story about Shelley and Luther, and he goes off with Helena. Brave little Shelley blinks back the tears, and takes up with faithful Doc. Another Notable Thing About This Film: A pianist referred to as Maestro, who makes meaningless but profound-sounding speeches, while looking exceedingly maniacal.

My Foolish Heart: In a familiar scene, Susan Hayward says goodbye to her sweetheart, Dana Andrews, at the end of his last leave.

MY FOOLISH HEART

Cast: Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward, Kent Smith
Goldwyn

My Foolish Heart is a love story, bittersweet and touching. It deals with Susan Hayward, a schoolgirl who falls in love with Dana Andrews, a gay young man-around-town, in the year 1941. Dana knows too many answers. Dana knows there's a war coming, for instance, and he doesn't believe in worrying about the future because he doesn't expect to have a future. By the time he's drafted, he's sure he's crazy about Susan, but he still can't see any point in marriage. Marriage is for peaceful times, when men can settle down and have families. Susan doesn't want to trap him into anything —her own mother and father are a bad example of impetuous wartime romance— but after one of Dana's leaves, she discovers she's pregnant, and she's scared. Dana writes and asks her to come down to his base, be married, but the letter arrives too late. He's been killed in a plane crash. This leaves Susan about to become a mother, husbandless, and nowhere to turn, since her understanding father has a bad heart, and the slightest shock could kill him. She settles her problem by marrying Kent Smith, a former suitor who's always had a yen for her. He's been concentrating on her best friend (Lois Wheeler) but one whistle from Susan lures him right back again. Their household isn't a happy one, however, and Susan starts drinking. It takes her seven years to realize how badly she's messed up everybody's lives, whereupon she sets out to fix things up as best she can. The acting in My Foolish Heart is superb (Robert Keith deserves a special medal for his portrayal of Susan's father), the dialogue is tender and funny. Mr. Goldwyn's pictures continue to be way above average.

MALAYA

Cast: Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Valentina Cortesa, Sydney Greenstreet.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Newspaperman Jimmy Stewart wins the war in the Pacific by smuggling rubber out of

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

Not a soap, not a cream— Halo cannot leave dulling, dirt-catching soap film!

Gives fragrant "soft-water" lather —needs no special rinse!

Removes embarrassing dandruff from both hair and scalp!

Halo leaves hair soft, manageable— shining with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or oily cream shampoos leaves dulling, dirt-catching film. Halo, made with a new patented ingredient, contains no soap, no sticky oils. Thus Halo glorifies your hair the very first time you use it. Ask for Halo—America's favorite shampoo—at any drug or cosmetic counter!

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Now polish your nails with

Featherote

Expect an exciting difference! Just as light as a feather . . . a gay new shade of this improved Dr. Ellis Lacquer flows smoothly, evenly, beautifully, onto your nails. Look for the handsome new package with the plastic-plume top, at your favorite 5 & 10 or drug store.

The new Dr. Ellis' featherote Lacquer

only 10¢ plus tax

DR. ELLIS SALES CO., INC.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

Malaya: Jimmy Stewart and Spencer Tracy discuss rubber smuggling with Sydney Greenstreet, while Valentina Cortesa completes the intrigue.

Mrs. Mike: Dick Powell, as a Canadian Mountie, brings his courageous wife, Evelyn Keyes, to a frozen outpost for their new life together.

Jap-held Malaya. First he makes U. S. authorities release his old pal Spencer (Smuggler) Tracy from Alcatraz, then he and Spencer set sail for Malaya. Jimmy's thinking about rubber, Spencer's thinking about a girl named Luana (Valentina Cortesa) who sings "Blue Moon" in a Malayan cafe called "The Dutchman's." "The Dutchman's" patrons are obviously insatiable in their desire to hear "Blue Moon." It's the only song in the picture, and darned if that girl isn't singing it every time you stick your nose in the door, morning, noon or night. (Been going on for years, too, if you give credence to Spencer's reminiscences.) "The Dutchman" (Sydney Greenstreet), who keeps on friendly terms with the Jap occupation officers, is really an old pal of Spencer's, and he gets together a band of cutthroats who'll help Jimmy and Spence smuggle, in return for American gold. "The Dutchman" also fixes up interviews with three planters who have hidden rubber stockpiles from the Japs. Our boys want to pay these men for their rubber, fair and square. One of the three planters is a very honorable soul—so honorable I still don't know what he was getting at. Said he couldn't possibly sell his rubber, but if Jimmy and Spencer would just beat him up, he'd tell where the stuff was. He wanted the bruises to show the Japs, he said. In any case, the smuggling is thrillingly successful (the rubber's ferried down the rivers to the sea where American ships pick it up), Jimmy dies a hero's death, and Spencer lives happily ever after on an island with that "Blue Moon" girl. This also surprised me, because the last I saw of those two lovebirds, he was giving her a mighty heave out of his boat and into the ocean. It occurs to me now that he was trying to save her life (his boat was going off into the line of some gunfire) but he never even asked if she could swim before he did it.

MRS. MIKE

Cast: Dick Powell, Evelyn Keyes, J. M. Kerrigan.
United Artists

"The frozen Canadian north is no place for a woman." Sergeant Mike Flannigan (Dick Powell) of the Mounties tells Boston girl, Kathy O'Fallon (Evelyn Keyes). So they get married anyway. By the time they've mushed 360 miles into the icy wilderness by dog sled, she's begun to get the idea. At the end of the 360 miles, there's a broken-down cabin with a broken-down family. "Company!" cries the delighted broken-down wife. And she runs to play the organ (I'm not fooling, they have an organ) and bring out her only china cup. Kathy breaks the cup, but the woman says it's all right, her old man is going to strike gold any day now. Kathy doesn't say, "I'd hate to hang till he does," or anything crude like that; she just gets sad. But Mike assures her that he and she will have a happier life than these folks. And it's mush! again. Hendrick's Hope, a trading post, is their new home. It's okay until Kathy finds out she's going to have a baby. She wants to go someplace civilized, but Mike tells her not to be silly, the Indian women aren't afraid of having their babies alone, or some such noble nonsense. (I wish the movies would wake up to the fact that the death-in-childbirth rate has been reduced to practically nothing because of modern medical methods, and stop stumping for a return to the brave old dark ages.) Well, Mike and his Mrs. move to a larger settlement (Fort Manette) and they have a cute little girl, but there's a diphtheria epidemic, and the serum runs out, and their baby dies, along with most everybody else in the neighborhood. Kathy decides she's had enough. "I'm going back where human beings have a chance to live," she says. Mike sadly lets her go, is transferred back to Hendrick's Hope, himself. And whom does he find when he gets there? His own precious wife, that's whom. She's going to stick to the bitter end, and I do mean bitter.

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE

Cast: James Mason, Barbara Stanwyck, Van Heflin, Ava Gardner.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

James Mason, so rich, so debonaire, loves his wife Barbara Stanwyck, but Ava Gardner is a fever in his blood. Barbara wears tailored suits, Ava wears next to nothing. Into this story comes a model (Cyd Charisse) in love with an ex-cop-later-OSS-man-now-public-figure (Van Heflin). Heflin, who does his government work in Italy, and who's only in the U.S. for a couple of days, calls Cyd "Little Dirty-Face," so you can see it's no grand passion on his part. But through Cyd, he meets Barbara Stanwyck (Cyd models the clothes rich ladies like Barbara buy), and over a scrambled egg at Barbara's, he begins to feel something he never felt before. He tells Barbara, only to add hastily, "Forget it. I'm no homewrecker." This is a home? the audience asks itself, believing Mason to be dallying with Gardner even now. Little does the audience wot that Gardner is through with dalliance forever, lying, as she is, foully murdered on the floor of her apartment. Did Mason do it? Did the rich man who was keeping Ava do it? Did some blonde six feet tall and jealous do it? Will Barbara Stanwyck ever love again? Maybe you won't believe this picture, but it's awful entertaining, full of pretty clothes, sophisticated dialogue, and lovely New York settings. It's a long way from Gracie Square on the East River (where the Masons live) to the Greenwich Village flat occupied by Ava, so we get to see a lot of Manhattan en route. We even go through the poor-but-honest Italian section where Van was brought up to be his poor-but-honest self. It's practically educational.

East Side, West Side: Playboy James Mason may be raising a menacing hand to model Ava Gardner, but he's really very fond of her.

DANCING IN THE DARK

Cast: William Powell, Mark Stevens, Betsy Drake, Adolphe Menjou.
20th Century-Fox

This is the least flashy musical I've seen in years, and the reason is the painful mis-casting of Betsy Drake. She's nice, but she's no Grable. Plot (based on the old Kaufman-Dietz-Schwartz stage musical Bandwagon) concerns a young girl who wants to be a star. She's helped by an elderly old soak (William Powell) who was a great movie personality in bygone days, but whose meanness lost him his place in pictures. A major studio's put him back on his feet, made him its representative, because he was once half-of-a vaudeville act. Wait, I'm getting to the point. The other half of the vaudeville act (Walter Catlett) has a daughter (Randy Stuart), a big Broadway star. Poppa won't let daughter go into movies; studio thinks maybe Poppa's old partner Powell can persuade him. (They've got a top role in a top production waiting.) But in New York, where he's been sent to

If you feel self-conscious in a heavy make-up

Choose a powder base with sheer flattery

Your skin can look naturally lovely—fine-textured, delicate, young! Before powder, smooth on a light touch of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Misty-white in the jar, transparent on your skin—this greaseless Cream suits every complexion. Never streaks or discolors. Never looks "masky." Pond's Vanishing Cream gives a camellia-soft, adherent finish that holds powder superbly!

1-Minute Mask... "re-styles" your face before make-up

Make your skin glow with new aliveness in just sixty seconds . . . give yourself a quick, rewarding 1-Minute Mask with Pond's Vanishing Cream! Swathe your face, except eyes, with lavish fingerfuls of the snowy-cool Cream. Its "keratolytic" action loosens and dissolves off clinging dirt and dead skin flakes. Leave on for 1 minute—then tissue off. See how much softer, fresher and clearer your skin looks. Make-up goes on flawlessly over your newly smoothed and re-styled complexion!

Mrs. Ellen Tuck Astor ....."No beauty treatment I've tried gives my skin a so much brighter look so quickly as the 1-Minute Mask with Pond's. And it makes such a wonderful difference in the smoothness of my make-up."

YODORA
the deodorant that works
TWO WAYS

1 STOPS
not just masks—perspiration odor

2 SOFTENS
and beautifies
underarm skin

Oh joy, oh bliss! YODORA is different . . . doubly divine, doubly effective, because it's made with a face cream base. Works two ways: 1—really stops perspiration odor . . . 2—keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders. Safe for clothes, too. Today, try YODORA, the wonderful deodorant that works two ways! Product of McKesson & Robbins, Bridgeport, Conn.

Tubes or jars
10¢, 30¢, 60¢

sweet-talk a signed contract out of little Miss Broadway, Powell comes across this young girl who happens to be his daughter (he deserted her mother) and he decides she should get the break, and be the studio's new doll. He coaches her to sing and dance, and everybody almost gets fired—especially when Betsy finds out William's her father, because she hates her father for what he did to her mother—but there's a happy ending. (Betsy's love interest, by the way, is Mark Stevens.) Which brings me back to my original complaint: Betsy just isn't a song-and-dance girl. She handled the nice sensitive young actress end of things fine—but sparkle, she doesn't. And sparkle somebody should have done, to save the picture.

WHIRLPOOL

Cast: Gene Tierney, Richard Conte, José Ferrer, Charles Bickford.
20th Century-Fox

A slight case of kleptomania keeps Gene Tierney from being the lovely well-balanced girl a psychiatrist's wife should be. Her doctor-husband, Richard Conte, loves her madly, but Gene's plagued by itchy fingers (she comes, she sees, she swipes) and she takes up with a charlatan (José Ferrer) who says he's an astrologer and hypnotist. This boy guarantees he'll make a new woman of her, and he nearly kills her doing it. He helps her insomnia, but he hypnotizes her into going out to a house (where he's just committed a murder), and obligingly standing around till the police arrive to arrest her. Also while under hypnosis, Gene's lifted from her husband's files all kinds of evidence damaging to Ferrer. (The murdered woman, it happens, is one of Ferrer's blackmail victims, and one of Richard Conte's patients. She's confided about Ferrer to Conte, but Conte can't find his records, so he can't help prove his wife's innocence.) Complex story. Very complex. But good pace, and José Ferrer keeps busy performing from his toes to his fingertips. He doesn't miss a trick. If he wants a Hollywood career, there's no doubt now that he can have it. He bleeds to death in front of your admiring eyes, for a final flourish.

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

If you wouldn't mind getting three free issues of MODERN SCREEN, we'd like to make a suggestion. See the brief questionnaire printed below? Fill it out and return it to us, with the speed of lightning. We give a free three-months subscription to the first 500 that come in. Simple? Extremely! You just tell us which stories you liked best in this issue, and which you liked least. You also jot down the stars you'd like us to have stories on in the future, and the stars you'd as soon pass over. For doing us this small favor (if your reply is among the first 500), you get the April, May and June issues absolutely free!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our March issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT of your 1st, 2nd and 3rd choices.

Shirley Temple's Divorce ☐
Dangerous Paradise (Ingrid Bergman) ☐
"Speaking of My Son . . ." (Peter Lawford) ☐
Fit for a King (Clark Gable) ☐
Bringing Up Joan (Joan Evans) ☐
Man at Large (Kirk Douglas) ☐
Lana Turner's Fight for Happiness by Hedda Hopper ☐
Strike! (Arlene Dahl, Shelley Winters, Douglas Dick, others) ☐
This Love of Ours (Ricardo Montalban) ☐
Three's No Crowd (Mona Freeman) ☐
Elizabeth the Queen (Elizabeth Taylor Special Section) ☐
How Roy Rogers Found Faith ☐
Modern Screen Fashions ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐
Christopher Kane's Movie Reviews ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

Thelma Jordon: Wendell Corey is the unhappy lawyer who falls in love with Barbara Stanwyck even though she's stolen and murdered.

THELMA JORDON

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, Wendell Corey, Paul Kelly, Joan Tetzel.
Paramount

Wendell Corey's assistant district attorney, but his wife's family is too rich to please him. Every time he wants to buy wife (Joan Tetzel) a present, he discovers her old man got there first. In-law trouble makes him drink, drinking makes him more in-law trouble, and the night he meets Barbara Stanwyck, he's ripe for adventure. He gets more than he bargains for because Miss Stanwyck is planning to use him as a stooge. Miss Stanwyck is living with a rich and aged aunt whom she kills, when she's surprised in the act of swiping the lady's jewels. But that comes later. During a whole summer when Wendell's wife is at the beach with her mother, father, and the children, Wendell's dating Barbara, and falling in love. By the time of the robbery-murder, he's so sold on Barbara, he arranges for her lawyer, fixes it so the district attorney is disqualified from prosecuting Barbara, has himself appointed as prosecuting attorney, and proceeds to antagonize and bore the jury to death. This is known as throwing the case. Now everybody's got to be punished. An ex-boyfriend of Barbara's—he plotted Auntie's robbery originally—shows up, and when he won't go away, Barbara kills him and herself in an automobile crash. (She lives long enough to admit she loves Wendell.) Wendell makes a clean breast of everything to the district attorney, and is disbarred. It's a very sad end. It's also an extremely entertaining picture. Corey's wonderfully good, and the relationships between him and his wife, and him and Barbara, are treated in an adult and believable manner.

TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH

Cast: Gregory Peck, Hugh Marlowe, Gary Merrill, Millard Mitchell.
20th Century-Fox

Daylight precision bombing in 1942 is the problem. The 918th bomb group is known as a "hard luck" bunch. They lose too many men, they lose too many planes. Brigadier General Gregory Peck believes it's commanding officer

(Continued on page 96)

Now! A lotion that glamorizes your WHOLE HAND!

1 SATINIZES PALMS. Even rough palms are soothed and smoothed. New Hinds' "skin-affinity" ingredients actually help to soften calluses.

2 SOFTENS CUTICLE. Nails look neater with New Hinds helping to keep cuticle pliable. No ragged edges to "catch." Your manicures stay lovely longer!

3 BEAUTIFIES SKIN. New Hinds is enriched with lanolin to make your hands feel softer instantly—protect them longer. Works wonders on rough, dry skin!

4 SMOOTHS KNUCKLES. Dry knuckles yield to the smoothing action of New Hinds. Effective emollients "sink in." Hinds dries fast—never feels sticky!

WORKS WONDERS! Lanolin-enriched for extra effectiveness, New Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream keeps your whole hand feeling soft in spite of ravages of work and water. Use it to smooth elbows, arms and legs... try it as a powder base. Use Hinds to help protect babies' and children's tender skin from chapping! 4 sizes, 10¢ to $1.00.

Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

NOW IN NEW LARGER BEAUTY BOTTLE

HERE IS THE COMPLETE AND UNABRIDGED ACCOUNT OF SHIRLEY'S DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS. LLOYD SHEARER

shirley temple's divorce

complete court testimony!

Pale and shaken after her ordeal, Shirley Temple leaves the courthouse accompanied by her lawyer, George Stahlman. Mary Alice Franklin, who testified for Shirley, is behind her with Shirley's father, George Temple.

■ Shirley Temple Agar strode into the courtroom exactly at 9:07 A.M.

She walked in holding on to the right arm of her father, George Temple. Behind them walked one of Mr. Temple's business associates.

The crowd in the courtroom followed them down the center aisle. Every eye was focussed on Shirley, and she knew it.

For a moment when she reached the swinging gate which led to her lawyers' desk, she turned to her right and glanced at us who were sitting in the press section. There was a brave little look of defiance in her eyes. Her lips were pursed tightly. Her jaw was firm. She gave the appearance of being completely composed—and yet somehow all of us knew that she was frightened and nervous and her heart was trip-hammering in double-time.

For one of the most unforgettable half-hours in her life, Shirley was dressed demurely. She wore a tailored gray wool suit, a chic little hat of blue with its veil tossed back, dark leather gloves, and shoes with three-inch heels. Her only visible jewelry—she never removed her gloves during the trial—consisted of a pair of costume earrings and a good-luck charm which dangled from her neck.

The witness who was to corroborate her testimony, Mary Alice Franklin, a former schoolmate of Shirley's at Westlake School for Girls, was also fashionably garbed in suit, hat, gloves, and alligator accessories.

These young attractive women sat in adjoining seats. Judge Herndon left his chambers at 9:12 and walked (Continued on page 77)

your letters . . .

SORRY FOR KID ACTORS

Dear Editor: I always feel sorry for child actors and actresses. I can't understand how a parent can cut his youngster off from a normal childhood, and push him into such demanding and emotionally-exhausting work. I don't care how talented the child is. I think it's wrong. I, for one, would gladly forego these juvenile performances, and let the kids grow up in a healthy way.

CLARENCE ANDREWS, DULUTH, MINN.

(You may see another side to the question after reading "Bringing Up Joan," by Katherine Albert, mother of teen-age actress Joan Evans, on page 32 of this issue.)

THAT'S HER POP

Dear Editor: In your January MODERN SCREEN, please note the man on page 47, seated next to Barbara Stanwyck—That's My Pop! He was tired and decided to take an afternoon nap. I guess that's why he looked so unconcerned. However, we all laced into him. How could anyone not notice her? Why, she is wonderful, and what a superb actress. Our regrets, Barbara.

HARRIET GOODMAN, NEW YORK CITY.

AGAR'S BEHAVIOR

Dear Editor: I'm probably endangering my life by saying this, but it's about time somebody did. Hats off to John Agar for the wonderful way he has acted all through his split-up with Shirley Temple. I certainly have neither the right nor the desire to question the action which Shirley took. But no one can deny that whatever happened before, John Agar has acted every inch the gentleman since their troubles became public property.

RHODA MACIAK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

TIE SCORE

Dear Editor: You put out one of the best fiction magazines I've read. I enjoy the pictures and think the writing is swell. Just because nine-tenths of the stuff isn't true, does that bother me? Certainly not! I just take another grain of salt and lap up all the happy details of another heavenly Hollywood marriage which will doubtless end up in the divorce courts next day.

UNA FACTOR, WASHINGTON, D.C.

Dear Editor: After reading your magazine for almost five years, I feel I should tell you what a good job you're doing. I particularly like your open letters to the movie stars, and I think your movie reviews are the best anywhere. I always feel that you try to tell the truth in your articles, and I think that you succeed almost completely.

EVELYN SANDSBERG, PORTLAND, OREGON

INSPIRING LADD

Dear Editor: Thank you for restoring my faith in humanity with your inspiring story about Alan Ladd and his family (M. S., Jan.). You can't know how much it means to read about good, devoted people like Alan and Sue after the shocking stories which the newspapers and magazines are revealing about other movie personalities. I don't wonder that Alan Ladd came out first again in your star-popularity poll, he's such a fine person.

JAQUELINE REILLY, DETROIT

It's the waving lotion that makes all the difference in home permanents

Kit $2.75
Refills $2.00 and $1.50
(PRICES PLUS TAX)

Scientific tests* show Richard Hudnut Creme Waving Lotion (containing 22% more of the effective ingredient) leaves hair springier, and stronger...less apt to break...than most other home permanent waving lotions. And what this means to you is a smoother, prettier, longer-lasting wave with more natural-looking curls that spring right back after combing...no frizzy ends, more natural sheen.

Regardless of what type curlers you use, make sure your next home permanent is a Richard Hudnut with the waving lotion that makes all the difference in the condition of your hair after waving and the kind of wave you get.

From the famous Richard Hudnut Fifth Avenue Salon

Richard Hudnut

NEW IMPROVED

Home Permanent

with the waving lotion that leaves your hair springier and stronger...less apt to break

Tests made by a leading nationally known independent research laboratory. Name on request.*

Listen to Walter Winchell, ABC Network, Sunday Nights

Ingrid and Rossellini in Italy. She's said: "I want to live my own life just as any other woman."

dangerous paradise

Ingrid Bergman picked her man, the life she wanted to lead—but at what cost? This is more than the story of a movie star—it is the story of a woman in love.

BY ARTHUR L. CHARLES

■ Ingrid Bergman, by the time you read this, may be Signora Roberto Rossellini. The fitting climax to as tempestuous a love affair as this world has ever known should be consummated. Those who caught fleeting glimpses of her in Rome before the conjecture of her possible pregnancy turned her into a recluse, cannot say whether or not she may have a child during 1950. Only time or a forthright statement from Ingrid or Rossellini can prove or disprove the reports that startled the American public.

One of the correspondents stationed in Rome, a journalist of great repute and integrity, Camille Cianfarra, called upon Ingrid and Roberto before the spotlight of publicity drove them from their apartments. He asked them about the published reports which had Ingrid "expecting" in February, and this is what Camille quoted Rossellini as having said:

"Whether she is or is not is nobody's affair. I think that report deserves neither denial nor confirmation because it is an attempt to pry into the private life of a woman who, to assert her right to her own life, has given up her career—which is what an artist regards as the most important thing in life. Isn't that enough?

"By making that decision, has not Ingrid as good as said to both her admirers and detractors: 'Look, I've fallen in love with a man who is not my husband. As an artist I have a certain responsibility toward the public and I may be criticized. All right, if that's the case, I no longer want to be an artist. I want to be a happy wife with the man I love.'"

Roberto also told Camille that Ingrid and he had been completely honest about the love they carried in their hearts for each other. When Dr. Peter Lindstrom arrived in Messina last year, "Ingrid explained things to him quite clearly. . . . I want to make it clear that at that time the relationship between Ingrid and (Continued on page 62)

sweet and hot

by leonard feather

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars Average

FROM THE MOVIES

CINDERELLA—Walt Disney's latest, with two of Victor's top singers at their best on three of the tunes. "So This Is Love," by Vaughn Monroe* "Bibbidi-Bobbidi-Boo" and "A Dream Is A Wish Your Heart Makes," by Perry Como.*

COPPER CANYON — "Copper Canyon" Art Lund (MGM)

POPULAR SINGLES

FRANK SINATRA —"Lost In The Stars"* (Columbia)
A fine tune from the Broadway show of the same title.

LES BROWN —"Tenderly" (Columbia)
Walter Gross's lovely creation is given the full Brown treatment, with "Where Are You" on the other side.

DORIS DAY —"Quicksilver"* and "Crocodile Tears"* (Columbia)
Two cute novelties sung by a lady who knows how.

MINDY CARSON —"All The Bees Are Buzzing Round My Honey"* and "Too-Whit! Too-Whoo!"* (Victor)
Speaking of popular songs in the lighter vein, here's a young lady who can handle them along with the best.

DUKE ELLINGTON —"Creole Love Call" (Columbia)
The Duke has recorded one of his classics for the third time, but this is the only version that is readily available. Kay Davis does the haunting wordless vocal.

CLASSICAL

ANDRE KOSTELANETZ — "Andre Kostelanetz Plays Music of Fritz Kreisler and Sigmund Romberg"* (Columbia)
This album includes such all time favorites as "Stars In My Eyes," "Love's Sorrow," by Kreisler, and "Song Of Love" and "The Desert Song" by Romberg.

DOROTHY KIRSTEN —"You Go To My Head"* and "More Than You Know"* (Victor)
These songs are not exactly classical, but somehow they attain the stature of a classic when Miss Kirsten sings them.

JAZZ

JIMMY DORSEY — "Charley, My Boy" and "Johnston Rag" (Columbia)
Jimmy forsakes his usual smooth style to give out with a little Dixieland.

COUNT BASIE —"Normania" and "St. Louis Baby"* (Victor)
On the first, Count seems to be trying to mix bop with his old style and it doesn't quite come off. The reverse is an easy-going, relaxed number with a vocal quintet.

CHUBBY JACKSON —"Tiny's Blues"* (Columbia)
Some nice bop by Chubby and the boys.

CHARLIE PARKER —"Bird Of Paradise"* (Dial)
Some excellent alto sax work by the most skillful instrumentalist of the modern school of jazz.

DIZZY GILLESPIE — "Things To Come"* (MGM)
A reissue of the record that stunned the 'azz world a few years back.

Beauty is my business—

says ANNE PIRON
Adorable Cover Girl

And SweetHeart is my Beauty Soap

9 out of 10 Cover Girls use SWEETHEART'S new Large Bath Size

All the glamorous girls on the covers of America's leading magazines this year were asked, "What beauty and bath soap do you use?" And 9 out of 10 replied, "SweetHeart Soap."

"I'm Thrilled with SweetHeart Beauty Baths"

—says Anne Piron, popular cover girl, "because they help prevent chapping. If I let my skin get rough and chapped you'd never see me on magazine covers again! So it pays me to use only pure, mild SweetHeart Soap for daily baths. This keeps my skin looking springtime fresh, soft and young all winter."

• Steal a march on spring! Reveal your skin's true apple-blossom freshness and beauty the way 9 out of 10 cover girls do. Especially on these blustery March days, you'll bless gentle SweetHeart Soap, because it helps you avoid chapped skin.

So get the new, large bath size and discover the benefits of SweetHeart beauty baths. One week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer, younger, more radiant.

Beauty is our business, too!

• Janet and Judy Ward, 11 months old, share everything—as twins do! A modeling career . . . a SweetHeart bath . . . and a lovely SweetHeart complexion!

GET THE NEW, LARGE

SWEETHEART Bath Size

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

you were dancing on a star?

You know that shiver of excitement when you suddenly look new? A delirious dress can do it . . . or a once-in-a-million hair-do . . . that lift sends you dancing up to the stars. That's exactly the way you'll feel when you first wear Dream Stuff.

This brand new make-up is a tinted foundation and powder magically blended into one make-up! Not a drying cake or a greasy cream. Pat it on with its puff — it clings for hours. Tuck it in your purse — it can't spill! Only 49¢ in 4 dreamy shades.

Woodbury DREAM STUFF

New! Tinted Foundation and Powder in one!

Affectionately yours

an open letter to elizabeth taylor

Dear Elizabeth:

Happy 18th Birthday!

At 18, you're a lucky girl indeed. You're beautiful, talented and sensible. You have fine parents. The future seems filled with opportunity and success for you.

There will be conflict, and moments of unhappiness—no human being ever got through life without his share. Along with the public acclaim, you'll have criticism. Much of the criticism will be completely unfair—but we feel that, simply by staying as sweet and normal as you are, you'll always be able to stay above it.

An example of unfair criticism that you've already received has been the chiding some commentators gave you when you went to a night club a few times to hear Vic Damone sing. We can't agree with anyone who says that a girl your age is making a spectacle of herself by sitting in a pleasant room, surrounded by friends, and listening to a young man who is smitten by her charms. Don't let anyone talk you into becoming a wall flower.

A fine example of your normalcy was given recently when Paramount held a University Prom. You asked those in charge to make certain that you had a few dances with the young collegians because, left to their own devices, they might have been too timid to ask a movie star for the next dance. These young men found you just as unpretentious and interesting as the attractive dates they brought to the party. Afterward, you rounded up a gang of the kids and took them to your house for a late supper—just as teen-agers do all over the country.

Then there was the time not long ago when you dated Bob Stack and surprised the daylights out of him by asking him in for a snack at the end of the evening. "Golly," said Bob the next day, "no date in Hollywood ever asked me if I'd come on in and have something to eat. We raided the refrigerator, sat by the fire and talked just like a couple of people."

The thing is, Elizabeth, that most young people, when they become movie stars, cease to be people. We have a hunch this won't happen to you.

In this issue of MODERN SCREEN, we present you as a young lady growing up. Present you honestly, just as you seem to us to be. We think the public will love you the more for this—and that you will forgive us if in your mind's eye the picture doesn't seem to fit completely in all respects.

You see, no two people will ever see exactly alike on the same subject. But of this you may be sure: People are very much in love with you, Elizabeth—several million people, in a nice, open-minded, understanding sort of way.

William B. Hartley

EDITOR

Our special 12-page Elizabeth Taylor story-and-picture section begins on page 44.

by florabel muir

To Peter Lawford's mother one thing mattered above all else— to keep faith with her son, even when it meant being cut off from the world she had known.

"speaking of my son..."

■ When Peter Lawford announced at the age of seven that he was going to be a motion picture star, his mother, Lady Lawford, smiled and remembered a morning in May when she had told her father she wanted to go on the stage.

"The butler dropped the muffins and my father's face turned pale," Lady Lawford reminisced as we sat in the living room of the pleasant California home where Peter lives with his parents. His father, Major General Sir Sidney Lawford, is a veteran of the Boer War.

"After the first shocking second of silence, my father ordered me to go at once to my room. Later he summoned me to the library.

" 'I wonder if you know what you said at breakfast,' he began. 'In front of the servants you voiced a wish to be an immoral woman. I do not think you realize that all actresses are immoral or you wouldn't have said what you did.

" 'However, I feel that your Bible study must have been neglected or you couldn't have brought yourself to express such a thought. You will begin at once to memorize certain parts of the Bible. I shall expect you to recite five verses for me tomorrow.'

"And that was how my flight of fancy was curbed and my footsteps were turned back on the path of respectability," Lady Lawford went on. "I tell you this to show how remote the theater or movies were from our family life.

"And speaking of my son—I naturally didn't really think Peter would ever get a chance to work in the cinema studios, hence I took his announcement with complete composure.

"I was afraid, though, he would (Continued on page 72)

Eleven-year-old Peter arrives in Los Angeles with his parents, Sir Sidney and Lady Lawford, on the round-the-world trip which the family took in 1935.

Lady Lawford chats with Bill Powell on the set of Mr. Peabody and the Mermaid. She acted in this and other films under the name of Mary Somerville.

Fit for a King

The heartache and the restlessness are over at last . . . the loneliness is ended. For a miracle happened to Clark Gable —he fell deeply in love again.

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

■ They sat opposite me at Amelio's, one of those restaurants in San Francisco where the steaks are tender and titanic. I tried not to stare.

Clark and Sylvia Gable (see left) had been married only 48 hours. In another two, they would head for pier 32, and board the S.S. Lurline for Honolulu and their honeymoon.

As I say, I tried not to stare. But after all, I'm a woman with a woman's curiosity, and I couldn't help myself. There, sitting opposite me was Clark Gable, the King, the most celebrated screen lover of modern times, and there next to him, was his fourth bride, the blonde and beautiful Lady Sylvia Stanley of Alderley, widow of Douglas Fairbanks, Senior. She was dressed in a simple black-and-white checked sports dress and she wore flat-heeled pumps. Over her shoulders was draped a silver blue mink coat.

These two world-famous celebrities did not look like newlyweds. They spoke very sparingly during the meal, and as any waiter will tell you, that's a sure sign a couple is married. When they're in the courting stage, they talk a blue streak.

Clark and his bride, however, were both in a happy, anticipatory mood, and when the waiter brought their food, Gable slapped his hands in relish and said, "This is our first square meal in three days."

What I wanted most to do was to go over to their table and interview them right there and then, but I knew two things for sure: One, I had no right to invade their privacy at a time like this; and two, if I did, the management would toss me out on my ear.

So I got up and drove to the Matson pier. I boarded the Lurline and went down to C deck and suite 245, the quarters reserved for Mr. and Mrs. William Clark Gable. The suite consisted of two bedrooms, sitting room and a private deck.

The boat was scheduled to leave at midnight. It was jammed with hundreds (Continued on page 58)

Newlyweds Clark Gable and the former Lady Sylvia Stanley are surrounded by wellwishers as they board ship for a honeymoon in the Hawaiian Islands after their surprise marriage.

by Katherine Albert

BRINGING UP JOAN

For the first time,

Joan Evans' mother reveals the problems facing a young girl who overnight became a star.

Joan Evans looks over her filling scrapbook with her proud parents, Katherine Albert and Dale Eunson. Both Mom and Pop, who are writers, recognized her dramatic ability early.

Joan delights in reading the voluminous fan mail which has poured in to her since the release of Roseanna McCoy. Though only 15, she's mature and poised beyond her years.

■ My 14-year-old daughter had a cold. Like every good mother I would keep her in bed for a day. I would telephone her school and report this fact to her teacher, who would give me Joan's home work for the next day.

That is, that's what I would have done in the pre-Goldwyn era. Now, instead, I called the studio, where every department was notified. The next day there was a headline over a syndicated column, "JOAN EVANS BEDDED WITH VIRUS X."

Is the flu bug that would entail merely a call to her school more important than the flu bug that caused the Goldwyn Studios to shut down for a day at a cost of $16,000 and caused a news-wise columnist to give it the lead in her column? No, it's the same old flu bug.

And that's what I explained to Joan. "Look," I said. "The only reason the columnist used your flu bug in a headline is because Mr. Goldwyn's publicity man has to get the words Roseanna McCoy in the newspapers. The only reason this flu bug is news is because Mr. Goldwyn has given Joan Evans importance by entrusting her with a big part in a big picture. (Continued on page 84)

His private life is casual, gay, tempestuous—and sad. Here's why Kirk Douglas is Hollywood's most amazing married bachelor.

BY JACK WADE

Man at large

■ It was the end of a hard day. The Hollywood executive wearily turned the key in the lock of his apartment door and flicked on the lights. He slipped out of his coat and threw himself into an easy chair. Then he sat bolt upright. The hair on the back of his neck bristled. He had heard a sound from the direction of the bathroom.

Moving silently to the fireplace, the executive drew a brass poker from a rack and advanced stealthily toward the sound. There was an alien sliver of light escaping from beneath the door, and a muffled cough came from within. With a single movement, the executive wrenched open the door and raised his poker into striking position.

The bright light blinded him for a moment, then his eyes popped in unbelief. There, lying in a tub of steaming suds, was Kirk Douglas, a book held slightly above the water line and an expression of complete enjoyment on his face.

"Good Lord!" said the producer. "Kirk! What —what are you doing here?"

"I just bought this book," said Douglas. "It's great—you must read it!" (Continued on page 90)

Kirk earnestly explains a magazine cartoon to five-year-old Mike, his oldest son. Separated from his wife, Diana Dill—who is in New York seeking a stage career—Kirk is a devoted and attentive parent to his boys.

Evelyn Keyes meets Kirk for tennis at the Beverly Hills Club. Though Kirk probably has more dates with more pretty girls than any other male star, the sparkling Miss Keyes is reported to be his current favorite.

Why has a curtain of silence been drawn around Lana Turner since her return to Hollywood? Hedda Hopper found out the truth—from Lana herself.

Lana Turner's fight for HAPPINESS!

by hedda hopper

■ "Come on in, Hedda," invited Lana. "You've just missed Cyclone Malone and Hopalong Cassidy, but if you'll stick around you can watch Beanie with Bob and me. I'm dying to see what happens tonight to Cecil, the Seasick Sea Serpent."

I stuck to the doorstep, stunned. Then, "Good gravy," I sputtered, "what kind of double-talk is that from Lana Turner? Are you sure you're yourself?"

Lana grinned. "Never felt better. I'm talking about television! We've got six sets—even a portable TV we take down to the pool. All this besides two movie projectors. We ran two pictures last night and three the night before. . . . Now will you believe me when I say I'm a homebody?"

"Believe you?" I came back. "Listen—I'm beginning to get worried about you! What's happened to the Toppings, anyway—turned hermits?"

Lana shook her taffy-topped face, beautiful as ever and twice as alive-looking as I'd seen it in the past few years. "Not quite," she said. "Just turned happy. I'm probably the dullest gal in town, and do you know what? I love it!"

I was out to puncture the silk curtain which Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Topping had drawn about their newsworthy selves ever since they flew back to Hollywood and practically dropped out of sight. After all, Lana used to make a hot headline almost every week.

Whatever she did, wherever she went, Lana was streamered with something sensational or sad. Yet, here she'd been back in Hollywood since last July—and in all those months there'd been no news about her more startling than that she and Bob had bought (Continued on page 59)

Buying this 12-room home was Bob Topping's idea.

by reba and bonnie churchill

The ladies were pitted against the gents in this hilarious bowling party—where sometimes the pins fell down, but more often the gals.

strike!

■ The ball skimmed down the highly glossed lane, made straight for its mark and connected.

"Zowie!" said Jerome Courtland, "Another strike!"

The girls on our team glared for a moment at the all-male team we were competing against. Then, they shifted their glare to us. "Lucky hit," we mumbled feebly.

And to think it had started out with the makings of such a wonderful evening. May we have Scotch tape put over our mouths if we ever sound off on such another "bright" suggestion.

A group of us—Lex Barker, Shelley Winters, Douglas Dick, Arlene Dahl, Adele Mara, Dick Clayton, Jerome Courtland, Sally Forrest, Keefe Brasselle, Barbra Fuller, Richard Foote and we Churchills—had gone over to one of our favorite spots, Art Linkletter's Bowling Alley. Art, head man of the "People Are Funny" and "House Party" radio shows, was in gay spirits. He'd just scanned the reviews from the film he's in with Ronald Colman and Celeste Holm, Champagne for Caesar. "Tonight," he'd greeted us, "I'm your host. Everything's on the house."

It could have been his benevolent mood that put our common sense into a tailspin, but soon we suggested, "Let's divide into teams and have a bowling match."

"Fine!" said Art, "Fine! . . . And say—since most of the help is busy with the—ahem!—paying customers, the losers can fix food afterward for the winners. Okay?"

This was, naturally, very okay with everybody. Then we chose up sides. Funny how things never quite work out the way you think. We didn't get Jerry Courtland or Keefe Brasselle (who always bowl a high score) on our team. In fact, we didn't get any boys: It was the fellas against the girls.

"Don't worry," Shelley Winters encouraged us, "we'll bowl circles around 'em!"

This proved to be a good description of Shelley's bowling technique. She reached for the ball, took frowning aim and, with a potent semi-circular swing, let go. The ball sped down the lane, halfway down nimbly jumped the gutter and wound up in the neighboring lane. (Continued on next page)

A top scorer at the bowling party was MGM newcomer Keefe Brasselle—formerly a champ bowler.

Arlene Dahl prepares to bowl. (Arlene has been picked by Modern Screen for the Kellogg Company's fourth series of cereal variety package movie cut-outs.)

Lex (Tarzan) Barker gallantly gives Shelley Winters of the opposition, some basic training on how to pick up the ball. "But look," says Shelley, "you've got muscles."

Oops! Adele Mara has just committed a slight bowling error—she forgot to let go of the ball. She won a tennis racket (appropriately) for being the lowest scorer.

strike! continued

"Ah," said Shelley, "could have happened to anyone!"

Then it was Lex Barker's turn to bowl. "Don't look so grim," he reassured Sally Forrest. "Just because I play Tarzan on the screen, people think I'm great in all sports. I'm a lousy bowler. Once Eddie Cantor asked me to play in a benefit bowling tournament. My team wound up with the lowest score."

"Glad to hear that," said Sally.

Lex took off his jacket, and we got a closer view of those bulging biceps beneath his Navy sweat shirt. He tested a few balls, picking them up like oranges at a fruit stand, before he found one he liked.

Then he let that ball go—and it zoomed straight down the lane. It couldn't have stayed more in the center if the pinboy had been holding a magnet.

When we saw every one of the pins topple over—so did our hopes. Art started toward his soda fountain-restaurant on the other side of the alley.

"Where you off to?" asked Barbra Fuller.

"Just to see if we have enough extra aprons for you gals in the kitchen," he said.

The fellas' score kept swelling like a balloon. "We can't let them do this to us!" said Adele Mara firmly. Adele had never bowled in her life.

She picked up the ball, shot it down the lane, and turned her back and crossed her fingers. There was a loud, satisfactory crash as the ball hit the pins. She turned around. There was only one pin standing. "Missed one, darn it!" she said, stamping her foot.

Maybe it was this vibration, but suddenly that lone pin toppled over, too.

The other bright spot on our team proved to be Arlene Dahl. The knack that girl has with a ball! She's even the sponsor of a group of MGM soundmen who bowl weekly under the name, "The Dahleaguers."

"How about some time off?" (Continued on page 60)

After the match, the gang (Barbra Fuller, Adele, Dick Clayton, Bonnie and Reba, Dick Foote, Douglas Dick, Keefe Brasselle and Sally Forrest) is amazed at the soda-jerking skill of Jerry Courtland—who's amazed himself.

This love of ours

Our children are the fulfillment of our love. In them, Ricardo and I see each other.

ninth in a series

By GEORGIANNA MONTALBAN

■ My sister, Sally, saw Ricardo first.

But since Sally already had a perfectly good husband of her own, she decided to be practical and to snare him for her only unmarried sister—me. And thereby keep this handsome, talented and completely devastating young man in the family.

"I have a sister and I know you two would get along like chili and beans," she told Ricardo in her usual buoyant and direct way. Sally was matching her similes with the South-of-the-Border setting in which she met Ricardo while accompanying her husband, Norman Foster, on location in Mexico. Ricardo was working in the movie Norman was directing.

"Georgie," my match-making sister wrote me excitedly, "I have found just the right man for you. Get this week's Saturday Evening Post and you will see his picture. His name is Ricardo Montalban."

Only mildly curious, because Sally is notoriously enthusiastic (Continued on page 88)

Baby Mona holds court for her fond parents, Mona Freeman and Pat Nerney, in their new living room. The rocker was Mona's as a child.

Mona Freeman

and Pat Nerney and little

Mona learned that life in a two-room shoebox can be very cozy—

in fact, too darned cozy.

But now they're in a wonderful place where . . .

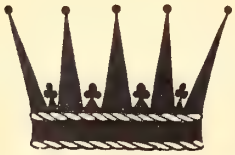
THREE'S NO CROWD

BY DUANE VALENTRY

In their bedroom, Mona and Pat strike a fine Victorian pose in their Victorian chairs. The portrait of little Mona was painted by big Mona.



■ Maybe seven rooms isn't a mansion, but it certainly can seem like one after four cramped years in a tiny, two-room apartment, where three—Mona Freeman and Pat Nerney and their little Mona—were very much a crowd. Mona and Pat, after five months in their Pacific Palisades house, still can't believe all this space is theirs.

"Maybe we'll get used to it, in time," says Mona, happily. "But by then we'll be adding more rooms, and all the other things we plan for it. Pat says it'll take two years, maybe four."

Every cent they can possibly spare goes into the house—which is a Connecticut-farmhouse type built of white-painted wood and fieldstone. Pat will tell you they've learned how to squeeze every last board, brick and nail out of a dollar bill.

Once in a while, though, some of those dollars do get shunted off in a peculiar way. For instance, both agreed $100 might be spared for some bricks for a walk in the back, which seemed to be needing a lot more bricks than they'd expected. One Sunday Pat had very beautifully set in four bricks to start the walk, proclaiming, "See, it's easy! . . . I've even got a design there! . . . I'll finish it in no time." (Continued on page 82)

Special 12 page section!

ELIZABETH THE QUEEN

Only yesterday a child star, Elizabeth Taylor has suddenly emerged as one of the most fabulous beauties in Hollywood history. As she reaches her eighteenth birthday this month, Modern Screen presents in stories and pictures the most complete account ever given of the past and present of the lovely Elizabeth.

■ The first day of shooting on A Place in the Sun, Elizabeth Taylor entered the Paramount commissary at lunchtime. The reaction was the one she receives regularly nowadays. A hush settled on the room, silverware halted in mid-air as all eyes followed the spectacular young beauty to a table.

John Lund, movie actor and wit, ogled with the rest. He was the first to break the silence. "I wonder," he murmured, "how she ever got in pictures."

Mr. Lund's little joke was a back-handed expression of a fact that becomes abundantly clear the moment you meet Elizabeth Taylor: It's impossible to imagine her incredible good looks as belonging to anybody but a movie star.

The camera is a thief in dealing with this lovely creature. It's a robber of important detail, for it registers no more than 10 percent of the vibrant fascination on which it is trained.

Elizabeth Taylor's soft hair is raven black. Her skin is smooth and pale with a vague iridescent glow. Her eyes are huge, black-rimmed lakes of emotion set with blue-green gems that dazzle and have no right to serve as mere organs of sight. Her features are firmly defined in a pattern of architectural perfection, subtle in their relationship to one another and modeled after nothing mortal.

Only in her figure does she deviate from an entirely esthetic design, for it follows the solidly accepted lines of the more advanced dreamers in the male-magazine art field. If anything, Elizabeth Taylor's figure (Continued on page 76)

Lovely even as a two-year-old, Elizabeth Taylor, with her handsome brother, Howard, clearly mirrored her mother's poise and beauty.

How Liz grew up

A beloved little sister who, somehow, turned into a glamor girl—that's Liz Taylor to her brother. Her phenomenal life story is told in pictures on these and the following pages.

by Howard Taylor

Howard Taylor, Liz's brother, is 20, a college soph, spurns film offers, paints, designs jewelry and ceramics.

■ As we've done hundreds of times since we were kids, Elizabeth and I went out together the other day. We went to the Icecapades. There was nothing on our minds but the thought of seeing the show and we were both pleasantly keyed up about it. So much so that for a while we "forgot." But as we entered the lobby, Liz was recognized—and there began a general buzzing all around us.

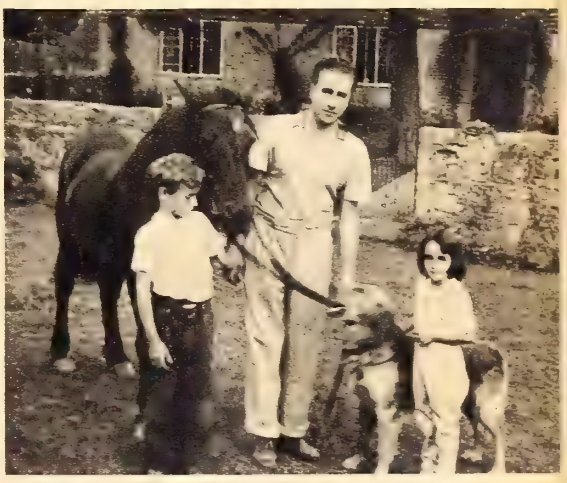
We could hear snatches of the talk: "Yes, that's her." "Who is the man with her?" "Somehow I figured she was taller." "Is he in pictures, too?" And so on.

Liz grabbed my arm and whispered, "This isn't going to be the fun I thought. Let's hurry in."

We hurried. And she was right. It wasn't just that the privacy of the moment had been invaded. It was another sign that the new life which is opening up for Liz is trying to crowd out her old life completely. I wouldn't want that to happen. Our parents don't. Nor do the friends we have known since long before the films came into our lives. And Liz doesn't want it to happen.

Rather than take up with the new life, she is trying hard to cling to the old one. For instance, she still goes to parties given by her old school friends. With them she is herself and things are pleasant. But it doesn't always go that pleasantly with new girls who happen to be invited. Then she sometimes has to buck everything from silly adulation to challenge and pure envy; and being yourself in the face of all that is a hopeless project. No matter how you conduct yourself the thing just doesn't come off.

"In the end I just stand around with egg on my face," I have heard Elizabeth, troubled and worried, report to Mother after such an affair.



She likes nothing better than going out with her old crowd—but here again there is trouble. My friend Mara Regan and I can go anywhere and cause no public ripples. But when Liz is along, and especially if she has a boy with her, the party becomes an event and, sooner or later, is commented on in the press—usually in as unfavorable a light as possible.

Not long ago a columnist criticized Liz because, as he said, she was attending the Mocambo "nightly." He intimated that her reason for so doing was a crush on Vic Damone. That was an untrue statement, but people reading it would probably think it was true. Here are the facts:

Liz has been to the Mocambo three times: once as a guest at a wedding reception (Jane Powell's); once accidentally; and once with Mara and me, when Mother and (Continued on page 74)

Like most English families, the Taylors were all good cyclers. Here, Howard lends a youthful assisting hand to Liz's early efforts with a scooter.

At four, Liz was already a fine rider. Monty, the family dog, helps Howard and dad Francis Taylor hold the pony, Betty, before Liz fearlessly mounts.

Self-confident and well-mannered, Liz and Howard stroll the deck on one of their numerous trips to the U.S. before they came here to live in 1939.

Never gawky, Liz grew even prettier as she went gracefully through her adolescence.

At nine, having made a hit in Lassie Come Home, her first movie, Liz posed dutifully with her large collection of dolls for publicity pictures. MGM was calling her "Hollywood's newest child star."

The 13-year-old Elizabeth, showing clearly the signs of the mature beauty into which she would grow, was also showing clearly she retained a weakness for the juvenile delights of bubble gum.

Fourteen years old, Liz whispers in typical schoolgirl fashion with classmate Shirley Johns. Liz was finding school less irritating than she would later on when she'd be playing adult roles.

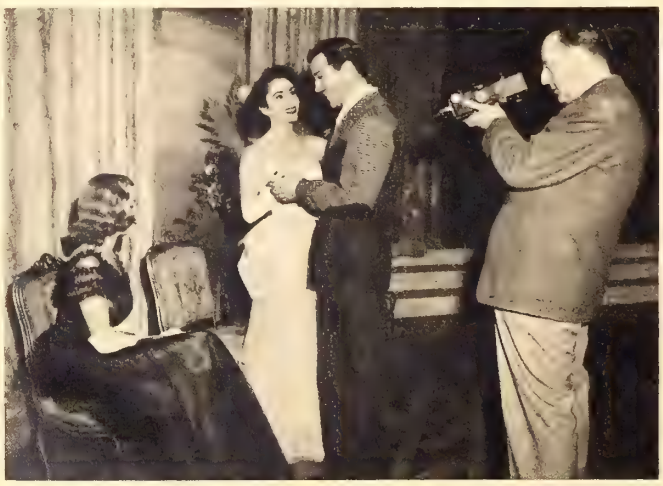
At 14, Liz still looked to Howard, three years her senior, for guidance in worldly matters—such as new dances. He invited the boys for her 15th birthday party—she didn't know any well enough.

By the time she was 15, Liz was a first-rate horsewoman. While riding with Howard one day at Malibu Beach, she saved his life when he was thrown and, unconscious, began washing out to sea.

In her 16th year, Elizabeth started using little touches of perfume. She had just received her first screen kiss in Cynthia and (opposite page) had now become a strikingly lovely young lady.

A healthy teenager who enjoyed family barbecues, girlish bull sessions, hobbies and

1. Elizabeth, just turned 15, joins her parents in a hamburger-and-weenie barbecue. Father, mother and two children were always a closely-knit foursome, prizing the happy times they had together.

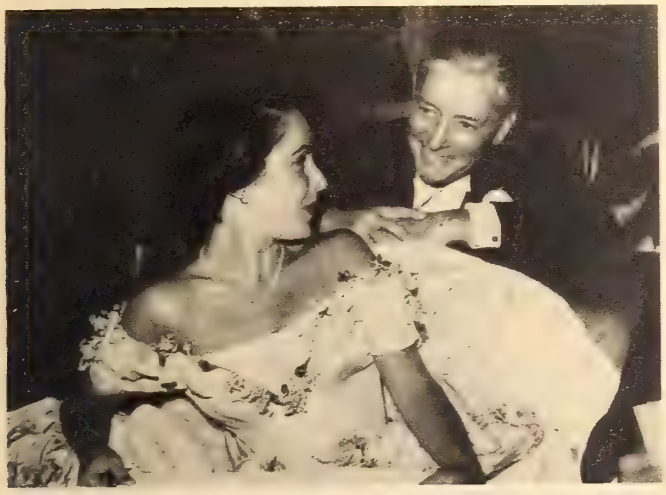


2. Elizabeth gasps with girlish wonder as pal Ann Westmore confides a juicy item. Ann, daughter of one of the Westmore make-up artists, lived on the same block in Beverly Hills as the Taylors.

4. Lady Astor calls on the rising young star and her mother in their cabin during the transatlantic crossing they made in 1947. This was a personal trip, their first visit to England after the war.

5. A great lover of animals since babyhood, Liz has a romp with the Taylors' three dogs. Monty, the big dog on the right, is the same fellow seen on page 47. He was acquired the day Elizabeth was born.

7. Elizabeth and Robert Taylor (cast as wife and husband) and co-player Honor Blackman are briefed for a shot in Conspirator by Director Victor Saville. He raved about Liz's acting talent.



8. Bridesmaid Elizabeth pauses at the church door before going in with other attendants at Jane Powell's marriage to Geary Steffen. Liz herself had two headlined romances behind her by this time.

pets, Liz Taylor swiftly matured into exciting womanhood before she was eighteen.

3. Liz sketches the landscape during a picnic on the desert outside Los Angeles with the then teen-age actor, Marshall Thompson. She was taking art lessons from a famous painter friend of her father's.

6. At Academy Award ceremonies in early 1949, a poised Elizabeth turns to exchange pleasantries with the appreciative Ronald Colman. She had just finished her first adult role in Conspirator.

9. Wearing costume and make-up for the scene she'll perform later on, Liz concentrates on her private tutor's instruction. California law requires three hours of schooling a day for minors under 18.

10. At 18, Elizabeth Taylor, her beauty matured, stands on the threshold of being one of the most glamorous figures the screen has ever known, seems destined to create new Hollywood legends.

Most males would give their eyeteeth to date Elizabeth Taylor. Already a veteran of two

RESTLESS HEART

by Jim Henaghan

1. Marsh Thompson, frequently a guest at the Taylor home, soulfully serenades Liz. He was her first date.

■ ELIZABETH: Please—don't make me look like a girl who just gets engaged for fun. Already everybody is saying I'm just a jilt.

MS REPORTER (jostling his memory of Webster's for the noun jilt): I certainly won't.

ELIZABETH: The first thing you know, people will begin to think I'm a bad girl.

MS REPORTER: I'd die before I'd give that impression. Now, what is this you have done to William Pawley?

ELIZABETH (lowering her eyes): He almost broke my heart.

MS REPORTER: He should be tarred and feathered! What about Glenn Davis? What did you do to him?

ELIZABETH: Who ever said we were engaged? That was just a lot of talk.

MS REPORTER (head swimming): Has anyone ever mentioned to you that you are unquestionably the most beautiful girl ever to be in the movies—and probably the most gorgeous thing ever born?

ELIZABETH (with great unbelief): Who—me?

It would be unfair to Elizabeth Taylor to call her a "jilt" despite her two highly-publicized jilts. Her curse is her beauty and her prominence. If she were an ordinary girl, she would have collected at least a hundred fraternity pins by this time, and would not have been expected to marry any of the boys who gave them to her.

But because she is Elizabeth Taylor, the desire of all men's hearts, and the most beautiful girl of our time, there are those who censure her. Confronted with the possibility of having men go mad at the sight of her, leave their wives in disgust, impale themselves on bread knives because she is beyond their reach, and demonstrate other such evidences of frustrations because of her beauty, Elizabeth had a truly honest answer. "Who—me?" she says.

Elizabeth Taylor was just 16 when she became engaged—or, at least was reported engaged—to Glenn Davis, the Army football star. As she puts it, she was "awfully young" when it happened. Now that she looks back on it, she is not quite sure, as has been indicated, that it was an official engagement in every sense of the word.

"Glenn was just darling," she says, "but, gosh, I hardly knew him and everybody just seemed to take (Continued on page 92)

4. After Marsh Thompson married Dick Long's sister, Babs, Dick and Liz started going around together.

7. Bob Precht, UCLA soph, recently voted "Great Lover" by his schoolmates, took Liz to a school prom.

spectacular romances that came to nothing, she seems destined to be a femme fatale.

2. Rod McDowall playfully douses Liz in the Malibu surf. He was her first leading man (Lassie Come Home), they often double-dated.

3. Johnny Sands, rising young player, took Liz around for awhile. They did the premieres and parties—under MGM's watchful eye.

5. Radiantly happy at a Hollywood opening, 16-year-old Liz was reportedly engaged to Glenn Davis, football hero—but it didn't take.

6. After Davis came wealthy Bill Pawley, who sealed his engagement with a huge diamond. She says he almost broke her heart.

8. Montgomery Clift gives Liz—his co-star in A Place In The Sun—some expert instructions in the fine art of pocket billiards.

9. Vic Damone dated Liz a few times (here at Chianti restaurant opening)—and news-hungry reporters made it a "romance."

In Conspirator, Robert Taylor, as her Communist husband, tries hard to kill her.

In A Place in the Sun, Montgomery Clift makes ardent advances to Elizabeth.

In two new movies, Elizabeth Taylor demonstrates that she is now highly competent to handle adult dramatic roles.

■ Actresses who combine great poetic beauty with real dramatic ability are about as rare as 20-carat sapphires. It has been radiantly clear for some time that Elizabeth Taylor possesses personal loveliness to a degree that should satisfy the most demanding poet. It soon will be equally clear that Elizabeth, who has always demonstrated a fine performing talent in juvenile roles, is now up to portraying the heavier complexities of adults.

The evidence of the happy development lies in her two newest films, Conspirator and A Place in the Sun. In MGM's Conspirator, which at this writing is scheduled to be released late in March, she plays the wife of a British Army officer (Robert Taylor) who secretly is a member of the Communist Party. When she discovers the fellow's true colors, he shadily sets about to do her in. An entertaining if inartistic thriller, Conspirator gives Elizabeth, in the first grown-up role she has attempted, an assortment of emotional themes, ranging from bubbling delight to hysterical horror, that would tax a far more experienced technique than hers. Yet she succeeds well in blending them into a rounded and convincing character projection.

A Place in the Sun, which Elizabeth, costarred with Montgomery Clift, has just completed for Paramount, is a modernized version of Theodore Dreiser's famous novel, An American Tragedy. In this, she is cast as a society girl of whom Clift, a factory worker, becomes enamored to the extent of drowning his former flame (Shelley Winters) when she becomes an inconvenience. Advance reports from neutral quarters speak highly of this film—and Elizabeth's performance in it.

As Elizabeth Taylor looks pensively to the future, what lies ahead for her? Will she find a continuance of the happy life she now enjoys, or will she suffer the storms and heartbreak of so many in Hollywood before her? In the great position she surely will occupy, all the courage, intelligence and stability she can muster will be required. The eyes of the world are indeed upon her now.

the end

Dusty Rogers helps his parents, Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, down the steps after a service at what he calls "Big Church." Dusty ho how roy rogers found ined them after Sunday School class.

faith

by margaret waite

Roy Rogers' mind was tormented with doubts and questions. And then, as Dale's eyes filled with happy tears, he found the answer . . .

■ The candles glowed steadily in the little church as the minister urged all those in his congregation who sought God to step forward and declare their faith.

It wasn't much different from any other Sunday vesper service; for years they had come—the lonely, the wistful, the eager, the shy, the bitter and the doubting. But for the couple who sat together in the rear, it was to be a great occasion.

For suddenly the young man whispered to the girl at his side, "Mama, I'm going down there." And tears welled up in her eyes as she watched that tall, lithe figure, so familiar and so beloved by millions of youngsters, stride down the church aisle. . . .

On Easter Sunday, in the presence of his family and friends, Roy Rogers was baptized into the church of his choice. To appreciate fully this heart-warming story of simple faith, you have to know the people involved. True, everybody knows Roy Rogers, "King of the Cowboys," and everybody knows Dale, his vital, charming wife who appears with him in all his Republic pictures. But you have to go back to another Roy and Dale—to the Roy who rode to Sunday school on horseback in the little farming community of Duck Run, Ohio, and to the Dale who was confirmed at the age of 10 in Osceola, Arkansas. You have to trace them later on, through periods of doubt and disillusionment, to understand them. . . .

At 16, following a high-school elopement with her first beau, Dale was tragically left with a small son to raise. Sundays she spent cramming for her courses in business college so she could more quickly be in a position to support herself and little Tommy.

Before long, she became a highly competent confidential secretary. With Tommy's welfare assured, she made up for lost time, seeking all the fun she had missed in her mid-teens. There were dates, and gay Saturday-night parties. Sunday mornings she slept late, and then spent the rest of the day washing and mending her clothes, shampooing her hair, fixing her nails, and doing all the countless chores so familiar to the business girl on her "day off."

Later, when she began to click on radio—and then in films—it was the same. Programs, rehearsals, interviews, conferences, all interspersed with gaiety grasped with almost feverish intensity. The Church receded further and further into the background of her interests.

With Roy it was a different story, but it had the same net result.

Like all outdoors men he had searched the sky for the answer to the riddle of life. He knew that every manifestation of Nature, every sign of the seasons, pointed to the existence of a higher Power. A man of slight formal education but one given to reflection, Roy knew instinctively that the re-birth of Nature every spring proved all the concepts of eternal life.

But Roy's mind was tormented with doubts and questions. As his movie career progressed, it took him down paths far removed (Continued on page 94)

fit for a king

(Continued from page 31) of visitors, all of whom, it seemed, knew the location of the Gable rooms. The corridor leading to the suite was packed with women and bobby-soxers, all anxious to get a look at Clark and his bride.

A little after 11 o'clock, the Gables drove onto the pier escorted by two motorcycle policemen. As Clark and his blonde bride, surrounded by police officers, stepped off the gangplank, the crowd moved in. Ten police officers made a flying wedge and after 15 minutes of shoving, succeeded in getting the Gables into their suite. A crowd then formed outside and began beating on the door.

In a few minutes, the door was opened slightly to permit the entrance of a few of us reporters, and a MODERN SCREEN photographer, Ken Cheney. We dove in.

First thing, our photographer spoke up. "Would you mind please standing a little closer together?" he asked Gable. Clark smiled—so, too, did his tall bride. "Look," said Clark, as our lensman kept motioning him closer, "you run your romance and I'll run mine." We all laughed.

"How did you pop the question to Lady Stanley?" I then asked.

Clark grinned. "I was scared to death," he said, "that she'd say 'no'—but she came through all right with a big 'yes.'"

"I said it as fast as I knew how," Mrs. Gable added. "Wouldn't give him any time to change his mind."

There was another round of flashbulbs, and then the ship's warning whistle sounded. As we left, I looked back. Visible on the newlyweds' faces were looks of profound relief. They seemed to say, "Alone at last."

The Lurline pulled out at midnight, and the Gables were below decks as it did.

In three days, they had done an awful lot. Their sudden marriage had amazed and surprised an entire nation. No one had expected this marriage—not even Gable himself, for that matter.

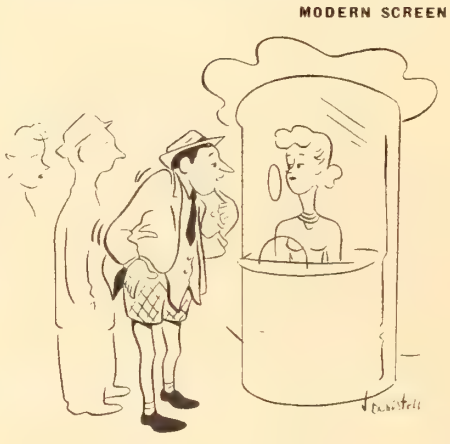
"I've had marriage in mind for some time," he said after the surprise ceremony at the Alisal guest ranch near Solvang, California, "but I just suddenly decided to pop the question. I asked her yesterday if she'd marry me and she said, 'Yes.'"

The couple then drove to San Luis Obispo on Tuesday, December 20, 1949 and obtained a marriage license at 12:10 p. m. On the marriage license, Gable gave his age as 48, and Lady Stanley gave hers as 39. Three hours later, the Reverend Aage Moller, pastor of the little Danish Lutheran Church, was conducting the ceremony in the ranch living room. It was a single-ring ceremony with Gable slipping a simple platinum wedding band on Sylvia's finger and then kissing her.

western atmosphere . . .

During the ceremony, a hand-cranked phonograph wheezed out the wedding march. The entire ceremony had a horse-opera atmosphere. The guests who watched it, wore boots and 10-gallon hats, and after it was over, the ranch hands were invited inside for some of the wedding cake and champagne. Sylvia cut the bridal cake with a Japanese sword which one of the ranch hands had brought back from war service in the Pacific.

When the news was flashed over the wires to a stunned world, the reaction was one of sheer surprise. At MGM, Clark's home studio, the publicity department didn't even believe it. "Impossible," one press agent said. When he was told however, that his boss, Howard Strickling, head of the MGM press department, had been Gable's best man, he changed his mind. "Now," he said, "I believe it."



Actually, Gable had decided to ask Lady Stanley's hand in marriage two days before he did, but he couldn't get up the courage. At Charley Feldman's party on Saturday, three days preceding the wedding, Gable had matrimony in mind, but wouldn't discuss it.

On Sunday, he proposed to Sylvia while driving. When the answer was "yes," he stopped his car, and the couple kissed.

On Monday, they notified intimates of their intention. Gable called Strickling and asked him to be best man, and Sylvia phoned her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Bleck of Cheviot Hills. The next day, the marriage took place. Basil Bleck gave the bride away. Also present at the ceremony was Miss Jean Garceau, Clark's business manager and secretary of many years.

Newly-married at the Alisal Guest Ranch, the Gables let people think that they were heading north towards San Francisco for a honeymoon. Instead, they doubled back to Gable's ranch at Encino. Here, Clark introduced his new bride to his ranch help. Sylvia, of course, charmed all of them off their feet. That night, she went back to her beach house, packed her honeymoon clothes and returned to Gable's ranch.

Next day, they motored up to San Francisco and boarded the boat for a two-week Honolulu honeymoon.

"I seem to have forgotten my wallet!"

The first question most movie-goers wanted answered when they heard of Gable's marriage was: "What kind of girl married Clark Gable—who is she, anyway?"

Well, she was born Sylvia Louise Hawkes, the daughter of an English footman, and for many years she has been regarded as Great Britain's Cinderella. When she was a teen-ager, she got a job as a London dressmaker's mannikin, and soon became known as "Silky"—because she could model long, slinky negligees most appealingly. Her heart, however, was always set on a stage career, and in 1926, she got a job as a chorus girl in Midnight Follies, then playing in London.

In very little time, tall, lovely Sylvia Hawkes became the darling of the stage-door Johnnies. She was invited to the homes of the British nobility; she met the earls and dukes and the Prince of Wales (now the Duke of Windsor), and they all found her witty, charming, and gay. One member of nobility fell madly in love with her. He was young Lord Ashley.

His parents, the Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury, wouldn't hear of the match, so Sylvia and the young Lord, both madly impulsive, eloped and got married. In less than two years, however, the London papers were carrying notices to the effect that Lord Ashley would "no longer be responsible for any debts incurred by my wife."

However, it wasn't until seven years later—in 1934—that Lord Ashley would divorce Sylvia. He named as co-respondent in the divorce proceedings, Douglas Fairbanks, Senior—at that time still married to Mary Pickford.

A little more than a year later, after Doug and Mary had been divorced, Sylvia and Fairbanks were married in Paris. The U. S. Ambassador was the official witness, and the ceremony was performed in French. The couple honeymooned in China. The marriage supposedly was ideal, but it ended tragically when Fairbanks died of a heart attack in California. He left Sylvia a sum reputed to be in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 and she quickly became prominent in café society circles.

the sailor departs . . .

On January 19, 1944, however, Sylvia Hawkes drove around Boston in a taxi-cab looking for a minister who could marry her to Edward John, the sixth Baron Stanley, then a Lieutenant Commander in the British Navy. Cole Porter gave Sylvia away that night, but the Baron went to sea and she went to England to await his return. Unfortunately, that marriage didn't take, either, and in 1948, Lord Stanley sued his wife for a divorce in London on desertion grounds. Sylvia did not defend the suit. Instead, she came to the United States and started to live in the ocean-front house in Santa Monica that Fairbanks had left to her.

Three months ago, she and Gable began going to a few parties together. No one thought anything of it. Gable had first met her 15 years ago when she was married to Fairbanks. They were considered old acquaintances—nothing more.

Most of us had long been convinced that Gable would marry again, but we always thought he would choose someone like his third wife, Carole Lombard—very witty, very down-to-earth, very American. None of us ever thought he would marry a titled Englishwoman.

Clark, as everyone knows, has been married three times previously, once in 1924 to Josephine Dillon, a dramatic coach, once to Rhea Langham in 1931, and once to Carole Lombard in 1938. His marriage to Carole was called "the perfect union," and when she was killed in a plane crash near Las Vegas, three years later, Clark went into seclusion at his Encino ranch. His hair turned white at the temples, his face became lined, and he ordered that Carole's room remain just as it was when she left it—clothes still hanging in the closets, perfume bottles in the bathroom, hosiery rolled up into tight little balls.

It's been no secret that for the past nine years, Clark has been carrying the torch for his dead wife, subconsciously comparing to her every girl he went out with—and always having the escort fail to reach the Lombard standard.

About a year ago, a girl who had dated Gable occasionally was asked if she thought Clark would ever forget Carole Lombard. "I don't know," she said. "He's certainly tried. He joined the Air Forces; he turned intensely to hunting, fishing, and boating. He threw himself into his work. But my own opinion is that there's only one way in which a man like Gable can forget a woman he's loved. That way is by falling in love with another one. I'm not that woman."

She wasn't, either. But the whole world now knows who was. THE END

(Clark Gable's newest movie is MGM's Key to the City.)

lana turner's fight for happiness

(Continued from page 37) themselves a new house. And in all that time you could count on the fingers of one hand, and have a pinky left over, the times they have poked their famous faces out in public, the last occasion to a première and after that one drink and one dance at Mocambo—then silence again, from the playboy-playgirl pair whose wedding rocked Hollywood and the world with champagne, chi-chi, expensive glitter and fuss not much more than a year ago.

In all those long months, too, there wasn't even a stick of real Turner news out of MGM—only rumors. Lana would make this—then that—no, she wouldn't—not yet. Her last picture, The Three Musketeers, was finished two full years ago, and still there was no definite go-ahead green light on Lana's career after a honeymoon stretching over 19 months in Europe, New England, New York, Florida and the Bahamas—and now in Hollywood itself.

leading questions . . .

What happened, anyway? Had Bob tamed Lana, or Lana tamed Bob, and how and why and what goes on? I had a collection of questions as long as my arm about the Toppings. Was it true she was scrapping unreasonably with her studio? Was she overweight and out of condition for the camera? Was she back in Hollywood to stay? Was she happy? Was she changed? Was Bob contented away from his old playboy haunts? Was he a good husband to Lana, a good dad to her daughter, Cheryl? Had the Toppings laughed off the outrageous, embarrassing publicity punches they'd had from the very start of their marriage, or had they been left groggy and unsteady? How stood the union, the union which a skeptical world, knowing both partners and their pasts, refused to take seriously? I wanted those answers to these and more, straight from Lana herself.

But when I called MGM I got, "Lana's at home." When I called Lana there, I got, if I got her at all, "We're house-hunting day and night," and later, "Hedda, I'm up to my ears in painters and paperhangers." Lana had flitted by my house once, then breezed on fast, flinging, "Gotta pick up Cheryl at school." I was beginning to wonder why the heck Bob and Lana came back to Hollywood at all if they just were going to vanish like a pair of Garbos—when my phone rang one Sunday morning and Lana asked, "Hedda, can you sit on a packing case and like it?"

"Honey," I told her, "I've sat on lots worse things than that, and had the time of my life!"

"Good," she said. "Because I'm so thrilled—we're in our house and you've just got to see it! No furniture to speak of, but Bob's family things just arrived from Greenwich, and they're simply wonderful. Such lovely china, silver and laces, Bob's baby portrait, his high chair and—"

"Hold it, hold it!" I said. "I'll be right over. I can hardly wait—to start all over again figuring out Lana Turner."

Which is what I'm having to do. But, believe me, it's a pleasure.

Because the minute I stepped inside her door I found a girl I could, at long last, thoroughly admire. At 28, Lana Turner is finally mature, sure of herself, getting down to responsibilities and looking life straight in the face.

Now Lana knows what she wants—and she has it. That old troubled look is gone glimmering. "If the cameras could only bend down on you right this minute!" I said. "You never looked prettier."

"Thanks," Lana smiled, "and I'm hoping they will, soon as all this script trouble is ironed out. But meanwhile," she said with a serenity I never knew Lana Turner could possess about anything connected with Hollywood, "I'm not worrying. In fact, I couldn't be more relaxed. What comes first with the Toppings is us."

"Even before a career?"

Lana nodded. "I've learned how to live," she said simply. "I've got a home at last and all that goes with it. And you'll never know what fun and quiet peace there is in that."

Lana's home and all that goes with it—which means her Bob and baby girl, Cheryl—perches on a sloping three-acre hill above Sunset Boulevard where it winds through the rolling Holmby hills. It's a big, gray Norman-style mansion with those six television antennae sticking like a stack of crossed hairpins, straight into the sky. "KTOP" Bob calls it for a joke. Next door live Charlie Correll (who's Andy of Amos 'n' Andy) and his five kids; up the street are Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger with their brood; and right across, oddly enough, is the old house of Sonja Henie's, who used to be Bob Topping's sister-in-law.

"I want the dollar tour," I warned Lana. "I want to see everything and hear all about it, and why you two beautiful people are hugging your hearth like a pair of stuffed owls."

she's a honey
she's jeanne crain
on the april
cover of modern screen
on sale
march 10

"You'll see," she laughed. "But let's get Bob in on the act—he's my pard now, you know. Papa!"

Well, I never thought I'd hear Bob Topping answer to "Papa"—and like it! But Bob obviously does. He came out of the den in shorts and a flowered sport shirt and seconded everything Lana told me by his easy-going, contented, happy-husband countenance.

I like Bob Topping. He hunts fun out of life and luckily he can afford it. The main fun he's having right now is trying to make Lana happy, showing her things she never knew about before, waking in her old too-Hollywood self the realization that she's a person, not just a painted doll, and that there are a lot of good things in life she's missed which he wants her to taste and thrill to. Take the house I was visiting for the first time: that was Bob's idea.

"He wanted me to come back to Hollywood, all along," said Lana. "Bob knew I'd be happiest here. It's not his country—he's an Easterner. But he knows all about me and what my life's been." Lana fingered the gold medallion of Saint Genesius, patron saint of actors, pinned to her dress. "He knows I've got to keep on acting. But he also knows I've got to live a new life. We both do. This"—and she indicated the big rooms before us empty of furniture, but already warm and lived in—"is our start."

Lana and Bob were so eager to get into their new home that they moved in before a carpet did, "rattling around," laughed Lana, "like a pair of dice." Lana robbed her old house on Crown Drive in Brentwood for a bed to sleep in and a breakfast set to eat off—and almost up until the day I looked in, that and the TV set were all the furniture they had. Even now in the big drawing room there was only a baby-grand piano—piled high with Lana's knick-knacks fresh out of packing boxes.

After we'd seen everything to see in the Toppings' new house clear down to Lana's mirrored powder-room (Bob calls it her "mad room"), I settled for the den—the only room you could yet call furnished and the smallest in the house. Her thousands of records crammed it, aud Bob's family books lined the walls. A recording machine sat on one table and on another—natch—a TV set. "From 6:30 to seven nobody speaks to anybody in this house," Lana said. "That's Beanie time." Beanie I discovered, is a television puppet show that started for kids and now has half of Hollywood's stars racing home from the studio to catch up on the rag doll's adventures. Bob and Lana are no exception. Cheryl started them off.

fond stepfather . . .

Lana's little girl is six-and-a-half now, growing like a weed. She started school at St. Paul's in nearby Westwood, where Bob likes to pick her up in the afternoons. Bob's awfully fond of Lana's daughter, and he's done all a stepdad can to make her life merry and give her the sense of security a fatherless child lacks. I know how grateful Lana is for that, because her own dad died when she was only 10.

Lana's a member of the St. Paul's parents' council and she takes her family life, her real life, seriously. About the Hollywood life she's just as serious maybe, but definitely not frantic about it—even though right before I saw her the script of A Life of Her Own had finally been tossed out and no picture whatever loomed ahead. I can recall when a career stalemate like that would have had Lana nibbling her fingernails to pieces, acting up impetuously on all sorts of bad advice from all sorts of people. But not now.

"I'm not fighting with MGM," she answered my question. "I don't fight with anybody now that I'm married—not even Bob," she laughed and he nodded agreement. "Life's too short and there's too much else in it, too many nice things. I said I'd come back and make a picture when they wanted me. They said they did last summer and out I came. It's just a case of scripts that didn't work out and nobody could be nicer about it. They'll get the right one soon and I'll get back to work and give it everything I have. Meanwhile—as you can see—I've been too busy to fret. But not having made a picture for so long, I'm afraid I won't be getting one of those again right away," said Lana ruefully, pointing up at the mantel to MODERN SCREEN's silver cup for having been voted 1948's most popular actress. (A few days later she was to be informed she'd duplicated the honor for 1949!) "But here's something else I'm proud of." And she yanked down two gold statuettes parked beside it. Statuettes of fish, of all things! "Cat Cay Club," they both read, "International Tuna Tournament." Lana's was marked, "Third Place" and Bob's "Seventh Place."

"What in the world do you know about fishing?" I wondered. "Not much," Lana grinned, "but I had the best teacher in the world—Bob." That's true enough. Bob has fished for giant bluefin all the way from the Caribbean to Nova Scotia—and those pictures you saw of Lana last spring parked beside a minnow three times her own size were not the Hollywood publicity kind. She caught it herself.

"You know what we're going to do next?" Lana quizzed me eagerly.

"After this, I couldn't guess," I told her. "What—shoot lions?"

Lana's face fell. "Who told you?"

"Good Heavens, Turner," I gasped, "nobody! You don't really mean it?"

"Sure we do," said Bob. "Lions and elephants and rhinos and whatever else we can scare up in Africa. It's a safari for us—just as soon as they get through with this picture of Lana's."

Well, I never! Again I never, never thought I'd picture even the prospect of Lana Turner in a pith helmet sighting down an elephant gun in the veldt! Talk about the movies—how fantastic can you get? But fantastic I like it—and if you could see what a superchanged, reborn gal that Turner is these days you'd exult with her too.

"What we want to do," Bob explained, "is lead a full and interesting life. And that doesn't mean sitting in one place to me—or to Lana, either, now. This home's our headquarters from now on out, but we're going to keep moving. Remember, Lana's contract has only two more years to run," he stated ominously.

"You mean she'll be through with Hollywood then?" He shrugged but Lana shook her head. "I'll be around as long as they'll have me," she said, "but in between pictures Bob and I have plans. We're going around the world. India, especially, I'm dying to see. You see, I married a traveling man."

Already Bob has circled the globe fifteen times. He's seen and done about everything there is to do in about as many departments as you can name. But you have to hand it to him, he's not jaded nor disillusioned, in spite of his three marriages.

I think Bob Topping and Lana Turner are well matched: while both are young, they've both been through the mill fairly thoroughly, had their heartaches and disappointments, made their mistakes, got their wild oats pretty well sown and watched the crops fizzle. The only way you learn anything from life is by living—and that's exactly what I found Lana doing, in ways strange and new to her, but satisfyingly familiar to less gilded girls.

But don't get me wrong. I never expect to see her baking pies in the kitchen or running the washing machine. Lana is frank about those things. "I never learned to cook or sew. I never had time and I never had to. And I'm not going to start at 28 because I still don't," she said honestly. "But I am going to make my family happy and be a good wife and mother or bust!"

I give full credit to Bob for helping Lana on the track to her happiness.

I remember the afternoon I called on the Topping newlyweds before they set out on their long honeymoon. At that point I wondered sadly, from the way things started off, if Lana hadn't made a mistake again. I asked playboy Bob Topping right out, "Why did you marry Lana?" and he answered, "Because I love her." I charged him to take care of her and he said, "Don't worry. I'm going to look after her."

I'm not too sure I believed Bob Topping then—or if I did it was with reservations. But I do now—and I haven't any holdbacks. He's been good for Lana.

That honeymoon cottage scene will soon be two whole years in the fading past, because this coming April 26, Lana and Bob will celebrate their second anniversary—and right in this very home which they will have spent almost a year getting ready for that event.

That's one party I don't want to miss—celebrating an anniversary, a housewarming, and by then, unless MGM's crazier than I think, a new Lana Turner picture, too.

So before I left I let it be known that I might just possibly be persuaded to attend. "Okay," laughed Lana. "You're invited right now."

"If you think you can take it, that is," put in Bob. "We had our first one in Nassau last April and it went on for two days and two nights."

"If I can't," I said, "I'm a sissy. But if I should honk out—do I get a raincheck on it?"

"There'll be one every year," said Lana. And I'm sure there will—somewhere—for Lana and Bob. They've fooled the experts so far, including myself, and they'll probably keep right on fooling 'em. I wouldn't know about the others, but as far as I'm concerned, that's perfectly O.K. It's fun to be fooled, believe me, the new Lana Turner way. THE END strike!

---

(Continued from page 40) suggested Dick Clayton, mopping his face.

"Get him," said Shelley. "Just when we're showing 'em up!" She took a sidewise glance at the score. "Oh—my!" she said, limply.

Then Sally Forrest and Barbra Fuller got their dates, Jerry Courtland and Dick Foote, to give them some coaching. The boys were big-hearted—with their score they could afford to be.

Art Linkletter showed us a few of the things we did wrong. "Maybe," he suggested, "if you took off your shoes, you could get more freedom in your swing."

On or off, it didn't help. We were about as graceful as if we'd been wearing cement wedgies.

Art kids so much that sometimes it's hard to tell if he's serious. So maybe he was or maybe he wasn't when he told us how he happened to buy the bowling alley. Art lived two blocks from the place and spent most of his free time there. One day, according to Art, the Alley's manager said to him, "Don't you think it'd be cheaper if you just bought the place?"

Art replied, "You might be right. What's the price?" The manager quoted a sum. "Sold," said Art.

"Then," said Art, "three weeks after I bought this place the family moved. We now live seven miles from here."

On the next lane, Sally Forrest was proceeding nicely under the tutelage of Cojo (that's Jerry Courtland's nickname). We can't say the same in Barbra Fuller's case. She had drawn two instructors, Dick Foote and Dick Clayton. The two Dicks were cutting some pretty fancy capers, bowling left- and right-handed, bowing their legs and pushing the ball between them, and indulging in other antics. With all their "assistance," Barbra became even more confused.

Since Art bought the bowling alley, most of us have been frequent visitors. Only newcomer was Keefe Brasselle, and Art soon found out about him. Adopting his best quiz-master tone he quizzed as follows:

"Your name is?"

"Keefe Brasselle."

"You've appeared in?"

"Not Wanted and Never Fear with Sally Forrest."

"You're under contract to?"

"MGM."

"You live at?"

"Say," said Keefe, "do I get a refrigerator with this interview?"

One thing Art didn't learn was that Keefe's first job after the Army was in a factory where the employees had a bowling club. Keefe had been one of their champs. (He didn't mention this fact until after the game.)

The match was resumed and what happened to our team—shouldn't have. To put it very mildly, the fellas won.

They tell us 300 is a perfect score and Douglas Dick chalked up an amazing 299! When the scores were finally added up, he was presented with a miniature gold bowling trophy.

There was also a consolation prize for low scorer, Adele Mara. She received a tennis racket. Adele got the idea.

By the time the battle of the bowlers came to an end, Reba had a foot cramp, Barbra Fuller was nursing a broken fingernail, and the rest of the gang was wilting faster than a floorwalker's carnation.

"Uh-h-h-h—how about that food we were promised?" said Dick Clayton.

"At once, sir!" said Art. "Right this way!"

Even if we girls did have to fix it, the idea of leaving the lanes was as welcome as money from home. It was amazing how fast we revived at the sight of food. The fellas gallantly didn't keep us to our promise, but pitched in and helped out. Dick Clayton and Lex Barker took over the short orders department. Donning chef caps and ankle-length galley aprons, they scurried about the kitchen, dishing up fried onions, chili and beans, and hot tamales.

Jerry Courtland manned the soda fountain. He sure was miserly with his servings. His scoops of ice cream were about the size of a golfball.

"What's the matter, Courtland?" complained Dick Foote. "You dole food like you're working for the management."

Jerry ignored this until he found himself on a treadmill. He'd no sooner finish serving one end of the counter than the other end would be ready for refills. Then his servings got more generous.

We all ordered wonderful, weird concoctions. Barbra Fuller wanted "a piece of marble cake, topped by two scoops of ice cream swimming in fudge sauce, topped with whipped cream, roasted almonds, and cherries." Of course, this type of dessert is designed exclusively for girls who, like Barbra, weigh 103 pounds, work eight hours a day in Republic films, and play a couple of sets of tennis weekly.

Sally Forrest invented a "Linkletter Sundae." It contained a sample of every flavoring and ice cream the fountain served. "It'd look just like a rainbow," said Sally, admiring her masterpiece, "if only it had a dash of green."

"Wait until you've eaten it," advised Dick Foote, "and you'll supply that yourself."

Art was certainly a perfect host. He didn't even object when Dick Clayton dropped a scoop of ice cream on the floor. He good-naturedly retrieved it and cautioned, "Be sure you put this in your sundae."

"This has really been fun," said Jerry Courtland as he polished off his third double-malted.

"But next time," said Shelley, "we've got to pick our teammates for bowling a little more carefully."

"Next time," said Art, looking at his dismantled kitchen and his vanishing stock of ice cream, "next time—you bring box lunches!" THE END

1950 is the Cinderella year

... the waiting is over!

Soon you will see it in all its Color, Splendor and Pageantry, with Music and Wondrous Fun –

WALT DISNEY'S CINDERELLA

A LOVE STORY WITH MUSIC

6 YEARS in the making

Put a smile in your heart...and laughter in your dreams

A story written in stardust...6 years in the making...Walt Disney's masterpiece, Cinderella, will give a new gleam to your hopes, a new lift to your life.

Not only because it's the greatest love story ever told—though that's reason enough if you've ever been in love. But because it's so full of the wonderful fun, hilarious characters, singable songs—the sheer enchantment of Disneyland.

Ever since "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," thousands of people have written ... asked ... waited for Walt Disney to bring the beloved Cinderella to life.

After 6 magical years it's ready with new wonders, new splendor, new magnificence—ready to thrill the world as no picture ever has!

It's coming your way to fill your heart with a happiness you'll never forget!

A magical musical

Color by TECHNICOLOR

Distributed by RKO Radio Pictures

dangerous paradise

(Continued from page 24) myself was absolutely correct."

As for the actress, these were the words she uttered in December: "I have decided to give up my artist's career because I want to live my own life just as any other woman."

In short, Ingrid Bergman wants to be free to have as many children as she likes, to raise them as she sees best, to marry and stay married to the man she loves above all others.

No longer will she countenance living her private life in public. As Mrs. Roberto Rossellini, she will undoubtedly submerge into a domesticity essentially foreign to her ambitious nature. But in time, she may become accustomed to the anonymity she has never known and which she is currently seeking.

In time, too, when the hullabaloo and publicity have diminished, she may renounce her decision and return to acting, because up until the time she met Roberto, Ingrid's great, burning enthusiasm had been for acting.

ingrid's dream . . .

I remember once when I interviewed her in New York—she was playing in Joan of Lorraine at that period—and I asked her about her childhood. "I was lonely always," she told me, "and I turned to acting. I would get dressed in my mother's old clothes and I would read poetry aloud—not poems of nature, but funny poems and sad poems—and I dramatized them.

"Sometimes I acted for old people, and I was happy to do it for them, but not for young people because I was terrified of anyone my age. As far back as I can remember, however, I have always wanted to be an actress. It has been my one, all-consuming desire. It has been and still is my life."

She said the above to me a few short years ago—and now all she wants is peace, privacy, and the companionship of the man she loves.

To achieve these she has sacrificed her fame, her fortune, and her reputation to live in what, at this writing, is still a dangerous paradise.

Fate and time and circumstance have all conspired against her.

If, for example, Dr. Lindstrom had only taken Ingrid at her word when he visited Messina last year; if he had only believed that she had fallen deeply, completely in love with Rossellini; if only he had granted her the divorce she had requested over and over again in 1949—then Ingrid might well have escaped the world censure which has been brought down so overwhelmingly upon her head.

Perhaps in the United States it is fashionable to point the finger of shame at Ingrid because she was out of love with her husband—she had asked for a divorce long before she met Rossellini. But many marriages in America end in divorce. Ingrid, like any other woman, is also of flesh and blood, and it is only natural that, not loving, she sought for love—and found it with the charming Italian film director.

Perhaps Ingrid is finished in the American land of her adoption, but in Italy and all over the continent of Europe, despite all the water that has flowed under the bridge, she is still very much loved—and understood.

In Rome, for example, people say, "What else could she have done? She did the honorable thing. She was not in love with her husband when she fell in love with Rossellini. She told her husband the truth. She asked for a divorce. For months no divorce was forthcoming, so she and Roberto sought a divorce in a European country where it was possible to secure one. What should she have done after she finished Stromboli—return to a husband she no longer loved? That would have been the living of a lie."

Movie-goers in Europe feel strongly that Ingrid had very little happiness in life until she met Rossellini. There is some evidence to support that contention.

Ingrid was an orphan and an only child. Her mother died when she was two and her father when she was 12. She went to live with an aunt, and the aunt died the following year, when Ingrid was 13. "She died in my arms," Ingrid told me several years ago. "She died when we were all alone, and I telephoned and telephoned but no one came."

Ingrid as a young girl was tall, awkward, and poor. She had few friends, and when she was accepted at 17 by the Royal Dramatic Theatre in Stockholm, that was a great moment of her life.

But even in school, her poverty followed, and she had to take side-jobs. One of these was with a Swedish film company, and that's how she got into motion pictures.

She soon became one of Sweden's top actresses and in 1938 her picture, A Woman's Face, was chosen by the International Film Exposition the year's best picture. That same year, she married Dr. Peter Lindstrom, and the following year she gave birth to her daughter, Pia.

For a year, I believe she was genuinely happy. After that year, however, she was constantly beset by doubts and problems and career decisions.

Finally, David Selznick succeeded in getting her to come to Hollywood. Some say that Ingrid was in a constant state of dissatisfaction from the moment she first saw Hollywood Boulevard.

This is undoubtedly an exaggeration, but certainly, she wasn't happy. To begin with, she was separated from her husband. He went to the University of Rochester to study medicine, and Ingrid went to Selznick's to study English.

She learned the language quickly, quickly enough to realize that Selznick's operation was built around the loan-out procedure. In all the years Bergman was with Selznick, 1939-45, she made only two Selznick productions. She was loaned out for eight others, with Selznick receiving far more for her services than the $2,000 a week he was paying her.

Then, too, there was the question of story-selection. In 1945, Ingrid refused to renew her contract with Selznick because she wasn't particularly pleased with the films she had made. When Maxwell Anderson offered her an opportunity to star in his drama, Joan of Lorraine, she quickly left Hollywood and moved to New York for the run of the play.

In New York, she was separated from her husband a good deal. Having finished his interneship at the Los Angeles County Hospital and his specialization in brain surgery, he became the assistant of Dr. Tracy Putnam in Beverly Hills.

His calm Scandinavian temperament made him an excellent man with the knife, but his knowledge of the entertainment world was less than considerable; he and Ingrid began to drift apart.

As a matter of fact, Ingrid asked for a separation while she was in New York. She hadn't fallen in love with any other man, but she felt that she and Lindstrom had come to the parting of ways.

There was no divorce but there was a geographical separation. After a year's run, Ingrid returned to Hollywood and Lindstrom. She made two unsuccessful films, Arch of Triumph and Joan of Arc. Ingrid then began to take inventory. Artistically, her career seemed stymied. She could find no story in Hollywood that she really wanted to do. One night, she saw Rossellini's picture, Open City. She had met Roberto in Paris the summer before, so she wrote him at once to suggest she make a film with him. Rossellini flew to Hollywood. He took Ingrid dining. Reporters who saw the pair at La Rue wrote that never before had Ingrid looked so radiant, so beautiful, so alive.

Together, Ingrid and Rossellini planned a film to be made in Italy. They conferred with Sam Goldwyn for financial backing. Goldwyn turned them down, largely because Roberto insisted upon running the entire show. Next, the pair went to RKO, and Howard Hughes agreed to back them.

falling in love . . .

Life now took on a rosy hue for Ingrid. It's problematical if she knew it back then—but she was falling in love with Rossellini.

In Italy her love matured and blossomed. Rossellini quickly secured an annulment of his marriage to the wife from whom he had long been separated. He wanted to be able to marry Ingrid the moment she got her divorce.

Ingrid tried, but Dr. Lindstrom would not grant a hasty divorce. He felt that Ingrid was undergoing a schoolgirl crush, an infatuation that would end with the final shooting of Stromboli.

How wrong he was, the whole world now knows. For Ingrid Bergman was never one to give her heart lightly and with carefree abandon.

In giving her heart to Roberto Rossellini, she knew full well that she was also giving her life.

That, at least, is how the Bergman-Rossellini love affair shapes up to the average European movie-fan. The feeling is widespread in Europe that these two were and are prisoners of love, enmeshed in a web of circumstance.

Everyone abroad hopes wholeheartedly that someday soon, after she has had all the children and domesticity she wants, Ingrid Bergman will return to triumphs on the screen.

She is not the first woman in the world whom circumstances and her own heart have driven into a situation which, by conventional standards, public opinion condemns.

She is as fine, as talented, and as beautiful an actress as the Old World has ever produced. When you see her in Stromboli, I'm sure you'll agree that talent such as Ingrid Bergman's is too rare to be driven from the screen. THE END

HOW TIME FLIES

Errol Flynn's seemingly gone in for the contemplative life. On the set, he spends all his spare time scribbling and has turned down invitations right and left with the explanation that he can't afford the time away from his writing. Further proof that Flynn's giving up the more tempestuous pleasures of life for the quiet tempo is the fact that he's put his yacht, Sirocco on the market.—Modern Screen, March, 1940.

Here's High Adventure at Lowest Cost!

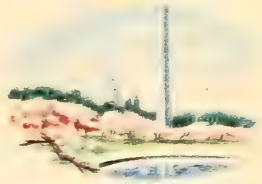
A GREYHOUND AMAZING AMERICA TOUR!

Treat yourself to travel adventure along America's romantic highways, not only during your vacation—but often, on gay weekends, holidays, time off—whenever you get the urge!

Because they cost so very little, Greyhound Expense-Paid Tours will set you free as the breeze to go where you please . . . for any length of time to any of the Nation's playgrounds, great cities, lively resort areas.

Amazing America Tours are not conducted . . . you can travel alone, in a twosome, or with a group. But Greyhound assures your fun and your funds by providing all transportation, hotel accommodations, itineraries, special sightseeing, and entertainment . . . all planned in advance at no extra charge. Fill out coupon below, and write for the tour that takes your fancy!

GREYHOUND



NEW YORK CITY
Four gay days of sightseeing at famous spots, three nights at smart hotel. $18.55

CALIFORNIA
Spend 3 wondrous days at Yosemite, enjoy 6 meals, 2 nights at rustic lodge. $34.50

FLORIDA
Eleven-day adventure all through Sunshine State! Ten starry nights in hotels. $81.05

WASHINGTON
Four dramatic days of historic tours at Nation's Capital, 3 nights' hotel. $19.75

Boston, 4 Days	$24.00*
Los Angeles 4 Days	$14.00*
Miami, 6 Days	$33.85*
Colonial Virginia 6 Days	$40.45*
San Francisco 4 Days	$16.25*
Chicago, 3 Days	$12.00*
New England Circle, 7 Days	$46.55*
Detroit, 3 Days	$12.10*
Denver, 3 Days	$13.00*
Salt Lake City 3 Days	$ 8.50*
Havana, 4 Days	$60.70*
(Includes round trip fare by bus and airplane from Miami to Cuba.)
Mexico City 8 Days	$65.15*

*To these prices, add Greyhound round-trip fare from your home town.

Note: Except where shown, prices do not include meals, or transportation to point where tour begins. U.S. tax extra. Prices include double-room (per person) hotel rates. All prices subject to change.

WRITE FOR FREE PICTORIAL FOLDER!

Greyhound Information Center, 105 W. Madison, Chicago 2, Illinois.

Please send me a free folder about the tour in which I am interested.

MY TOUR PREFERENCE: _____

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____

DM-3-50

Deep...deeper... deepest cleansing ever!

If casual cleansing helps, just think what deep-cleansing will do! For only the cleanest skin can look really young and lovely.

Woodbury Cold Cream cleanses deeper. It contains Penaten—the amazing penetrating agent that actually goes deeper into pore openings. That means Woodbury's wonderful cleansing oils go deeper to loosen every trace of grime and make-up.

And because of Penaten, Woodbury Cold Cream smooths more effectively, too. Brings rich softening oils to soothe your skin when it's dry and rough. Recapture that lovely little-girl freshness again with Woodbury Cold Cream! 20¢ to $1.39 plus tax.

Woodbury Cold Cream

Penetrates deeper because it contains PENATEN

lucky finds in fashion

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ Every now and then you run across a fashion—a dress or a suit or a blouse—which seems to be plain lucky. It looks like a million, gets you lots of compliments, fits to a T, never seems to wear out—and costs unbelievably little in the first place. Once in a while, we said. You hardly expect such luck every time you go shopping. Not unless somebody arranges it ahead of time ... . and who's going to do the arranging, if Modern Screen doesn't? Which we have.

In this issue, we present nothing but lucky finds. We've lined up everything from a panty to a suit, and each and every fashion has what it takes to make you feel lucky buying it (the price), loving it (the looks), and wearing it (the quality).

On page 66 we kick off with two superb blouses—one tailored, one embroidered—both meant to make a suit or skirt sing. On page 67, we show a super suit you'd swear costs twice the price.

On pages 68-69, we concentrate on size with hand-picked lucky finds for you half-sizes, you teens and juniors, and you misses.

And on page 71, we wind up with undies you will drool over. They're part of the big rush for roses (very high fashion!), and they have that pampered, perfumed, lovely from-the-skin-out glamour you imagine only an heiress can afford. But they're easy on the pocketbook, like all our lucky finds!

Pat White takes it easy in lucky find pajamas

■ Patricia White, currently appearing in RKO-Radio's Tattooed Stranger, relaxes prettily in jaunty tailored pajamas with gay striped neckline.

They have an adjustable waistline for trig fit, and trouser pleats to make you look trim as a sailor. In fine colorfast non-shrinking broadcloth, in your choice of aqua, cream, blue, pink with multicolor stripes. Proportionette sizes 32-38. By Tommies. $4.95.

At The Hecht Co., Washington, D. C. Other information, page 72.

modern screen
fashions lucky finds

for spring

■ Above left: The tailored blouse, with handsome tucked shirt front, plunging neckline, button-down collar tabs, and gleaming pearl buttons. In fine sanforized cotton broadcloth. White, maize, blue, pink, beige. Sizes 32-38. A Renée blouse by Murray. $5.95. At The Hecht Co., Washington, see page 72.

■ Above right: The soft blouse, delicately made, smooth and expensive looking. Fine washable tissue faille, with graceful sprays of embroidered flowers. Wonderful under a suit, smart with a skirt. White, pink, mint, maize, blue. Sizes 32-38. A Vanity Original. $5.95. At The Hecht Co., Washington, see page 72.

■ Right: Crisp suit you'd swear cost twice the price. Beautifully fitting jacket, with double split pockets; all around pleated skirt. It's worsted and rayon, dashingly checked in navy and red; toast and brown; or grey and maize. Lined in crepe. Sizes 10-18. By Suitgems. $19.95. The Hecht Co., Washington.

jewelry by Coro

lucky finds

sized to fit

jewelry by coro

in misses' sizes

Far left: Sophisticated cotton, blazed with satin stripes to catch your audience's eye—peg-pocketed to prove you know your fashions. In fine satin-striped chambray. Grey ground with green, royal blue or wine stripes. Sizes 12-20. By Sorority. $5.95. The Hecht Co., Washington, see page 72.

in half sizes

Left: Navy polka, especially styled to make the most of the 5′ 5½″-and-under figure. Diagonally buttoned bodice, soft peplum—magic slimmers. Rayon crepe with taffeta shawl collar, buttons and bow. In sizes 14½-24½ (14½ equals 16, 16½ equals 18, etc.) By Rite-Fit. $7.95. The Hecht Co., Washington, see page 72.

in teen sizes

Right: Polka dots for the young and giddy, sized just for teens and juniors. Tricky little stand-up tied collar, carefree little skirt ruffle. Sanforized and mercerized vat-dyed broadcloth. Maize, blue, pink or aqua. Jr. sizes 9-15, or teen sizes 10-16. $5.95. By My Girl Dresses. At The Hecht Co., Washington, see page 72.

NOW...the LIPSTICK that really stays on

by Max Factor

SUSAN HAYWARD
Starring in the SAMUEL GOLDWYN production
"MY FOOLISH HEART"

In Gorgeous Fashion Shades to Dramatize Your Coloring

Share this secret of lasting lip beauty with the loveliest lips in Hollywood

- a non-smear lipstick that stays on, and on, and on!
- an exclusive lasting color principle that does not dry your lips!
- a s-m-o-o-t-h-e-r texture that never cakes, never runs!

Now your lips can be lovelier, longer...No more hurried 'repair' worries ...No more 'tattle-tale' lipstick smears!

In Max Factor's unique Color Harmony and Fashion Harmony Lip Colors . . . correct for your coloring, correct for your costume; Clear Reds, Blue Reds, Rose Reds and Pinks. In the "well-behaved" lipstick. At all leading drug and department stores. $1 plus tax.

HOLLYWOOD'S SECRET OF LASTING LIP LOVELINESS

1. Use Max Factor's "well-behaved" lipstick.
2. Dry lips thoroughly before applying.
3. Allow just a few seconds to set.
4. Blot off excess with tissue.
5. Moisten lips for lasting lip beauty.

Created for Color Harmony in Make-Up by..

Max Factor
HOLLYWOOD

ACCEPT THIS UNIQUE BEAUTY OFFER: Discover what Color Harmony in Make-Up can do for you. You will receive a generous trial-size lipstick that really stays on in the fashion shade that will do the most for your coloring . . . plus your personal Color Harmony Make-Up Chart prescribed for you by Max Factor . . . plus the 32-page color-illustrated book by Max Factor, "The New Art of Make-Up".

SEND FOR THIS UNUSUAL OFFER TODAY!

FILL IN AND CHECK CAREFULLY THE INFORMATION CHART BELOW AND MAIL

Max Factor Make-Up Studio, Dept. 10, Box 941, Hollywood 28, California
Please send me your unique beauty offer. I enclose 10 cents (in coin) to help cover cost of postage and handling.

Name_____
Please print name and address

Address _____ Age_____

City _____ Zone_____ State_____

COMPLEXION	EYES	HAIR
Fair . . . . ☐	Blue . . . . ☐	BLONDE
Creamy . . . ☐	Gray . . . . ☐	LIGHT ☐ DARK ☐
Medium . . . ☐	Green . . . . ☐	BRUNETTE
Ruddy . . . . ☐	Hazel . . . . ☐	LIGHT ☐ DARK ☐
Sallow . . . . ☐	Brown . . . . ☐	BROWNETTE
Freckled . . . ☐	Black . . . . ☐	LIGHT ☐ DARK ☐
Olive . . . . ☐		REDHEAD
Deep Olive . . ☐	LASHES (Color)	LIGHT ☐ DARK ☐
SKIN: Normal ☐	☐ ☐ ☐	If hair is Gray, check
Dry ☐ Oily ☐	Light Med Dark	type above & here ☐

A

B

modern screen fashions

lucky finds—

with romantic roses

Springtime is flowertime—and what's more glamorous than American Beauties blooming on your undies? They're hand-painted on Bur-Mil rayon crepe, wash like hankies. Incredibly luxurious at such tiny prices! White, pink, blue, mint, champagne, navy, grey, black. All by Shirley Ray.

A. Half-slip with elastic waist.
Small, medium, large. $2.95.

B. Slip with beautifully moulded bodice. Sizes 32-40. $2.95.

C. Adorable panties—cut saucily full. Sizes 26-30. $1.95.

D. Nightgown—rose spray on one shoulder. Sizes 32-40. $3.95.

C

D

All at The Hecht Co.,
Washington, D. C.
For how to buy, see page 72

We'll Give You These Lovely Dresses

—and you can earn up to $23 WEEKLY, BESIDES!

Imagine! Take your pick of over 125 new Spring dresses without its costing you a cent! Right now we have openings for new Representatives, to take orders in spare time and send them to us. You get paid cash on the spot for every order. You work when and where you please—in your own free time. In return, we give you lovely dresses for your own use—and you can earn up to $23 a week besides!

YOU DON'T NEED EXPERIENCE!

Anybody can do it—without experience of any kind. Just show your friends and neighbors our beautiful new Spring styles. Every dress carries the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval and our own unconditional guarantee of satisfaction or money back. There's an amazing variety of colors, weaves, and patterns—famous fabrics that are soft, rich, enduring. And a complete range of sizes to fit everyone you know — Misses, Half Sizes, Juniors, Stouts. Women can't resist these miraculous bargains — many as low as $2.98. They just can't help but order 2 and 3 at a time! Isn't this a pleasant, dignified, easy way to earn good money in your spare time — and get your own dresses, too, without a penny of cost. Begin now! Remember—you need no experience, no investment of any kind. Your Style Portfolio, with samples of America's finest fabrics, is absolutely free. There's no obligation, nothing to pay. Don't wait another day. Rush coupon at once!

Send for Free PORTFOLIO LATEST SPRING DRESSES $2.98

NO CANVASSING! NO INVESTMENT!

MAKE MONEY LIKE THIS:

Marie Patton, Illinois, really enjoyed earning an average of $39 a week, last year.

Mrs. Carl C. Birch, Maryland says it's easy to take in an average of $36 a week, the way she did!

Mrs. Claude Burnett, Alabama averaged $31.50 a week right in her home community.

Fashion Frocks Inc.
Desk D3054
Cincinnati 25, Ohio

PASTE THIS COUPON ON POSTCARD—mail now!

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Desk D3054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio

Yes—I am interested in your opportunity to make money in spare time and get my own dresses without a penny of cost. Send me everything I need to start right away, without obligation.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *Zone*____ *State*_____

*Age*_____ *Dress Size*_____

Where You Can Buy Modern Screen Fashions

All the Lucky Find fashions on pages 65-71 are currently featured at,

The Hecht Company
7th & F Sts., NW
Washington 4, D.C.

in the following departments:

Lucky Find broadcloth pajamas worn by Pat White in color photograph (page 65)
Lingerie Department, Third Floor.

Lucky Find plunging neckline cotton blouse (page 66)
Blouse Department, Third Floor.

Lucky Find embroidered tissue faille blouse (page 66)
Blouse Department, Third Floor.

Lucky Find checked suit with double split pockets (page 67)
Sportswear Department, Third Floor.

Lucky Find sophisticated satin striped cotton dress (page 68)
Daytime Dress Department, Third Floor.

Lucky Find polka dot half-size dress (page 68)
Budget Dress Shop, Third Floor.

Lucky Find broadcloth teen dress with polka dots and ruffle (page 69)
Teen Circle, Second Floor.

Lucky Find American Beauties half-slip, slip, panties and gown (page 70-71)
Lingerie Department, Third Floor.

You may also order by mail, write:
The Hecht Company
7th & F Sts., NW
Washington 4, D.C.

speaking of my son

(Continued from page 29) never shine as a soldier or fit into the life my father and brothers or the male relatives of his father had pursued. They were all in the Army or Navy. In England, you know, our children are encouraged to follow in the father's footsteps.

"Peter was always play-acting. He would write his own little plays and speeches. He was an avid reader of cinema magazines and everything he could get his hands on that told about film players."

Lady Lawford led a very active life. She wrote for several London papers and was interested in politics. About the time Peter announced he was to be a movie star, his mother was working with a group which included Lord Rothermere and Sir Thomas Paulson. Sir Thomas made movies and owned the Elstree Studios. One afternoon Peter came by with his nurse to take his mother home and was introduced to Sir Thomas.

The boy perked up at once when he heard his new acquaintance was the boss at Elstree and deliberately went out of his way to impress him. He wangled an invitation to spend a day at Elstree and his mother agreed to take him.

"On the way to the studio I noticed Peter was very intense and talked excitedly about this chance to get into a studio and be a picture star," Lady Lawford told me. "I told him he ought to put all such nonsense out of his head and think about going to Sandhurst where his uncles and cousins had gone. That's the West Point of England, you know.

"But he told me he knew he was going to be asked to be a picture actor at the studio and that he would then be a star. I couldn't help laughing at him, he was so sure of himself! Finally he took my hand and said earnestly, 'Mother, if I am not offered a part today I will give the whole thing up and concentrate on being a general—but you have to promise me something. If they do offer me a part you must let me take it.'

"This seemed an easy thing to promise, because I believed the possibilities of his being asked to work at Elstree were so remote I was on very safe ground. He made me cross my heart and swear I would not forget my promise. We went through several rituals he thought would be additionally binding. His governess was the witness and she crossed her heart, too. To Peter it was a life-or-death matter."

movie authority . . .

To Lady Lawford's astonishment, when they walked about the sound stages the seven-year-old Peter was able to explain everything to her. He had read all about how pictures were made in both American and English movie magazines.

When they went into the office of the head man, Peter treated the visit as a test of his acting abilities and went at once into his stunts. The mother tried to break it up several times but the child wouldn't be side-tracked.

"Then to my horrified amazement the fellow sent for Monty Banks, who was a director at Elstree, and told him to give Peter a camera test," Lady Lawford said. "The rest of the day unfolded like a crazy sort of dream. They wanted Peter for a child's role in Ole Bill and I must say he passed all the tests they gave him with flying colors.

"It was then that my promise came back to slap me right in the face. There was nothing I could say or do. Peter assumed, of course, that I would never break faith with him because I never had.

"I told him we'd have to take it up with his father. 'Oh, Father will understand that you gave me your word and that you can't break it,' my nimble-minded son remarked. And later developments proved that he understood his father very well.

"I telephoned the General and explained the situation. 'You can't very well go back on your word, you know,' the General reminded me. 'Let him do this one movie. It probably won't hurt him and it may get the whole thing out of his mind.'

"I foolishly imagined no one would hear about it—but next day the newspapers were already headlining the fact that Peter was a new child actor.

"Of course the first one I heard from that evening was my father. 'Be here to see me at 10 in the morning,' he ordered coldly and hung up.

"I was there. Even married children in England take orders from their parents but the one thing he couldn't make me do was break faith with my son. He told me he was cutting me out of his will and that my sisters would never speak to me again.

"And so I cut myself off from my family. My sisters haven't spoken to me since and my father died without forgiving me. But I have never been sorry I kept faith with Peter. We have gone through some very difficult times together since that casual visit to a movie studio—which turned out to be the turning point in the lives of myself and the General as well as Peter."

Several other picture roles fell to Peter at Elstree and he was advertised as the British Jackie Coogan. Then a blow fell which staggered the child.

A law was passed in Parliament barring all children under 14 from the stage or screen.

"I've often suspected my family had a good deal to do with getting that law passed," Lady Lawford said. "At least it got Peter off the screen without delay and stopped all the publicity that was so irksome to my family."

It had been the custom of the Lawfords to travel a great deal and spend many of their winters at Monte Carlo so when Peter's film career in England halted, they packed their bags for a trip.

There was no law barring children from work in France and Peter took up his career again on the French screen. Then a tragic accident occurred which set him back for several years.

He was playing on a hillside with some other children and began running down when he tripped and crashed headlong into a French glass door in the house in which they were living.

His right arm was almost severed at the elbow. Hospital doctors examined him and broke the news to his mother. He would have to lose his arm. It was too badly injured to save.

"We will just put him to sleep and not worry him about it if you give your consent," they told her.

"Oh, but Peter has to give his consent, too," the frantic mother said. "I couldn't let you take his arm off and let him wake up and find it gone. We will have to talk it over."

She broke the news to the lad as gently and casually as possible and waited for his reaction.

"That's a lot of nonsense, Mother," Peter said. "You know as well as anyone you've always taught me that prayer can see you through a lot of bad times, and here you are at your first big test giving up without a prayer.

"We'll not let them take off my arm. We'll start praying right now, both of us—and you can write to our friends and ask them to help, too. If we all pray earnestly enough my arm will get well."

Once again Peter's mother was right up against the consequences of having imbued her son with absolute faith in her word of honor.

"When I told the doctors that we would not amputate Peter's arm, they probably thought I was out of my mind. However, the ligaments had not been severed and with God's grace it began to heal. Slowly, slowly but surely, the healing process went on."

Now the Lawfords' course of life changed entirely. Medical men agreed Peter's arm would take months and maybe years to heal and that it never would be entirely normal again. The circulation would always be poor and worse if he lived in a cold climate.

"This meant we would not be able to live in England in the winter," Lady Lawford explained. "So we decided to move to Florida where the climate was equitable winter and summer."

Their fortunes took a sharp slump when World War II broke out because they could get no more large sums of money out of England.

"All my faith in my son was then justified because with poise and assurance he began to take over the management of our lives," Lady Lawford told me with great pride.

"He told me the first thing we'd have to do was to let all our servants go. I asked him who he thought was going to do the cooking and he told me I was. He said he and his father would do the housework.

practical pete . . .

"I never had cooked a meal in my life so he advised me to get on to how things were run in the kitchen before I let the help go. I had no idea he was so practical.

"That afternoon he came back home with a startling announcement. He had a job. He was going to manage a parking lot. He would get $25 a week and with his tips that would see us through.

"He was a success. His friends rallied round and saw to it that the parking lot he managed did a good business. The proprietor was more than pleased. He had lost money on the lot before Peter took over because some of the men he had in charge had been dishonest.

"But back in Peter's head there always was the plan to get back into movies. He wasn't 18 yet and he didn't want to bother with going to school because he felt that he had learned more than most boys of his age through intensive tutoring and study.

"So he bided his time until he was 18 and then an opportunity came for him to drive to Hollywood with a family friend and he took off. He got a job almost at once managing a small movie theater and sent for us.

"He had an apartment for us when we arrived but there was no furniture. We had had to sell our furniture in Florida because we could not afford to ship it to California.

"Peter said never to mind, we'd get things as we went along. He went to auctions and bought up a few pieces of old furniture.

"He had been nosing about to see if he could get into a studio. In his job at the Westwood theater he took care to speak up to movie people he met.

"Of course he concentrated on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, because when he was a boy he had been in a picture made in England by that company and then he had played a role at the Culver City studio when we stopped here on a trip around the world.

"When they were casting for Mrs. Miniver he managed to get a small part. They put him in White Cliffs of Dover next and he had a chance to show his acting ability. After that the path cleared up for him and he's been forging ahead ever since. Only the other day he signed a new seven-year contract.

"We are really guests in this home. It is Peter's house. He keeps it up. We only manage it for him."

Lady Lawford told me she had never regretted keeping faith with Peter on that afternoon at the Elstree Studio.

"The going has been rough at times but the General and I have always thought we have the finest son in the world."

From what I could see at the very livable home out Brentwood way where the Lawfords live, I think the General and Lady Lawford are right. Peter Lawford is a son to be proud of. THE END

(Peter Lawford's newest movie is MGM's Please Believe Me.)

Sponge-air platform sandals —to keep you walking . . .
beachcombing . . . or dancing, on air!

"Tampa"
Golden wheat, red, green, powder blue, pink, royal blue, white, Mexican or pastel "multicolor" leather. Black suede.

"Salome"
Black, white, golden wheat or red leather.

"Catina"
White, golden wheat, green leather. Black suede.

FREE

Cathys
MAGIC STEPS TO POPULARITY
by
Arthur Murray

Arthur Murray's "Magic Steps to Popularity"

. . . with dozens of his own dancing secrets, an easy-to-follow diagram of his "magic-step", the key to all popular dance steps, and a coupon entitling you to a free dance analysis at any Arthur Murray dance studio in the country.

Write today to — Dept. D, 221 West 57th Street, New York 19, N. Y., for your FREE copy.

For the name of store nearest you carrying CATHY CUPIDS write to

THE NEVELK COMPANY

A division of Hallowell Shoe Company, Hallowell, Maine

how liz grew up

(Continued from page 47) Father were supposed to accompany us but could not because Mother came down with a headache and Father decided to stay home with her. We hung around the Mocambo just long enough for Vic Damone to sing his numbers. Then, with Vic, we all returned home, where we sprawled out on the floor in front of the fireplace with some fried chicken and two quarts of milk.

The accidental visit? The same foursome—Liz, Vic, Mara and I—went to the movies in Vic's car. We were only going to see one picture but stayed for two so that it was time for Vic to do his first number at the club when we got out. We went over with him and waited until he was through. And then we went home again.

As for Vic, he is a friend not only of Liz but of the family. We all like him very much. I wouldn't want to know a more honest, nicer guy, nor one with as complete a lack of pretentiousness. The other day, when Vic was having dinner with us, Mother had trouble finding the bell under the table which summons the maid to bring the next course. She complained that someone had moved it and Vic laughed.

"We never have that trouble in my house," he said. "We have no bell. Even if we had a bell—we have no maid. Mother or my sisters cook the meal and we all pitch in to clean the dishes."

Under the circumstances, you can't blame me if I consider that columnists who report things like Liz' "nightly" nightclubbing are pretty silly.

first date . . .

Liz' first date with a boy never took place until she was almost 16. That was when Marshall Thompson took her to a preview and not only did Mother and Dad go along, but Marshall's mother and dad as well.

I remember Liz' 15th birthday was celebrated with a party at the home of a friend in Mandeville Canyon. I had to come to the rescue and agree to bring the boys I knew because neither Liz nor most of her girl friends had boyfriends they knew well enough to ask!

At that time, only two years ago, Liz was practically established as a star. That sounds glamorous. But the cars which brought the male guests to the birthday party of that glamorous star were as scarred and beaten a collection of jalopies as you have ever seen.

We have always been a small, closely-knit foursome—Father, Mother, and we two kids—living a very quiet life, and that's something you don't want to see broken up if you're a part of it. We've held to it pretty closely. We do many things together, some of them in defiance of popular custom, because we like it. It's only a few years since we gave up our Sunday morning bicycle jaunt, when all four of us would go wheeling along the bridle paths through Beverly Hills. We were the only family in town to do this, I might point out, and therefore occasionally got some odd looks from passersby—but, as I said, we liked it.

My earliest memory of Liz goes back to England when she was about four and I was nearly seven. We were pretty inseparable, as Liz was always tagging along, so when I think of my childhood, Liz is pretty much in the center of my memories. If I misbehaved and was stubborn about being repentant, it was always Liz who saved my hide when Father or Mother took me to account.

"He's sorry, Mummy," she would say, as I stood silent. Then she would nudge me with elbow or knee and whisper desperately, "Go on! Say you're sorry!"

Once I went fishing for tadpoles and minnows in a muddy ditch which workmen had dug out to drain a pond on our place. I had a net to help me. Liz had nothing but her hands but she scooped away industriously—until she suddenly lost her footing and fell head-first in the mud, her legs waving wildly in the air.

I pulled her out and, according to Mother (I hardly remember the incident myself), cleared her nostrils and mouth of the mud so she could breathe. The doctor is reported to have said that I saved Liz' life this way. I don't know whether I did or not, but years later, at Malibu Beach, there was no doubt about the fact that Liz saved mine.

This was when we were all horseback riding along the sand, and my horse, which we later learned had hardly been ridden before, threw me on my head at the very water's edge, so that I lay unconscious and began washing out to sea.

Liz was riding King Charles—or "The Pie," as he was known in National Velvet—and galloped back to get me. People were standing all about but none would hold "The Pie" for her—they seemed scared after seeing my horse rear about. Liz had to let him go and come after me in the water. By this time I was well out into the breakers and she could have done with a little help but everyone seemed too stunned to move. Alone, and needing every ounce of her strength, she managed to drag me back to shore where someone finally stepped forward to help.

When I had whooping cough as a child, Liz insisted she wanted it too—and she stuck close to me until she got it. At that time, as no longer is the case, it was considered wisest to let children catch it and get it over with, so my parents didn't object. But they did warn her to stay clear of me when I caught the measles. Liz didn't. Every chance she got she sneaked into my room. As a matter of fact, she wanted to catch the measles because we were going to school by then and Liz wasn't liking it too well. She saw measles as her chance to stay home—but it didn't work out for her. She didn't catch it and was quite disappointed about staying healthy.

strictly business . . .

We came to America to live in 1939. Liz was seven and I was nearly 10. That was in May. Hardly two months later Liz and I were in business together in Pasadena. I whipped together a lemonade stand of fruit-box construction, complete with parasol to protect me from the sun. Liz helped make the lemonade and then became salesman. She used direct means. We lived on Fairview Avenue then, which is a fairly busy street in Pasadena. Liz went out to the middle of it and waved cars and trucks to a stop, insisting that the drivers get out and buy lemonade.

Business was fine until Liz happened to stop a Ford which was being driven by Mother. We immediately went into receivership, inasmuch as Mother confiscated everything until we promised to change our selling methods to a strict sidewalk approach only.

Later on I went through the usual phase that hits boys who have sisters of about the same age—they consider them nuisances. I remember that Liz was sharply annoyed by this change in my attitude, and I did feel guilty about it because we had been so close up to then. But it was a very short-lived phase and we got over it soon, the principal reason being that most of the things that boys complain about in regard to their sisters I could not blame on Liz. She was close to me—but never a pest.

Incidentally, playing with a brother all the time gave her some tomboyish traits that we still laugh about. At Christmas time she hardly paid any attention to her dolls. She played with me at my games while Mother played with Liz' dolls. And playing with my games cost Liz something. She still has a tiny, pinpoint of a scar just above her lip from the time when I proved I was no William Tell. That's where my arrow hit instead of the apple she was balancing on her head.

When we moved to Beverly Hills (which was still before the movies came into our lives), we were just getting used to American schools. We both had found school easier here than in England but our attitudes toward the change were different. I goofed off altogether and had to do a lot of catching up to make up for lost ground—Liz, always a little apprehensive of school, took it more seriously and kept up better. And it was at this point that she began to make girl friends who are still her closest companions.

old favorites . . .

I'll bet that right today you can go to any of our neighbors and they'll recall Liz as one of the three little girls who used to come to their doors asking for old playing cards. Liz used to do this with Ann Westmore and Carol Phillips. And the other week Liz and Mother were going through Liz' dresser when they found three old cigar boxes full of the old cards she used to treasure so highly—still does, as a matter of fact, because Liz lingered over them for an hour, recalling her old favorites, before she carefully put the boxes away.

So this was how we lived, and the sort of family we were, when Liz appeared in her first picture, Lassie Come Home. I remember going to the preview and, as far as Liz and I were concerned, there was no feeling that she was any sort of celebrity. I know this because when we went out to the lobby, Rod McDowall was being besieged by a lot of kids asking for autographs and Liz and I just stood there watching with the rest of the crowd. And when some of the kids happened to see her and asked if she would sign their autographs, Liz couldn't believe it. "Who—me?" she asked incredulously. And when they said yes, and she signed, she kept shooting stares at me as if to make sure I wouldn't start laughing.

I didn't laugh—but I sure didn't get it.

Liz' entrance into pictures was so gradual that it seemed to make no difference at all in our lives—at first. With Lassie, with Jane Eyre and with White Cliffs of Dover, she would be busy for a few weeks and then everything would be as before.

But with National Velvet, and after that, when she had to take her schooling in the studio, the change was apparent. Yet, it had all happened so gradually that we didn't take notice until it was done. Not till then did we wake up to the fact that Liz was no longer just a daughter and a sister in our household, she was a name and a personality to the world.

We keep hoping that the first can go with the second. Mother was talking about this to Irene Dunne the other day and Miss Dunne said, "I know what you mean. It seems at first as if a normal life will be impossible because she's a public figure. But it isn't. I think I have had a very happy, normal life. It is difficult—but possible."

Well, from head to toe, from within to without, I am unable to see any difference between the Elizabeth Taylor who is my kid sister and the Elizabeth Taylor who is a motion picture star. THE END

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

EVERYBODY'S SAYING IT! "STOP THE MUSIC! STOP THE MUSIC!" I heard the famous conductor Leonard Bernstein shout it at a symphony rehearsal. You may have heard José Iturbi say it in "That Midnight Kiss" . . . and, of course, if you're like me, you just don't miss bouncy and bright BERT PARKS saying it Sundays, 8 P.M. (EST) over your local ABC station . . . "STOP THE MUSIC" for fabulous prizes! Bert, for my money, is a honey of an emcee, and I kind of like the way charmin' KAY ARMEN, DICK BROWN and HARRY SALTER'S ORCHESTRA provide the tunes. This super-scintillating show is jointly sponsored by Smith Brothers Cough Drops, Old Gold Cigarettes and Speidel Watch Bands.

WHAT'S - DOING - MAID'S - NIGHT-OUT-DEPT.: At our house we whip up a quick fried chicken-and-fritters supper and then settle down to a treat instead of a treatment in radio listening. Ever since I can remember, I've been mad-about-Mack, TED MACK, that is . . . the genial gentleman who's helped so many aspiring performers to successful futures. You all know Robert Merrill, Frank Sinatra, Paul Winchell . . . well, they were once nervous, eager young amateurs, too . . . awaiting their big "break" through the ORIGINAL AMATEUR HOUR. Every Thursday night, 9 P.M. (EST) over your local ABC station, Ted tees off with talent that spells future fame for those with gold-dust in their dreams. You and I might be "in" on the discovery of a new personality . . . and that's what makes listening to TED MACK and the ORIGINAL AMATEUR HOUR one of the big treats that can't be beat in radio. (You probably don't have to be told that the happy sponsor is Old Gold Cigarettes!)

ANOTHER THURSDAY-AT-HOME-TREAT comes earlier in the evening when DAVID HARDING, Pepsi-Cola's COUNTER-SPY calls at 7:30 P.M. (EST) on your local ABC station. I was told the other day that COUNTER-SPY has often been cited for outstanding public service and I can understand why DAVID HARDING, COUNTER-SPY, deserves the honor. He proves the old adage "Crime doesn't pay." COUNTER-SPY's a chiller-diller . . . and you can enjoy it not only on Thursdays, but also Tuesdays at 7:30 P.M. (EST) for a twin bill of tingling drama. It hits the spot!

TAKE-A-TUNING-TIP

For comedy, drama, variety
Keep tuned to programs on ABC!

Joan Lansing

For lots of dash on little cash

choose shoes of

NORZON*

fabric

The gal who looks like a million on a pin-money budget, wears color-bright shoes of NORZON fabric. NORZON lends special dash to any type of shoe. Its suede-rich surface suggests luxury seldom seen at bread-'n-butter prices. Practical NORZON fabric is water-repellent, cleans in a jiffy, comes in candy colors that won't rub off or scuff off. Most styles about $2.95.

*NORZON is the registered trademark of Behr-Manning Corporation for its electrocoated pile fabrics. Distributed nationally by Phillips-Premier Corp., Boston, Mass.

Created by Chas. Cushman Shoe Co.

Look for this tag. — it identifies shoes of genuine NORZON fabric.

BEHR-MANNING, TROY, N. Y.
(Division of Norton Company)

elizabeth the queen

(Continued from page 44) is a satire on the works of Varga and Petty, proving these lads somewhat backward in suggesting voluptuous improvements that might be made in the feminine form. She is as superbly curved as any exaggeration in oil and canvas that ever graced a Gay Nineties saloon.

Elizabeth Taylor has been likened many times to the fabulous screen vamps of an earlier era. Actually, she is not like them at all. She is an entirely new creation, fitted to this time in form and personality, and will doubtless in the next 10 or 15 years establish a standard that will be a model for future sirens.

And yet, though she is playing "adult" roles, and every man with a dream left in his soul considers her an adult when he reflects on her attributes, she still in many ways behaves like a kid.

Studio employees are quite used to seeing Elizabeth dash madly down a lot street in a foot-race with her dog, to see her chewing bubble gum, or stalking grumpily to her dressing room mouthing little-girl curses at her teacher for keeping her in after school. Her schedule, both in front of the cameras and in publicity functions, must not be too rigid because of the unpredictability of her teacher. While a five-minute conversation with Liz demonstrates that she is no dope and a fair scholar, she is apparently something of a fractious pupil in the classroom.

A photographer was dispatched to Hollywood one time at great expense by a national magazine to take some color portraits of Liz. His time was short, so he had planned to fly out with his equipment, spend a couple of hours making the pictures, and fly back the same night.

He arrived, set up a temporary studio and stood waiting beside his camera. The door to the studio opened and Liz, after introductions, sat down to pose. At that moment the teacher arrived. She ordered Elizabeth right back to the school house —then apologized to the photographer.

"Elizabeth didn't finish her water painting," she explained, "and she can't have her picture taken until she does."

A studio schoolmarm is the final authority in juvenile affairs in Hollywood, so the cameraman was forced to stay over another day.

oh, school! . . .

The threats of GI's as to how they'd get even with second lieutenants as soon as the war was over would be weak, pale things beside the promises of what Elizabeth will do to "certain people" as soon as she gets out of school. She doesn't hate education—in fact, she plans extensive study for a number of years yet —but she does hate the regimentation of a scholastic schedule.

She finds it confusing, to say the least, to have to leave the arms of Robert Taylor (no relative) and a mad love scene in Conspirator to sit behind a school desk and work out a problem in plane geometry. It must give a kid the feeling that plane geometry is a thing of slight, if not idiotic, value in the scheme of things. . . .

Getting into the movies in the first place was not the problem for Elizabeth Taylor that it is for other children.

An MGM producer, Sam Marx, was looking for a little girl for a low-budget program picture. He was having a bit of trouble, however, because there were half-a-dozen other executives with the right of approval or rejection of his choice. He met Francis Taylor, an art dealer, at a party and agreed, more out of politeness than anything else, to see his 11-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, on the following day.

Francis, Sara and Elizabeth Taylor walked into the producer's office and took chairs. Marx took one look at the little girl with the odd coloring, then, disdaining the use of the inter-office communications system, dashed out of the room and down the hallway to round up his associates. They filed into Marx' office and all took a look at Elizabeth. Nobody asked her to speak, to stand up for a better look, to demonstrate some evidence of talent; they just looked at one another and nodded. That is how Elizabeth got into the movies. There was no question about her belonging. Everyone knew she did as soon as they saw her.

Francis and Sara Taylor, Elizabeth's parents, are both simple people. He is an art dealer, a quiet, handsome man concerned primarily with his business. Sara is a very normal, matronly woman who has devoted her life to raising a proper daughter, and seeing that she had every advantage. They are typical of the middle-class parents in any American town or city. Actually, Sara Taylor may have had some plan to enter her daughter in theatricals from the beginning, but it was probably vague and a secondary ambition. She, herself, had been on the stage briefly as a young woman.

mother and pal . . .

Contrary to belief and appearances, Sara Taylor is not a stage mother. It is true that she is with Elizabeth almost constantly, but it is at the studio's insistence. The wise moguls at the head of the industry don't want any juvenile beauties running around loose on their lots. Anything can happen and has in the past. Mrs. Taylor takes her job of buffer and watchdog in her stride. She makes no effort, beyond the usual maternal prerogatives, to thwart Elizabeth in any way. She is a friend and adviser, and is overruled as often as any other mother.

A number of factors have entered into the evolution of Elizabeth Taylor from a child to a woman. Biology, of course, has been first and foremost. Second, going into business and selling her talents for display in movie theaters has been a fine spur to her blossoming womanhood. And finally, there is the tide of public opinion, which has taken a look at Liz, whistled, and called a spade a spade.

All the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't hold her back now. The little girl who wrote a book about animals and wore braids is gone, and a lusty gal with a double whammy in her eye has taken her place.

The efforts of her family to continue her adolescence to the end of her teens, the protection against wolfish males given her by the studio, and the frantic machinations of studio press agents to link her romantically with silk-whiskered striplings, all will come to naught. Mother Nature, the thoughtful trickster, has taken over—and Liz is ripe.

She will be 18 by the time you read this. It is a milestone she has been awaiting with anxiety just short of hysteria. On that day she may, if she wishes, date Tommy Manville or Butch Jenkins, for she will be legally emancipated. She may thumb her nose at school mistresses, parents and censors of a little girl's activities. Or, she may become wistful about her girlhood and try to hang on a little longer.

The opinion of most observers goes along with a paragraph in a national magazine some time ago which, commenting on the coming of age of Elizabeth, quoted a studio executive who was asked what he thought would happen.

The executive shook his head and said, "OH, BROTHER!" THE END

shirley temple's divorce

(Continued from page 22) to the bench.

As he did, the courtroom was summoned to attention. Everyone rose—Shirley; Mary Alice; George Stahlman and Grant Cooper, Shirley's two crackerjack lawyers; Clore Warne, who was representing John Agar; the press and photographic corps—everyone.

Court in session, Judge Herndon looked down at his calendar and then announced with great dignity: "Agar versus Agar."

George Stahlman spoke quickly. "Ready, your Honor."

He turned to Shirley and bowed slightly. "Will you please take the stand."

Shirley Temple, playing a role in real life more dramatic than any she had ever played on-screen, rose and approached the court attendant. He extended the Bible. She lay one gloved hand on it and raised the other. She swore to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth so help her God.

Thus commenced the beginning of the end—the end of the most publicized marriage the screen colony and the moviegoers of America have ever known.

other side of the story . . .

What Shirley had to tell of her married life—her thoughts of suicide, her anguish, her heartache, her humiliation—you will find in its entirety on the following pages. What you will not find, however, is Jack Agar's side of the story. Jack refuses to tell it.

When I contacted him in Buffalo after Shirley had told her all, he said, "I still don't want to talk about it. There are always two sides to every story. All I can say is that I think the testimony she gave reflects our real differences incorrectly. There's a lot I might have said and there's a lot I can say now. But what's the point? Nothing would be accomplished by airing recriminations in public. Ever since our separation, I had my mind made up to say nothing about the case, and that's the course I'm going to follow despite the possibly wrongful implications which might result from what Shirley said. Naturally, I'm greatly concerned with the welfare of our little daughter. I only hope that what has happened will result in the best for everyone concerned."

Many persons have asked, if Jack Agar's marital conduct was unhusbandly, what caused it? Why did he drink? Why did he go out? Why did he leave Shirley behind on occasions? They implied that there must have been a reason.

In the January issue of MODERN SCREEN, I believe the reason was given. Shirley and Jack were mismated from the very beginning of their marriage. They tried to make a go of it and they hoped against hope, but they were two young, attractive, charming people with different backgrounds, different tastes, different ideals, different objectives. Their marriage was based on a wartime infatuation and not on a mature, solid, reasoning love.

What happens under those sad circumstances appears in the following testimony of AGAR versus AGAR:

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES

DEPARTMENT NO. 51 HON. ROY L. HERNDON, JUDGE

SHIRLEY TEMPLE AGAR, Plaintiff,

VS.

JOHN GEORGE AGAR,
Defendant.
No. D 388383

ONLY

PERMA·LIFT girdles

have the Magic Inset

No Bones About It—

Stays Up Without Stays

Whether you're on a social spree or a workaday whirl, you're the picture of fashion with a new "Perma·lift"* Girdle. Here's the brightest, lightest, smartest, smoothest girdle you ever wore and oh! so comfortable. Not a bone or stay to poke or pinch—just the lasting stay-up smartness of the Magic Inset delicately designed in the front panel. Your dainty "Perma·lift" Girdle can't roll over, wrinkle or bind—it stays up without stays. Select the style just right for you at your favorite corset department—$5.00 to $12.50.

Also enjoy a "Perma·lift" Bra—America's best loved bra with "The Lift that never lets you down."

*"Perma·lift" a trade-mark of A. Stein & Company (Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)

Look for the Magic Inset

Vicki: I've been dying to tell you what I discovered about that you-know-every-month business. You just use Tampax and it makes all the difference in the world!

Meg: Why Vicki, I've heard that too. The fact is I'm getting fed up with the old belt-pin-pad routine.

Vicki: They say Tampax just won't let you be self-conscious at such times. You actually forget all about it.

Meg: The way I look at it—if millions already use Tampax, why should we hang back?

Vicki: Right you are, so here I go for a month's supply to put in my purse.

Invented by a doctor for internal absorption, Tampax is made of pure surgical cotton contained in patented applicators. No belts, pins or external pads. No odor. No chafing. Invisible and unfelt when in place. Quick to change. Easy disposal. At drug and notion counters in 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association

REPORTER'S TRANSCRIPT

APPEARANCES:
For the Plaintiff: GEORGE STAHLMAN, Esq.
and
GRANT B. COOPER, Esq.

For the Defendant: CLORE WARNE, Esq.
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1949
9:15 O'CLOCK A. M.

THE COURT: Agar versus Agar.
MR. STAHLMAN: Ready, your Honor.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE AGAR,
plaintiff herein, called as a witness in her own behalf, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

THE CLERK: State your name, please.
THE WITNESS: Shirley Temple Agar.

DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. STAHLMAN:

Q: Your name is Shirley Temple Agar?
A: Yes.
Q: You are the plaintiff in this action?
A: Yes.
Q: John George Agar, the defendant, is your husband?
A: Yes.
Q: What was the date on which you were married?
A: September 19, 1945.
Q: And you separated on or about October 12, 1949?
A: That is correct.
Q: Now, there is one child the issue of this marriage, is that correct?
A: Yes.
Q: What is the name of the child?
A: Linda Susan Agar.
Q: How old is Linda Susan Agar?
A: She will be two on January 30.
Q: Now, there has been a property settlement agreement by which there is a declaration of no community property? That is correct?
A: Yes.
Q: Now, you have lived in the State of California, of course, more than one year, and in the County of Los Angeles more than three months prior to the filing of this action?
A: Yes.
Q: In fact you have lived here all your life?
A: Since 1928.
Q: Now, how long after the marriage was it when any occasion occured which brought about any unpleasantness or difficulties between yourself and your husband, Mr. Agar?
A: About five months after we were married.
Q: What occurred generally about that time?
A: Well, he began not coming home at night for dinner; and he would usually come home — it started about eight o'clock he would get home, and after a couple of weeks it became 10:30, and after that a little bit later. It was any time
Q: By any time, you mean in the early hours of the morning?
A: Two or three in the morning.
Q: On these occasions would you know where he was?
A: No.
Q: During this period of time did you prepare dinner in the evening and wait for him?
A: Yes, I was cooking dinner myself.
Q: Would he phone or inform you as to where he was on these occasions?
A: No.
Q: That was the general course of conduct during that period of time?
A: That is correct.
Q: On the occasions when he would come home, were there explanations made as to where he was?
A: Never.
Q: And the times he would come home, what would be his condition of sobriety?
A: Very often he would be quite intoxicated.
Q: Now then, when was the baby born?
A: The baby was born on January 30.
Q: And from the time, starting about five months after your marriage up until the time of the birth of the child, did this course of conduct continue?
A: Well, when I was about two months pregnant that was the very first time that he came home at four a.m. with lipstick all over his face.
Q: He had lipstick on his face, and this was about four o'clock in the morning?
A: He was very intoxicated.
Q: All right, now, as this course of conduct proceeded, did it become more aggravated, the hours later and the neglect greater?
A: Well, it was never much later than four in the morning, but I recall one time when I was about five months pregnant, he came home and brought a girl into the bedroom.
Q: Will you describe to the Court the situation, what occurred there, and about the time of the day?
A: Well, it was around 1:30 in the morning.
Q: Were you in bed at that time?
A: I was in bed.
Q: You had retired for the night?
A: Yes, he supposedly was going out with a group of fellows, you know, to play cards or something.
Q: That is what he told you, did he?
A: Yes; and he came home at around 1:30 with several people, but he brought the girl into the bedroom and said, "Come on, let's go to a party. Let's all go."
Q: What response did you make to that?
A: Well, I had been in bed since about 10 o'clock, and I didn't feel very much like getting up, and after all the baby had just begun kicking shortly before that.
Q: You did not get up then?
A: No, I stayed home.
Q: Did he remain home there or did he go out?
A: No, he left.
Q: About what time was that that he left?
A: Around a quarter to two.
Q: Do you know what time he returned home?
A: I imagine it was around four. I gave up staying awake after awhile.
Q: Now, as this course of conduct proceeded and these conditions were present, did you do anything to try to eliminate them, to obviate them?
A: Yes, I went to — prior to the baby, shortly after we were married, I went to Dr. Davidson at Santa Monica, and he was very worried about my condition. I was very nervous.
Q: Who was Dr. Davidson?
A: He is a surgeon that has since passed away.
Q: But he was your doctor at the time?
A: He was my doctor at the time.
Q: You went to him because of a nervous condition?
A: I couldn't sleep and I was very nervous.
Q: And was any of this nervous condition occasioned by the conduct of your husband?
A: Yes, it was.
Q: So you went to the doctor, is that correct?
A: Yes.
Q: Do you know whether the doctor talked to your husband about his conduct?
A: Well, one time he talked to both of us and tried to get what was wrong, you know, tried to figure out what was wrong.
Q: Did you hear your husband make any statement as to attempting to do better?
A: With other people he always stated he hadn't done anything wrong, he didn't know what they were talking about.
Q: Now then, let's take the time up until the baby was born. During your period of pregnancy, did this condition continue?
A: Yes. One particular night—I had a new doctor, of course, Dr. Bradbury.
Q: Dr. Davidson, you said, passed away?
A: That is right. So one night during dinner Jack came home drunk again and was very belligerent through dinner and called me a few names. After dinner I jumped in my car and was going to drive over a cliff, or something. Instead I went over to my doctor's house, and he was so worried about me he followed me home.
Q: Did this doctor also talk to your husband about his conduct and his treatment of you?
A: Not until after the baby was born. That was about two weeks after the baby was born.
Q: Now, during the time of pregnancy, did he continue to stay out at night, and would that be frequently?
A: I tried to go with him as much as possible. I tried to go to movies and things but you know, you are sort of embarrassed the way you look.
Q: And this matter of lipstick, did that occur more than one occasion?
A: After the baby was born it happened several times.
Q: This conduct continued, you say, after the baby was born?
A: Yes. Two weeks after the baby was born, Dr. Bradbury phoned both my husband and myself and said that I could go out for the first time, go out to dinner.
Q: What happened that first night you were going to go out after the baby was born? Is that the occasion when you got the new dress?
A: Yes, I got a new dress. Jack said he would be home at seven o'clock and we would go out.
Q: Did you dress?
A: I was ready.
Q: What time did he show up?
A: He got home about two o'clock.
Q: He got home at two o'clock in the morning?
A: Yes.
Q: He had not informed you or phoned you to let you know where he was?
A: No.
Q: Did you go out then that evening at all?
A: No, I didn't go out.
Q: Now, have you had friends in for dinner on occasions?
A: Yes, many times.
Q: And dinner parties, or some particular time when friends were present?
A: Well, many times we had friends in to dinner.
Q: Did he on occasions not show up, not come home when your dinner was ready and your friends were there?
A: Yes. You see he belonged to a golf club and said that is where he spent all of his time; and when I would call there, I would usually be bounced all around the club.
Q: In other words, you couldn't get him on the phone?
A: I could never get him.
Q: You called for the purpose of asking him to come home because guests were there?

A: That was after a half hour or hour they would be there. Naturally I would like him home.
Q: Sometimes he would not come home at all on those occasions?
A: He always showed up eventually. When there were people around his attitude was entirely different.
Q: Is there some specific instance in which there were humiliating circumstances in public?
A: Well, one night he left me with four other people at a restaurant in Hollywood.
Q: What occurred during that event?
A: He finished his dinner, and he stood up and said to one of the men present, whispered to the man that he had to go see his girl.
Q: And he left the table then, did he?
A: Yes, and he said, "Please don't let my wife go home. Take her to a movie or something so she won't be going right home."
Q: How long was he gone on that occasion?
A: He wrecked his car, and he came in around six in the morning.
Q: Did he leave you there at this place?
A: Yes, he left me with these people, standing on the curb.
Q: Now, there was an incident occurred at the Chanteclair?
A: Yes.
Q: Will you tell the Court what occurred by briefly telling the incident that occurred?
A: That was a dinner party. There were about 15 people, I should say. We knew about three of them, and Jack began drinking doubles, and he started talking to one of the girls present that was unmarried. He danced with me half a dance and said, "Oh, you are too short. I don't like dancing with you." He took me back to the table and danced with the girl all evening, and kissed her on the dance floor; and I sat at the table and smiled at people who were looking over wondering why I didn't get up and leave.
Q: You were there with friends of yours?
A: Yes, and when he returned to the table there was a place vacant next to me. He said, "I don't want to sit with her." So he sat next to the girl that he had met before, and I passed his dinner to him.
Q: He was some place removed from you, was he?
A: Yes, he was about eight seats away. Then after dinner, why, we left. He was too drunk to drive the car, so I drove with Mrs. Franklin and he drove in another car with the girl that he had met inside, and a man.
Q: Where did you go from there?
A: They drove to our house. Mrs. Franklin and I arrived there first and when they came we went down to the play room. And he turned on the Victrola in the dancing room, which is off the play room, and danced with the girl for a couple of hours, and they were kissing in there. It was pretty sickening.
Q: Did this conduct humiliate you in the presence of your friends?
A: Of course it did, and yet you think of the baby all the time, you know.
Q: Now, was there an incident when you had friends at the house, and he left late at night and didn't come back for some time?
A: Yes.
Q: Will you explain briefly to the Court what that incident was.
A: About eight of us were sitting downstairs, and he sat and looked at me for quite awhile, and then he said, "Oh, you can't have any fun with Shirley. She won't get drunk. She won't even take a drink." He says, "I am going out." So he went out for two hours, and when he came back he fell downstairs and knocked a plant over and cut his head, and finally passed out in the driveway. My brother helped me put him to bed.
Q: In other words, your brother came over and helped put him to bed?
A: In front of several people.
Q: Directing your attention to a document here designated Property Settlement Agreement, and directing your attention to the signature of Shirley Temple Agar, that is your signature?
A: Yes, it is.
Q: Do you recognize the signature of John George Agar?
A: Yes.
Q: As that of your husband?
A: Yes.
Q: And you signed this property settlement agreement?
A: Yes.
Q: You have read it and know its contents?
A: Yes.
Q: And is this property settlement agreement satisfactory to yourself?
A: Very satisfactory.
MR. STAHLMAN: May we offer this in evidence, your Honor? This is a typed original, if we may offer this in evidence.
THE COURT: You wish to offer this copy? Is this an executed copy?
MR. COOPER: That is not an executed copy. That is a copy of the original which is executed.
THE COURT: Very well. The property settlement agreement will be received as Plaintiff's Exhibit One.
Q: BY MR. STAHLMAN: Now, there is also a Trust Agreement entered into between you and your husband, is that correct?
A: Yes.

"...and some Fels-Naptha Soap Chips to put in it!"

What a lucky bride—starting her new life as a 'Mrs.' with a wonderful wedding gift like this! And in saying "wonderful" we're not forgetting the box of Fels-Naptha Soap Chips that goes with it.

Even if your washer isn't the newest model, you'll get new pleasure from it if you start using Fels-Naptha Soap Chips—right away.

The extra washing action contained in every box of husky, non-sneeze Fels-Naptha Soap Chips will help your washer do more than save washday time and work. Your Fels-Naptha washes will be so clean and white and sweet you'll almost think you have a new machine.

For the washing surprise of your life—get some Fels-Naptha Soap Chips today!

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

FOR EXTRA CLEANING ACTION USE

Fels-Naptha Soap

MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

TO GIRLS WHO WANT the 'KNOW-HOW' about an easier, effective INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE

Greaseless Suppository Gives Continuous Medication for Hours

Complete Instructions with Every Package

Zonitors are continuous-action suppositories which provide an easier, daintier, less embarrassing method of intimate feminine cleanliness — yet one that is powerfully effective and absolutely safe to tissues.

How Zonitors Work . . .

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories — each sealed in a separate glass vial —so easy to slip in your purse and carry if away from home. When inserted, Zonitors release powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties for hours. Positively non-poisonous, non-irritating. All you need is this dainty suppository. There's nothing to mix. No extra equipment.

Destroy Offensive Odor

Zonitors actually destroy offensive odor. Help guard against infection. They kill every germ they touch. While it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, you can depend on Zonitors to immediately kill every reachable germ without the slightest risk of injury to delicate tissues. Any drugstore.

Zonitors

(Each Sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-30, 100 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

*Offer good only in U. S.

Q: Creating a trust, and in that trust there was placed the community property of your husband, and he created the trust for the benefit of the child?

A: Yes.

MR. STAHLMAN: Is that sufficient, your Honor?

THE COURT: Put on your corroboration, counsel. You may step down.

MARY ALICE FRANKLIN, called as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

THE CLERK: State your name, please.

THE WITNESS: Mary Alice Franklin.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. STAHLMAN:

Q: Will you state your name, please, for the record.

A: Mary Alice Franklin.

Q: Now, Mrs. Franklin, keep your voice up just a little, please. Try to talk louder. You are acquainted with the plaintiff in this action, Shirley Temple Agar?

A: Yes, I am.

Q: And you knew her husband, John George Agar?

A: Yes.

Q: How long have you known Shirley?

A: We went to school together.

Q: And continued in a friendly association, a friendship since that time, have you?

A: Yes.

Q: Have you visited with your husband in her home after their marriage?

A: Yes, we did

Q: And they have visited at your home, have they?

A: Yes.

Q: You know, of course, she has lived in the State of California more than one year, and in the County of Los Angeles for more than three months preceding the filing of the action in this case?

A: Yes.

Q: In fact, she lived here all the time that you knew her? Is that correct?

A: That is right.

Q: Have you been in the home on occasions and out in public with Mr. and Mrs. Agar, and observed the conduct of Mr. Agar towards his wife?

A: Yes, I have.

Q: Would you be in the home for dinner on occasion?

A: We would be there, and Jack wouldn't be home, and we would wait dinner for him.

Q: Did that happen on more than one occasion?

A: Yes.

Q: Were you present on this occasion when there was a dinner at the Chanteclair?

A. Yes, I was.

Q: Just tell the Court in your own words what you observed on that occasion?

A: Well, it was a dinner party and Jack became very interested in this other girl, and he danced with her. He didn't dance with his wife except for a half a dance, and we watched him kiss the girl on the dance floor; and then he came back to the table and sat with her and his dinner was passed to him; and everyone at the table was very uneasy, and Shirley was very humiliated. She didn't know a lot of the people there. The woman on the other side of Jack, where he was sitting next to the girl, told Jack to go back to his wife and stop making such a fool of himself and he didn't. After we left the restaurant he wanted to drive home. He was very drunk and Shirley said that he shouldn't. He said if he didn't drive, he wouldn't be in the same car with her. So he went home with the girl and the other man.

Q: Did you go to the Agar home after this occasion?

A: Yes, I did.

Q: Did you see Mr. Agar return?

A: Yes, we did.

Q: Who was with him?

A: This same girl and another man, and we all went down into the play room, and Jack started mixing drinks, and he turned on the Victrola and they danced in the dancing room, and we could see them.

Q: Did you hear any statement made regarding drinking on that occasion?

A: No.

Q: Who was dancing?

A: He was dancing with this girl. Other times we would be over at the house—

Q: Before we leave that occasion, did he kiss that girl there at the home?

A: Yes, he did.

Q: Now, you started to say something about other occasions you had been at the home.

A: On other occasions we have been at the house, and we had been playing cards or something, canasta, downstairs, and Jack started to drink; and I remember one night he said that, "You can't have any fun with Shirley. She never gets drunk. She doesn't even take a drink, and I am going out." And he went out for two hours, and he came back so drunk he could hardly stand up, and he was very belligerent and grabbed Shirley by the arm and said, "Come on upstairs, I have something I want to talk to you about." There was some sort of an argument up there, which we didn't hear, and Jack went out. Shirley was crying. She was very upset. Everybody was upset. She came downstairs again and we tried to help her, and finally she calmed down and then Shirley and I went out in the car to look for Jack, and we couldn't find him. We came back into the driveway and he was passed out in the middle of the driveway. We almost ran over him. We didn't see him.

Q: Lying there?

A: Yes.

Q: And were you there when he was removed from that place?

A: Yes. Shirley's brother took him in the house and then we left. This was around 4:30 in the morning.

Q: By the way, were you present on the fourth wedding anniversary?

A: Yes, I was.

Q: What was that? Tell the Court what occurred?

A: We had a dinner engagement. We went over to Shirley's house around eight o'clock to pick them up, and Jack wasn't there. He wasn't ready. We had to meet this other couple at a restaurant, so we went ahead and Shirley and Jack arrived about 9:30 at the restaurant, and he was very drunk. We sat at the table and he saw this other group over at the bar. He went up to a girl and embraced her and brought her over to the table. And he said—he invited her to dinner, and they were sitting and talking and finally Shirley said, "This is my fourth wedding anniversary," and the girl became very uneasy and left. And then we had our dinner and during our dinner Jack got up a couple of times to see these other people. And afterwards we went dancing, and the orchestra leader dedicated a song to Shirley and her husband on their wedding anniversary. At this point Jack was up at the bar, and Shirley was sitting at the table alone. He even invited a lot of people to our table we didn't know. He started ordering drinks for everybody, and then he left and sat at another table until the place closed at two o'clock. One of the girls at our table went over to the other table and sat and talked. And we were passing the time of day and a few other things until the place closed, and we were ready to go home; but Jack said he was going to celebrate and we had to go. He said he was hungry and wanted to have something to eat. He insisted we go to the King's Restaurant.

Q: You did go to King's?

A: Yes, we did.

Q: Did he eat anything after he got there?

A: No, he didn't. We were there and then he said, "I want to go home." And Shirley—he started to go, and Shirley got up to go with him; and the owner of the restaurant came over to Shirley and said that the chef had heard that it was her wedding anniversary and he was inscribing a cake for her, and would she please not go, and wait until they gave it to her. So she convinced Jack, and they sat down, and the man came out with the cake and all the waiters, and they sang, "Happy Anniversary to You." And he said, "Do you want to cut the cake?" And he served it to Shirley. And Jack said, "No, put it in a box. We will take it home." So they put it in a box and they left.

Q: You were present on other occasions when his conduct was embarrassing?

A: Yes.

Q: To Mrs. Agar?

A: Yes.

Q: And you observed the effect this had upon her?

A: Yes, he was very rude to her. One night I had just had my hair cut and my husband said, "Don't I look pretty tonight." And Jack turned to Shirley and he said, "You are repulsive, you are horrible. Why don't you let your hair grow long?"

Q: You heard him make other remarks, without designating them, but uncomplimentary remarks to her?

A: Yes, he would always take the other side of anything Shirley ever said.

MR. STAHLMAN: Is that sufficient, your Honor?

THE COURT: It is. You may step down.

This Court believes that a due regard for the legitimate public interest in this case not only justifies but requires some comment. This

I SAW IT HAPPEN

I noticed a crowd outside the famous 21 Club in Manhattan. Edging closer I heard a voice say, "Look, that's Jane Russell." The actress overheard and laughingly replied, "No, I'm not Jane Russell, not even Gail Russell; I'm just Rosalind Russell."

Frances Boose
New York City

Court cannot fail to take notice of the well-known fact that this plaintiff occupies a special place in the hearts and affections of millions of people, not only in this state but throughout the country.

The American people are characterized by what this Court regards as healthy and laudable traits of idealism and sentimentality. Unquestionably the news of the apparent failure of this marriage, which is sought to be dissolved by this proceeding, has caused widespread disappointment and even distress. Therefore, this appears to be a peculiarly fitting and appropriate occasion upon which to reassert and redeclare the vital public concern with the problem of divorce, and the urgent need for giving serious study and attention to the environmental and sociological factors which contribute to it.

We all know that the integrity of the family lies at the very foundation of the welfare, tranquility and the good order of our society. Accordingly, this Court is faithful to the declared and established policy of this state, that no divorce shall be granted except upon grounds which our law recognizes as sufficient. Fairness to this plaintiff, however, requires this Court to declare that the evidence which has been offered here, the plaintiff's demeanor, and the very evident sincerity with which she testified, have convinced this Court not only that the grounds upon which relief is sought here are serious and substantial, but also that the plaintiff has made every reasonable effort to save her marriage and to avoid the necessity of this proceeding. That being so, she is entitled to precisely the same consideration, to precisely the same relief which is accorded upon like terms to every citizen, whether he be the most obscure or the most prominent.

It is, therefore, the judgment of the Court that an interlocutory judgment of divorce is granted to the plaintiff. The Property Settlement Agreement executed by the parties and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit One is approved, and by reference incorporated in and made a part of the judgment. The parties respectively are ordered to perform the executory provisions of said agreement.

Plaintiff is awarded the care, custody and control of the minor child of the parties, to wit, Linda Susan Agar, subject to the further order of this Court, and subject to rights of reasonable visitation with the defendant; such right of reasonable visitation shall include the right of defendant to have the temporary physical custody of the said minor child for reasonable periods of time upon such terms and conditions as the parties may agree, provided however that should the parties be unable to agree, then either party shall be free to make application to this Court for the proper determination of any such matter upon which agreement cannot be reached. It is further ordered that neither plaintiff nor defendant may permanently remove the minor child from the State of California without the consent of the other first had and obtained, or if such consent cannot be obtained, without an order of this Court first had and obtained.

It is further ordered that the defendant shall pay to the plaintiff for the support and maintenance of said minor child the sum of $100 per month, commencing on January 1, 1950, and continuing thereafter on the first day of each month until said minor child shall have married or shall have attained the age of majority, whichever event shall first occur, and subject at all times to the further order of this Court.

It is finally ordered that plaintiff's former name, to wit, Shirley Temple, shall be restored to her, effective upon the entry of the final judgment of divorce.

MR. WARNE: If the Court please, my name is Clore Warne. In view of the fact, and I speak as a friend of the Court and not representing a party litigant at this time, although I together with my firm have represented Mr. Agar, the Court has seen fit to make special mention in connection with this case. And in as much as the testimony given by the plaintiff in this case will undoubtedly be given wide publicity, I want to say on behalf of Mr. John Agar, the defendant in this case, when differences arose between these parties, and they did arise, that he acted at all times, as counsel for the plaintiff will undoubtedly agree, when differences did arise which necessitated separation of the parties and this action here, he at all times has acted as a gentleman. He has not sought to air the differences of the parties in any litigation or any contests either in the press or in court; and in as much as public mention has been made by the Court in this instance in a way not usual, I feel that it is in order for me to say in behalf of Mr. Agar that he was concerned and is concerned with the welfare of his child, and that he is concerned from here on out with the welfare of both parties in whatever area their respective lives shall take them.

THE COURT: Well, Mr. Warne, of course the Court views your remarks as not inappropriate, but you, as an attorney, of course recognize that this Court can act only upon the evidence which is presented here, and the remarks of the Court, of course, were based upon and addressed to the evidence which has been presented before this Court.

MR. WARNE: That is correct, but I felt it in order, in view of the special circumstances, to make the statement that I have made.

THE COURT: Very well

THE END

Dream girl, dream girl, beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl

Hair that gleams and glistens from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!... Show him how much lovelier your hair can look... after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

Exclusive! This magical secret-blend lather with LANOLIN!

Exciting! This new three-way hair loveliness . . .

Not a soap! Not a liquid! But Kay Daumit's cream shampoo with lanolin. Jars: $2, $1. Jars and tubes: 49¢, 25¢.

1 Leaves hair silken soft, instantly manageable . . . first wondrous result of a Lustre-Creme shampoo. Makes lavish, lanolin-blessed lather even in hardest water. No more unruly, soap-dulled locks. Leaves hair soft, obedient, for any style hair-do.

2 Leaves hair sparkling with star-bright sheen. No other shampoo has the same magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin to bring out every highlight. No special rinse needed with Lustre-Creme Shampoo.

3 Leaves hair fragrantly clean, free of loose dandruff. Famous hairdressers insist on Lustre-Creme, the world's leading cream shampoo. Yes, tonight, show him a lovelier you —after a Lustre-Creme shampoo!

Keeps corners dustless!

Get dust out of hard-to-clean corners by pressing cellophane tape into the corner and lifting dirt out. Keep "Scotch" Cellophane Tape in every room for sealing, holding, mending.

GET THE TAPE HABIT... it's thrifty!

For quality, insist on—

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

SCOTCH
BRAND
Cellophane Tape

SEALS WITHOUT MOISTENING TRANSPARENT AS GLASS

ANOTHER 3M COMPANY PRODUCT

MINNESOTA MINING & MFG. CO.
ST. PAUL 6, MINN. © 1950 3M CO.

"I'm a nurse . . .

I can't afford CORNS, can you?"

"It's hard to be cheerful when your feet hurt. So the minute a corn appears, I use a BLUE-JAY Corn Plaster!" Nupercaine,* exclusive with BLUE-JAY, soothes surface pain; gentle medication loosens hard "core" –you lift it out in a few days. Get BLUE-JAY today! FREE BOOKLET! "Your feet and Your Health." Write Dept. DMO-3 BLUE-JAY Products, 131 S. Franklin, Chicago 6, Ill.

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. by Ciba

BLUE JAY AMERICA'S Largest Selling CORN PLASTER

three's no crowd

(Continued from page 43) But, with one day off a week (Pat sells Ford cars like crazy, working in his father's big Ford agency), somehow the small pile of red bricks just sat there, looking smaller and more accusing each day. Finally Mona—tired of hearing Pat mutter every time he passed the bricks, "Gotta finish that walk Sunday!"—said to him one of those quiet Sabbaths when they sat before the fire reading the comics, "Let's buy the rest of the bricks we need, then we'll decide whether you do it or we have it done."

"I'll do it, don't worry about that!" said Pat, gazing into the bright fire. Mona bent her pretty head again to her paper.

A week passed and it was Sunday again. Mona wondered a little why Pat's expression was just a mite sheepish as he went out to get some wood for the fire. He was back in two minutes, carefully carrying in his arms not a log, but a neatly wrapped, plump package. He set it down and cocked an eyebrow at Mona.

"That hundred bucks—" he began, but Mona was already tearing off the wrapping paper. She gave one look, gasped, and turned to Pat.

"A radio! Pat Nerney, have you lost your mind?" she cried. "What about our brick walk?"

Pat stepped back a few feet. "Now sugar, look again," he said placatingly. "It's not a radio—it's a table television set. I got to thinking, we don't go out much since we have the house, and we used to go to all the good games, baseball and football. Now, we can stay home and still see the games—for a fraction of what we used to spend on tickets!"

a box with a view . . .

Mona eyed the tiny, three-inch screen dubiously.

"But Pat," she said, "that—that—squint-box. What can we see, anyway?"

"A bird's-eye view," said Pat, in the tones of a man who's just won a hard round.

"A humming-bird's view, you mean," laughed Mona. "But it's sweet, and it will be nice to see the games again—a little of them, anyway."

So they've been seeing the games again —from the vantage point of their pine-paneled sunken living-room.

Before the fireplace is a solid, two-storied round table, with five little stools to match. On these Mona and Pat often perch for a game of gin rummy or canasta. They eat here most nights, too, rather than in the pleasant breakfast room. A real dining room is planned, and will be part of the future extension. Meantime, what could be cozier than a nice little supper by the fire?

Over in the corner is a beautiful old desk which Mona's father, who is a wood expert, found for them in a second-hand shop and did over for a birthday present for his daughter. By it stands the ancient toy steam-engine which has been in Pat's family for years and years.

There'll be a decorator someday, when the funds are flowing more freely. Mona admits that she and Pat have worked out the present arrangement more by accident than design. But, for now, it's all they want.

"After that two-room apartment, with its one small closet, you can't imagine what undreamed-of luxury this is," says Mona, opening door after door of the shining white closets, with brass knobs, that line the carpeted hall between the bedrooms and the living room.

Another sad deficiency in the apartment

Amazing New Kind of Creme

RE-COLORS HAIR in 22 minutes

If you want to change streaked, gray, graying or drab hair to a new lustrous youthful-looking color, try Tintz Creme Shampoo-Tint today. It's a new hair coloring that re-colors hair at home as it shampoos. Takes only 22 minutes. No waiting for results. It's easy to use—no messy mixing. Caution: Use only as directed. Won't wash or rub out. MONEY BACK Guarantee. Get your choice of color today: Jet Black, Black, Dark Brown, Medium Warm Brown, Medium Ash Brown, Light Brown, Auburn (Henna), Blonde. Won't harm permanents.

SEND NO MONEY Just pay postman $1.25 plus postage and tax on our positive assurance of satisfaction in 7 days or your money back. (We pay postage if $1.50 incl. tax comes with order.) Don't wait—get TINTZ today.
Tintz Company, Dept. 3-W, 349 W. Ontario St., Chicago 10, Ill.
In Canada: 56½ Adelaide St. E., Toronto, Ontario

NERVOUS STOMACH ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of "nervous stomach"—heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas. ALLIMIN has been scientifically tested by doctors and found highly effective. World famous—more than a ¼ billion sold to date.

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

FREE RACHEL FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder. BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors furnished. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder. Mention shade wanted—☐light or ☐dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now!
J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894)
1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 102, Chicago 7, Ill.

Be an ARTIST

LEARN AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME.
Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 or more a week. By our practical method step by step we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOOK—"Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training and opportunities in art. STATE AGE. Course G.I. Approved.
STUDIO 803W, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER

TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH
ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS.
SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET "NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU"
MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-C, Providence 15, R. I.

Get Well QUICKER
From Your Cough Due to a Cold
FOLEY'S Honey & Tar Cough Compound

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American School, H314, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

Write Now For NEW EASY CASH PLAN

Make EXTRA MONEY this easy, proven way! Take orders for big value Assortments of Everyday Greeting Cards. No experience needed. Just show samples, write orders, pocket big profits! Lovely 14 Card $1 All-Occasion Assortment pays you up to 50c. Many others including PLASTIC Cards, Gift Wraps, Stationery, Gifts. Individuals and organizations: Write now for money-making details and Samples on approval.
Wetmore & Sugden, Inc., 749 Monroe Av., Dept. 77-C, Rochester 2, N.Y.

was the stall-sized bathroom. When Pat would be shaving, Mona would want to do her hair or wash the baby, and when Papa breezed in for his morning shower, there would be Mona, who'd beat him to it. So the Nerneys insisted that plans for the house include a roomy bathroom with two large wash-basins—one apiece—and plenty of mirrors.

Their bedroom is done in soft gray with touches of dimmed yellow, with two strong touches of color supplied by a pair of American Beauty Victorian chairs opposite the bed. Over the chairs hangs a painting of Mona Jr. done by Mona Sr. It's good, too.

Not to be outdone, small Mona has a painting in her bedroom, too. On the pink-and-white candy-striped walls is the picture of a duck, painted by Daddy with much lip-chewing and eye-squinting. It's right where little Monie can look up at it from her crib. She loves it—always says goodnight to it.

sentimental heirloom . . .

Near the crib is a three-foot doll's bed with matching spread and canopy—a gift from Mona's folks to the baby. Living in Maryland, they feel far from their daughter and her new career and family, so there is much letter-writing and sometimes telephoning, back and forth. A small black wooden rocker that Mona Freeman grew up in now sits at the living-room fireside—for the little girl. Her grandmother carried it all the way out on the train with her when she came out recently for a visit.

Every day when Mona isn't working, and whenever she can when she is, Mrs. Nerney goes shopping. Not to the plush, swank markets that abound short miles away, but to the Thriftymart in Brentwood. Shopping this way is fun—but when it comes to cooking, she frankly admits she hates it.

"I did it for four years in our apartment—and the 'Joy of Cooking' just isn't, for me. Now. we're lucky to have a wonderful girl—Estella—who's a combination maid and cook. Can she bake blueberry pies divinely!"

Pat—who can't cook, except to fry an egg in a pinch—lets no one out of the house until he's shown them his pet cooking helps: the rotary cupboards, which swing pots and pans within hand-reach; and the butcher's chopping-table right smack in the middle of the dream kitchen. The kitchen, with its copper-hooded stove and built-in electric dishwasher, is distinctive in that it too has been pine-paneled, and this, with the cheery, red-figured paper above, helps make it the kind of room you want to spend time in. Here, too, is the little table with two chairs, tucked in the corner, for Baby Mona. And, last but far from least, the heavenly fragrance of those wonderful pies Estella bakes!

Pat likes to clown, and he'll do, without much coaxing, a very funny imitation of the sleek brown gopher who is an unwanted tenant of the wide lawn that surrounds the house. Pat says the gopher is such a ham it'll stand up and do imitations of his doing imitations of it, in between bites of expensive green grass!

Mona and Pat see a great deal of near neighbors Macdonald Carey and his wife; Betty Hutton and Ted Briskin, and their youngsters; and the Alan Ladds, who live but one hill away. There'll be plenty of playfellows and schoolmates for little Mona to entertain when they come over to play. Nowadays at the Nerneys', three's no crowd. Space—it's wonderful!

THE END

(Mona Freeman's current movie is Paramount's Dear Wife.)

A MODERN MOTHER WON'T FAIL TO TELL HER DAUGHTER These Intimate Physical Facts

THERE'S A WOMANLY OFFENSE—GREATER THAN BODY ODOR OR BAD BREATH!

Isn't it reassuring in this age of outspokenness that mother and daughter can be pals and talk freely about intimate physical facts?

A mother must tell her grownup daughter how important it is to always put ZONITE in her fountain syringe for hygiene (which means internal cleanliness), for health, after her periods and in her married life ahead. She'll certainly warn her daughter about an offense greater than body odor or bad breath—an odor she might not detect herself but is so apparent to others.

And it's such a comfort for women to know that no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for this purpose is so powerful yet safe to tissues as ZONITE.

Truly a Modern Miracle!

Modern women no longer have to use dangerous products, overstrong solutions of which may gradually cause serious damage. Nor will they want to rely on weak homemade solutions—none of which has ZONITE's remarkable deodorizing, germicidal action.

Developed by a famous surgeon and scientist—this ZONITE principle is POWERFULLY EFFECTIVE yet POSITIVELY NON-POISONOUS, NON-IRRITATING. You can use it as directed as often as you want without the slightest risk of injury.

Gives BOTH Internal and External Hygienic Protection From Odor

ZONITE actually dissolves, destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances and discharge. Others may merely mask one odor with another. With them you have no assurance you won't offend. ZONITE has such a soothing effect and promptly helps relieve itching and burning if present. ZONITE gives daily external hygienic protection, too, leaving you with such a refreshed dainty feeling—knowing that you will not offend.

NO OTHER TYPE LIQUID ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE TESTED FOR THE DOUCHE IS SO POWERFUL YET SAFE TO TISSUES.

© 1950 Z.P.C.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products Corp., Dept. MR-30, 100 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

*Offer good only in the U.S.

Your hair can be made much more BEAUTIFUL and GLAMOROUS with a
Super Color Rinse

If your hair is gray, graying, drab, lusterless, or discolored, try Noreen

SUPER COLOR RINSE

The new
NOREEN COLOR APPLICATOR
for your added convenience

NOREEN is so easy to apply IN 3 MINUTES with the NEW NOREEN COLOR APPLICATOR.

NOREEN flows on so smoothly and evenly and gives you a much more colorful result. You'll agree your hair was never lovelier! Until the Applicator is available in every store, we will accommodate by direct mail: Send 60c to NOREEN, 448 Lincoln St., Denver 9, Colorado. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Millions of beauty-wise women depend on Noreen's abundant, temporary color to...

Amazingly blend in to the natural shade the unwanted gray in graying hair...to add glamorizing, natural appearing COLOR to all shades of hair ...to beautify white and gray hair, take out yellow and other discolorations.

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

ACCEPTED COMMITTEE ON COSMETICS

Yes, millions of women have achieved results with Noreen they never before believed possible.

So...try Noreen today...we sincerely believe that in Noreen you too will find, at last, a color rinse which will really do what you have always wanted a color rinse to do. Packed in dainty, easy-to-use capsules for quick, convenient use at home...25c or 50c sizes ...at leading cosmetic counters everywhere.

FREE...Portfolio "How to make your hair more attractive." Write today, a post card will do, Noreen, Dept. 7 448 Lincoln St., Denver 9, Colorado.

The Moviegoers'
Magazine of the West

★ Western Movies
★ Stories of the Old West
★ Tim Holt's Rodeo—Special Section

All the glamor and excitement of the West —past and present—in one thrill-packed magazine, Western Stars. There's nothing like it!

Get the new SPRING
WESTERN STARS magazine

ON SALE EVERYWHERE • 25c

bringing up joan

(Continued from page 33) It hasn't anything to do with the essential you. You're the same girl for whom the teacher would have given out the home work."

But is she? Let's examine all the facts in the case and see what it's like for me, the mother of a movie star—it says here—to be bringing up a kid in Hollywood.

Just as the close-up on the screen is a hundred times larger than life, Joan's life is bigger, too. She faces many problems known to all teen-agers—she is now 15—only there is an emotional enlargement, a blowing-up of the picture. And some problems other teen-agers have, Joan doesn't—simply because she's in films.

For example, the boyfriend problem. A couple of friends of ours were horrified to learn that we had let Joan begin her career so young. One of them said, "Don't you realize that she won't be able to have a normal emotional life? Don't you know that the mothers of really nice boys won't let their sons go out with a girl in pictures?"

No, I did not realize that nor do I realize it now. Joan goes out with some really nice boys. They have mothers, too.

She must go out with boys in the picture business. They understand the hours, for one thing. They know, when she's working, that she must be at home by 10 to have the required time for sleep. Since the demands of the studio vary like the California weather, there's always a chance that she must break a date at the last minute. And the boys know all about this. They sometimes do the same thing.

drinking is out . . .

The boys she sees—young actors like Jerry Paris and Anthony Curtis, and George Brand, who's with a big Hollywood talent agency and who took her to the Press Photographers Ball—are all working boys. They have to get up early in the morning, too—with clear heads.

As a result, they drink almost not at all. They can't afford to. Joan, herself, has never tasted hard liquor—though she does have an occasional glass of wine when she is very tired or when there is a celebration. So I never worry that Joan is tearing across the countryside in a jalopy with a drunk date.

Before I leave the subject of boyfriends, I'd like to tell you how Joan feels about Farley Granger. Farley was the first boy who ever kissed her—but that was in front of a camera and I think this established their relationship as a working relationship. There is great affection between them. She has fun with Farley—he is one of the gayest, brightest boys in this town. But they are co-workers and they never talk of love except as it relates to acting.

There is a girl friend problem. Joan doesn't have any close friends among the girls in Hollywood her own age. When I speak of Joan's age, incidentally, I don't think of her as being 15. She has lived 15 calendar years, but she is as mature as any 17- or 18-year-old girl I know. I think of her as an adult.

She has very little chance to meet other girls. She doesn't go to a school—she has a private tutor at the studio. Goldwyn's is a small studio, and at the moment, the feminine contract list consists of Joan and eight-year-old Gigi Perreau. So how is Joan to meet girls? Recently she has joined a square-dancing group that gives hospital benefits and performances to raise money for multiple-sclerosis research. I do hope that she will find, among the girls in the group, a few lasting attachments.

But real friendship between actresses is rare. The competition is too keen and they are all playing for such high stakes. Between girls who are competing for the same thing the ever-present enemy of friendship is jealousy. Of course, all girls everywhere are competitive—but if Joan should get a big part in a big film that her best friend wanted, it would be far more important than, say, winning a high-school debating contest. The ice would be much colder.

We are all screaming individuals in our household. Dale Eunson, her father, is a writer. (He co-authored the play Guest in the House and has published hundreds of short stories, novelettes and serials.) I, too, am a fiction writer. My mother lives with us and is quite a character in her own right. We are all busy career people and everyone of us is in there pitching for center stage.

I suppose, measured by ordinary standards, Joan's life has always been unconventional. For example, she calls her father and me by our first names. I, being an only child like Joan, called my parents by their first names.

Before she was born I asked Dale what he wanted the baby to call him. "Considering the fact," he said, "that the baby won't know me very well, I think 'Mr. Eunson' would be correct." I settled for "Dale."

I suppose I should have known that she was destined to be an actress. She was always a great show-off. The worst punishment we could give her was banishment. "Joan," we would say, "go to your room. When you feel that you can behave yourself, come back." She would be back —sunny as August—in two minutes flat. It's no fun sulking alone with no one to observe and admire the mood.

She always was a big ham. It's a wonder the police didn't arrive every time I took a splinter out of her finger. Everything terrible that happened to Joan was a thousand times more terrible than the things that happened to ordinary people like a mother and father.

She fell out of her swing once when she was seven. She came into the house and flung herself on the sofa where she overacted the death scene of Camille.

"Oh, stop it," I said. "I cut my teeth on actors. I know the real thing from the performance. You're hamming it up, kid, and I want no more of it."

To my shame, I must admit that when we took her to the doctor the next day

that's hollywood!

Tom Pryor tells it in the N. Y. Times: Proof that the people who attend to weighty matters of historical import at the Congressional Library are not stuffy themselves can be had from Maxwell Anderson and Andrew Solt. Working out the screenplay for Joan of Arc, the writers had occasion to ask the Congressional Library research staff for some quick information on the trial of Joan. The return wire advised: "Seating like baseball diamond. Chief Judge at homeplate. Inquisitor and lesser dignitaries at first, second, third. Joan in pitcher's box."

Irving Hoffman
The Hollywood Reporter

Veto — Colgate's Deodorant — Gives You

DOUBLE PROTECTION!

1. CHECKS PERSPIRATION...
Quickly, effectively! Veto safeguards your loveliness night and day. Rubs in easily and checks perspiration at once. Yet Veto is mild, gentle for normal skin . . . safe for clothes.

2. STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY!
Veto's scientific formula was perfected by the famous Colgate laboratories. Veto works like a charm, is always delightfully smooth and creamy. Let Veto give your loveliness double protection!

Veto Lasts and Lasts From Bath to Bath

LINIT

gives the PERFECT finish

All your cotton fabrics "come out" beautifully when you launder them with LINIT® Starch, the superior starch that penetrates fabrics, keeps 'em fresh, dainty and new-looking . . . longer.

AND

it's so EASY to make

Just a minute! — and LINIT is ready to use. Mix with cold water, add boiling water—that's all!

Your iron glides...over the smooth, even LINIT-starched surfaces . . . so easy!

yes!

PERFECT...

for shirts, dresses, blouses, children's clothes, curtains, sheets, tablecloths—all cottons.

Want to be a golden Blonde?

YOU can have the glorious golden blonde hair that thrills men, no matter what your natural hair shade. It's so easy to make your hair blonde — beautifully golden blonde — with Marchand's Golden Hair Wash.

Whether you are blonde, brunette or redhead...whether you want to make your hair definitely blonder, or simply add golden highlights, trust Marchand's to do a smooth, even job! Marchand's Golden Hair Wash lets you achieve the degree of lightness you want.

Neither a dye, nor an expensive "treatment," Marchand's Golden Hair Wash is easier than ever to use.

60¢ and 90¢ PLUS TAX

★ Grand for lightening arm and leg hair.

SELL DISTINCTIVE NEW

MORE MONEY SO EASY!

GREETING CARDS AND STATIONERY

Fast sellers galore. Amazing Plastic, Metallic, 3-dimension Floral 21-card $1.00 All-Occasion assortments. Your profit to 50c per $1.00 box. Exclusive Gift Wraps, Novel 2-in-1 cards, Animated Books, Bon Bon Dishes, Bonus, Special offers. Write for free samples exclusive Name Imprinted Decorated Stationery and feature All-Occasion samples on approval.

FREE SAMPLES IMPRINTED DECORATED STATIONERY

ELMIRA GREETING CARD CO., Dept. 1241, Elmira, New York

PAIN

of headache, neuritis and neuralgia

RELIEVED

incredibly fast

the way thousands of physicians and dentists recommend —

ANACIN®

Here's why

Anacin is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients. Get Anacin Tablets today.

he found that she had torn a ligament in her arm. I salved my conscience by thinking of the boy who cried "wolf." With him as with Joan, it was never possible to tell the real from the imaginary. And this can be said of every actress I know.

She was eight, I think, when she came home from school and announced that she had tried out for a role in Hansel and Gretel and was to be Gretel.

One day she came home from a rehearsal in a rage. "That little boy who acts the part of Hansel!" she said. "Whenever I'm talking in the play or singing a song he is always doing something, walking around the platform or something!"

Although she did not know the theatrical jargon, she was making one of the oldest of actor's complaints—"moving on my line." It is an old scene-stealing device, for the eye will always follow the person in action.

"Want to teach him a lesson?" I asked.

"How?" Joan asked almost too eagerly.

I told her about up-staging—how you carefully take a few steps up so that the actor with whom you're playing the scene must turn to look at you and you then become the focus of attention.

Well, we went to see Hansel and Gretel and I want to tell you I have no idea what that little boy looked like. All we ever saw of him was the back of his head.

Standing on the auditorium steps after the performance, Dale said, "That does it. She has to be an actress."

But it was more than the ability to upstage we saw that day. All the other children were charming and looked very sweet and tried very hard. But Joan was giving a performance. Within her limitations she had, for a few moments, become Gretel. It was only a flash of talent, mind you, but it was there—and both Dale and I love talent and cannot bear to see it go to waste.

It happened that was the summer that Dale's Guest in the House was playing everywhere in stock. For four weeks Joan played the child in it just to get the hang of the theater. That was, until a year ago, the sum total of her stage and screen experience.

can't keep secrets . . .

I'd be a fool if I said, as I've heard other mothers say, "My daughter tells me everything. I have her complete confidence." This is ridiculous and I would not have it so. No one has any other human being's "complete confidence." Rightly, there is a secret room in every soul and I would never invade the privacy of Joan's room—at least, not without knocking. But I'm happy to say that Joan is an extrovert. I have never known a successful actress—with the exception of Garbo—who was not. Being extroverted, Joan delights in telling her innermost emotions. The extrovert can't keep a secret if it concerns himself.

Joan and I are now more companionable than we have ever been before. One of the rewards of motherhood is that when you lose your child you gain a friend. I feel that Joan is my friend, now. I know that I am hers.

It was not always so. Like every normal girl, Joan was for a time afflicted with a case of mother antagonism. Let psychologists explain the reason for the disease—I'll just tell you the symptoms.

I embarrassed Joan. I was too unconventional. If I said anything with more wit or spirit than "Good morning," I was brought up sharply with, "Oh, Katherine! What will people think!" And, of course, I knew but nothing.

She was well into this phase when we arrived in California and she began work on Roseanna McCoy. Just as every problem was aggravated by the fact that she was in pictures, so was this one. She was nervous and tense and full of fears because of the enormous undertaking before her.

A mother can shrug off the average daughter's resentment of her advice and let her make a few errors. But Joan was beginning a career and her aspiration was high. A mistake could leave a permanent scar upon the rest of her life. She could not afford to make mistakes.

When problems arose at the studio—and, in those early days, they reared up on their hind legs every hour on the hour—I knew, from my years of experience in the strange town, how they should be handled. But getting Joan to take my advice entailed long and bitter quarrels between us. Joan was in a new world. It was a world I knew. The world is new and old for daughters and mothers whether they are in New Zealand, Cape Horn or Hollywood.

I don't know if mother antagonism simply runs its course like whooping cough (and believe me, it is just as violent and noisy) or whether outside circumstances cause its end. Joan's attack was, I think, of shorter duration than most. Joan's medicine was her own intelligence. Say what you will about Joan, she is intelligent. She is stubborn and it is difficult for her to admit she is wrong. But she knows right from wrong whether she'll admit it or not—and mother antagonism ended one day when she did take my advice.

Being a girl of enormous vitality she was not content, when she first started to work at the studio, to try to turn only her small cog in the vast machine. She had to run the works.

"You know what happened today?" she would ask me. "I was supposed to get my hair done at two for publicity stills. But the publicity department hadn't put through the call to the hairdresser and I had to check and double check on everybody. I have to check on them all the time."

Or—"Well, Farley Granger was late for rehearsal. I think that's terrible and I gave Farley a pretty straight talk about it, too."

At first this was rather enchanting. The idea of an inexperienced 14-year-old girl undertaking the burdens of an important business enterprise caused amused smiles. But eventually the smiles of kindly amusement changed to frowns of impatience. Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Inc., had been muddling through pretty well and managing to lay aside a couple of million bucks occasionally before Joan arrived.

I SAW IT HAPPEN

It happened on Guam in 1944 at the close of Betty Hutton's personal appearance tour. As she entered the back seat of the jeep that was about to carry her away, a great round of applause went up from the boys. She stood there for a moment and threw kisses from her finger tips to all of them. A young Marine corporal standing nearby remarked, "A lot of good that does." Upon hearing the remark, Miss Hutton beckoned the corporal toward her, smiled and gave him a big kiss. There was another round of applause as her jeep drove away and we all wished we had been as lucky as the corporal.

Alex McKinnin
Bridgeville, Pa.

Not only was her attitude making her tense, she was becoming disliked by the people who had adored her.

I explained this to her. Of course, she put up an argument. Well, it was a tough fight, but Mom won.

As soon as Joan relaxed and did her job as well as she could while letting the others do theirs, she found a difference not only in the attitude of those around her but in the way she herself felt.

She could not at the time admit she was wrong. But I was amused the other day when she was talking about a new girl who plays a part in Our Very Own. Joan said, "I wonder if I should tell her what she's doing. She's trying to run the studio and people just don't like that. She's making exactly the same mistake I did."

When you can admit you've been wrong you've come a long way on the road to adulthood.

Now Joan and Dale and I are at the stage where we can discuss problems like three adults. It's not a fight now—it's a discussion. And I must admit that many times Joan is right and makes us see that she is.

On that fateful day when Dale and I had to decide whether or not we would let a girl so young attempt a career in pictures, we talked for hours. If she got the part and the contract—and when we left New York for California, Mr. Goldwyn had seen only a photographic test of her and the acting test was yet to come—it would mean an uprooting of all our lives and dangers we could not predict. Since she was a minor, it was our decision to make. Would we be robbing her of her youth and a normal way of life, allowing her to go? Dale wrote a touching article about our decision which appeared in one of the national magazines. It was called "We Let Our Daughter Go to Hollywood." Many of our friends thought we were right. Others were appalled and disapproving.

More than a year has passed since we took the great chance. The other day we let Joan off in front of the studo. Her script, that she had studied with such fierce concentration the night before, was tucked under her arm. It was the first day of Edge of Doom. She was excited at the prospect of working for director Mark Robson. "Oh, I hope I'm good enough—he can teach me so much," she had said. Behind her were two pictures, Roseanna McCoy, and Our Very Own. She was not satisfied with her own work in either—as what artist ever is? But she was pleased with herself that she was able to accomplish them at all.

She turned to smile and wave at us and I saw not only a very pretty girl but—so much more important—a happy, well adjusted and intelligent girl. "Dale," I said, "have you any regrets about letting our daughter go to Hollywood?"

"Joan has a wonderful life," he said. "It's a rich full life."

And that's just how I feel, too.

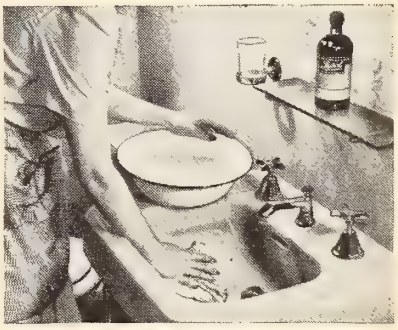
THE END

MEET THE AUTHOR

Katherine Albert, mother of Joan Evans and author of "Bringing Up Joan," has been an established top-flight writer for many years. Starting her career in Los Angeles as a feature writer for the Times and the Daily News, she soon was appearing regularly in national magazines. About 10 years ago she began writing fiction and has published hundreds of stories and novelettes. Two years ago she co-authored with her husband, writer Dale Eunson, a play, Loco, in which Jean Parker starred on Broadway.

THIS MONTH

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

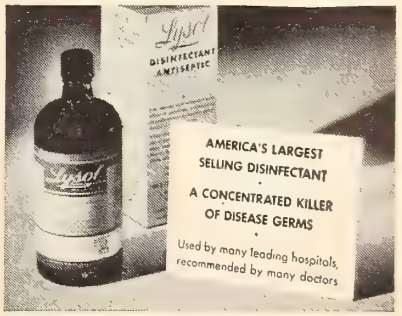


CALL FOR SPECIAL HOME PROTECTION

How Mothers Help Guard Family Health

TO HELP PREVENT disease germs from striking at family health, alert mothers, the country over, take this simple precaution: they disinfect with potent "Lysol" brand disinfectant when cleaning their homes. Floors, walls, woodwork . . . everywhere.

IF SICKNESS should be carried in from outside, then dependable "Lysol" becomes even more a must in the sickroom. The patient's bed, bedding and utensils all need disinfecting with "Lysol"... 2½ tablespoons to each gallon of cleaning water.



TAKE SPECIAL CARE, with sickness in the home, in cleaning bathroom and all sickroom utensils. Use potent "Lysol" disinfectant solution, to fight disease germs.

Look to your Doctor and your Druggist

Call on their knowledge and skill whenever needed. Be prepared, before sickness may occur, with basic Sickroom Needs! Your druggist is featuring these items now. Check with him today!

HELP PROTECT your home against disease germs. Remember—many healthy, happy homes, coast-to-coast, depend on powerful "Lysol" to help guard family health.

HELEN NEUSHAEFER shows you how to win hand beauty

Helen Neushaefer's hands are the center of attention at a famous Hollywood night club. Do your hands look their loveliest when they're in the spotlight? If you're not completely sure, send for Helen Neushaefer's FREE booklet on hand care. You'll be delighted to see how much daintier hands can become, with just a little care at home.

NEU NAIL AND LIP BEAUTY

Helen Neushaefer lipstick in 6 glowing shades in the case with the color-teller-tip, 39c.

Helen Neushaefer Nail Polish with exclusive chip-proof Plasteen in 12 shades, 10c and 25c sizes.

At your favorite five-and-dime and drug store. Money back if you're not satisfied.

HELEN NEUSHAEFER, Dept. D • COLLEGE POINT, N.Y.

NEW! SOLD ONLY BY MAIL!

No Time Limit HOSPITAL PLAN

GOOD ANYWHERE IN U.S.

Protects You in Case of

SICKNESS & ACCIDENT

COSTS only 3c a DAY

More coverage! Less cost! Individual or family eligible, birth to age 70. Policy pays Hospital Room and Board as long as you remain confined. NO TIME LIMIT! You get Doctor Benefits in case of accident... Cash Benefits for 74 Surgical Operations... Compensation for Loss of Time in case of accident (age 18 or above)... Cash Payment for Loss of Eyes, Hands, Foot... Lump Cash for Accidental Death... special Infantile Paralysis coverage. Only 3c a day for adults; 1½c a day for children to age 18. Sold direct. No agent will call.

POLICY PAYS

HOSPITAL ROOM AND BOARD FOR SICKNESS OR ACCIDENT
Per Month $150.00
(No time limit)

DOCTOR VISITS IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)

74 SURGICAL OPERATIONS
$10 to $100

LOSS OF TIME IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)

ACCIDENTAL DEATH
$1000 to $3000

LOSS OF EYES, HANDS, FOOT DUE TO ACCIDENT
$250 to $3000

INFANTILE PARALYSIS
Maximum $1500

AMBULANCE SERVICE
$10.00

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. DM 3-50, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

this love of ours

(Continued from page 41) about practically everything in the world, I bought the magazine as directed. Señor Montalban, the dark, Latin lover type, was certainly not my idea of the perfect husband. From the page, he smouldered back at me, with suave, come-with-me-to-the-Casbah sophistication oozing from every pore. This character, I decided, was a wolf if I'd ever seen one.

To climax the whole impression, he was smoking a languid cigarette through a long holder and gazing superciliously from under raised eyebrows and half-closed lids.

"Sally is letting that warm tropical sun soften her head," I told myself. "Perhaps Mother should write Norman and suggest he send her home before she completely loses her sense of balance."

Meantime, my intrepid sister, working overtime as Cupid's Mexican ambassadress, was bombarding Ricardo with an intensive "you-ought-to-meet-my-sister" barrage. Finally, he took an old, battered picture out of his pocket and showed it to Sally.

"Does your sister look like this?" he asked her. "If she doesn't, I cannot marry her. This is the one I've decided on—a long time ago."

Sally stared at the picture in disbelief. It was a photograph of me!

nice to look at . . .

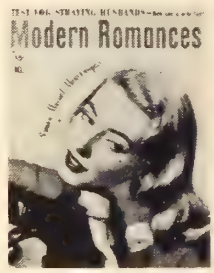
It had appeared in a magazine several years before, when the four Young sisters—Loretta, Sally (whose screen name was Sally Blaine), Pollyanna and I—had been cast as the sisters in the movie, Alexander Graham Bell.

"It—it's Georgie!" she gasped. "Where did you get it?"

Now it was Ricardo's turn to be flabbergasted. Here he'd been carrying that picture around just because he "liked to look at it." And it turned out to be the kid sister that Sally had been trying to palm off on him all this time!

Ricardo always hesitates to tell that story because it was the kind of wild coincidence that even the most hardened Hollywood press agent would hesitate to broadcast.

It was shortly after this that Ricardo came to Hollywood and we met for the first time. To my relief, he was the exact opposite of the glamor-boy in that first, misleading picture. He was gay and friendly, with a magnificent sense of humor—and just about as wolfish as Gary Cooper. He completely captivated the whole family, despite the fact that we'd all made up our minds that he couldn't possibly be as charming as Sally and Norman insisted he was.



We were married two weeks, almost to the day, after we met. Fortunately, our union couldn't have turned out any happier if we'd been childhood sweethearts. But we wouldn't advise this lightning speed for other young couples. In two weeks, a girl can find out if a prospective mate rhumbas beautifully, if he prefers his steaks rare or well-done, or if his sense of humor runs on the line of hers. A man can determine if the gorgeous creature he's pursuing knows the score—of football, gin rummy or Gershwin. But a real marriage is not built on physical attraction, on the social graces, or on a mutual regard for jazz, modern art or movies.

There must be a stronger bond. Ours, Ricardo's and mine, is our religion.

In these wonderfully happy years, we've certainly had our human share of differences. But if your marriage is of the lifetime variety, as ours is, you just get to work and clear them up. We have a rule make it a habit

Reading
Modern Romances
every month

Listening to the
"Modern Romances"
radio program
every day!

You'll thrill to these frank and human dramatizations of true-to-life stories. The same joys, sorrows and loves that you or your neighbors might experience in your own daily life.

Yes —

Make it a habit to read and listen to

"MODERN ROMANCES"

Broadcast Monday thru Friday over the ABC Network

See your newspaper for local time at our house which prohibits the "silent treatment." Whatever the issue, major or minor, we talk it out, even if it takes all night—as sometimes it does.

Ricardo and I learned, as our parents did before us, that troubles diminish as the tribe increases. Our three arrived closely together, so we just didn't have time to be moody or sensitive or too disturbed about trivia. Laura, who is four, Mark, almost three, and Anita, just seven months old—these are the symbols of our happiness. As Ricardo often says, they are the fulfillment of our love and in them we see each other.

One day, when Anita was tiny, little Laura was "helping" me bathe her. When the baby was back in her bassinette, Laura tucked her in dotingly, piling the coverlet up around her ears and leaving only her little button nose and eyes showing. Stepping back and tilting her head admiringly, she sighed, "Oh, I wish Ricardo could see her now"—as she must have heard me murmur a hundred times.

She sounded almost as proud as Ricardo when Mark was born. He'd wanted a boy so badly and the odds seemed all against it. The Young and Montalban clans were running strongly to girls, with no boy babies on either side for quite a stretch. There was a florist stand across the street from the hospital, and I remember the huge bouquet of red roses he dashed out and bought when the nurse told him he had a son. Simply and eloquently the card read, "Boy, oh boy, oh boy!" beloved daddy . . .

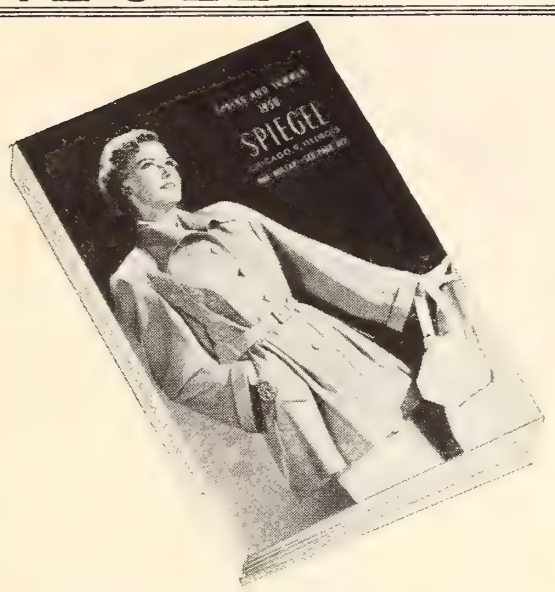
But neither of us plays favorites with the children. Love and discipline, toys and cough syrup, fun and spankings are all dished up in three equal portions.

"I love Daddy," Laura, our young golddigger, sighed happily the other day as we all got cleaned up for his evening homecoming. "He always brings us presents." Yet "Daddy" also is a conscientious disciplinarian, with the firm oldworld opinion that parental respect inspires love, not fear. And, despite the little presents he's always bringing home, we are both doggedly determined that there will be no spoiled Montalbans. "It isn't fair to youngsters to pamper them," he reasons, "so that when they go to school, the other kids slap their ears down."



Of course, our trio had early training in getting along with other children. With Loretta's, Sally's, Pollyanna's and my brother's families, there are 13 grandchildren in the Young second generation, all living so close together that gatherings of the clan are frequent and uproarious. Thanksgiving, Christmas and Mother's birthday are the main annual events and we all take turns in having the parties.

Ricardo and my mother get along famously. He delights in flustering her by rushing across the room to greet her, sweeping her off her feet and in mock fervor murmuring soulfully, "Mother!" She invariably blushes furiously, tries to squirm out of his embrace—and loves it.

Last summer, Ricardo's parents came from their home in Mexico for their first Hollywood visit. In spite of the fact that the children and I understood no Spanish and they spoke no English, we all had a grand time together. To add to the excitement and confusion, Laura undertook to teach her grandfather English.

"Say 'apple,' " she would patiently begin the lesson. But when his renditions would vary from her own exacting pronunciation, she would become more annoyed with each frustrating attempt. Then she would inveigle him into playing hide-and-seek. "Hide," she would command sternly. When he wouldn't understand, she'd be thoroughly exasperated—as she is with

SPIEGEL SINCE 1865

BEAT THE HIGH COST OF LIVING
SEND FOR THIS BIG CATALOG NOW

FOR LOW PRICES that save money on everyday needs shop from the great Spiegel Catalog for Spring and Summer 1950. Send for your copy today! Check the values throughout this big book. Compare the low prices anywhere. See for yourself that you get the most for your money when you shop the Spiegel Catalog way.

632 PAGES—thousands of everyday needs right at your fingertips . . . fashions for the family, appliances, furniture, auto supplies and all the rest. Every item accurately pictured and described, with wide selection in sizes, colors and styles.

Three convenient buying plans CASH—30-DAY CHARGE and MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

SEND FOR THIS CATALOG NOW!

Pin a dollar to the coupon today! We'll send your big catalog and a $1.00 Certificate good on any Spiegel mail order of $10 or more.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

PIN A DOLLAR TO COUPON

Spiegel, Inc., Chicago 9, Illinois S-20-36

I am enclosing a DOLLAR DEPOSIT. Please send me a copy of the new Spiegel Catalog. I understand my dollar will be returned in the form of a Merchandise Certificate good on any Spiegel Mail order of $10 or more.

Name.....

Address.....

Town.....State.....

MAKE MONEY FAST!
SELL EVERYDAY CARDS

100 MONEY MAKERS

Friends, Clubs, Housewives gladly buy gorgeous, new Metal and Plastic assortments, 21 All Occasion cards for $1. Easter, Relative, Scented Stationery, Gifts. Amazing profits. Bargain Offers. Experience unnecessary. Write today for SAMPLES on approval and money-making plans.

HEDENKAMP & CO., Inc. Dept. D-3
361 Broadway, New York 13, N. Y.

Lovely Cluster Ring "GIVEN AWAY"

Made special in 1/30 10k Gold plate. Fully Guaranteed.

A ring you will admire for years to come. Has filigree shank set with simulated ruby center, surrounded by eight sparkling brilliants, and GIVEN for selling only 4 boxes Rosebud Salve at 25¢ a box, returning $1.00. Order 4 salve—Send No Money. (Or we will mail Ring and 4 salve NOW if you send $1.00 with order) State size of ring desired.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 30, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND

BLONDES! Wash Hair Lighter, Shinier, SAFELY

New home shampoo made with ANDIUM helps keep hair from darkening . . . brightens faded hair...gives wonderful luster. Safe for children. Get it at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

Blondex SHAMPOO

MADE SPECIALLY FOR BLONDES

Singer

Eugenie Baird, singing star of CBS "Sing It Again" program, sings the praises of Italian Balm for keeping hands lovelier.

Smoother, softer, chap-free hands—that's Italian Balm's promise! Quicker results. Softens roughest, driest skin overnight. Pure, rich, concentrated—not a thin or watery lotion. Choice of countless doctors, nurses, housewives. So soothing to children's tender, chapped skin. Amazingly economical. So widespreading, one drop serves both hands. 25¢, 50¢, $1 per bottle.

Campana
Italian Balm
for CHAP-FREE HANDS

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you are playing popular music. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. U. S. School of Music, 1443 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y. (52nd Anniversary)

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music
1443 Brunswick Bldg., New York 10, N. Y.

Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name Instrument).

Have you Instrument.....Instrument?.....

Name.....

Address.....

Mark when he ignores the rules of the game.

On their visit to the studio, the folks saw some rushes of Border Incident. They were so proud of Ricardo. Yet the glamor of Hollywood left them serenely unimpressed, because they are very sensible, level-headed persons. Their real pride in their son was the assurance that he has kept the true sense of values that they taught him; that he is a success as a husband and father, not merely as an actor.

And I'm proud of him for that, too. When we were married five years ago, no one wanted his autograph except the landlord on a check in advance for our tiny apartment. If, by Hollywood standards, Ricardo has "arrived," success really hasn't changed him.

"Be honest, Rick—you do feel important with all these fans gasping and gurgling over you, don't you?" an old friend from his lean New York days kidded him recently at a big première.

Incurably honest, Ricardo hesitated a moment and then laughed. "Well, I do catch myself being impressed now and then. But I say to myself, 'Look, Ricardo, don't be an ass. They would do the same thing if Lassie walked by.' That usually brings me right back to earth—but fast!"

Around the house, I've come to learn that Ricardo, like most Latin males, is no help at all. In fact, to get my own work done, I must shoo him off to play golf or go to a ball game with his men cronies. He is most unhappy when forced to go shopping and, alas, completely uninspired in selecting gifts. He keeps a written record or he would never remember birthdays and anniversaries. He will invariably buy some small but lovely knick-knack, like a vase or a perfume bottle, and tuck inside a fine, fat check for me to do my own gift buying.

"I am the luckiest man in the world," Ricardo is fond of saying. "I wanted to be an actor; I got a chance to act. When we were married, I wanted to be in Hollywood because it was Georgie's home; right away, out of a clear sky, came a contract with MGM. I wanted that role in Battleground; I got it. The luckiest guy in the world—that's me."

But in our hearts, we both know it isn't luck. It's faith in prayer. Ricardo and I believe that a marriage which includes that is the only kind with a bona fide guarantee for living "happily ever after."

THE END

man at large

(Continued from page 35) "Well, fine!" said the producer. "But . . . I mean. . . ."

"Oh!" said Kirk, gathering that further explanation was wished. "I was passing by and thought it would be nice to take a bath. The manager let me in. Hope you don't mind. . . . You don't, do you?"

"Oh, no," said the producer. "It's perfectly O.K. Make yourself at home. Take a nap if you like."

"Thanks," said Kirk. "That would be swell."

He took the nap, spent the night, and was gone like a dream when the apartment owner woke up the next morning.

That's Kirk Douglas, Gentleman Caller—an appropriate title, by the way, as it is what he plays in the forthcoming The Glass Menagerie.

Then there was the way Kirk and Doris Day first met. Doris was a guest at a Hollywood party being given by Warren Cowan, Kirk's publicity man. There were about 20 people sitting around the living room, talking small and sipping drinks. The front door opened and Kirk entered carrying a clean shirt over his arm and holding a razor in his hand. As he walked briskly through the living room, "Hi, everybody!" he said genially—and, without slackening his pace, continued on to the bathroom, entered and shut the door.

Doris turned to her host. "What was that?" she asked.

"Kirk Douglas," said Cowan.

"Does he live here?" asked Doris.

"No," said the host. "He probably just wants to shave and change his shirt. He does that all the time."

"Where does he live?" asked Doris. "San Francisco?"

"No," said Cowan, "just a couple of blocks down the street. Would you like to meet him?"

"I'm not so sure," said Doris. "But—it might be an experience."

These yarns may appear to be unrelated incidents of a humorous nature with no particular significance. But they are specific illustrations of the fact that the personal life of Kirk Douglas is confused and disorganized. This is a result of his being Hollywood's number one married bachelor.

"Gypsy" is the best adjective to describe his present casual disregard of time and place. He has the background for a gypsy life, all right. But, until he became a married bachelor, he seemed to have outgrown it. He'd been a wanderer in his youth, but security had been his for a number of years.

Kirk Douglas was born to a substantial family—substantial numerically, that is. Six daughters and one boy. Kirk must have felt a little out of place, because he took off at an early age to rise in the world. College was the way, of course, but it cost money. Kirk had no money, so he enrolled in St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York, rode to the school on a truck and went out to look for a job before he registered for his classes.

At St. Lawrence he was president of the student council, an honor student, and the school light-heavyweight wrestling champ. Then he was graduated as a Bachelor of Arts. But how do you turn a degree into regular paychecks? You talk it over with a man in an upstairs employment office.

"What have you done, son?"

"Just got out of college, sir. I've got my diploma right here."

"Great. What kind of work have you done, son?"

"Well, sir—I was a waiter for awhile."

"Fine, fine. Now, you just take this card down to the restaurant on the corner. They need a waiter."

Kirk Douglas, Bachelor of Hash House—working for a master's degree in blintzes and dirty dishes.

"I guess that's when I decided to become an actor," Kirk Douglas said. "The tips aren't so good in acting, but there seemed to be a better future in it. There had never been any actors in my family, but I knew I could do it. So I enrolled in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts."

Kirk grinned. "You know how I paid my tuition? I got another job—as a waiter."

Before the war gobbled him up, he was touted around Broadway as the most talented young newcomer to be seen in years. The Navy tried him out in the Pacific, and then an incident with a bomb on sub-chasing duty put him in the hospital for five months and gave him a medical discharge from the service.

He married Diana Dill, a socialite and actress, in New Orleans, November 2, 1943, and went back to the grind of the agents and the play producers. "Things weren't too bad, then," says Kirk. "I played off-

HEMSTITCHER

Hemstitch on any sewing machine with this handy attachment. Does two piece, criss-cross, inlaid, ornamental and hemstitching for pleats; also tucking, smocking and pocking. Makes rugs, comforters, slippers, etc. out of any material. Easy directions included

Both for $1.00

BUTTON HOLER

Makes button holes on your sewing machine in steps of by hand. Also darns stockings sews buttons, zippers; and can be used for quilting. Sews in any direction—front, back or sideways.

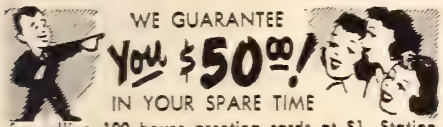
SEND NO MONEY—Merely send your name, address and pay postman $1.00 plus postage on arrival. Or, send $1.00 with order, and we mail attachments postage paid. You risk nothing. Satisfaction guaranteed or $1.00 back

LELANE CO. Dept. D M-30 Box 571 Kansas City 10, Mo.

MAKE MONEY

ADDRESSING ENVELOPES

Do this profitable easy work in the privacy of your home in your spare time, experience unnecessary. Our complete instructions show you how, and also reveal names and addresses of many firms who constantly address thousands of envelopes. Send only $1—with your name and address and we will send you everything to get started immediately.



The Congress Co., Dept. A450 1019 Congress Bldg. MIAMI, FLORIDA

FALSE TEETH

KLUTCH holds them tighter

KLUTCH forms a comfort cushion: holds dental plates so much firmer and snugger that one can eat and talk with greater comfort and security; in many cases almost as well as with natural teeth. Klutch lessens the constant fear of a dropping, rocking, chafing plate. 25c and 50c at druggists. . . . If your druggist hasn't it, don't waste money on substitutes, but send us 10c and we will mail you a generous trial box. © I. P. Inc.

KLUTCH CO., Box 5087-C, ELMIRA, N. Y.

for selling 100 boxes greeting cards at $1. Stationery or napkins with name on. No experience needed. Send for selling plan and samples on approval. Costs nothing to try!

JEWEL, 401 W. SOMERSET ST., DEPT. G, PHILA., PA.

NOW!

Read Perry Como's

LIFE STORY

in the

Perry Como Album

EXCLUSIVE PHOTOS!

AT ALL NEWSSTANDS ONLY 15c

stage voices, on-stage mutes, singing messenger boys, and a season as the stout-hearted local boy in wrestling matches with a carnival. I learned a lot about acting from the outfit."

Douglas crinkled his eyes and pursed his mouth into that engaging smile, like a small boy with a secret.

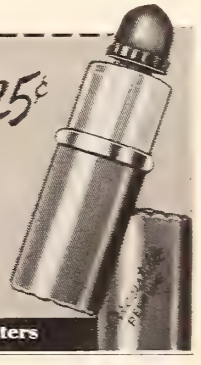
"I'd slip into town a couple of days ahead of the carnival," he said, "and chum up with the lads in the pool halls. The show would arrive and some big bruiser, claiming to be a champion of some sort, would offer to donate $500 to some local charity if any town boy could throw him. I'd accept the challenge and the match would become a civic event, with a packed house. We'd always follow a carefully-rehearsed script—I'd fight gamely, but get a thorough trouncing."

The gypsy life of the carnival, and the rather uncertain existence of the unemployed actor in New York, has left its mark on Kirk Douglas, and it may, to a large degree, explain the peculiarities in his conduct at the present time.

In temperament, Kirk Douglas is a Russian, as were his forebears. A Russian, that is, in the sense it was used before it became a political word. He is a wild Russian, with all the explosive characteristics, the sentiment, the whimsy, the rage and the tenderness.

Irresponsibility to an amazing degree is another facet of Kirk Douglas' personality. Fired by a discussion with a producer one time from which came a plan to make a picture in Israel, Douglas thought of nothing else for 48 hours, during which he made practically all the arrangements except the purchase of the boat tickets. Something else needed his interest the next day for a few hours, so Kirk set the Israel film project aside for the moment. That was over a year ago, and he has never gone back to it.

There are other sides to the Douglas personality, too. He is a devoted father to his two sons. As a matter of fact, he is the most imposed-on father in Hollywood, the lads being able to get away with anything short of murder when they are with him. And his regard for the niceties of behavior is notable. After a trip, he spends several days writing thank-you notes to just about everyone who said hello to him, and sending presents for favors done.



Dating in Hollywood is pretty much the same as anywhere else, except that the boy and girl are generally a bit more glamorous and the date is a good deal more expensive. Single, male movie stars thumb through their telephone books just as they do in Kansas City or Oshkosh, and if the book is short of numbers, the actor is short of dates. That is what happened when Kirk Douglas first found himself a married bachelor.

Then the word got around that he was available and the girls began getting in line for introductions. Pretty soon no eve-

As every woman knows, Irresistible lips are a magnet for kisses! Keep yours smoother, more inviting, shaped for love with Irresistible's Whip-text Lipstick. Creamy-soft, longer-lasting, non-smearing. In brilliant new fashion colors.

NEW! Purse-size IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME 25¢ in the spill-proof "crystal-n-gold" FLACONETTE the fragrance you'll love and be loved for!

at all cosmetic counters

Would you believe my lustrous AUBURN hair

IS REALLY MOUSEY BROWN?

When you see men turn to admire a woman's shining auburn hair, remember—her secret may be Nestle Colorinse.

Its rich, natural-looking color gives hair life, lustre, exciting beauty! And its lemon-rinse action removes soap film. Leaves hair silken-soft . . . easier to manage. Shampoos out. Smart women insist on genuine Colorinse.

TO GLORIFY RED HAIR

AUBURN . . . like red-gold sunshine.
HENNA . . . rich glowing red-bronze.
WARM BROWN . . . gleaming burnished brown.

7 Other Enchanting Shades!

Also try
NESTLE COLORTINT
Same beautiful shades in a triple-strength rinse. Lasts through 3 shampoos!

Nestle COLORINSE 6 rinses 25¢

Pleasant
TO TAKE

Pleasant
IN ACTION

Pleasant
FOR CHILDREN
& GROWN-UPS

When Nature 'forgets' remember
EX-LAX
THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE
10¢

$30 FOR YOU! Sell only 50 $1 boxes beautiful Everyday Cards from FREE SAMPLE DISPLAY! Friends, relatives buy on sight! Complete line to choose from—New Metallic Cards—Imprint Stationery—Novelty Gifts—Gift Wrappings. FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOG! Deluxe boxes on approval! Send no money. CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc., 45 Warburton Ave., Dept. E5, Yonkers, N. Y.

SENSATIONAL OFFER!
(For Blondes Only)
Unusual blond products tested over 30 years. Thrilling blond hair any shade golden to platinum. Blondes with "light ends" & "dark roots" will be amazed at the thrilling results. Men love lovely blond hair. Check & return this ad with two dimes for regular dollar box of a thrilling blond product. ( ) I want to lighten my hair just a few shades ( ) I want to lighten dark roots. ONE TIME OFFER.
Address: SAMPLE DEPT. D-3
Box #10, Prince Station New York 12, N. Y.

Happy, Profitable Hours in PHOTO COLORING

EASY TO LEARN Fascinating hobby and vocation learned at home by average man or woman artistically inclined. Modern method brings out natural, life-like colors. Many have earned while learning. FREE BOOKLET tells how to get started doing this delightful home work for photographers, stores, individuals, and friends. Mail coupon below.
NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL
1315 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 2363, Chicago 5, Ill.
Send Booklet "Photo Coloring for Pleasure and Profit" and full particulars.
Name.....
Address.....
City State

ning was complete for a press photographer unless he had at least one shot of Kirk with his latest girl friend. The talk was that Kirk was trying to go through the entire list of unmarried Hollywood dinner companions. There was a flurry of excitement when Ava Gardner got him for more than a couple of evenings. "Romance!" the town cried.

Then there were Patricia Neal, Doris Day and a host of big and small fry in the female division of the Hollywood sweepstakes. It looked as if Kirk were heading for a record. But one night he met Evelyn Keyes.

Evelyn is a brilliant, witty girl of unusual beauty. Wise to Hollywood sham and the tall tales of earnest young men out for an exciting adventure, Evelyn can chill a hot young blade at 50 paces, or warm an aspiring romantic with buck fever at a hundred, if she thinks he's a nice guy. Douglas fell somewhat into the former category when they met.

It was at the Mocambo. Kirk sat on one side of the room with his gal of the evening, and Evelyn sat ringside across the room with Bob Neal, the Texas oil man. It was all done with glances.

Kirk looked across the room and spotted Evelyn. He didn't look at anything else all evening. Evelyn, soon conscious of his stare, didn't lower her eyes as a haughty little damsel being ogled should, or ask her escort to go over and hang one on the fresh fellow giving her the eye. Instead, she gave him ogle for speculative ogle—and pretty soon they were smiling.

Kirk started telephone-number hunting early the next morning, and when he dialed the number the conversation could have gone something like this:

"Hello, Miss Keyes? This is Kirk Douglas."

"Good morning, Mr. Douglas."

"Well, we haven't met, Miss Keyes, but I got your telephone number from a friend—and I just thought I'd call up and say hello."

"Yes—I know."

"I beg your pardon?"

"I said—yes, I know."

"Oh. . . ."

"Look, I'm busy this afternoon, but maybe we could get together for a drink later on this evening."

"Oh, sure—I was just going to suggest it."

"Yes—I know."

"Oh. . . ."

Maybe it wasn't exactly like that, but it must have been close. At any rate, they understood each other thoroughly from the start—and they still do.

In our interview I asked Kirk Douglas if there was anything serious between them.

"She's a wonderful girl," he grinned.

"Are you going to marry her?" I asked.

"I am married," he pointed out.

In response to my next question, he got to his feet and walked over to the window and gazed a long time at the roof-tops of the fine homes of Beverly Hills.

"Happy?" he said. "Sure, I'm happy—I guess. What's happiness? Is it joy, a thrill, comfort? Is it content? There's one thing I do know about it, though. You can't tell if a man is happy by counting his money—or measuring his success."

If you were to ask me the same question—is Kirk Douglas happy?—I'd be a little more direct about it. I'd tell you I didn't know. And I don't think Kirk Douglas knows, either.

When I asked him why he was separated from his wife, he gave me a plain and honest answer. "I know a motion picture star has no private life," he said. "In exchange for the good things that come with success in Hollywood an actor sacrifices his right to privacy. I'm grateful for my success and to the people who made it possible, but in the matter of my family, in which the privacy of three other people is concerned, I reserve the right to protect their dignity by refusing to discuss our intimate relationships. I will not tell you why my wife and I are separated. . . . So let's change the subject."

His eyes blazed a little when he made that speech, and you can bet he'll say nothing further on the subject to anyone until the matter is settled.

Until it is, Kirk Douglas will be roaming the town as a single married man. But when the evenings are over, after he takes his date home, Kirk Douglas drives up into Laurel Canyon where he has a small home, and a rather sad transformation takes places. It is there that he lives with his two sons. And when he turns that key in the lock, he is a father and, technically, a husband again. His wife is not there. She is in New York, working in the theater. But there are two small boys asleep in another room, and when the phone rings late at night, two or three times a week, it is Mother calling to see if everything is all right.

There are three sound dramatic acts in many lives—just as there are in many plays. In Act One, the boy starts out in the world and fights forward every foot of the way. Boy gets girl. In the second act, he becomes a big success—and boy loses girl. Somewhere in the third act, boy will get girl again.

In the life of Kirk Douglas, will her name be Diana, Evelyn—or will she be someone else entirely? THE END

(Kirk Douglas' latest movie is Warners' Young Man With a Horn.)

restless heart

(Continued from page 52) everything for granted and the first thing I knew it was all in the papers that we were going to be married—and there I was hardly more than a child." The eyes plead for understanding and the voice vibrates in an angelic treble with this statement.

Well, Elizabeth must be allowed several points for veracity despite her apparent joy with the situation at the time. As for Davis, he knew what he was doing, and will probably go down in history as a fellow who almost hit the matrimonial jackpot with his first nickel.

Elizabeth's second feint at early matrimony involved William Pawley, Jr., the 29-year-old transportation executive in the Miami transit company owned by his millionaire father. Well-educated and already a big wheel in business, Pawley would appear to be too smart to have taken a stab at the big prize until he had checked the area for booby traps, so it must be deduced that he received quite a bit of encouragement from Elizabeth before he delivered that oversized engagement ring. It is interesting, therefore, to note that, now that it is all over, Elizabeth doesn't feel she has wrecked anybody's life in his case.

This may be rather disconcerting to Pawley for, although the buses in Miami still run down the streets he tells them to, all he has left from his plunge into the outer whirlpools of wedlock are some wonderful memories and a second-hand diamond the size of a turkey egg.

Both these men, however, are merely the advance guard of a corps of lads who are destined to dash their heads against the walls surrounding Elizabeth Taylor

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS
(SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 3509, Detroit 27, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB

for selling 100 boxes greeting cards at $1. Stationery or napkins with name on. Send for selling plan & samples on approval. Costs nothing to try MERIT, 370 PLANE ST., DEPT. 13, NEWARK 2, N. J.

FUZZY FACE?

Fuzzy fine hairs on your face can spoil your beauty. Be more attractive, instead of attracting attention; FREE FREE FREE regular 50c smart purse size hair remover sent free on request to introduce the Lechler line of famous hair removers. Send postcard. Lechler Cosmetics Dept., 560 Broadway, N.Y.C. 12

NEW! BIRTHDAY PARTY PACK

Be first! Sell this sensational new assortment. Contains everything but the food. . . . The invitations, table cover, napkins, nut baskets, place cards, snapper hats, cups, plates, game booklet and six different games; a complete party for eight. Write today. ELMCRAFT, 5930 S. Western Ave. Chicago 36, Illinois.

FREE GIFTS TO YOU! WRITE TODAY . . . ENJOY SPECIAL PURCHASING PRIVILEGES AT GREAT SAVINGS
ATTRACTIVE FREE MERCHANDISE PLAN FOR MEMBERS
Join the HOSIERY OF THE MONTH CLUB
Save 1/3 On Your Hosiery
Wear America's loveliest leg beautifying NYLONS as thousands of members are now doing.
SEND NO MONEY. (No Obligation)
HOSIERY COMPANY OF AMERICA
Dept. 3D.G., 790 Broad St., Newark 2, N. J.

FREE PHOTO

DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE
MOVIE STAR
(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)
SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY
With Photo you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES, BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS' HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15c for handling.
HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER
Box 2309, Dept. L-30, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Design Smart Fashions

Fascinating work. Originate your own distinctive clothes. Our basic training provides excellent starting point for career. Learn at home—spare time. Send for FREE booklet today.
NATIONAL SCHOOL OF DRESS DESIGN
1315 So. Michigan Ave., Dept. 2363, Chicago 5, Ill.

...Train At Home For A WELL PAID CAREER

PRACTICAL NURSING

Help fill the urgent need for Trained Practical Nurses. If you are between 18 and 55, it's easy to train at home in your spare time to take your place in this respected calling. Many earn while learning. High school is not needed. Nurse's equipment included. Mail this ad today for FREE Facts.
Wayne School Of Practical Nursing, Inc., 2525 Sheffield Ave., Desk K-49, Chicago 14, Ill.
Please rush FREE FACTS and Sample Lesson Pages.

NAME.....
Full Address.....

in an effort to get to Heaven before they die. Davis' and Pawley's personal sorrow at missing is a relatively minor matter. It is the precedent they are setting that is catastrophic. They are the black rams leading the rest of the flock to destruction.

Elizabeth's much-photographed association with Pawley seemed to be idyllic, but there is evidence that it was shaky from the moment he presented the sparkler.

During Elizabeth's Florida vacation last year, Pawley nearly went out of his mind trying to reconcile himself to sharing her with the public. The announcement that she would leave the screen to set up housekeeping in his mansion was a result. On one occasion, a prominent MGM executive on a holiday in Miami asked her to go to lunch with a group of business men in a nearby town. Because the executive was in a sense her boss, and maybe simply because she wanted to go, Elizabeth agreed. Just as the car was to pull away with Elizabeth and the MGM man, Pawley appeared with the announcement that he had taken the afternoon off and wanted his fiancée to get out of the car and remain his very own for the afternoon.

businesslike remedy . . .

Elizabeth explained that she couldn't, it was sort of a business matter. Pawley begged, then threatened, but to no avail. Liz drove off in the car. It is a matter of legend that all the buses in Miami were late for the rest of the day, and by nightfall the city's transportation facilities were in a hopeless, angry snarl.

Like any good business man, Pawley set out to remedy this situation in a businesslike manner. There were held what might logically be called board meetings, attended by William, Elizabeth, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and the Pawley kin. It was voted and agreed that Elizabeth would announce her intention to marry, her retirement from the movies and her delightful anticipation of about five kids.

This came as quite a shock to MGM, every man in America over 16, and, to be perfectly blunt, to Elizabeth Taylor. Safe in the comfortable elegance of Miami, it probably wasn't hard to make that announcement, but when she got back to Culver City, California, she must have pinched herself to check her reflexes many a night before she went to sleep. She didn't want to quit the movies any more than Mr. Pawley would have wanted to set fire to all of his buses—but the deed had been done. There were only two things to do—act as if love were grand and get out of it neatly and quickly.

Elizabeth did both. At first there were announcements that while Liz and Bill were living a continent apart, she might just go out with other men once in a while—innocently, of course, just for fun.

Then it was announced that Elizabeth wouldn't quit the movies for awhile, maybe a couple of years. Then it was rumored that Mr. Pawley was mad, and had been heard to mutter, "Who the heck is that guy my girl had her picture taken with last night?" Then some forthright columnist suggested that Liz was pretty young to begin a career with pots and pans, even if they were gold. Liz and her family, MGM, and her entire fan following began to nod heads vigorously in agreement. And the first thing you know, Bill Pawley was alone with nothing but his money, his used engagement ring, a heartful of wonderful memories and something in common with Glenn Davis. . . .

In her conversation with your reporter, Elizabeth was quite willing to discuss men, only she called them boys. She stated flatly that she didn't care what they looked like so long as they had a heart of gold. She hinted that she found older men much

52 colors, designs

Your OLD RUGS CLOTHING... Save You up to 1/2

IT'S ALL SO EASY! Free Catalog tells how to ship your materials at our expense to the Olson Factory, where we sterilize, shred, merge materials of all kinds—reclaim the valuable wool, etc., then bleach, card, spin, dye and weave into lovely, new, deep-textured, Reversible, Double Luxury Broadloom Rugs.

OLSON FACTORY TO YOU!

Hundreds of sizes to 16 ft. seamless, any length
Solid Colors 18th Century | Tweed Blends Floral, Leaf | Early American Oriental Designs | Embossed Effects

FREE RUG BOOK in Colors

Satisfaction guaranteed. Over 3 million customers. We do not have agents or sell thru stores. Our 76th Year.
Chicago New York San Francisco
Mail Coupon or 1c postcard

OLSON RUG CO., A-60, Chicago 41
Mail Catalog of Rugs and Model Rooms Free to:

NAME.....
ADDRESS..... ©ORC
TOWN.....STATE.....

"How to Make Money with Simple Cartoons"

A book everyone who likes to draw should have. It is free; no obligation. Simply address FREE BOOK

CARTOONISTS' EXCHANGE
Dept. 433 Pleasant Hill, Ohio

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?
MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now!

HOW TO GIVE QUICK REST
TO TIRED EYES

Put two drops of soothing Murine in each eye. Instantly your tired eyes feel fresh, rested, wide-awake. Refreshing Murine, a scientific blend of seven ingredients, cleanses your eyes quickly, surely—yet as gently as a tear. Keep Murine handy. Use it regularly, whenever your eyes tell you to.

NEED MORE MONEY?

Earn big profits selling famous Bostonian shirts, rainwear, hosiery, underwear and other everyday needs for men, women and children. Spend few hours per day. You get big profits, immediate cash and big selling kit. Thousands now making a good income. No experience needed. Big Spring season ahead. Write Bostonian Mfg. Co., Dept. 372, 89 Bickford Street, Boston 30, Mass.

Write for FREE Selling Kit

WRITERS

Conscientious sales service for your short stories, articles, books and plays. Send today for FREE circular "Your Road To Writing Success."

DANIEL S. MEAD LITERARY AGENCY
Dept. DM15 419 Fourth Ave., N. Y. C.

ITCH CHECKED IN A JIFFY

Sufferers from the torturing itch caused by eczema, pimples, scales, scabies, athlete's foot, "factory" itch, and other itch troubles are praising cooling, liquid D.D.D. Prescription. This time-proved medication—developed by Dr. D. D. Dennis—positively relieves that cruel, burning itch. Greaseless and stainless. Soothes and comforts even the most intense itching in a jiffy. A 35c trial bottle proves its merits or your money back. Ask your druggist today for D.D.D. Prescription.

Learn At Home To TAILOR YOUR OWN CLOTHES!

Be the envy of your friends. Wear smart clothes you tailor yourself! Easy, fun to learn women's custom tailoring at home. Practical course takes you step-by-step. Sewing experience not necessary. Many earn while learning. Chance to get into well-paid tailoring work, or own profitable business. Low fee includes supplies. Mail coupon now!

GET FREE FACTS

METROPOLITAN SCHOOL of TAILORING
35 S. Dearborn, Dept. 1102, Chicago 2, Ill.
Rush FREE Booklet and sample lesson pages.

Name .....
Full Address .....

more exciting, but left the impression that by older men she meant someone pushing 29. She expressed her willingness to slave for the right man, wash his clothes, darn his socks, yes, even lay down her life for him—if he would only come along. She hinted darkly, though, that she believed all men pretty insincere and capable of designs on her gullibility. She—rather happily—expressed the opinion that she expected to have a fair number of the rascals crack her heart, for she was too ready to believe anything a man told her.

But with all this confession, there proved to be a bit of clever deceit in her conversation. The subject of current interests came up.

"Why, do you know," she said, seeming just a little bit stunned by the idea herself, "I can hardly get a date! I sit at home night after night because nobody calls me up and asks me to go out!"

Asked about the possibility of things getting better in this department, Liz used an expression of outraged amazement.

"You would think," she cried angrily, "that in a big city like this there would be just lots and lots of fellows who could take me out. After all, I'm not a perfect goon! But there is just nobody to go out with—and I have to suffer for it."

Lest all America think that Hollywood is shy of manpower, it must be explained that Elizabeth meant eligible men. In Hollywood it seems everything governing the life and behavior of a movie star must be approved by several hundred people. Therefore, if a girl of 17 wants to date, and she is valuable enough to bother about at all, there are only certain types of men she dares be seen with.

In the case of Elizabeth Taylor, he must be no older than 24 or 25; not only unmarried, but never married; of sound moral and physical health; rich or famous; handsome and bold; a non-drinker, and aware of the fact than an industry will descend on him en masse and lop off his pretty head if he so much as suggests a kiss or two in a parked car on a hilltop.

Such creatures are, sadly, quite hard to find. This poses a problem, as it is hard to develop a gorgeous, sexy movie star without a few qualified gentlemen around to pit against one another for the Sunday supplements. It is also pretty rough on a young lady who likes to sigh.

Vic Damone, the young singer, was a recent aspirant to the role of Liz's boy friend. He filled most of the specifications, but it turned out that he wasn't romantically interested in Elizabeth (he should be examined) and she wasn't romantically interested in him. Yet eager reporters wrote the friendship up as the hottest thing since electric blankets. . . .

"All I want out of life," says Elizabeth, "is to be happy, to fall in love with a nice boy. I want to have a home. I would rather die than hurt anybody," she vows.

And she means it. She creeps into a small shell when asked why her engagement to Pawley was dissolved, emerging only long enough to hint broadly that she had had her heart broken by the situation. And she intimates strongly that it wasn't the first time, either. Boys, it seems, have hurt her considerably to date.

But what the boys have done to her is nothing compared to what she will do to the boys. At first it will be unwittingly But after it becomes easier, there seems little doubt that Elizabeth will take full advantage of her beauty and ability and play ringmaster to a generation of willing, performing males. THE END

how roy rogers found faith

(Continued from page 57) from the theaters where laughing youngsters flocked to see his pictures. It took him into hospital wards where little children incapable of harm or evil were doomed never to run in the sunshine, never to see the lilting capers of a puppy or a kitten at play. Why were these children, guilty of no crime, condemned by an arbitrary God to a life of darkness or chains?

Roy's doubts were crystallized when his own little children were made motherless with the birth of his youngest. He, Roy Rogers, who had brought happiness to so many other children, had to stand by helpless when his own children were saddened by a tragedy for which there could be no reason. The Creator became to him a God of Power instead of a God of Compassion. . . .

Left alone with three children, Roy turned to his closest friends for comfort. And Dale was one of those friends. Comrade and confidante, she in time became indispensable to him—and eventually they realized they were deeply in love. . . .

Roy and Dale were married on New Year's Eve at the ranch home of their friend, Bill Likens, in Oklahoma. It was a happy occasion, with her Tommy—now a handsome teen-ager—there to help them celebrate. It had snowed all day and the wedding party had had a gay time building snow men and rollicking outdoors.

But shortly before the ceremony Dale asked Roy to take a brief walk with her in the snow. And there in the starry, frosty night, just before the year's end and the beginning of their life together, Dale explained to Roy her need for Divine help and told him of her hope that he would join her in bringing up the children in a religious home, that he would go to church, would pray for guidance. Roy pledged this would be so. . . .

In the first year of their marriage, Roy and Dale were both occupied with many and diverse interests. Roy's rodeo tour took a great deal of his time and energy. Dale herself was involved with a radio show, and when Republic decided to bring them together again on the screen as an acting team it meant the usual round of script reading, wardrobe fittings, recordings, conferences, and so forth, were added to Dale's responsibilities of managing a household and bringing up children. But Dale conscientiously went to church every Sunday and packed the children off to Sunday School. Sometimes Roy would go with her—more often not. But Dale bided her time patiently.

Meanwhile, Roy unconsciously developed a heightened interest in spiritual matters. He sought friendship among men of faith. One of his warmest personal friends was a Catholic priest. Others of Jewish, Protestant and non-sectarian faiths joined his circle of friends.

But still he was tormented by the visions of little children in the hospitals punished for no sin of their own. . . .

Countless times Roy has made long-distance trips to homes and hospitals where children lay gravely ill, asking for him. Again and again, when the distance was too great, personal letters have gone out from Roy's office urging children to get well soon, so they might come to California as his guests and ride on Trigger—when all the while there was the vision, heavy on Roy's heart, of the child riding a Palomino off into the ghostly reaches of the sky. . . .

Through all of this Roy developed a feeling of deep humility. "Who am I," he asked himself, "that I should be given to size 8 x 10 on double weight paper 89¢

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED and COLORED IN OILS

Same price for full length pictures, busts and groups. 3 for $2.50

Your original photo returned with enlargements. Give color of eyes, hair and clothes. Just mail photo, negative or snapshot regardless of size and enclose 89c per picture. Pictures mailed postpaid within 5 days. Satisfaction guaranteed. Payment must accompany order. Send your photo NOW.

LEIGH'S Art Studio, Dept. 2
130 West 42nd St. New York 18, N. Y.

FAST RELIEF
CORNS, CALLOUSES, BUNIONS!

The instant you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads, painful shoe friction stops, pressure on the sensitive spot is lifted. You'll marvel, too, how quickly these thin, soothing, cushioning, protective pads remove corns or callouses when used with the separate Medications included. Get this instant-acting relief today!

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

TO MAKE ALL THE EXTRA MONEY YOU WANT!

$50 is yours for selling 100 boxes greeting cards at $1. Stationery or napkins with name on. Send for selling plan and samples on approval. Costs nothing to try!
WELCOME, 368 PLANE ST., DEPT. K, NEWARK, N. J.

THERE'S MONEY FOR YOU in PLASTICS
No Experience Necessary!

Here's CASH for you...easy! Show friends, neighbors amazing laundry-saving tablecloths, aprons, draperies, rainwear, babies' needs, etc. Tremendous demand. Sell on sight. BIG PROFITS, full or part time. Write for FREE Outfit.
LORAINE PRODUCTS, Dept. DM-287
844 West Adams Street Chicago 7, Illinois

Learn FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

Floristry, Flower Show Judging, etc. Big demand for arrangers and lecturers. Study at home. Learn to make professional sprays, wreaths, corsages, table arrangements, etc.

Send for Folder "Opportunities in Floristry."
National Landscape Institute
Dept. D-3, 310 S. Robertson Blvd., Los Angeles 48, California

this power? What have I done, what can I do to merit this devotion?"

Roy now had reached the point in his spiritual development that Dale had reached when she married him. He realized that he could no longer carry this load of responsibility without Divine aid. He had seen Dale develop, through her unassuming faith, into a poised, serene, emotionally-matured woman who radiated an intangible quality of goodness that warmed and won not only Roy's children, but everyone who came within her orbit. He knew he needed that serenity. . . .

living religion . . .

And, there in the candlelight of the quiet church, mulling over these thoughts, Roy suddenly and of his own volition made the step which Dale had waited for so hopefully and so patiently.

Religion, with the Rogers, is a living and dynamic thing. Sunday is an occasion looked forward to during the week. Tommy picks up the two older girls and takes them to Sunday school. Roy and Dale follow, leaving Dusty in nursery Sunday school while they attend "Big Church." Afterward they all come home together for a family dinner, discussing with animation all the way home the things they have learned and the impressions they have gained.

But this religious enthusiasm is not limited to Sunday alone. Every day in the week they worship God in large and small ways. Dale has inaugurated the asking of spontaneous blessing each night before dinner. They go by turns around the table, with each member of the family telling in his own words what he has to be thankful for.

"We thank Thee, dear Lord, for skating," Cheryl said one night, expressing appreciation in her own simple way for one of the pleasanter joys of childhood.

Linda Lou puts it even more directly. "Thanks, God," she has said with devout solemnity, "for fun."

Dusty is too young as yet to voice prayers of his own, but he joins Dale in asking the general blessing. "Our Father, we thank Thee," Dale begins—and Dusty chimes in, "for this food."

Every night, when they say their prayers, the Rogers children pray for all children, everywhere. It is as though they were unconsciously seeking to repay the blessings that have been bestowed upon their father.

Roy once gave a group of children at a summer camp his own explanation of why he has been so fortunate in having the affection of so many boys and girls. "I firmly believe," he said, "it's because of what countless children tell me in letters that come to me all the time: 'I say my prayers for you every night.'"

In his moment of deepest humility, Roy turned to their God for guidance.

THE END

(Roy Rogers' and Dale Evans' latest movie is Twilight in the Sierras.)

Would you believe my shining HONEY GOLD hair
IS REALLY DRAB BLONDE?

Many a woman whose lustrous, colorful hair you envy, could tell you her secret is Nestle Colorinse!

Its rich concentrated color glorifies your hair's natural beauty. Gives life and lustre! For its lemon-rinse action removes soap film. Leaves hair silken-soft... easier to manage. Really shampoos out. That's why smart women insist on genuine Colorinse.

TO GLORIFY BLONDE HAIR

BLONDE . . . true shining honey blonde.
LIGHT GOLDEN BLONDE . . . rich, gleaming gold.
PLATINUM . . . glorifies platinum blonde or gray hair.

7 Other Enchanting Shades!

Also try
NESTLE COLORTINT
Same beautiful shades in a triple-strength rinse. Lasts through 3 shampoos!

Nestle* COLORINSE 6 rinses 25¢

ONLY 19¢ EACH
NEW SILK FINISH
ENLARGEMENT
GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement made from your favorite snapshot, photo or negative and mounted in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing for complete information on having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman 19c each for the enlargement and frame plus cost of mailing. Satisfaction guaranteed. Limit two to a customer. Originals returned with your enlargement. Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M245, Hollywood 38, Calif.

I'LL SEND YOU THESE PRODUCTS FREE

I'll help you get extra cash to fill your pocketbook—to live on. Supply my food and household products to regular customers. No experience or capital needed. I'll send FREE f.o.b. factory, flashy assortments of products to test and show. Start near home, full or spare time. Gift premiums, big monthly bargains. Rush name today for free outfit. HURRY!

BLAIR Dept. 360-FC LYNCHBURG, VA.

MONEY FOR YOU—SELL GREETING CARDS—UP TO 100% PROFIT
FREE SAMPLES 50 FOR $1
NAME PRINTED NAPKINS, TOWELS STATIONERY AND COASTERS

Big profits showing giant line Everyday All-Occasion Cards. Easter, Plastic Cards. Special items. Complete variety napkins, towels, coasters, stationery with name 50 for $1 up. No money needed to start. Fund raising plan for churches, clubs. Special Offers. Write for samples.

EMPIRE CARD CO. 210 FOX ST. ELMIRA, N. Y.

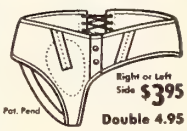
MAKE MONEY SELL DRESSES FROM NEW YORK

Specially Priced $5.95 to $19.95
5th Ave., N. Y. firm desires women to sell Dresses, Suits, Lingerie. As seen in "Vogue", "Mademoiselle". Featuring the New York Look. Good commissions. Write for sample Book.
MODERN MANNER, 260 Fifth Ave., Dept. D-3, New York

CORNS

Removed by Mosco, also Calluses. Quick, easy, economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢, 50¢. At your druggist. Money refunded if not satisfied. Moss Co., Rochester, N. Y.

MOSCO ★CORN★ REMOVER



TOMBSTONES
DIRECT TO YOU $9.95 up EASY Terms

Genuine Beautiful Rockdale Monuments, Markers. Satisfaction or MONEY BACK. Freight paid. Write for our FREE Catalog and compare prices.
ROCKDALE MONUMENT CO.
Dept. 810 JOLIET, ILLINOIS

RUPTURE-EASER
FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

A strong, form fitting, washable support. Back lacing adjustable. Snaps up in front. Adjustable leg strap. Soft, flat groin pad. No steel or leather bands. Unexcelled for comfort. Also used as after-operation support. Give measure around the lowest part of the abdomen. Specify right or left side or double.

Right or Left Side $3.95
Double 4.95

We pay postage except on COD's. PIPER BRACE CO.
308 East 12th Dept. DG-35 Kansas City 6, Mo.

LEARN AT HOME
TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE

You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates.
HIGH SCHOOL NOT REQUIRED
51st yr. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included.
Men, women, 18 to 60. Easy tuition payments. Trial plan.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 233, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

movie reviews

(Continued from page 21) Colonel Gary Merrill's fault. "Over-identification with his men," he terms it, to his superior officer General Millard Mitchell. "He babies them." Mitchell agrees when Merrill covers for an error made by one of his navigators (the navigator is trying to live down the fact that his parents were German-American Bund members, and Merrill can't stand to see him blamed). Merrill is relieved of his command, and Peck takes over. Peck's soft-hearted too, but he won't let anybody know about it. Goes around breaking soldiers right and left. Makes the most glaring misfits in the group fly a ship called "The Leper Colony." The men hate Peck's iron discipline. They've lost the leader they loved; the navigator, thinking Merrill's removal was his fault, has shot himself. The whole outfit applies for transfer out of Peck's command. Dean Jagger, a "re-tread" from the last war, in charge of paper work, understands what Greg's trying to do, and he holds up the transfers long enough to give Greg the time he needs. Pretty soon the men are whipped into such good shape their losses fall off, they begin to be proud of their record; in their first bombing mission over German soil, all but two ships return. So what happens? Peck begins to follow the pattern set by Merrill. Over-identification with his men. He breaks under the tension of his responsibilities, feels he's a failure. But Merrill sets him straight. "You made those kids grow up," he says, "that's more than I did. Your work is done." Big cast, in a very long, and pretty engrossing war picture.

THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

Cast: Danny Kaye, Walter Slezak, Barbara Bates, Elsa Lanchester.
Warners

Danny Kaye, illiterate gypsy, arrives in the town of Brodney at a crucial moment. The Inspector General's rumored to be in the neighborhood. (The Inspector General is Napoleon's man; he has the power to depose grafting public servants, and Brodney's public servants are corruption plus.) Since the Inspector General occasionally shows up in disguise, everybody thinks Danny's It, and Danny's taken to the Mayor's house and given a banquet. Danny's gypsy boss, Yakov (Walter Slezak) sees which way the wind's blowing, and decides to stick around. All the town officials will give bribe money to Danny; Yakov plans to steal the cash and vanish. But Danny wants to help the poor citizens of Brodney, so Yakov anticipates trouble. The mayor's maid (Barbara Bates) fixes things for him by giving Danny a note. The note says "Don't go near the barn tonight. They (the town officials) are planning to murder you." Danny can't read. He gives the note to Yakov. "Lucky fellow," Yakov says cheerfully. "She wants you to meet her in the barn, at midnight." And there you are. Will our Danny lose his head? (The officials have hired an axe-murderer.) Or will his stout heart see him through? The best part of this picture is Danny's singing, or what passes for singing. Whatever you call it, it's hilarious. Get that comic genius up there with a violin or two behind him, and you can forget the plot, the other actors, and what time it is. His wife is still writing his lyrics, and she hasn't lost her touch, either.

The Inspector General: It's all a hilarious case of mistaken identity as Danny Kaye is entertained royally by Elsa Lanchester and other townspeople who think he's a visiting dignitary.

FREE! CAKE DECORATOR, FOUR JELLO MOLDS AND RECIPES Amazing new cake decorator makes flowers, loops, names, leaves just like professionals. Directions and recipes for icings and whips included. ALSO FREE —7 delicious cake recipes. We make these amazing free offers to introduce our aluminum heart-shaped cake pans. Size 9x1¼ inches. Bake a sweetheart layer cake for birthday, anniversary or special occasions. Set of 2 pans only $1.00, plus 15c postage; or you may order C.O.D. SPECIAL OFFER! 4 pans for only $1.69 (double order includes free cake decorator and four individual jello molds) plus C.O.D. postage and handling. SEND NO MONEY! Just mail card today. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. Keep Free Gifts regardless. Don't delay. Act Now! ROYAL INDUSTRIES, Dept. 5038-C. Mt. Vernon, Ill.

Lovely NAILS in a FLASH... with

NU-NAILS

ARTIFICIAL FINGERNAILS and QUICK-DRYING GLUE

Cover short, broken, thin nails with NU-NAILS. Applied in a jiffy with our amazing new quick-drying glue. Can be worn any length . . . polished any shade. Help overcome nail-biting habit. Set of ten . . . only 25c. At all dime stores.

ONLY 25¢ SET OF TEN

NU-NAILS CO., Dept. 15-C 5251 W. Harrison, Chicago44

AMAZING OFFER—$40 IS YOURS FOR SELLING ONLY 50 BOXES Also entirely different, new Deluxe All-Occasion assortment with feature television card. Floral scented stationery, Little Pearls, Hankie Gift Greetings, other surprise items. Samples on approval. Write today. It costs nothing to try. CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-27, White Plains, N. Y.

FREE SAMPLES IMPRINTED STATIONERY

BORROW BY MAIL

Quick! $50 to $300

IN THE PRIVACY OF YOUR HOME

Employed men and women. WHEREVER you live, BORROW $50 to $300 BY MAIL. No signers . . . strictly confidential! QUICK . . . EASY . . . PRIVATE! Send us your name and address and occupation . . . application blank will be sent you immediately in a plain envelope. Repay in convenient monthly payments. WRITE TODAY! Absolutely no obligation.

Postal FINANCE COMPANY POSTAL FINANCE CO. Dept. 32A, SIOUX CITY, IOWA

SANDS OF IWO JIMA

Cast: John Wayne, John Agar, Adele Mara, Forrest Tucker.

Republic

Veteran Marine Sergeant John Wayne trains a group of fighters in a camp in New Zealand, but he trains 'em so zealously they all hate his guts. He's a really hard man. Trainee who hates Wayne most is PFC John Agar. Wayne was a great admirer of Agar's late father, a colonel (killed at Guadalcanal) who made Agar's life miserable. (Thought the boy was soft, and never quit beefing about it.) Agar gets a leave, marries Adele Mara, and honeymoons before he and the rest of his squad are shipped to Tarawa. On Tarawa, Wayne's only friend is wounded, but Wayne won't let Agar go fetch him. Wayne wants to take the island, and he can't worry about individual soldiers. After Tarawa's won, the men get a leave in Hawaii, and you discover, through Wayne's encounter with a woman, why he's so inhuman. His own wife left him years before, refused to let him see his son. Now the squad's off to Iwo Jima. On Iwo Jima, Agar becomes the fighter his father always hoped he'd be; he and two other men are chiefly responsible for routing the Japs. The flag-raising on Mt. Suribachi immortalizes the capture of Iwo Jima, Wayne is wounded and dies, and Agar decides he's going to name his son after his father, whom he forgives for being an old Tartar. If you haven't had too many war pictures—well, this one's full of action, and Wayne's always rewarding to watch

PHOTO CREDITS

Below are page by page credits for photographs appearing in this issue.

6 T. Lt., Phil Ellison, Cen. and Bot. Lt., Bert Parry, T. Rt., Bob Beerman, Bot. Rt., Wide World—7 Wide World—8 Jay Seymour—10 Wide World—12 M.G.M.—22 M. S. Staff—24 Wide World — 27 Bob Beerman — 28 Virgil Apger of M.G.M.—29 Wide World—30 Wide World—31 Ken Cheney—32 Goldwyn—33 Bert Parry—34, 35 Bob Beerman—36 Eric Carpenter of M.G.M.—37 M. S. Staff—38-40 Bob Beerman—41 Bert Parry—42, 43 Bob Beerman—45 M.G.M.—46, 47 all courtesy Francis Taylor, except 47 T. Rt., Bob Beerman—48 T. Lt. and Bot. Rt., M.G.M., T. Rt., M. S. Staff, Cen. Lt. and Cen. Rt., Walt Davis, Bot. Lt., Gus Gale—49 M.G.M.—50 T. Lt., T. Rt. and Cen. Rt., Gus Gale, Cen. Lt. and Bot. Rt., Bert Parry, Bot. Lt., M.G.M.—51 T. Lt., Don Ornitz, Cen. Lt., M. S. Staff, Bot. Lt., M.G.M., Rt. Bob Beerman—52 T., Gus Gale, Cen., M. S. Staff, Bot., Bob Beerman—53 T. Lt., Cen. Rt., and Bot. Rt., Bob Beerman, Cen. Lt., M. S. Staff, Bot. Lt., Wide World, T. Rt., Gus Gale—54 T., Paramount, Bot., M.G.M.—55 Bob Beerman—56, 57 Bert Parry.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

BLUE WALTZ

for the glamorous lips he loves, use

LYPTONE

new long length

LIPSTICK

amazing new low price 25¢

So easy now to have luscious, glamorous lips! Shape them the Hollywood way with Blue Waltz Lyptone in its new long length case. Never smears or blurs; stays color-bright longer because it's "stayonized"!

BLUE WALTZ

the perfume after a man's heart!

10c and 25c sizes

at all cosmetic counters

LOVELY! LASTING! UNFORGETTABLE!

Would you believe my

gleaming BROWN hair

IS REALLY STREAKED WITH GRAY?

Nothing adds years to your looks like dull, faded, or gray-streaked hair. So learn the secret of women who look young thanks to Nestle Colorinse!

Its rich, concentrated color gives hair radiant beauty and lustre. For its lemon-rinse action removes soap film. Leaves hair silken-soft. Get genuine Colorinse. To blend in gray, use shade darker than your hair.

TO GLORIFY BRUNETTE HAIR

CHESTNUT BROWN . . . rich lustrous brown.
DARK BROWN . . . gorgeous, gleaming, dark brown.
BLACK . . . deep satiny black.

7 Other Enchanting Shades!

Also try

NESTLE COLORTINT

Same beautiful shades in a triple-strength rinse. Lasts through 3 shampoos!

Nestle COLORINSE 6 rinses 25¢

THIS OFFER TO NEW DOLLAR BOOK CLUB MEMBERS IS SO UNUSUAL IT MAY NEVER BE REPEATED! JOIN NOW AND GET

ALL 3 FOR $1

TOTAL VALUE IN PUBLISHERS EDITIONS $8.50

3 TOP FICTION HITS—FULL SIZE, HANDSOMELY BOUND BOOKS!

Send No Money Now... Nothing to Postman... Pay Later!

WHAT A Bargain! This big TRIPLE-THRILL package of book entertainment—for only $1.00! Three new hits by America's favorite authors. Their combined retail value in the publishers' original editions is $8.50—yet we'll send you all three for only $1.00 if you join the Dollar Book Club now. Get this big generous sample of the fascinating reading and huge savings that nearly a million families now enjoy through this club! Send no money—just mail coupon below to accept this offer!

The Story of Henry VIII's Liveliest Wife!

BRIEF GAUDY HOUR

by Margaret Campbell Barnes

ANNE BOLEYN was one of the most fascinating women who ever lived. Here is the story of the passionate girl who became Henry VIII's wife and discovered the extremes of ecstasy and sorrow. Rich with the grandeur and color of Tudor England. "Thoroughly delightful". — New York Times.

Love Her If You Dare— but Beware Her Deadly Sting!

THE QUEEN BEE

by Edna Lee

FLATTER her, be a slave to her beauty and wanton charm, and she'll adore you. But cross her, and you'll take the consequences! Ask her husband, her sister-in-law, her young niece who dared to challenge her for possession of a man! Here's stormy romance and suspense!

Meet The Most Surprised Bride in All England—and

LORD JOHNNIE

by Leslie T. White

THE ravishing Lady Leanna wed Lord Johnnie the Rogue on his way to the gallows, and planned to forget him; but slippery Johnnie came back . . . to claim his wedding night! A tale of strange love and swashbuckling adventure on land and sea!

Mail This Coupon

Doubleday One Dollar Book Club, Dept. 3DMG
Garden City, New York

Please enroll me as a Dollar Book Club member and send me at once my triple package of books, Brief Gaudy Hour, The Queen Bee, and Lord Johnnie —And bill me $1.00 FOR ALL 3, plus a few cents shipping cost.

With these books will come my first issue of the free descriptive folder called "The Bulletin," telling me about the two new forthcoming one-dollar bargain book selections and other bargains offered at $1.00* each to members only.

I have the privilege of notifying you in advance if I do not wish either of the following months' selections and whether or not I wish to purchase any of the other bargains at the Special Club price of $1.00 each. The purchase of books is entirely voluntary on my part. I do not have to accept a book every month—only six during each year I remain a member. I pay nothing except $1.00 for each selection received plus a few cents shipping cost.

Mr. / Mrs. / Miss .....
Please Print

Address .....

City & Zone ..... State .....

If under 21,

The Only Club That Brings You Best-Sellers for Just $1

YES, the very same titles sold in the publishers' retail editions for $2.75 to $3.00 come to Dollar Book Club members for only $1.00 each—an incredibly big saving of almost two-thirds!

Such savings are possible because of the great economies effected in printing huge editions for so large a membership.

Take as Few as Six Books a Year!

Membership in the Dollar Book Club requires no dues of any kind. You do not even have to take a book every month; the purchase of as few as six books a year fulfills your membership requirement. You are not only assured of enjoyable reading, but can build an enviable library of modern American fiction, in handsome, permanent editions, at astoundingly small cost!

Start Enjoying Membership Now

Upon receipt of the attached coupon you will be sent your introductory TRIPLE package of books: Brief Gaudy Hour, The Queen Bee, and Lord Johnnie, and you will be billed a total of only $1.00 plus a few cents shipping cost, for ALL THREE. Thereafter you will receive regularly the Club's Bulletin, which describes the forthcoming Club selections. It also reviews many other popular books which you may purchase at the Club price of only $1.00 each. You take only the books you want—and you agree to buy only six selections a year.

Send No Money—Just the Coupon

When you see your TRIPLE book package—and realize these three books are typical of the values you will continue to receive from the Club for only $1.00 each, you will be delighted to have become a member! Mail coupon now. Doubleday One Dollar Book Club, Garden City, New York.

It's still the thing to do...

This New Year's Vermont bride may glide through the starlit night in a bell-jingling sleigh just as 1847's did! Today's may wear ski clothes instead of velvet and furs, but this gay holiday tradition never changes. And there's another fine tradition cherished by both these brides, too...

It's still the thing to own...

Beautiful 1847 Rogers Bros. is the silverplate more brides have cherished than any other kind...for over 100 years!

Today as yesterday—in these magnificent patterns they find an extra height and depth of ornament, a perfection of balance and finish usually found only in solid silver.

52-piece service for eight, $64.75 with chest. No Federal tax. Same price as in 1945!

1847 ROGERS BROS.

America's Finest Silverplate

"If you want a Milder cigarette that Satisfies it's Chesterfield"
Gregory Peck
Starring in Darryl F. Zanuck's Production
"TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH"
A 20th Century-Fox Picture
...and JASPER T. CARTER,
PROMINENT TOBACCO FARMER says –
"Chesterfield pays the top price to get the very best mild, ripe tobacco. Chesterfield has been my cigarette for over 35 years."
Jasper T. Carter
BLANCH, N. C.
Chesterfield
CIGARETTES
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.
CHESTERFIELD
Always Buy CHESTERFIELD
the Best cigarette for YOU to smoke
Copyright 1950, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

VA GARDNER'S STARTLING ROMANCES!

nodern screen

MAR 15 1950

RIL
5c

A DELL MAGAZINE
DELL

jeanne crain

ringing up Susan—by SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Your First Cake of Camay means a lovelier you!

A lovely complexion helps dreams come true! And you can have a smoother, softer skin with your very first cake of Camay. Just change to regular care—and use Camay. Let no lesser soap touch your skin—and you'll soon be lovelier!

Where in the world will you find a finer beauty soap than Camay? Camay is mildness itself. It caresses your cheek with its gentle, creamy lather and brings you that "beautifully cared-for" look. And no other soap has ever quite captured Camay's flattering fragrance. A finer soap than Camay does not exist. No wonder Camay is called "The Soap of Beautiful Women."

HERE'S THE LOVE STORY OF THIS LOVELY CAMAY BRIDE!

Something sparked in their hearts when Bill and Shirley first met. But he was in the Royal Canadian Air Force and romance had to wait. They announced their engagement later—when classmates at the University of Toronto.

The Twists' honeymoon included a carriage ride to the top of famous Mt. Royal. They had a clear and cloudless day—but Shirley's complexion's even clearer. Camay's rich, luxurious lather can do wonderful things for your skin, too!

MRS. WILLIAM W. TWIST
—nee Shirley Margaret Huycke—lovely Camay Bride of Toronto, Canada bridal portrait by Sarony

Camay

The Soap of Beautiful Women

Wonderful Deodorant News for You!

New finer Mum more effective longer!

NOW CONTAINS AMAZING NEW INGREDIENT M-3—THAT PROTECTS AGAINST ODOR-CAUSING BACTERIA

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

New Protection! Let the magic of new Mum protect you—better, longer. For today's Mum, with wonder-working M-3, safely protects against bacteria that cause underarm perspiration odor. Mum never merely "masks" odor—simply doesn't give it a chance to start.

New Creaminess! Mum is softer, creamier than ever. As gentle as a beauty cream. Smooths on easily, doesn't cake. And Mum is non-irritating to skin because it contains no harsh ingredients. Will not rot or discolor finest fabrics.

New Fragrance! Even Mum's new perfume is special—a delicate flower fragrance created for Mum alone. This delightful cream deodorant contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Economical—no shrinkage, no waste.

Mum's protection grows and GROWS! Thanks to its new ingredient, M-3, Mum not only stops growth of odor-causing bacteria instantly—but keeps down future growth. You actually build up protection with regular, exclusive use of new Mum! Now at your cosmetic counter!

New MUM cream deodorant

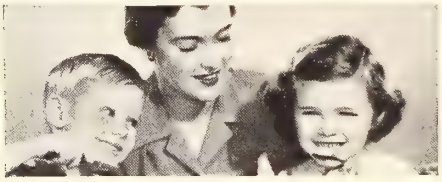
A PRODUCT OF BRISTOL MYERS

NOW! PROOF THAT BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH



COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

Exhaustive Research by Eminent Dental Authorities Proves How Using Colgate Dental Cream Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

Now, the toothpaste you use to clean your breath while you clean your teeth, offers a proved way to help stop tooth decay before it starts! 2 years' continuous research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories—makes this the most conclusive proof in all dentifrice research on tooth decay!

Colgate's contains all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation to tissues and gums! And no change in flavor, foam, or cleansing action!

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of Such Results!

Modern research shows tooth decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed helps remove acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam reaches crevices between teeth where food particles often lodge. No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth with Colgate Dental Cream as directed is a safe, proved way to help stop tooth decay!

ALWAYS USE COLGATE'S TO CLEAN YOUR BREATH WHILE YOU CLEAN YOUR TEETH – AND HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY!

COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Economy Size 59¢ ALSO 43¢ AND 25¢ SIZES

APRIL, 1950

modern screen

stories

WHEN A PRINCESS IS BORN (Rita Hayworth) ..... by Israel Shenker 20
AVA GARDNER'S STARTLING ROMANCES! ..... by Beatrice Blanchard 24
BRINGING UP SUSAN ..... by Shirley Temple 28
BUSIEST GIRL IN TOWN (Esther Williams) ..... by Jane Norris 30
THEY CAN'T STOP SCOTT (Scott Brady) ..... by Tom Carlile 32
SHE KNEW WHAT SHE WANTED (Olivia de Havilland) ..... by Hedda Hopper 34
BLUEBIRD ON THEIR WINDOWSILL (John Derek) ..... by Duane Valentry 36
THE COURAGE OF JUNE HAVER ..... by Cynthia Miller 39
FRESH PAINT (Colleen Townsend, Bob Arthur, others) ..... by Reba and Bonnie Churchill 40
THEY DON'T BELONG (Guy Madison-Gail Russell) ..... by Laddie Marchak 43
IT MUST BE LOVE (Gene Kelly) ..... by Marva Paterson 44
HOW DORIS DAY WON HER SON ..... by Jack Wade 46
WHY STARS CAN'T TAKE CRITICISM (Judy Garland, Lana Turner, Robert Mitchum, others) ..... by Arthur L. Charles 48
ROMAN CANDLE (Ruth Roman) ..... by Mary Hawthorne 50
AND SO TO WED (Betsy Drake-Cary Grant) ..... by Edward Hollister 61
STATE OF THE UNION (Jeanne Crain) ..... by Louis Pollack 62

features

LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
EDITORIAL: Three Little Words (Betty Grable-Harry James) 27
MODERN SCREEN'S HOLLYWOOD PICTORIAL 52

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 4
NEW FACES 22
MUSIC: Sweet and Hot ..... by Leonard Feather 60
FASHION 67

ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of Jeanne Crain by Nickolas Muray
Other picture credits, page 18

WILLIAM B. HARTLEY, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
GLORIA LAMPERT, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
BEVERLY OTT, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
DIANA BARNARD, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 5, April, 1950. Copyright, 1950, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr. President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious—if the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778

"NANCY GOES TO RIO"

. . . and you'll go wild over lovely, lyrical Jane Powell in her most joyous role . . . more escapades than in "Three Daring Daughters" . . . more laughs than in "Luxury Liner" . . . more kisses than in "A Date With Judy"!

M·G·M's
Musical Spree
in Tropical Color By TECHNICOLOR

9 TOP TUNES including:
"Ca-Room' Pa Pa"
"Love Is Like This"
"Time And Time Again"
"Yipsee-I-O"
AVAILABLE ON M-G-M RECORDS

STARRING
JANE POWELL · ANN SOTHERN
BARRY SULLIVAN · CARMEN MIRANDA
LOUIS CALHERN · SCOTTY BECKETT
A ROBERT Z. LEONARD PRODUCTION

Screen Play by SIDNEY SHELDON
Based on a Story by JANE HALL, FREDERICK KOHNER and RALPH BLOCK
Directed by
ROBERT Z. LEONARD
Produced by JOE PASTERNAK
A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

ONLY NEW ODO-RO-NO CREAM GIVES YOU ALL THESE ADVANTAGES!

1 Stops perspiration quickly and safely.

2 Banishes odor instantly.

3 The only cream deodorant that guarantees full protection for 24 hours.

4 Never irritates normal skin—use it daily. Can be used immediately after shaving.

5 Absolutely harmless to all fabrics.

6 New, exclusive formula. Never dries up, never gets gritty or hardens in the jar as ordinary deodorants often do.

7 Double your money back if you aren't satisfied that this wonderful new Odo-Ro-No Cream is the safest, most effective, most delightful deodorant you've ever used. Just return unused portion to Northam Warren, New York.

Don't trust your charm to outdated, ineffective deodorants. Rely on the new Odo-Ro-No Cream, made by the leader in the deodorant field for more than 30 years.

new

ODO·RO·NO

CREAM

The deodorant without a doubt

GUARANTEED FULL 24-HOUR PROTECTION!

More cream for your money. New 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, plus tax.

In 20th Century-Fox's fine comedy, When Willie Comes Marching Home, Dan Dailey, flanked by dad William Demarest and girl Colleen Townsend, is hailed as a conquering hero.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

WHEN WILLIE COMES MARCHING HOME

■ After Pearl Harbor, Bill Kluggs (Dan Dailey) is the first young man in his home town to enlist in the Army. The town is thrilled. He's their hero. They give him a gold identification bracelet for when he's lying on his stomach Somewhere in France. But Bill turns out to be such an excellent aerial gunnery instructor, he's stationed right outside his home town at a new field, and none of the officers in charge will let him be shipped overseas. He begs, they sneer. Gradually, everybody in town starts looking away when he walks down the street. His own father (William Demarest) begins to study him coldly. "Why should you come home every weekend, when other people's boys are fighting the war?" he says nastily. Dan's engaged to the girl next door (Colleen Townsend) but his frequent presence is embarrassing to her, too. Even the town dogs snap at his heels when he walks down the street. Every little breeze seems to whisper, "Goldbrick." Bill finally gets his orders, but nobody listens to him, he's said goodbye so many times. Over France, he has to bail out of a gasless plane, is captured by the French Underground, gets pictures of a German robot rocket, messes with Nazis, is picked up by a British boat and ferried across the Channel, is rushed to London, where officers study the rocket pictures and fly Bill to Washington to tell his amazing story. Since this all happens in four days, and since it's a top secret and Bill can't breathe a word of it, when he shows up in his home town, exhausted and bedraggled, everybody thinks he's a deserter. He's beginning to believe it's better to be a Jap spy than an American hero, when the government comes across with a commendation. Twentieth Century-Fox has turned out a very funny and unforgettable comedy in this. If you didn't know John Ford directed it, you'd swear Preston Sturges had. Corinne Calvet plays a French Underground leader (she doesn't look intellectual, but I guess she's the girl the French would most like to be underground with) and Evelyn Varden is marvelous as Bill's confused mother. (Reviews continued on page 109)

CLIFTON
WEBB

THAT BELVEDERE MAN IS THE NEW FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY!

JEANNE CRAIN · MYRNA LOY

"In this, my greatest performance, I was not entirely alone!" -Belvedere

CHEAPER BY THE DOZEN

TECHNICOLOR

Reading from laugh to riot, it's the fabulous and numerous Gilbreth family—with that Belvedere man at the controls (all the time)! Their exploits in the best-beloved Book-of-the-Month proved that all that's best in life is much more wonderful—and cheaper by the dozen!

with
Betty Lynn · Edgar Buchanan · Barbara Bates · Mildred Natwick · Sara Allgood

Directed by WALTER LANG · Produced by LAMAR TROTTI

Screen Play by Lamar Trotti · Based on the Novel by Frank B. Gilbreth, Jr. and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey

20th CENTURY-FOX

BURT LANCASTER DEFIES DEATH while stunting spectacularly on the set of Warners' The Hawk and the Arrow. These remarkable shots show the former circus acrobat in the course of swinging along six parallel bars, set eight feet apart, on a castle wall 40 feet in the air. Burt performed the perilous trip five times so the cameras could catch him from all angles. Warners, no fools, insured him for $750,000.

John Agar bats the breeze with cowboy star Rex Allen outside the Carthay Circle theater at the Hollywood première of Sands of Iwo Jima—in which Agar ducks as many bullets as any cowboy ever did.

Janet Leigh and Arthur Loew, Jr., an inevitable twosome at premières, were no exception at the Iwo Jima opening—which, like all self-respecting premières of war films, boasted a military guard.

LOUELLA PARSONS' Good news

■ My "big" story this month is not another Hollywood broken marriage, another Hollywood love story, or news of an impending blessed event.

In many ways, it is one of the most unusual I have ever reported—I mean, Colleen Townsend's decision to give up her glamorous movie career to enter a Presbyterian theological seminary, in September, to prepare herself for a life devoted to religion.

The beautiful 20-year-old girl, who is Dan Dailey's leading lady in When Willie Comes Marching Home and one of the particularly bright starlets on the 20th Century-Fox lot, is giving up all the fame and attention of Hollywood stardom, plus a salary of $1,000 weekly, to become a teacher or a missionary in her church.

I have known of older, less promising actresses giving up their careers for charitable or religious work from time to time, but never a girl on the verge of a really brilliant career as Colleen is—or was.

When I broke the story of Colleen's amazing decision, it was front page news. Later on, I interviewed her for a longer and more detailed story.

"My decision is no reflection on motion pictures, Miss Parsons," this beautiful youngster said. "I like being an actress and I like the people in the studios. But my church and religious work mean much more to me. It is wonderful to entertain in this sad old world, but it is so much more wonderful to really help.

"I plan to dedicate my life to God, because I feel I have been called. Two years ago, I first felt I had the call to serve God. I am no different from any other girl—I mean, I am not a religious fanatic. But religion is my life.

"It isn't as though I were leaving those dependent on me without the financial help my studio contract gave me. My mother is now happily married to a wonderful man who is more than able to take care of her.

"I am not in love with anyone—although, of course, religious work in my faith does not rule out marriage."

I reminded her that she had just said she felt she had made her decision to devote herself to religious work as far back as two years ago. I asked her what she meant.

"I suppose I first had the idea after I enrolled in a baby care training course," she said. "This brought me in contact with the California Orphanage in Los Angeles. I began to love the care and training of these poor little things with no father and mother more than anything else in life. When I was away from them, I felt I was wasting my time.

Robert Taylor intently checks something or other highly technical on his plane as he prepares to take off on a recent 6,000-mile round trip from Hollywood to New York. Bob does his own expert piloting.

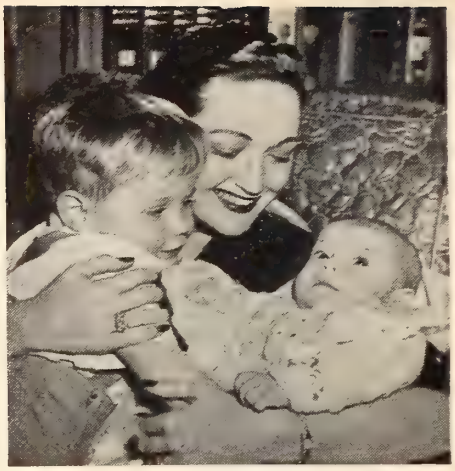
Bing Crosby, in a moment spared from making Mr. Music, drops in on another Paramount set to pass the time of day with Elizabeth Taylor while she waits to engage in a final scene for A Place in the Sun.

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

Not a soap, not a cream— Halo cannot leave dulling, dirt-catching soap film!

Gives fragrant "soft-water" lather —needs no special rinse!

Removes embarrassing dandruff from both hair and scalp!



Halo leaves hair soft, manageable— shining with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or oily cream shampoos leaves dulling, dirt-catching film. Halo, made with a new patented ingredient, contains no soap, no sticky oils. Thus Halo glorifies your hair the very first time you use it. Ask for Halo—America's favorite shampoo—at any drug or cosmetic counter!

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Dorothy Lamour smiles broadly at her three-month-old son, Richard Thompson Howard, at third birthday party of brother Ridge (left).

"I want to say something else, too, Miss Parsons. I do not look on myself as an 'example'—but I do hope that it will mean that other young people may be influenced to take up a similar life.

"Many young people stay away from church because there are not enough young leaders. I have often talked about this with Virginia Mayo and Dennis Morgan, who are also members of my church. They feel the same way I do—and they, too, are working hard to make church work and activities interesting and gay, not just a 'Sunday duty' to other young people."

And some people dare to say that Hollywood does not have its good and unselfish side!

* * *

Clark Gable and his Sylvia are living at his Encino ranch very quietly and accepting very few social bids—which is rough on socially-ambitious hostesses.

They have attended just two parties that I know of—one at the home of the Louis B. Mayers and another at the Dore Scharys'.

I think it is pretty cute, however, that Clark has introduced Sylvia to all his old cronies—the gateman at MGM, for instance, and some of his pets in the MGM publicity department.

Sylvia says she is just getting herself used to the ranch house because she spent exactly one day there before they left on their Honolulu honeymoon. "I think you should know a place, really get the feel of it, before starting to redecorate," she told me.

She can't imagine where in the world some reporters got it into their heads that her nickname is "Silky." "I have never been called 'Silky' in my life," she says. "And certainly Clark does not call me that."

If you ask me—he calls her nothing but "darling" and, when referring to Sylvia, "my sweetheart."

* * *

Speaking of brides, wild horses couldn't make Betsy Drake have anything to do with redecorating Cary Grant's house.

"It's his house," says she. "He owned it and liked it before I came along. Any changes are up to him!"

She was asked—but how about the bedroom? Didn't she want to make that more feminine?

"Oh, we don't share the same room," said the new Mrs. Cary Grant. "Cary agrees with me that adults should have separate rooms."

* * *

JANE WYMAN

MARLENE DIETRICH

MICHAEL WILDING

RICHARD TODD

THE STAGE IS SET FOR WARNER BROS.' MOST EXCITING HIT YET...

ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S

Stage Fright

WITH ALISTAIR SIM • DAME SYBIL THORNDIKE

SCREEN PLAY BY WHITFIELD COOK
ADAPTATION BY ALMA REVILLE
ADDITIONAL DIALOGUE BY JAMES BRIDIE
BASED ON A NOVEL BY SELWYN JEPSON

ATTENTION, ALL MOVIEGOERS! Now is the time to kill that 20% U.S. Movie Tax! Wire or write your congressman!

Lucille and Lois Barnes of Los Angeles. The Toni Twin says. "Toni always gives me a wave that's soft and natural-looking." Can you tell which is the Toni Twin? See answer below.

Hair styles in this picture by Don Rito, famous Hollywood hair stylist.

Toni looks as lovely as a $20 permanent —feels as soft as naturally curly hair*

Now—any day, any time—for only one dollar you can get a wave that's caressably soft—like naturally curly hair . . . and guaranteed to look just as lovely, last just as long as a beauty shop permanent costing $20. (*Including shampoo and set.)

What's Toni's secret? It's the lotion. Toni waving lotion is an exclusive creme formula developed through years of research. This gentle-action formula was especially created to give you a wave that's free of harsh frizziness from the very first day—a wave that feels and behaves like naturally curly hair. But remember, only with Toni Home Permanent do you get this superb waving lotion.

Wonderful results—again and again! What better proof of Toni quality? Toni is the only permanent that has given over 67 million lovely, long-lasting waves. Some women have used Toni ten times or more and say their waves are always soft, natural-looking, easy to manage. Letters of praise come from women with every type of hair—even gray, bleached and baby-fine hair. So whether you are buying your first Toni or your tenth, you can be sure of getting a wave that looks as lovely as a $20 permanent—feels as soft as naturally curly hair. Lois, the twin on the right, has the Toni.

For complete hair care get Toni Creme Shampoo and Toni Creme Rinse, too.

"I'm not a twin, but I am a Toni fan" says Carol Maurer, student at Northwestern University. "Toni is the only permanent that seems just right for my baby-fine hair . . . never leaves it frizzy, but always soft and natural-looking."

TONI SPIN CURLERS
twice as easy - twice as fast

All plastic. No rubber bands. They grip the hair . . . spin up the curls . . . and lock with a flick of the finger.

Available in combination with Toni Refill . . . only $2.29

Jane Russell crowns Douglas S. Burns, 20, of Boston, "Dub of the Year" at a Boston party held by six young men to satirize debutantes.

Personal Opinions: Zachary Scott misses his daughter, Waverley, living in the East with her mother since the rift, so much it's sad. But he is going to take the 13-year-old on a fishing trip and perhaps to Europe . . . Douglas Dick should watch that he gets his hair cut often enough. Even when he doesn't need it for a movie, he's a little "long" over the collar. . . . Nominations for the two whackiest names for babies extant: Yasmin Khan and Tertius Wilcoxon (selected by the Henry Wilcoxons for their third child whether it is a boy or a girl!). . . . How silly are the technicalities which kept "Baby, It's Cold Outside" from being nominated for the best song of 1949 in the Academy voting!

* * *

After a 10-day separation, Gail Russell and Guy Madison reconciled—as everyone expected they should. But I guess those two will always be "explosive."

They live and love under such a high state of emotionalism that, as one of their pals said, "Everything is a production with them. They can't send out the laundry or do the marketing without making it a major event. Trouble is—they're both too tense about everything!"

That must be true because when they separated, Gail went to a sanitarium to recuperate. Guy went to live with friends.

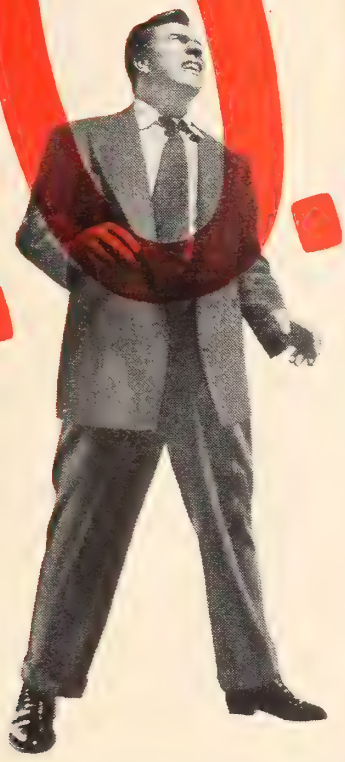
There was a report that Gail was so mad at him that she moved out all the furniture when she left. But that is not true.

(For more details about Guy and Gail, see page 43.—Ed.)

* * *

Elizabeth Taylor just laughs off talk that Vic Damone, the singer, has it so bad for her that he wouldn't date any girl in New York.

"That isn't true," says luscious Liz. "Things just aren't that serious between Vic and me and never were. I know he has taken out Toni Arden and other girls.



"I like Vic—but that's all."

* * *

Not in a long time has Hollywood had a visitor who attracted as much attention as glamorous Sharman Douglas, blonde daughter of Ambassador Douglas.

She is blonde, slim, very well-mannered and plenty surprised about the excitement her friendship with Princess Margaret has aroused throughout the world.

D.O.A.

...the strangest entry ever made on a police blotter...
the story of a man who sets out to avenge his own murder...

a MOTION picture!

Harry M. Popkin presents

D.O.A.

starring

EDMOND O'BRIEN

and

PAMELA BRITTON

with

LUTHER ADLER Beverly Campbell · Neville Brand · Lynn Baggett
William Ching · Henry Hart · Laurette Luez

Produced by Leo C. Popkin · Directed by Rudy Mate · Story and Screenplay by Russell Rouse and Clarence Greene · Music Written and Directed by Dimitri Tiomkin
A Harry M. Popkin Production · Released thru United Artists

Only PERMA-LIFT Bras

give you "The Lift that never lets you down"

Look for the Magic Inset

Every girl a beauty queen—that's what your lovely "Perma-lift"* Bra is designed to do. Everything about it is wonderful—the Magic Insets that support your breasts from below—the misty sheer fabrics—the enchanting colors. Wash it, wear it—the lasting support is magically, permanently there. At your favorite corsetiere—priced so low you can afford several—$1.25 to $5. Select your "Perma-lift" Bra today. For a slim, trim figure and comfort beyond compare, wear a "Perma-lift" Magic Inset Girdle — No Bones About It—Stays Up Without Stays.

*"Perma-lift", a trade-mark of A. Stein & Company (Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.)

Joan Evans visits Farley Granger on the Goldwyn set. Farley, picked by Modern Screen, is on the Kellogg Co.'s current variety cereal package.

I talked with Sharman at the cocktail party given in her honor by Peter Lawford and his parents. Surprisingly, very few young people were there. Lady Lawford had asked mostly older people, many staid Britishers. But if Sharman missed seeing some of the younger movie stars, she did not show it.

Later, however, Peter took Sharman to the tennis matches and out night-clubbing—and some of his friends were along. But, mostly, he kept the attractive Miss Douglas to himself. Pete seemed to like being in the limelight with Sharman.

They went dancing every night—so he must have felt a bit flattened when a reporter asked her what she thought of his dancing.

"Oh, he isn't especially terrific," smiled Miss Douglas!

Even so—she didn't go dancing with anyone else!

* * *

Look for funny-man Jack Carson to marry Lola Albright when his divorce from Kay St. Germaine becomes final. She isn't the first girl Jack has dated since he separated from his wife three years ago. It was once thought he might marry Doris Day.

But that is long since on ice—and Lois is the every-night date in his life right now.

* * *

One of the fun parties of the season was the buffet supper party Nadia and Reginald Gardiner gave for Beatrice Lillie. What a turn-out!

The clothes were absolutely dreamy with most of the girls wearing very low necklines and the short dinner gowns.

Jennifer Jones, with a very short haircut, was really chic—but more important, she looks so much happier since she and David Selznick were married. During their engagement, they battled continually and usually staged their biggest tiffs at parties. One or the other of them would leave in a huff. But at Nadia and Reggie's, all was sweetness and light between the Selznicks.

Joan Crawford, who has played the field ever since she and Greg Bautzer broke up, arrived on the arm of a very attractive young man who was introduced as Dick Egan, her leading man.

The Darryl Zanucks and Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger had supper together for a very good reason. It happened to be their joint wedding anniversary. Joan was saying she

This is IT!

THE PLACE:

STROMBOLI

THE STAR:

BERGMAN

UNDER

THE INSPIRED DIRECTION OF

ROSSELLINI

Produced and Directed by Roberto Rossellini • Released by RKO Radio Pictures

Alana and David Ladd perch on Louella Parsons' knee as she interviews them and parents Alan and Sue on one of her recent broadcasts.

spent a fortune educating her daughter—who is now using that education to raise grapes in Imperial Valley!

"She is happiest," said Joan, referring to Diana, her eldest, married daughter—"when dashing about in a red jeep seeing how the grapes are coming on."

Linda Christian Power, who dramatizes everything, gave us a blow-by-blow account of her robbery in Mexico City—and what a difficult time her brother's wife had when her baby was born. All the time the fascinating and volatile Linda was telling us these tidbits, she was also modeling her new Italian gown and showing us her French purse—the latter giving me an idea. I have a top just like the little jade mouse on her handbag that I could use as a clasp—only my top is composed of elephants.

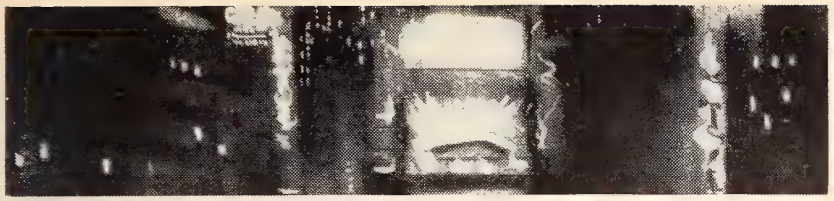
I noticed the Louis Jourdans stayed as far apart as possible from the David Selznicks—which is ironic considering that Louis was David's best man when he married Jennifer. But Louis and his boss are having contract troubles and seem much happier apart these days.

Clifton Webb was very amusing—as always—particularly when he and Bea Lillie went into one of their own routines. They also have a little private joke in which he calls her "Doll" and she calls him "Dill"—but only Bea and Clifton know what it means—and they won't tell.

* * *

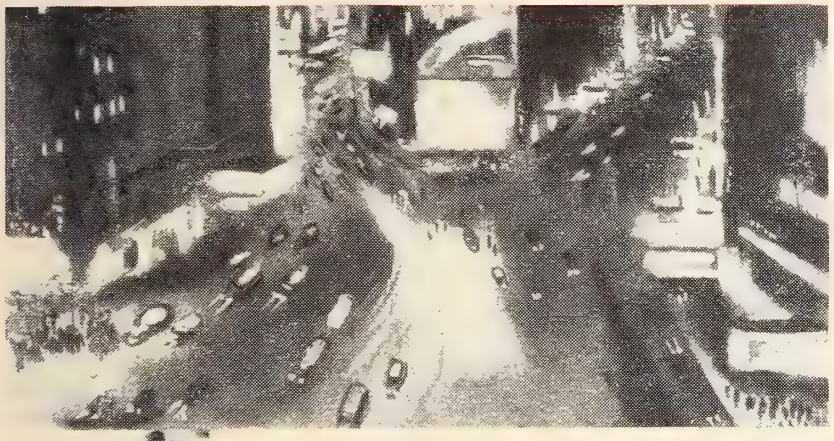
Almost everyone in Hollywood believes that Shirley Temple will have to do something different on the screen. Her latest pictures have not paid off at the box-office.

Personally, I believe the sensational testimony she gave against John Agar at the time of their divorce, may have a lot to do with it. At least, it did not do Shirley any good.



Probably, Shirley did what her lawyers told her to. But with all due respect to those legal minds, the advice wasn't very good.

* * *



There was something rather sad and dramatic and really sweet about Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan on either side of their daughter at the party Janie gave on the youngster's 13th birthday.

When the cake was brought in, Jane and Ronnie stepped up to the little girl's side and both put their arms around her. They said, almost in unison, "Make a wish, darling." Then they both kissed her.

I wondered if that wish might have been that her mother and father would one day

All the HEARTBEATS and HEARTACHES of a GREAT CITY!

Here is Damon Runyon at his exciting best . . . bringing you, as only he could, the wonderful characters, the thrilling drama and excitement that made him famous.

Benedict Bogeaus presents Damon Runyon's

"JOHNNY ONE-EYE" starring PAT O'BRIEN

WAYNE MORRIS • DOLORES MORAN and introducing Gayle Reed

Produced by BENEDICT BOGEAUS • Directed by ROBERT FLOREY • Screenplay by RICHARD LANDAU

Based on the story, "Johnny One-Eye" by Damon Runyon • Released Thru United Artists

JEEPERS!
Buttercup Almost Forgot!

She's learned the Hard Way what it Costs to Forget, and Buttercup's Taking no Chances.

There was that Jolly Bachelor, Fresh from Kalamazoo, with plenty of Lettuce and "Object Matrimony" written all over him, whose First date was his Last.

Ditto for the big Glamour Boy at the Beach last summer, who Kissed her Once, then gave her the Deep Freeze.

Ditto for the quiet Casanova who took her to the Movies then Dropped her on her own Doorstep at nine-thirty.

That isn't going to happen this time. Buttercup's got a new Boy Friend and she intends to Keep Him. She isn't going to let Halitosis (unpleasant breath) Snap the String in Cupid's Bow. This time She'll be Sweet Little Buttercup because she's going back Right Now to let Listerine Antiseptic look after her breath.

She knows Listerine Antiseptic is the Extra-Careful precaution against offending. She knows that it freshens and sweetens the breath . . . not for mere minutes . . . but for hours, usually.

Moral: It's better to be sweet than side-tracked, so, before any date, never, never omit Listerine Antiseptic.

While some cases of halitosis are of systemic origin, most cases, say some authorities, are due to the bacterial fermentation of tiny food particles clinging to mouth surfaces. Listerine Antiseptic quickly halts such fermentation, then overcomes the odors fermentation causes. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Denise Darcel, Battleground sensation, is covered with military glory by the 108th Airborne Division at the film's opening in Atlanta.

kiss and make up. Both the Reagan children love their parents so much.

Personally, I haven't much hope for the reconciliation. If they could have patched it up in the beginning—yes. But too much time has gone by—and I think that, for a little while anyway, Jane was really in love with Lew Ayres.

Lew was conspicuously not present at the party, which was right. He and Jane have been seeing each other from time to time, but I think any deep feeling between them is past now.

For such a quiet-spoken, deeply philosophical young man, Lew certainly has a way with the ladies. Few who have loved him ever forget him.

* * *

The most ambitious teen-ager I have ever known is Joan Evans, 15-year-old Goldwyn starlet. Not content with being a movie star with Farley Granger and Dana Andrews to make love to her, she is preparing herself for musical comedy on Broadway.

Her dancing coach is Nico Charisse, ex-husband of Cyd Charisse, and he says Joan has a terrific dancing career ahead of her if she wants it. "And I do," dimples the darling.

* * *

Took myself a little time off for a two-weeks whirl in New York—and I mean whirl. I always get a tremendous kick coming East and I never fail to get a new slant on movies and stars.

Even on the train, I can seldom resist asking my porter whom he likes among the stars. I love talking to fans—and even those who pretend to scorn Hollywood.

But most of all I enjoy watching our hard-working stars relax completely and just have a good time for themselves in New York.

I went East on the same train with Ethel Barrymore. Of course, I realize how beloved and popular she is everywhere—but I still got a kick out of the big crowd of reporters at the train to interview her when we pulled into Chicago.

Unfortunately, the one-and-only Ethel was ill, and could not leave her drawing room. All the scribes were disappointed. "We would rather talk with Miss Barrymore than a dozen Hollywood glamor girls," one of the interviewers told me.

Robert Taylor was the first person to call me when I stepped into my rooms at the Waldorf Towers. He had been on the Coast when I left—I had seen him with Barbara Stanwyck at Jane Wyman's party—and here he had beaten me to New York by two days!

"Just decided to fly East for a television

The most admired patterns...

New SPRING GARDEN

are Sterling Inlaid, the silverplate with two blocks of sterling inlaid at backs of bowls and handles of most used spoons and forks.

LOVELY LADY

Thus the exquisite beauty of these four magnificently designed Holmes & Edwards patterns stays lovelier longer.

DANISH PRINCESS*

Particularly note Spring Garden, the gay, new favorite. 52 piece service for 8, chest included, in all patterns, $68.50.

YOUTH

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

HERE HERE
It's Sterling Inlaid

*ALL PATTERNS MADE IN U. S. A.

COPYRIGHT 1949, THE INTERNATIONAL SILVER CO., HOLMES & EDWARDS DIVISION, MERIDEN, CONN. °REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Lovely lady... Lovely hair

She's a "Rayving Beauty" now!

"My first Rayve Home Permanent - and it's wonderful!"

says Elaine Stewart

PROMISING NEW YORK MODEL

"Even the day after my Rayve wave, I faced the camera with confidence. My hair was sparkling and soft, with a really natural-looking wave. And now, months later, it's still lovely. I've never been so happy with a wave before!"

TRY YOUR HAIR MISS STEWART'S WAY! Write Janet Wakefield, Dept. D, Pepsodent, 80 Varick St., New York 13, N. Y. for free, do-it-yourself instructions.

Now much faster... yet the Dial-a-Wave makes it so sure! Now wave your hair faster than ever! Yet be sure of success. Rayve's exclusive Dial-a-Wave shows you instantly the fastest waving time for your hair—to get exactly the right amount of curl. There's no guesswork!

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Accepted by the Committee on Cosmetics of the American Medical Assn.

COMPLETE RAYVE KIT $2

RAYVE REFILL $1

Rayve lasts longer... yet looks lovelier from the start! Your Rayve wave will shimmer with highlights, and almost set itself! No frizzy ends ever... for Rayve's improved waving lotion is so much gentler, safer. And because it's timed individually for you, your Rayve wave stays lovely weeks longer!

WHAT ABOUT CURLERS?

Use any plastic curlers... for Rayve's lovelier results come from the gentler solutions and individual Dial-a-Wave timing.

Rayve Home Permanent

ANOTHER FINE PRODUCT OF LEVER BROTHERS COMPANY

P.S. KEEP THAT "RAYVING BEAUTY" LOOK BETWEEN WAVES... with Rayve Creme Shampoo. Not a soap... gets hair cleaner!

Fred Astaire gives Vera-Ellen the whirl of her young life as they rehearse a dance scene for the new MGM musical, Three Little Words.

show—and a couple of days' sightseeing," laughed Bob. "I flew my plane in and we would have been here sooner except for a storm or two along the way!"

Ran into the Gordon MacRaes at 21, and I still say Mrs. MacRae is one of our prettiest. No wonder she sort of hankers after a screen career. The MacRaes were going on to Florida after his personal appearance stint at the Strand.

New York, I love you!

* * *

The Letter Box: For heaven's sake, let me straighten out you letter-writers (at least a dozen of you) who think Frankie Sinatra is the "married man" Dorothy Kirsten has fallen in love with! I couldn't be more surprised that so many of you think this—probably because they appear on the same radio show together.

Frankie and Nancy had a tiff last month. They will probably always have tiffs because they are hot tempered and quick to anger. But Dorothy had nothing to do with it. The man she is interested in is a doctor in Texas.

I've also noticed a couple of hammers out for Montgomery Clift because he is not prompt in answering his fan mail. Give the boy time. He's been working hard and is out touring the country just to make friends with all of you.

Shirley Temple's undying fans would love her no matter what she does—but there are some minor complaints about her too-short hair cut.

Well, I guess that's all for now. See you next month!

PHOTO CREDITS

Below are page by page credits for photographs appearing in this issue.

6 T. Lt., T. Rt., International News, B. Lt., B. Rt., Bert Parry—7 B. Lt., Keystone, B. Rt., Globe—8 T. Rt., Acme—10 T. Rt., Wide World—12 T. Rt., Goldwyn—14 T. Rt., Margaret Ettinger—16 T. Rt., Wide World—18 T. Rt., Bert Parry—20 Wide World—24 MGM—28, 29 Bob Beerman—30 MGM—31 T., Bert Parry, B., Bob Beerman—32, 33 Bob Beerman—34 M. S. Staff—35 T. Lt., Wide World, T. Rt., Schuyler Crail, Bot. Lt., M. S. Staff, Bot. Rt., Don Ornitz—36, 37 Bob Beerman—38 Bert Parry—39 Bunny Sexton—40, 41, 42 Bert Parry—43 M. S. Staff—44, 45 Bert Parry—46, 47 Bob Beerman—48 Bot. Lt., Kaderian, Bot. Cen., M. S. Staff, Bot. Rt., International News—49 T., CBS, Bot. Lt., Bert Parry, Bot. Rt., CBS—50 Bert Parry—51 T., Warners, Cen. and Bot., Bob Beerman—53 Bob Beerman—54 Lt., Bob Beerman, Rt., Bert Parry—55 Bert Parry—56 T. Lt., Bob Beerman, Bot. Lt., Art Carter, Rt., Bob Beerman—57 Bob Beerman—61 International News—63 20th Century-Fox.

Abbreviations: Bot., Bottom; Cen., Center; Lt., Left; Rt., Right; T., Top.

No Sad Songs For Me

As fellow players in an industry of which we are proud, and to which we devote our talents and our efforts, we would like to make public our applause of the brave and tender story of NO SAD SONGS FOR ME and Margaret Sullavan for her amazing exposition of a woman's inner glory.

We are proud too of PINKY, ALL THE KING'S MEN, SNAKE PIT, GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT and certain other motion pictures, which like NO SAD SONGS FOR ME, dealt with unusual subject matter.

This is a story of courage and people . . . not special people, but ordinary every-day people . . . with a background of an average middle-sized town.

Mary Scott is one of these people, a woman of courage . . . of great courage and spirit. There are thousands and thousands of Mary Scotts . . . They live in small hamlets and big cities. Life gives them the same benefits and the same penalties . . . and the same sacrifices.

But in telling the story of this particular Mary Scott and her great love for her husband and child, there is as well within the confines of a screenplay, a theme that is world-wide in its interest . . . something that has gained momentum in newspaper headlines everywhere and will continue to cause panic and fear until the eventual hoped-for day of solution.

The consequences of this forthright presentation of NO SAD SONGS FOR ME will echo and re-echo.

EDWARD ARNOLD
BRODERICK CRAWFORD
DICK POWELL
LUCILLE BALL
AL JOLSON
EDWARD G. ROBINSON
JOAN BENNETT
IDA LUPINO
ROSALIND RUSSELL
HUMPHREY BOGART
DOROTHY McGUIRE
LIZABETH SCOTT
CORNEL WILDE
SHELLEY WINTERS

A joyful Rita Hayworth cuddles her baby as daddy Aly Khan admires them both. Yasmin was born December 28 at Lausanne, Switzerland.

when a Princess is born

That Swiss city was used to historic events occurring in its midst— but it never had known anything like the birth of Rita's baby!

BY ISRAEL SHENKER

■ The city of Lausanne, in Switzerland, is used to unusual happenings, and takes them pretty much in stride. It is especially used to celebrated births. Royalty has long chosen the tidy Swiss city as the birthplace for its heirs and heiresses. It was only natural, therefore, that Prince Aly Khan and Rita Hayworth should choose it for their first child.

After months of travel about Europe, Rita and Aly came to Lausanne and settled down in the large and palatial Lausanne-Palace Hotel, which has been the scene of important international conferences in the past. When Aly and Rita arrived, it became the scene of one of the most intensely-covered royal births in history.

Newspapermen started coming from all over the world. Soon you could hardly walk through the lobby of the Lausanne-Palace without tripping over a reporter, or kicking over photo equipment alongside the manager's desk. A permanent watch of five newsmen was established just in front of the entrance to the hotel, (Continued on page 83)

Somewhere... somehow...
some time...
every man learns that

"DEAD"

starring

PEGGY CUMMINS
JOHN DALL

A P
F

new faces

DAVID WAYNE has been an actor ever since his sixth birthday. At that time he starred in neighborhood productions, but later at Michigan State University where he was supposed to be studying business administration, David took an active part in college dramatics. He hit New York in The American Way with Fredric March, and stayed there until the outbreak of the war, which cast him as a lieutenant with the American forces in Italy. Now dividing his time between Hollywood and New York, David's latest is Adam's Rib. He's five-feet-nine-inches tall and has brown eyes and hair. He's married to Jane Gordon.

ANNE PEARCE got such good reviews for her performance in The Vigil when it ran on Broadway (for two weeks) that Universal-International hired her almost sight unseen. She'd been offered screen tests before but turned them down because she thought she wasn't ready. Anne was born in Saginaw, Michigan, on March 25, 1926 and graduated cum laude from USC in 1947. She made her movie debut in Yes, Sir, That's My Baby and you'll see her soon in Outside the Wall. Anne is five-feet-six-inches tall and weighs 120 lbs.

ANTHONY CURTIS blames the war for his recent Hollywood debut, but he's not complaining. After returning from submarine warfare in the Pacific, Tony took advantage of the GI Bill, studied drama and took part in amateur theatricals and borscht circuit offerings until a scout for Universal-International asked him to come to Hollywood. You saw him first in City Across the River; his next is Sierra. Tony was born in New York on June 3, 1925, has blue eyes, black hair, and is six feet tall.

PEGGIE CASTLE won a contract with Universal-International because of a hilariously funny scene in Mr. Belvedere Goes To College in which she appeared with Clifton Webb. All of her previous theatrical experience had been received in dramatic schools. Peggie was born in Appalachia, Va., on December 22, 1927 and with her family lived a nomadic life—her father, an industrial relations director, kept moving from city to city. She's five-feet-seven-inches, weighs 120 lbs. and is now in Woman in Hiding.

Are you in the know?

How to decide about a Spring suit?

- ☐ Buy it and diet
- ☐ Pick a pastel shade
- ☐ Take a stroll

You adore the suit! But how about fit? Does the new narrow skirt defy your figure? If in doubt, stroll around the store. Try sitting; then see the mirror. Budget-wise bunnies shun suits too large or small—or delicate shades that "live" at the cleaner's. (Choose checks; navy; any smart medium tone.) Be perfectly suited, too, as to sanitary protection needs. Decide on the right-for-you Kotex absorbency. How? By trying all 3!

If you'd stop going steady—

- ☐ Start feudin' and fightin'
- ☐ Send him his class ring
- ☐ Tell him your sentiments

Suddenly, your heart—or noggin—tells you the "one and only" deal is not your dish. Should you "sledge-hammer" the issue? Or just silently break away? Ixnay! Tell him your sentiments, tactfully. Then no-one's bitter and your rating's still tops. Beware of making enemies . . . and on "those" days be wary of that foe of poise: embarrassment. Kotex defends you, with a special safety center designed for your extra protection!

What's the newest eye-catcher?

- ☐ The nape of her neck
- ☐ The dangling earrings
- ☐ The hiked hemline

Get you! Echoing your Mom's prom get-ups (almost)! You're daring the new "twenties trend." But with that shingle—sister, the nape of your neck's showing. So, when applying makeup base and dazzle-dust, don't stop at the chin line. Give your neck a break—all around. Prom time need never hold problem-time "nightmares"; not if you've chosen Kotex. That's because those flat pressed ends prevent revealing outlines!

If you were stepping into this taxi, should you sit—

☐ Beside the belle ☐ On the opposite side ☐ On your squire's lap

Maybe you've heard that a gentleman's place should always be on the outside. You guess that goes for all occasions. 'Tain't so, though, in wheeldom. Stepping into this taxi, you should choose the opposite side, so either squire can sit between you wimmin.

And when you step out—to a dance, or wherever—cancel calendar "woes" with Kotex. For Kotex is made to stay soft while you wear it. Gives dream-cloud softness that holds its shape. You're at ease from the first rhumba to the goodnight waltz!

For extra comfort on "those" days, should you—

- ☐ Stay in bed
- ☐ Go square-dancing
- ☐ Buy a nylon belt

Comfort doesn't call for coddling—or "square" fests. Your best bet's a new Kotex Wonderform Belt. It's made with DuPont nylon elastic—won't twist, won't curl, won't cut! Gives 118% stretch, yet it's strong, smooth-feeling; wisp-weight. Dries fast. Stays flat even after many tubbings. And see how much easier, quicker the new firm-grip fastener is to use! For extra comfort—buy the new nylon elastic Kotex Wonderform Belt.

2 TYPES: Pin style and with new safety fastener

Kotex Wonderform* Belt
Buy two—for a change

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

She loves them—
she loves them not.
It's a strange and puzzling game for a girl who's got marriage on her mind.

BY BEATRICE BLANCHARD

Ava Gardner's Startling Romances!

■ "Now, look," said the director, "let's try it once more. Only this time, kiss him as if he were the last man on earth."

Ava Gardner nodded. She slid her tongue across her full, sensuous lips. Her curving bosom rose with the swell of a deep breath, and then she slinked toward Clark Gable. She came close against him, mouth caught mouth, eyes lowered in simulated passionate ecstasy, and Gable was kissed.

In fact, so thoroughly kissed that it took him a few minutes to recover from the pleasant shock. When he did, someone on the set came up and asked him, "How was it?"

Clark shook that handsome, leonine head of his, and grinned. "Zowie!" he said.

That happened three years ago when Ava and Clark were making The Hucksters.

Three months ago when a Hollywood columnist announced on her radio program, "I'm very sorry to report that Frank Sinatra has left home . . . and is telling his troubles to Ava Gardner," that same zowie reaction came (Continued on page 99)

New Beauty Magic from the Westmores of Hollywood

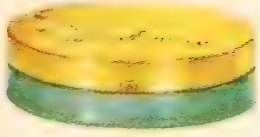
THE MEN WHO MAKE THE STARS MORE BEAUTIFUL

JANE WYMAN
Starring In
"STAGE FRIGHT"
A Warner Bros. Production



59c*

"MY CHOICE WAS WESTMORE'S Over-Glo Cake Powder Make-Up for Jane Wyman. Every woman, with skin as delicate and subtly-tinted as Miss Wyman's, will marvel at this new alluring soft, natural finish that lasts for hours—yet needs no foundation. And it does not dry out the skin! It's Hollywood's complexion magic! It can be yours too!"

PERC WESTMORE,
Make-Up Director, Warner Bros. Studios

59c* and 29c*

"HIGHLIGHTS OF ROMANCE —that's what the stars call Westmore Rouge, Hollywood's own formula for glamour! It is truly a make-up secret leading stars of Hollywood rely on for sheer beauty witchery." Available Cream or Dry.

WALLY WESTMORE,
Famous Hollywood Make-Up Director

59c* and 29c*

"SMART GIRLS follow the lead of Hollywood's most dazzling stars—by always insisting on Westmore Lipstick! Special Hollywood star tested creamy lipstick that stays on—creating a lasting illusion of radiance and beauty. It's a make-up must!"

BUD WESTMORE,
Famous Hollywood Make-Up Director

Certified

COSMETICS OF THE STARS

We hereby certify that the cosmetics advertised and sold under our name are exactly the same cosmetics we use to make the stars more beautiful at Warner Brothers, Paramount and Universal-International Studios.

Perc Westmore
Bud Westmore
Wally Westmore

Hollywood's Beauty Secrets for Your Very Own

The cosmetic secrets of Hollywood's most glamorous stars are now yours . . . in famous Westmore Cosmetics. Westmore . . . and only Westmore . . . are the certified cosmetics of the stars, the same make-up they use on the screen. Why be satisfied with less? On sale at variety, chain and drug store cosmetic counters.

*plus tax

Certified Cosmetics of the Stars For You
Westmore Cosmetics . . . 59¢* and 29¢*

LIPSTICK
DRY ROUGE
CREAM ROUGE
FACE POWDER
CREAM MAKE-UP
CAKE MAKE-UP
CAKE POWDER MAKE-UP
TRU-GLO POWDER FOUNDATION CREAM
EYE SHADOW NIGHT CREAM
SKIN FRESHENER
EYEBROW PENCIL
COLD CREAM CLEANSING

Westmore Cosmetics available in Canada at slightly higher prices

Westmore HOLLYWOOD Cosmetics

Doctors Prove Palmolive Soap Can Bring You A Lovelier Complexion in 14 Days!

No Matter What Your Age or Type of Skin!

Not just a promise—but actual proof from 36 leading skin specialists that Palmolive Soap facials can bring new complexion beauty to 2 out of 3 women

Never before these tests have there been such sensational beauty results! Yes, scientifically conducted tests on 1285 women—supervised by 36 leading skin specialists—have proved conclusively that in just 14 days a new method of cleansing with Palmolive Soap . . . using nothing but Palmolive . . . brings lovelier complexions to 2 out of every 3 women.

Here is the easy method:

1. Just wash your face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap, massaging Palmolive's remarkable beautifying lather onto your skin for 60 seconds each time . . . as you would a cream.
2. Now rinse and dry—that's all.

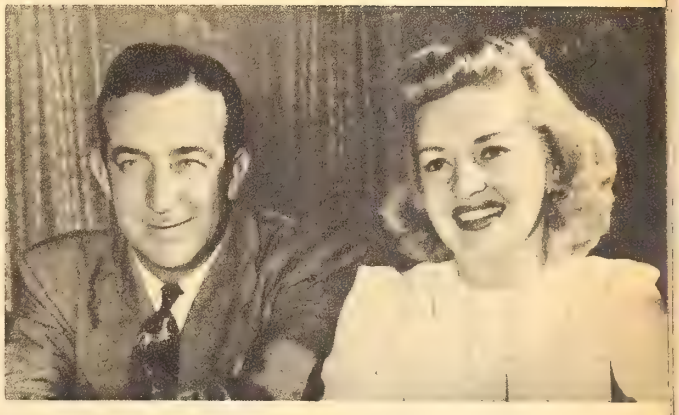
It's these 60-second facials with Palmolive's rich and gentle lather that work such wonders.

Here is the proof it works!

In 1285 tests on all types of skin—older and younger, dry and oily—2 out of every 3 women showed astonishing complexion improvement in just 14 days. Conclusive proof of what you have been seeking—a way to beautify your complexion that really works. Start this new Palmolive way to beauty tonight.

You, Too, May Look For These Complexion Improvements in 14 days!

- Fresher, Brighter Complexions!
- Less oiliness!
- Added softness, smoothness even for dry skin!
- Complexions clearer, more radiant!
- Fewer tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads!



For Tub or Shower Get Big Bath Size Palmolive

DOCTORS PROVE PALMOLIVE'S BEAUTY RESULTS!

three little words

an open letter to betty grable and harry james

Dear Mr. and Mrs. James:

Hollywood has started 1950 with a sadly familiar story—a dismal series of divorces, suits for divorces and separations.

It can with some justice be pointed out that Hollywood in this respect is no worse than the rest of the country. But the fact can't be ducked that a Hollywood divorce always delivers a much bigger impact than occurs when Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jones of Anytown decide they can no longer stand the sight of each other.

Be that as it may, we're getting more than a little tired of seeing Hollywood separations and divorces every time we pick up a paper. So we find it refreshing to consider the happy marriage of two such sane Hollywood people as you, Mr. and Mrs. James. In all the years you've been married, there's been no rumor of trouble between you that hasn't turned out to be the wildest fantasy.

Recently, Betty, you summed up the state of your marriage very simply. You said: "Harry and I are happy. We love our children and we try to live as normal a life as two professional people can. I am in love with my husband and he is in love with me."

In that statement there is a key word. It is a small but powerful one. That word is try.

For there has never been a sound marriage that was accomplished without effort. To be sucessful in marriage requires the constant exercise of patience, faith, consideration and understanding. Obviously, your marriage has worked because you've worked at it.

There's another key word in your statement: Normal. Certainly there's no more wholesome, normal family life in Hollywood than yours. A clear proof of it lies in your children—healthy, well-balanced youngsters who reflect the common sense with which you're raising them.

And there's a third key word in your statement. That word is love.

William B. Hartley

EDITOR

Bringing up susan

by Shirley Temple

My baby is growing up. She pulls down bird cages, dresses in my clothes, is learning how to handle boy friends—and even has to be spanked occasionally!

In the following exclusive story, the first of a MODERN SCREEN series, Shirley Temple gives in her own words a warm and charming picture of her tiny daughter —a delightful little girl whose counterpart is familiar to every reader. Yet we feel that, reading between the lines, you'll find the story is more than this. It is also the moving portrait of a young mother who, still emerging from a period of heartbreak, is doing her very best to fill an emptiness that tragic circumstances have created. It is, in brief, a story of simple courage.—THE EDITORS

■ Last week for the first time I had to spank Linda Susan.

The incident began when she toddled over to the bird cage in the living room and started to shake it vigorously. Inside the cage the two love birds quickly changed their usual gentle chirping to outraged squawks. I rushed to their rescue—and then explained to my two-year-old daughter that she'd made the birds very sad. "See," I said, pointing to the ruffled creatures, "they're so unhappy that they're crying."

Not impressed, Linda Susan wrinkled up her nose and giggled. I knew she didn't want to hurt the birds. But the shiny metal cage fascinated her. And when she'd swung it back and forth in the sunlight, it had sparkled and glittered even more.

When her little hand insisted on reaching again for the cage, I gave her a stern look. "I wouldn't, Linda Susan," I said. (Continued on page 104)

Like countless other two-year-olds, Linda Susan loves to dance to the radio.

Linda Susan, who delights in "dressing up," earnestly models an oversized sombrero.

She's particularly fond of arraying herself in Mother's furs. This cape is her favorite.

She's fascinated by the piano and (right) by her pal Lannie, the collie.

Interested in the secret of a full life? Ask the girl who's got one—Esther Williams.

busiest girl in town

by jane morris

■ Guests at The Trails restaurant in Westchester used to be surprised when, on a busy night, their waitress was Esther Williams. Now they take it as a matter of course.

And some patrons who pull into the gas station at 18th and Montana in Santa Monica are startled if the gal on the other side of the windshield is—by gosh!—Esther Williams. But they are out-of-towners. The residents of Santa Monica are quite used to this.

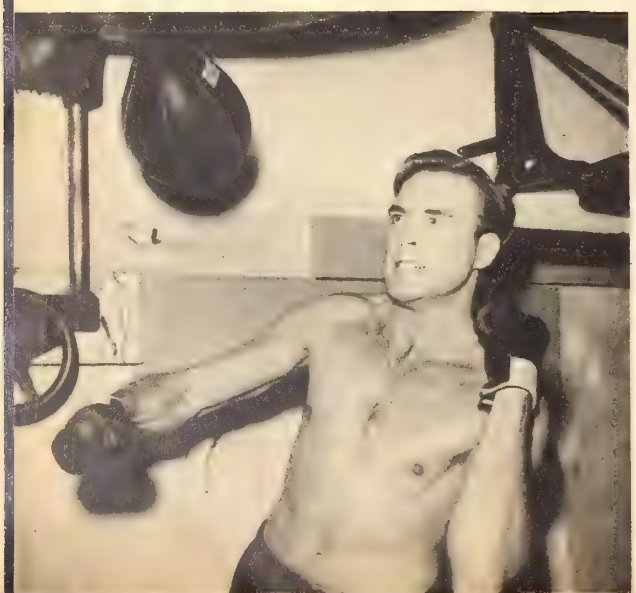
They'll never forget that gas station's opening, complete with searchlights, Esther and Ben Gage and Hollywood guests in formal clothes, Keenan Wynn and his motorcycle gang all riding up in tails and top hats, Xavier Cugat arriving with his dog and his orchestra, Betty Garrett and Larry Parks driving up for their free tank of gas. It had all the glamor of a super-film première.

Then there's the television crew that worked on Ben Gage's "Rumpus Room" show and discovered that the girl in charge of props was Ben's movie actress wife.

And there are the home-owners at Twenty-Nine Palms who found that the lady selling them property was—yes—that same Esther Williams, the busiest girl in this town, or perhaps in anybody's town.

Success, rather than slowing Esther down, has acted as a stimulus; and happiness in her marriage to Ben and in their four-months-old son has added to her natural zest for life. To Esther's way of thinking, it's a pity for people in pictures to wall themselves in with their celebrity and put up iron gates to close out the rest of the world. "After a while," she says, "no one tries to get past those iron gates anymore and they miss all the wonderful experience and enrichment of knowing all (Continued on page 107)

A hilarious moment at the opening of Esther Williams' and Ben Gage's Santa Monica gas station, as stylish motorcyclist Keenan Wynn gets Ben's special attention.



Esther, Ben, Stewart Granger, and Chef Knesz eagerly await Ava Gardner's reaction to a salad dressing at the "preview" of the Gages' Hollywood restaurant, The Trails.

Scott and brother Ed work up appetites for their mother's cooking with a little road-work on a Hollywood street. The boys and their brother Larry excel at athletics.

Scott spends many free hours at the YMCA vigorously hoisting dumbbells (above) and punching bags (below). When Scott was in the Navy, he won a boxing tourney.

They can't stop SCOTT

His brother Larry gave him his start, his mother prayed for him— and Scott Brady never will forget it as he rises swiftly toward stardom.

BY TOM CARLILE

■ The lady from the apartment next door watched with fascination as Mrs. Tierney carefully put eight plates around the dinner table. It was nearly seven o'clock, and the savory odor of baking ham filled the living room.

"My goodness!" the lady exclaimed. "Certainly you don't have to cook dinner for that many every night?"

"Not always," Mrs. Tierney replied cheerfully. "Sometimes one of my boys will forget to meet a friend on the way home. But I can't count on it."

Just then, a series of booming thumps shook the stairs outside, and Mrs. Tierney smiled at her visitor.

"That's my son Roddie," she explained. "He's the only one in the family who takes the stairs four at a time."

Scott Brady and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Tierney. The high-spirited Tierneys, including Scott's two brothers, now live together in Hollywood.

The front door burst open, and a young man wearing deep sun-tan make-up breezed through the living room. It was Roddie—or, as he is better known to movie-goers, Scott Brady. He shouted, "Hello, Mom" at the dining room and a plain but pleasant "Hello" to the neighbor lady, and headed straight for the bathroom. Immediately, there was the sound of hard-running water, punctuated by loud singing. A few minutes later, Roddie—or Scott—was shoving a shining clean face into the pots on the kitchen stove, sniffing hungrily at the cooking vegetables.

"Jim and Alex said they'd be over for dinner," he told his mother, as he sampled a cookie from the sideboard.

"I expected they would be," replied Mrs. Tierney. "I have a ham tonight. But I wish you would tell me these things earlier."

Scott gave his mother a quick hug and a smile.

"You know how it is," he said. "The boys are dying for some of your cooking. . . . By the way, I was great today. I had a speech with two pages of dialogue, and I only fluffed it once."

Leaning against the sink drainboard, Scott ate four more cookies as he told her all about his day. He was still talking when a slower, more methodical series of thumps sounded on the stairs—and his brother, Eddie, walked in with a sad face.

"Dames," he said, grumpily, reaching across Scott for a cookie. "I find I don't have a date tonight after all."

"It couldn't happen to a nicer guy," said Scott, walking into the living room and stretching out on the couch.

Half-an-hour later, when Mrs. (Continued on page 79)

she knew what she wanted

by hedda hopper

Is Olivia de Havilland a girl with no will of her own, ruled by an ogre husband? Here's the answer to that foolish question.

■ I might as well tell you the scandal right off: As of this very minute, Olivia de Havilland is caught in a pretty terrific love triangle. There are two men in her life. One's named Ben and the other Marcus.

Ben has red hair—not much—and Marcus has brown, and a little more. Ben tips the scales around 17 pounds, and he's about four-and-a-half months old by now. Marcus is considerably heavier and considerably older. But both their last names are Goodrich.

Ben is Livvy's son, of course, and Marcus is her husband. I couldn't tell you whom she loves most—in different ways, of course. But I can tell you this: What she used to think was the most important thing in the world—her career—suddenly isn't at all. Those two wonderful guys come first, now.

I uncovered this startling scoop the other day when I twisted my hotrod up a winding drive at the tag end of a (Continued on page 74)

OLIVIA'S TWO MEN are both named Goodrich, and the younger one, Benjamin, was born in Hollywood last September 27. She'd been warned that having a baby would be difficult for her, and the last seven months of pregnancy she spent flat on her back. After the birth, Olivia soon was on her feet again—and serving lunch to her other man, Ben's dad, writer Marcus Goodrich.

WORK AND PLAY are carefully scheduled by the busy Olivia. Much of her morning time is taken up with reading the dozens of scripts sent hopefully to her each month by producers. She's still looking for the right one. Afternoon playtime often finds her at croquet with Marc on the spacious lawn of their rented home. It's a game the Goodriches take with the utmost seriousness.

The John Dereks haven't got far to look to find the bluebird of happiness— they've built him a nest right in their own home.

BY DUANE VALENTRY

Bluebird on Their

In their playroom, Pati and John Derek discuss future plans—including a June blessed event. Annie, the shepherd dog, is already the mother of eight.

Window sill

■ "What'll we do with so much room?" Pati Behrs asked wonderingly, as she looked around the pretty house in Encino that first day. At the cheerful big living room and fireplace, the sunny breakfast nook, and long, comfortable playroom that opened out onto the colored stones of the flagstone patio . . .

"Well, I don't know," said her husband, John Derek. "But I think it's swell! Let's take it." And he turned to the agent with the look of a man who has found what he wants. Pati sighed and shrugged expressive shoulders.

"Nearly two acres," she murmured, gazing at the high hedges and picket fence round the patio, and the gardens beyond that. John turned to his wife with a wide smile. "Just think, honey, all that space for Annie—and the pups, when she has them—to run around in!"

"But we didn't want a swimming pool, darling," Pati remonstrated, sitting down on the striped bamboo couch. Then, as she looked over at the small piano, with the bronze plaque of a dog's head above it, at the bright colors of furniture and draperies, she suddenly sighed again—happily. She reached up for John's hand. "I like it, too," she said—and their house-hunt was over.

"Besides," said John a few moments later, turning from the desk where he was signing the lease, "it's only a tiny swimming pool."

Tiny pool or not, that first hot week in their new house in the San Fernando Valley, the kids swam every day. John, the perfectionist, showed Pati how to improve her strokes, how to float. Back and forth, round and round the little blue pool they splashed away the hours, stopping now and then to bask on the sun-baked flagstones, over which a small orange tree bent its fruit-heavy branches. Contentment, like sunshine, made the days dreamy. . . .

Being between pictures, John had time to put in a nail here or there, fix a window-latch, study the script of his forthcoming Rogues of Sherwood Forest. Do some painting, too. There was the drab old garden chair, rickety and useless. John hammered on a wedge or two, and enameled it blue. But the feel of a brush in his hand was too much for him: John Derek is a real artist when he sets himself to it, and painting has been a long-time hobby.

(Continued on next page)

John smiles with masculine superiority as Pati tries to figure why their checkbook shows 27 cents more than the bank statement. Annie, with no such problems, snoozes under the desk.

In their living room, Pati acts as John's leading lady while he goes over his next day's lines. She had screen ambitions before, but now has given them up in favor of the domestic life.

Pati pours herself a morning cup of coffee in the sunny breakfast room, while John—who doesn't drink coffee—gives her advance information on the doings of Popeye the Sailorman.

John and Pati Derek's new home, which came equipped with two acres of rolling lawn, gives them plenty of room to play with Annie, their prize German shepherd dog.

Four of Annie's pups (her other four were given to friends) show enthusiasm for John and Pati. The pups once fell into the pool, but Annie (right) rescued them.

Pati points out one he missed as John cleans leaves from their backyard swimming pool. The pool was an unexpected delight, for they didn't plan on a house with one.

From their cartons of belongings, out of which Pati was trying to assemble some sort of order, he dragged canvas and brushes. "I'll help you there in a minute," he told her, as he began to examine his painting tools.

The minute stretched into days. Now it was Pati who put in a nail here or there, fixed a window-latch, spread their own things about them. She didn't mind, though, as she looked at her happy husband, brooding over the canvas that was beginning to come to life in a wonderful way.

It hangs over their fireplace today. Pati looks at it often—as does everyone who enters the living room. A small painting of a Negro child, with hair blowing, it has a definite and wistful beauty that goes right to the heart.

John, who is climbing swiftly to major movie fame, doubtless could find fame in other fields if he chose. Whatever he does, he does well. An expert fencer, he learned the difficult skill for a film part, and keeps in practice with anyone who'll try it with him. Not many will, however. Pati used to, until she found John's dexterity and rushing enthusiasm a little crowding, and took a fine spill backwards. Occasionally John can persuade his good friend, Harry Lauter, who's also an actor and will have a part in Sons of the Musketeers, to work out with him. Usually, though, John gets in his fencing at the studio, where Columbia's fencing expert will give him a real workout.

No other young actor, with the possible exception of Montgomery Clift, has so completely captured public attention after his first picture. One day John Derek was an unknown. Short days later, after the release of Knock On Any Door, the letters began to pour in to the studio, and kept coming at such a rate that soon his fan mail equalled that of long-established stars. Now that his current movie, All The King's Men, has met with wide acclaim, it's small wonder that Columbia counts John a large asset and a future top star.

When John and Pati came onto their house, the long, low, attractive bungalow with its rambling grounds seemed an answer to prayer. They had decided that they were one pair of people in Hollywood who didn't care for living at the beach, with its small houses and sudden fogs. Not that the present house, with its two bedrooms, can be called big. But the Dereks reserve one of the bedrooms for a guest room, and feel they have all the space in the world—and the sunny, inland locale is definitely to their liking.

Complete opposites in temperament and disposition, John and Pati feel thankful that this very difference is helping them work out a stable foundation for their marriage.

"John takes everything calmly, in his stride—but I can't," says Pati, who talks fast and excitedly, and who is as volatile as a day in March. "Like the morning after we moved in, when I was fixing up our rumpus room and decided to fill the slot-machine, and went all over the place getting nickles and quarters and dimes. I had hardly put them in the thing, when accidentally, I hit the jackpot—and quarters came pouring out! I let out such a shriek, I guess they heard me all over Encino!

"A couple of nights later, when Bill and Barbara Williams were over playing Monopoly with (Continued on page 102)

June brings vet Al Binder some Christmas cheer during the party held at Birmingham General Hospital—where she visits regularly.

the courage of june haver

Rebuilding her life from shattered pieces, she is winning new peace in her unselfish devotion to others

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

■ "People have the habit of taking life for granted, as though they expected it to go on forever," said June Haver. "But usually they have to learn the hard way that they must also take death for granted. When we lose someone we love, the loss is necessarily great because we are deeply and emotionally involved. But that does not alter the real nature of life and death."

June was explaining the philosophy that has given her the strength to face the death of her fiancé, Dr. John Duzik. It is not a new philosophy. It has helped many people before her to live through moments of great tragedy in their lives. But because it is rooted in June's devout faith, it has for her as much personal meaning as if it were an inspired new concept of her own.

"When John first went to the hospital," she went on, "he took lightly the supposedly simple operation that lay ahead. Neither (Continued on page 91)

FRESH PAINT

by reba and bonnie churchill

Anybody can do it, Betty Lynn said. So we went artistic, hustled up the gang for this gay and daffy painting party—and had a very colorful time!

■ One day in her sunny Beverly Hills apartment, Betty Lynn showed us some of the paintings she'd done. We were impressed. We told her we wished we were geniuses. "Shucks," said Betty, "there's nothing to it. Almost everybody'd find out they could paint if they'd just try it."

"Oh, come now," we said.

"It's true!" said Betty. "I can prove it. Tell you what: Let's get a bunch of people together over here who've never done any art work—and set 'em loose with paint and brushes. The results will be amazing. You'll see!"

We saw. For a week later, on Betty's invitation, such a bunch invaded her premises and turned the place into a studio. The girl was right—the results were amazing. Very amazing.

The eager but unpracticed artists were Colleen Townsend, Bob Arthur, Rock Hudson, Randy Stuart, Lee MacGregor, Joyce MacKenzie, Dale Robertson and we Churchills. First on the scene was Bob Arthur, obviously ready for business—equipped with three easels, a canvas and an art kit. However, this businesslike effect was slightly marred by the fact that one of the latches on the kit had come unhooked, and as he came up the walk he left behind him a trail of liberated tubes of paint.

These were picked up by Joyce MacKenzie and Rock Hudson, who arrived right after him. "Look what we found," said Joyce when Betty let them in. "A lot of little tubes of some kind of toothpaste."

"Ha!" said Bob Arthur. "They're mine—and it's paint! Fine artists you're going to be."

"Well, well," said Rock. "So that's the way the stuff comes. This should be a highly educational meeting." (Continued on next page)

Randy Stuart and Joyce MacKenzie searched for an unusual subject to paint—finally found it in Lee MacGregor. "I've been framed," he mutters wittily.

While Rock Hudson, hostess Betty Lynn and Bonnie Churchill work doggedly on their paint jobs, Colleen Townsend and Lee MacGregor relax long enough to discuss the progress of their masterpieces.

Colleen bones up on a kid's paint book before tackling more serious art. Rock takes time off from his own assignment to offer his somewhat backwards criticism. "It's art," he says, "but is it pretty?"

Formerly unknown artist Bob Arthur, disdainful of Betty's and Colleen's irreverent jokes, poses by his painting—on which judge Reba has pinned first prize. (He didn't know what it was, either.)

Lee MacGregor and Dale Robertson struggle with Joyce MacKenzie's easel at the paint party.

The would-be artists become quite intense as they see their efforts beginning to take shape.

Their art work finished, the hungry gang digs into salted almonds as a prelude to supper.

"I don't think you're kidding," said Bob.

At this point, the rest of us arrived. Our hostess had carefully covered her living-room rug with a large tarpaulin, and now the painters were all covered with artists' smocks that Lee MacGregor had borrowed from 20th Century-Fox's wardrobe department. Each smock had a tag inside the collar telling in what movie it had been used. Randy Stuart was delighted to find that hers had been worn by Joan Crawford in Daisy Kenyon. We Churchills both got something a bit less glamorous. Our smocks were marked, "1935—COMEDY." (Ah, well . . .)

All the rest of the painting gear had been rounded up by Betty—and by Bob Arthur, who'd borrowed his elaborate supplies from friends. Betty directed things while the boys set up easels and pushed back the baby-grand piano, the sofas and the tables to give the artists plenty of room.

To make sure no one would lack for inspiration, Betty had jotted down a series of subjects. Everyone drew a slip of paper listing his or her suggested assignment.

They were really stimulating. Randy Stuart was assigned "A Nightmare." Lee MacGregor, "Broadway at 42nd." Joyce MacKenzie, "The Big Eye."

Dale Robertson's slip suggested that he "paint an April Fool." He thought deeply for a moment. "This," he then announced, "will be a self-portrait."

We settled ourselves on chairs and on the floor, hands poised above painting pads and canvases, awaiting Betty's signal to begin. Then, "Go!" said Betty—and we feverishly set to work.

Lee MacGregor had secluded himself in a corner and, like a miser guarding a fortune, crouched low over his drawing board. Randy Stuart managed to peer over his shoulder for a moment, shuddered, and returned to her own work.

Colleen Townsend also chose to do her picture in the privacy of a corner. After 10 minutes of painstaking labor, she displayed a rough sketch and asked for a critical judgment. "It's very unique," said Rock Hudson. Colleen smiled proudly. "But," Rock added, "what is it?"

Colleen is a sweet young lady and a patient one. So she merely sighed, turned to a fresh sheet of paper and decided on a new subject—a portrait of Dale Robertson.

Being a model was nothing new to Dale. Before he appeared in films, he served a brief apprenticeship as a model. "A sculptor advertised for somebody to pose for a statue of 'Eternal Springtime,'" he told us. "The pay looked good to me so I applied and got the job. I was draped in a gold mantle, clutching a five-pound iron rod in one hand and shielding my eyes with the other. I looked as if I'd just sighted land, and was about to take off for it. Dunno what ever happened (Continued on page 58)

Meet the folks next door—an old-fashioned couple, name of Gene and Betsy Kelly . . . so old-fashioned they're still happy together after eight years.

BY MARVA PETERSON

■ One afternoon several weeks ago, a veteran character actress, well-pickled in the vinegar of her own disillusion, was sitting in the MGM commissary. She was alternating between conversation and chicken noodle soup when Gene Kelly and his wife, Betsy Blair, strolled into the place.

The actress turned to her lunch companion, a visiting non-professional. "Now, there's a strange couple," she remarked.

"Strange?" said her friend. "What do you mean?"

"Why," said the actress, "everyone knows that the Kellys are the plainest, simplest, most unaffected couple in Hollywood. They don't even own a swimming pool!"

"Oh!" exclaimed the friend. "I didn't know that. And they look so normal!"

A few days later in Romanoff's, a gossip columnist suddenly observed to an Eastern dress designer, "You know, I can't understand that Gene Kelly. The way he lets his wife run around!"

The designer's eyes shone with neon-light eagerness. "You mean—with other men?"

"No," snapped the columnist. "I mean the way she dresses. She wears sweaters and skirts and flat-heeled shoes and never any make-up. It's really a disgrace! She's not only an actress herself but she's the wife of a famous movie star. She owes it to the public to dress like one."

The reason Betsy and Gene Kelly are the combined target for such verbal darts is a simple one: They are the happiest married couple in Hollywood today.

Human nature being what it (Continued on page 86)

Betsy and Gene Kelly have fun with their collie on a typical Sunday in their backyard. Fearing she'll be spoiled, they keep daughter Kerry, seven, out of photos.

The Kellys' house in an unpretentious Beverly Hills neighborhood is the same kind of simple, middle-class house that they would live in if Gene were not one of Hollywood's top stars.

how doris day won

by Jack Wade

She dreamed of making a home for him someday—where he'd come to her for love.

her son

■ Terry was four years old, chubby and cute. Concealed from the dancers, he sat in the trombone section of Les Brown's band. His eyes were opened to wide roundness as he happily watched the reflections sparkle from the smoothly sliding slip horns; and when the instruments blared in harmony he laughed and clapped his hands as though the performance were for his benefit alone.

At the microphone, his mother, Doris Day, sang in her soft, intimate fashion, a smile on her lips and in her voice. But her heart was sad. . . .

Her boy, she felt, deserved a home, playmates, an established routine in which she could really play a mother's exacting part. But Terry could have none of these while she was traveling all over the United States as soloist with a big-name band.

When her number was finished, Doris took Terry quickly to the apartment where her mother waited to care for him. Kissing him, Doris hurried back to the taxi—to return to her job of singing to dancing couples while another woman helped Terry with his pajamas, listened to his prayers, and tucked the covers about his chin.

Doris could do none of these things for her boy, and keep her job. Her son's day was half finished when her own sleep was done. Then, to have a coveted extra hour with him, she must take him along with her in the early evening.

Riding in that taxi, Doris Day resolved once again to find a way of life that would give her the opportunity to be a full-time mother to her son. She knew that when this band engagement ended, Terry and his grandmother would return to Cincinnati until the schedule permitted another long stop—three weeks, possibly four—where she could again rent an apartment and have Terry with her for a brief visit. Visit. She smiled ruefully. Visits are for friends, not for sons. . . .

Nearly a year passed. Then Doris really clicked professionally. Almost overnight the jig-saw of her slowly-developed (Continued on page 96)

While Doris Day tries not to kibitz, son Terry triumphantly jumps one of his grandma's checkers. Grandma looks after the eight-year-old when Doris (now in Young Man With a Horn) is at the studio.

Smudgie, the educated French poodle, begs prettily for a peppermint stick from Terry and Doris. Terry looks upon himself as the man of the family, expects his mom to "retire" as soon as he gets a job.

why stars can't take criticism

It's easy to say stars are temperamental—but people seldom consider the reasons behind their behavior.

BY ARTHUR L. CHARLES

■ It was in the South Pacific, during the late war. The setting was a sandy clearing, bulldozed out of the sweating jungle three days before by GI's still swinging their heads from looking for snipers. A rude but serviceable stage, erected by a sleepy but enthusiastic crew of soldier-craftsmen the previous night, stood at one end of the clearing, and the ground before it was blanketed completely with a mass of squirming, home-hungry guys who had been snatched from their soda fountains, and gas stations and dispatched to this paradise to trample the flowers on Hirohito's newly-acquired front lawn.

There was to be a show—that was a fact.

Presently, a brass-studded fog horn stepped to the center of the stage and announced that he was honored to be able to innerduce one of Hollywood's biggest stars, who had come a long way to see them, and he "expected you men to behave like gentlemen and soldiers of the United States Army."

There came, from the middle and safe fringes of the audience, the usual anonymous razzberries and, also, the usual eager applause.

Ray Milland, dressed in hasty, ill-fitting khaki, and wearing that familiar cloak of fatigue that stamped the weary celebrity ocean-flyer, stepped into prominence and bowed graciously to his audience. He began to speak—a rather ad-lib, pretty basic monologue suited to the grim and ribald humor of his listeners. It went pretty well.

Then the fearful incident, dreaded by all male entertainers on the circuit, happened. From deep in the heart of the assembly (Continued on page 94)

Judy Garland (here with Vince Minnelli) has for years been criticized as too fat or too thin. Nowadays she sees red over gossip about her weight.

Paulette Goddard, who's said to find intolerable any suggestion she might have played a scene better, is famed for staging battles on the set.

Lana Turner is another who flares at "too fat" rumors. She did get buxom on vacation with husband Bob Topping, but is slender again.

Ray Milland, whose sense of humor once allowed Hedda Hopper to use him for a hat model, made a classic quip when a GI yelled, "Why aren't you in the Army?"—but the question almost made him quit his USO tour.

Bing Crosby (below) calmly puffs his pipe instead of blowing his wig when criticism comes his way. The amiable and undemanding Groaner is one star who never has to be handled with kid gloves.

Peter Lawford, whose mustache is now taken for granted by his friends—such as Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lewis—was for a time so touchy to pals' cracks about the adornment that it became a major point of honor with him.

ROMAN CANDLE

Today, she's one of the hottest blazes in the Hollywood fireworks. But Ruth Roman was once a dismal dud.

BY MARY HAWTHORNE

Ruth Roman makes friends aboard the U. S. S. Valley Forge. Opposite page: She hangs her portrait in the house she recently bought in the San Fernando Valley.

■ Ruth Roman? She had no chance at all.

She was so poor as a child in Boston's tough West End that she wore crêpe-paper hair ribbons that turned to soggy draggle-tails in the rain. She looked so anemic to school authorities that they gave her special feedings of vitamin-packed nutriments, most of which fodder she would hide in her handkerchief to ditch after class. She developed so oddly in her teens (too much out here and nothing else anywhere else) that the boys didn't know whether to laugh or whistle—and she wondered whether she would ever get so they could make up their minds. When she left home to make good on Broadway, she failed. When she had the audacity to follow this by invading Hollywood she failed again —for five long years.

Whereupon, last year, she amazed her friends and upset her enemies by bursting forth as one of the most brightly blazing features of the Hollywood fireworks. It doesn't make sense.

But that's all right. Little about Ruth does.

For instance, those who know her best are convinced she doesn't think she had a particularly hard time getting to where she is now. "She was too preoccupied with her main goal in life," they say, "to take special notice of the fact that every now and then she was missing a meal, or had been evicted from her room."

Ruth must have been preoccupied during her school days also—there are curious gaps in her education. She can give beautifully literate readings of Shakespeare, page after page of mellifluous cadence. Yet, in ordinary conversation, she is apt to break out with such upsetting Goldwyn-isms as "You're barking up the dead end," or, when walking in snake territory, "I don't want to get bitten by a side-saddler."

She was surprised a few months ago to find herself spending a day and a half on the train when she went to Sun Valley; she'd had a vague notion that it was just on the other side of the far end of the Hollywood Hills. She's still not sure just where Texas is. She has little sense of direction, will invariably turn the wrong way when leaving a store, or even her home.

But, on the other hand, directors rate her a whiz at judging the emotional content of a role; (Continued on next page) and, for some reason, she has a strange sense of mechanics—she knows just what gadget has gone flooey, and why, when her car fails to perk.

Ruth receives a delicate token of affection from Sir Renfrew, her Siamese cat. Below: She romps with her beloved mongrel, Shawn—who's in the portrait with her.

ROMAN CANDLE

(Continued from preceding page)

Ruth is five feet, four inches of dark, creamy girl, with reddish-black hair and brown eyes. The most characteristic thing about her is speech and motion—the first is unceasing and so, practically, is the second. At home, coffee cup in one hand and pot in the other, she'll start a sentence in one room and finish it in another. At the studio she is a wanderer, poking around somewhere behind the set, stumbling over electrical equipment in some dark recess of the cavernous stages, or worming through a group of technicians and grips to reach some remote spot everyone knows she is going to leave the moment she gets there.

Joe Cotten spoke to her in exasperation one day when they were shooting Beyond the Forest, with Bette Davis. "The way you jitter about I thought sure that you were full of nerves," he said. "Yet, when you get in front of the camera you're as cool and poised as anyone I've ever seen. How do you do it?"

"I don't know," she replied. "I guess it's just my power of relapsation."

After some of her friends kept insisting that they thought she was nervous, Ruth went to her doctor and talked to him steadily for a half hour about it. When she got through he assured her she wasn't nervous. Wiping the perspiration from his forehead, he said, "You're just the mentally energetic type that makes other people nervous."

You'd think that anyone just crowding into place on Hollywood's gold-and-glamor escalator would be quite willing to forget early poverty-stricken years. Not Ruth. She loves to talk about her youthful days in Boston—which she became old enough to investigate just about the time her father, a Revere Beach carnival barker, died.

Recalling tomboy escapades like hitching truck-rides with the neighborhood gang, or afternoons listening to the "Pop" concerts along the Charles River when she got older and ladylike, she will become quickly homesick for both the Boston she grew up in and the girl she was—with, however, reservations.

She doesn't want to be reminded about all the broccoli and spinach and sliced apples and raw carrots and liver and gooey body-builders they plied her with in school, nor the tonics, syrups, nostrums, raw eggs and more liver that her mother always had waiting for her at home.

Bringing up two older daughters, Ann and Eve, besides Ruth, Mrs. Roman worried about her youngest for a long time until she finally realized there was apparently nothing weak about Ruth, except her appearance. The way she discovered this was that over the course of years everybody else in the family was normal enough to get sick occasionally, but never Ruth—not even with whooping cough. From that point on Mrs. Roman confined Ruth's health treatments to pinching her cheeks daily to combat her pallid look—and giving her advice.

Ruth needed advice. She grew funny-looking. At 13, she became sweater-girl-like. That is, she did in the most important sweater-girl place. Otherwise, her profile was pure toothpick. It was so disconcerting that she slumped into a compensatory sort of posture, caving in, so to speak, until Mrs. Roman put a stop to it and made her straighten up.

"Mother, what's wrong with me?" said Ruth desperately.

"Nothing," was the reply. "The rest of you just hasn't caught up yet, that's all."

But it did. The most welcome compliment ever paid her came a few years later and was in the form of a wolf whistle. This whistle didn't, as had all previous ones, waver undecidedly or end on a puzzled, interrogatory note. This whistle was 100% undiluted admiration, forthright, and loud, too.

Some time before this, some of Ruth's playmates had caught her walking down the street with her hair curiously fluffed up and out in front, and one of them got wise immediately. Pointing a finger at Ruth she cried, "I know what you're doing! You're imitating Katharine Hepburn like she looked in Spitfire!"

Ruth was delighted with the accusation. She thought that was pretty good recognition of her ability as an actress, because, not only was she wearing her hair like Katharine Hepburn, but for days after seeing that picture she had been Katharine Hepburn—feeling, talking, thinking like Katharine.

There followed other periods when she looked, or thought she looked, like other stars. But the point is that this was when Ruth first heard the theater calling. And she had already answered, "Oh, yes!"

At the William Blackstone School where she took her grade schooling, she got into little playlets. When all she could get was the part of one of the elves in Bridget and the Elves (it was always a blonde who played Bridget), she decided to enlarge her activities and got into plays staged by the settlement houses in her neighborhood. She branched out further and got into little theaters around Boston, finally winning a scholarship in the Bishop Lee Dramatic School.

One day another dramatic organization in town, the Elizabeth Peabody Playhouse, announced that it was casting E. J. Wolfson's play, Excursion. She wanted the part of Daisy and was permitted to try for it at a Sunday rehearsal. Afterward, every player except Ruth got a copy of the play to study. She felt bad since this indicated that she had failed—but she asked if she could rehearse again, anyway. Robert J. Delaney, the director, nodded. She attended three rehearsals and then could wait no longer.

"Is there a chance you'll let me play the part?" she asked him.

He looked doubtful. "I don't know if you'll do or not. I've got someone else in mind . . . but you have worked hard and have been very faithful." He took a dime from his pocket. "Tell you what. Heads you can have a chance—tails, it's no."

He flipped a coin in the air—but Ruth's hand flicked out and caught it. She held it tightly and said, "You'll never know what it was, Mr. Delaney. You'll have to decide for yourself."

"What!" he cried. Then, "Oh, very well. You can start. Give me back my dime."

"Oh, thank you, Mr. Delaney!" she gasped. And still holding onto the dime, she ran all the way home to tell her mother and sisters.

Long before her (Continued on page 64)

modern screen's hollywood pictorial

■ In the emotional moment on the opposite page, Esther Williams and Janet Blair exchange joyful hugs and kisses on Janet's recent return to the Hollywood spotlight from the self-imposed exile into which she went in 1947. With this and other outstanding news photos and exclusive picture stories on the following pages, MODERN SCREEN presents the third in its series devoted to a pictorial coverage of Hollywood in action—that shifting and fascinating kaleidoscope of excitement, gaiety and pathos. Here you'll meet the stars in situations romantic and funny, public and intimate, relaxed and hectic. For this—including more about the ladies opposite—please turn the page.

continued ➤

JANET BLAIR, WHO QUIT FILMS, HAS NEW HOLLYWOOD TRIUMPH.

Ben Gage pins an orchid on Janet at Ciro's, where he and Esther Williams gave her an opening-night party.

Jane Powell and Geary Steffen take a night off from fixing up their new apartment to go to Janet's opening.

Janet's parents join in the congratulatory kisses at her party. After Ciro's, she tours in South Pacific.

Arrived in Hollywood, Richard Todd, sensation of The Hasty Heart, and his wife Kitty unpack in their hotel.

RICHARD TODD, WHO HAS STARRED

■ The Hollywood welcome mat was put out with a flourish recently—to receive a "homecoming" girl who'd been in Hollywood for years and had left in disgust, and a man who'd never been there before.

The girl, Janet Blair, had come to Hollywood eight years ago and had quickly landed a number of glamor-girl movie roles. But then she grew fed up with parts that, she says, made her a "poor man's Rita Hayworth." So Janet, who'd studied dancing and singing for years in her native Altoona, Pennsylvania, went East in 1947 to embark on a career as a dancer-singer-comedienne. After making smash hits in movie-palace stage shows and at swank night clubs in New York and Chicago, she'd established herself as a top-flight attraction when she returned to Hollywood recently to appear at Ciro's. The town greeted her with cheers, and Esther Williams and Ben Gage threw a party for her at Ciro's on her gala opening night. Soon she'll leave Hollywood again, to star in the touring company of South Pacific.

The other arrival was husky, tweedy Richard Todd, the British actor who's become a rave after his first film, The Hasty Heart—made in England by Warners. Accompanied by his wife, Kitty, he has come from England after finishing Stage Fright with Jane Wyman, to make Lightning Strikes Twice. Todd was born in Ireland of English parents in 1919. He saw much action with the British Army in the war, was wounded and hospitalized. In 1946, he joined a repertory theater in Scotland. He was there 18 months, becoming a sound actor and getting proficient in the brogue he uses in The Hasty Heart.

It was homecoming for one star. For the other, it was the first glimpse of an astonishing town that will doubtless be his address for many years to come.

The Todds take a wondering look at their new hometown. Dick likes a pipe but rarely poses with one (below). He thinks it looks affected.

A stroll down Hollywood Boulevard past Grauman's Chinese Theater is an adventure for Dick and Kitty. Hollywood hasn't ceased to amaze them.

N HIS FIRST TWO FILMS, COMES TO HOLLYWOOD FROM ENGLAND FOR MORE TRIUMPHS.

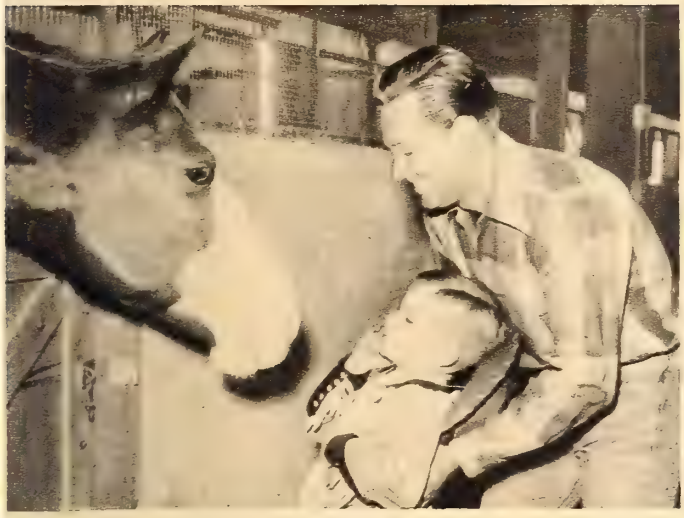
more pictures→

TWO EX-BACHELORS ARE GLAD THEY DID IT.

Jimmy Stewart is by now an old married man compared to another recent Hollywood bridegroom, Clark Gable. Jimmy (top), settling down to whack the ball as wife Gloria watches anxiously, had settled down to happy domesticity while Clark, here with his Sylvia at Honolulu, still honeymooned. Each, clearly, liked his new status.

ON WEEKLY FUN-FILLED TRIPS, A

1. Bill Holden helps son West with a boot while, with Glenn Ford and his son, Peter, they wait to set forth on their weekly ride in the San Fernando Valley.



4. West and Peter handle the haywagon's reins like experts—but of two schools of thought. While West keeps shouting, "Giddiap," Peter orders, "Whoa!"

7. Glenn gives Peter a pointer on the technique of holding the reins with one hand. Peter's been riding almost since he could stand and is a fine horseman.

AIR OF LONG-TIME FRIENDS, BILL HOLDEN AND GLENN FORD, MAKE PALS OF THEIR SONS.

2. Six-year-old (Two-Gun) West Holden is a very brave cowboy but a mite shy when his dad introduces him to a strange bronco at the Hudkins stables. Old Paint, who's fond of cowboys, smiles encouragingly.

3. Completely at ease, four-and-a-half-year-old Peter Ford stops to talk to an old friend across a feeding trough. Visiting the stables, assorted livestock is always an exciting part of the day's outing for the youngsters.

5. You can lead a horse to water but, as the saying goes, you shouldn't even try with a mule. Peter and West tug manfully, but the mule, despite all attempts of the men to reason with him, intends to sit this one out.

6. The preliminaries over with, the boys and their dads now start for the horses—as rain or shine, they do every week. Toting their small-fry saddles, the kids walk fast to keep up with long-striding Bill and Glenn.

8. The lads watch critically as Glenn, no slouch at horsemanship, handles his spirited Palomino with ease. Peter and West are ardent Western fans, discuss cowboys—especially Gene Autry and Roy Rogers—all week.

9. Headed for trails that once led to the hideouts of famous outlaws, the rollicking pardners hit leather for the hills. Glenn Ford and Bill Holden, firm friends themselves, are making firm friends of their sons.

the end

(Continued from page 42) to the statue. It's probably in the Louvre."

"It's probably a radiator cap," said Rock Hudson.

Posing for Colleen was less demanding for Dale than his other modeling chore had been. He just kept right on painting while Colleen drew him.

Joyce MacKenzie decided that perhaps she could do better if she, too, had a model. She spied two rag dolls seated in a tiny wicker chair by the fireplace and took these for her subjects. The dolls, named Rainbow and Oggle, are Betty's good luck charms. A girl she roomed with in New York gave them to her one day—and that very afternoon Betty received her contract from 20th Century-Fox.

Everyone present except Rock Hudson—and, of course, us Churchills—was under contract to 20th Century-Fox. They see each other almost every day at the studio. Betty Lynn is in Cheaper by the Dozen, Colleen Townsend is in When Willie Comes Marching Home, Bob Arthur is in 12 O'Clock High, Randy Stuart is in Dancing in the Dark, Dale Robertson is in The Cariboo Trail, and Lee MacGregor and Joyce MacKenzie are in A Ticket to Tomahawk.

Rock Hudson is at Universal-International and had just been given the romantic lead opposite Diana Lynn in Peggy. He met the others when he joined their little-theater group. This earnest organization meets once a week in the barn behind director Howard Hawks' Bel-Air house to read scripts and rehearse plays. The youthful members are so eager to learn all they can about acting that when they're talking about it the air is charged with enthusiasm.

Their eagerness for painting had started off with the same fire—but now was dwindling down to a sputter. Rock was constantly bobbing from one side of the room to the other. "Must paint in the north light," he claimed, "if I'm to do my best." Betty took a squint at his sketch pad and suggested, "Maybe no light would be better."

Randy Stuart was the first to complete her assignment, "A Nightmare"—and then started sketching various ways Betty could rearrange the furniture in the living-room. "I was almost an interior decorator," Randy told us. "Then I became interested in radio work. When 20th heard me on a Jack Carson broadcast and offered me a contract, I put my decorating plans in mothballs."

Betty kept spurring us on to greater efforts. A perfect hostess, she bounced from one easel to the next, making sure we all had enough paint, clean water, and plenty of brushes.

Betty has a miniature warehouse of painting paraphernalia. "I'm a sentimental saver," she confessed, and showed us a battered tin, water-color box. "I used this in grammar school."

She has kept most of her early paintings. There's a self-portrait done at the age of eight which reveals a gingham-dressed youngster with carrot-red pigtails and huge brown eyes. There's also a fine landscape of some of the countryside around her native Kansas City.

Showing us one of her watercolors, Betty recalled, "This was supposed to be the picnic grounds after a rain. My sixth-grade teacher looked at it and said, 'Betty, there's always some item in each of your paintings I can't identify.' This time she was referring to that brown splotch on the right-hand corner. That got there when my dog turned over a bottle of brown paint on the sketch. I thought it looked like a mudhole—so I just let it stay there."

Betty also had a book of sketches she did on her wartime USO tour of Burma. There were pencil drawings of a tight-lipped Burmese woman holding a baby and of a missionary standing in the bombed-out archway of what had once been a church. We studied some of the others and sighed dejectedly. Nothing we could paint could compare with these.

"We'll just see about that," said Betty. "Come on, everyone—turn in your paintings. We're going to have an exhibit and see who gets first prize."

The dining room was turned into an art gallery with each of us taping our work on the wall. Betty appointed us Churchills as judges—don't ask us why!

The pictures had all been hung at slightly different angles so it looked as if this side of the wall had been caught in a whirlwind.

It was a difficult decision—until we came to Bob Arthur's masterpiece. It had the word "top" printed on it so there'd be no question as to which way it should be hung. (A very necessary direction.)

Colleen eyed the vibrant blue paint with a small red circle in the middle and antennae stretching out in all directions. "Is it a caterpillar?" she asked.

"Certainly not!" boomed Bob indignantly.

"Well," said Colleen apologetically, "maybe if I back away I can get a better perspective."

"If you get far enough away," said Lee MacGregor, "it doesn't look half bad—just all bad, ha-ha-ha."

the winnah! . . .

Anything, we reasoned, that caused so much attention should be rewarded. We pinned first prize on Bob's drawing.

The booby prize went to Joyce and Randy. Having completed the assignments that Betty had suggested for them—"A Nightmare" and "The Big Eye"—they had stuck Lee MacGregor's head through an empty frame and had painted his face like a clown's. (See page 40.—Ed.) It was alive, all right, but—with no disrespect to Mr. MacGregor—it just wasn't Art.

The prizewinners were invited to make acceptance speeches.

"I can see the judges appreciate true art," said Bob. "Just look at those bold strokes, that vibrant hue, that magnificent balance, that—"

"Personally," interrupted Dale, "I'd rather study that delicate green lettuce salad over there, and try balancing a plateful of those beans."

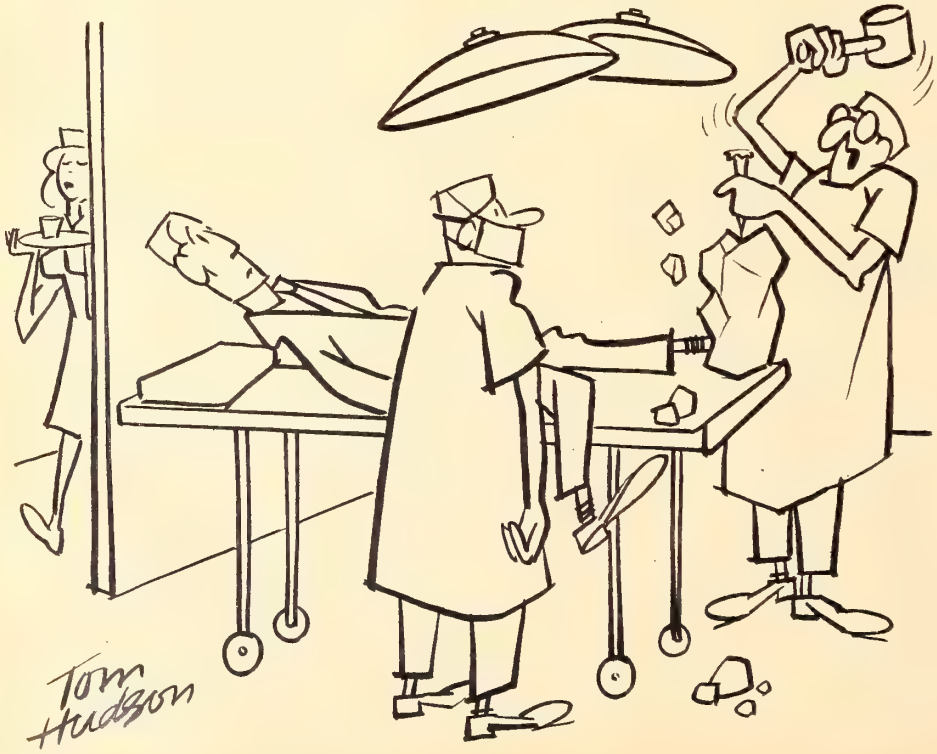
Most of us, we must admit, belonged to the same earthy school as Dale. None of this starving-in-the-garret stuff for us!

The buffet, gleaming with green candles and shiny silver, was loaded with ham and tuna sandwiches, salad, beans, and king-sized hunks of delectable chocolate layer-cake.

After feasting, we returned to the living room and deposited some of our less creative attempts in the fireplace—and lighted them.

Dale, who had been bemoaning the fact that his "April Fool" self-portrait hadn't been given any acclaim, said, "That's the best picture I've ever seen."

"You mean your own one?" asked Joyce incredulously.



"Heck, no," drawled Dale in his Oklahoma-flavored accent. "I mean the sight of some of those paintings going up in smoke."

We felt a little indignant at this remark. Then, we began to wonder—could it be justified? Bonnie took another look at her charcoal study—which told in clean-cut strokes the plight of a cross-eyed owl. She took it down from the wall, being careful not to smear the charcoal, gazed at it tenderly for a second, and tossed it into the fireplace.

The others followed suit.

Then Betty came forward. She handed each of us another sketch pad. "Shall we start over again?" she suggested.

We all declined politely. THE END

"He held it too long for photographers at Grauman's!"

For lips that say "I Dare You"

—Try this creamy, clinging lipstick... in eight fashionable "come-hither" shades!

Smoothly, evenly does it with exciting Cashmere Bouquet Lipstick! So creamy, so caressing that you hardly know it's there until . . .

You look and see how vibrantly alive your lips have become! Vivid, eager, with a dewy-fresh air about them that seems to say "I dare you!"

Then Cashmere Bouquet clings . . . and clings . . . and clings. But seeing is believing, so see for yourself, today!

Colors? No other lipstick, at any price, can better Cashmere Bouquet's range of fashion-right shades!

There's a Cashmere Bouquet Cosmetic for Almost Every Beauty Need!

FACE POWDER
Smooth, velvety texture! 6 "Flower-Fresh" shades!

ALL-PURPOSE CREAM
For radiant, "date-time" loveliness—a bedtime beauty must!

TALCUM POWDER
A shower of spring flowers!

HAND LOTION
Caressable hands in just seconds!

For the skin that doesn't like heavy foundation

Sheer beauty for the skin that doesn't like to feel "coated"! A greaseless base that makes powder cling—yet leaves your skin feeling free to breathe

Petal-light Powder Base! Greaseless! Holds powder without "coating"!

If your skin prefers a delicate, more natural foundation—smooth on a thin, thin veil of Pond's Vanishing Cream before powder. It's completely greaseless! Disappears instantly, leaving only a protecting, translucent film. No streaking. No discoloring. Powder goes on beautifully—and stays!

Beautifying Mask before make-up . . . Makes skin brighter, smoother in 1 minute!

Always when you want to look your prettiest—have a stimulating pick-up with a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Cover your face, except eyes, with a generous cloak of the Cream. After one minute tissue off clean. The Cream's "keratolytic" action loosens clinging dirt and dead skin flakes. Dissolves them off! Lovely young Mrs. Whitney says, "A Mask gives my skin a smoother, clearer look—a perfect finish for make-up!"

Mrs. Robert Bacon Whitney says: "I always have a 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream before I go out! This one quick little 'special-occasion' beauty treatment does so much for my complexion."

sweet and hot

Highly Recommended
*Recommended
No Stars: Average

by leonard feather

FROM THE MOVIES

NANCY GOES TO RIO—An album of tunes from the new MGM musical featuring Jane Powell, Ann Sothern, and Carmen Miranda. *Magic Is The Moonlight *Love Is Like This *Ca-Room' Pa-Pa (MGM).

MY FOOLISH HEART—Gordon Jenkins gives a rich treatment to a lovely tune which is the title song from the picture* (Decca).

HAPPY TIMES—*Happy Times (Decca) by Danny Kaye.
A pleasant tune from Danny's latest picture.

ADAM'S RIB—Farewell Amanda by Robert Lenn (MGM).
Robert Lenn and a vocal chorus do a good job on a cute but undistinguished tune.

CINDERELLA—Bibbidi-Bobbidi-Boo by Dinah Shore (Columbia).
Dinah does as well as you would expect on this novelty from Walt Disney's latest production.

THE THIRD MAN—The Third Man Theme by Franz Dietschmann* (MGM).
If you can stand a zither for three minutes you ought to like this intriguing number from the British movie which has caused quite a sensation in Europe.

ALBUMS

BILLY ECKSTINE—"Songs by Billy Eckstine" (MGM).
This album of six sides by "Mr. Vibrato" gives an excellent example of what he can do with such standards as Someone To Watch Over Me, My Old Flame, Over The Rainbow, You Go To My Head.

ARTIE SHAW—"Modern Music For Clarinet"* (Columbia LP).
This is an enjoyable mixture of everything from Shostakovitch to Cole Porter, with a little Ravel, Debussy and Gershwin thrown in. There are no flashy technical displays here, but it is warm, mellow music throughout.

DOROTHY SHAY—"Coming 'Round The Mountain"* (Columbia LP).
Here is witty and tasteful singing of eight rather polished folk songs by "The Park Avenue Hillbillie."

NELSON EDDY—"A Song Jamboree"* (Columbia LP).
Eight sides of the special material that Nelson Eddy does so well, the sort of outdoor-folk novelty-ballad type song.

COUNT BASIE—"Count Basie Dance Parade"* (Columbia LP).
Here are eight choice sides by what was once the jumpingest band in the land, recorded around 1945, one of the high spots in the Count's career.

JIMMY DORSEY—"Dixie By Dorsey" (Columbia LP).
Jimmy and seven other like-minded gents give out with some competent Dixieland on such old jazz standards as Jazz Me Blues, Tin Roof Blues, High Society, Panama, etc.

...and so to wed

On things like jokes and wines and cheeses, they agree—so naturally
it's a wonderful match.
Besides, they're in love.

BY EDWARD HOLLISTER

A radiant Betsy welcomed Cary home from his trip to Europe last summer.

■ It was very simple to board the plane, to fly to that little ranch near Phoenix, to stand before the minister amidst a group of strangers—and thus be wed. And that, at the time, was the only story the world got about it—that simple story, which was an incomplete story indeed.

Because, after all, there were two human beings involved, and human beings have emotions. Betsy Drake and Cary Grant were not just automatons that Christmas morning—even if at times, like many a couple on their wedding day, they behaved as if they were.

To begin with, they were hardly nonchalant about it all. For proof, take a bit of dialogue that went on between Betsy and Howard Hughes, who piloted the plane, just before they took off from Los Angeles.

"Are you nervous about flying?" he asked.

Betsy was seen to raise expressive shoulders in a gesture of helplessness. "I'm too nervous about the wedding to worry about anything else," she replied.

Perhaps they were more nervous than they would ordinarily have been because the wedding had been delayed a week. It had originally been set for the Sunday before, with all the same efficient arrangements made to elude the press. But no arrangements had been made with the weather man—and it had rained so hard they couldn't make the flight.

It was depressing. Betsy hung her new brown-and-white checked dress, bought especially to be married in, back in the wardrobe. When she saw Cary he smiled sympathetically and said something about their not being favored by the gods. Betsy was in the middle of a picture so they both knew they wouldn't be able to get away until the following Sunday. But that would be (Continued on page 103)

After four years of an exceptionally happy marriage, Jeanne Crain and Paul Brinkman smile at life and

State of the Union

by Louis Pollock

■ Referring to the Hollywood divorce situation, a wit suggested not long ago that it might be a good idea to have a judge make regular rounds of the film studios to grant divorces, thus saving the stars the bother of having to go to court so often.

But even in Hollywood, you won't find anybody willing to bet that the marriage of Jeanne Crain and Paul Brinkman won't endure. Like Betty Grable and Harry James (see page 27), Jeanne and Paul appear to be as permanent a combination as flowers and springtime.

The Brinkmans, who have just celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary, started off in marriage with a simple if unique policy: Any question that arose between them was settled by whoever answered first.

They didn't plan this. It just came naturally. As Jeanne recalls it from her point of view, "When we were first married I wouldn't dream of even breathing out of rhythm with Paul."

When this policy was in force, there was rarely a departure from it. But in the course of time there were two periods when it wasn't in force. During both of these, in which Jeanne was an expectant mother, all ordinary rules were suspended. Paul acknowledged her right to change her mind, question all decisions (including her own), and even, if she didn't feel like it, fail to make sense at all—as many a young wife has been known to at a time like that.

And so, while they waited for their firstborn, Paul, Jr., to make his debut, it was nothing for them to abandon a fine dinner, untouched, and go driving along Sunset Boulevard to hunt a hot-dog stand because Jeanne had (Continued on page 100) claim they've just been lucky. But it takes more than luck to create a successful union such as theirs.

Are you really Lovely to Love?

try the test below

Have you ever wondered if you are as lovely as you could be—are you completely sure of your charm? Your deodorant can be the difference . . . and you will never know how lovely you can be until you use FRESH Cream Deodorant.

FRESH is so completely effective, yet so easy and pleasant to use . . . Different from any deodorant you have ever tried. Prove this to yourself with the jar of creamy, smooth FRESH we will send you.

Test it. Send 10¢ to cover handling charges to FRESH, Chrysler Building, New York, for a jar.

*Constant research at a great American university is your assurance that FRESH is the most effective deodorant and anti-perspirant that can be used.

roman candle

(Continued from page 52) scholarship was up at the dramatic school, Ruth decided she was ready for New York. She went there and had a fine, early, theatrical career, learning how to walk up one side of Broadway and down the other, how to open and close producers' office doors, and how to eat on 30 cents a day—except when she was lucky and could get a job serving "coffee and" at various lunch places. Once in a blue moon she would get a magazine modeling stint. Once in a bluer moon she would get as far as a backstage interview. And, on the other hand, once on a New Year's Eve, she came back to her hotel to find her door locked against her for failure to pay umpteen weeks' rent.

Actors and actresses now in Hollywood who knew her then declare she wasn't particularly downhearted. Even when she was locked out she didn't wire home or run to friends for help. She just went out for a cup of coffee and got to talking with a girl who had just moved into a rooming house on Park Avenue not two blocks away from the J. Pierpont Morgan mansion. The girl was lonely and Ruth was needy. So. . . .

It was a fine room with an unusual feature: The brick wall of the house next door was flat up against their window, with perhaps two inches of air space to spare. It came in handy for the girls. They used it as a bulletin board to chalk messages to each other. "NOBODY CALLED" is what one or the other would usually find upon returning home. It wasn't much of a message—but neither of them liked a blank wall.

baby face . . .

The trouble with Ruth on Broadway was her face. Her body had matured most satisfactorily, all right, but for some reason she was off again on another growth tangent—her face was still baby-like. There just wasn't anyone writing dramatic parts for a set-up like that. Today, Nature has finally done right by Ruth, but it was all strictly wild until the final assembly was over.

In the three years that she spent in New York, Ruth doesn't think she averaged an income of nine dollars a week. Nevertheless, when a run of modeling assignments brought her $200 in cash, she didn't save it for a rainy day. She bought a $96 ticket to Los Angeles, ate four dollars' worth on the way, and had a hundred left when she arrived. It was to be a long time before she would have that much cash together again.

Ruth got great chances right from the start—and kept on losing the promised parts. Nothing ever happened wrong when just a bit part was involved. That always came through. But when she was up for a lead in The Big Clock with Charles Laughton, for instance, that went out the window at the last moment.

There were others—as fine a list of lost opportunities as any actress in Hollywood can boast. She was considered but finally thumbed out for a lead in The Bachelor and the Bobby Soxer with Cary Grant. Amidst all sorts of excitement she was told to be set to play opposite Dick Powell in Cornered. She was set and then upset. Ditto opposite Alan Ladd in Whispering Smith. Ditto opposite Bob Hope in Paleface.

She was up for these parts because producers always talk about putting new and fresh faces into their pictures. She lost the parts because after producers talk about fresh faces they generally end up by saying, ". . . but it will be safer to put in a box-office name."

"They're playing cat and nip with me," she told friends—who were beginning to wonder if her confidence in herself as an actress wasn't weakening.

It was Dore Schary who gave Ruth her first real start. It was the part in Leo J. McCarey's picture, Good Sam, involving a fine scene with Gary Cooper. From this she stepped into The Window as the murderess, and after that, of course, came Champion, with Kirk Douglas—and Ruth was on her way.

She is still unchanged. Her steadiest boy friend is the same man she knew when she was nobody—Bill Walsh, a sage Hollywood writer who, on the side, also manufactures the town's best ice cream. They are together often, but both deny that they are engaged, even if Ruth very honestly avows that, ultimately, it's to be marriage and babies for her.

pretty picture . . .

But that's ultimately. Right now she is one of the busiest actresses in Hollywood, with seven pictures to her credit in 1949, counting Rock Bottom and Colt .45 which she recently finished at Warner Brothers, where she is now under contract.

Outside of this, she has been moving from a rented home in Coldwater Canyon to a house she bought in the Valley, and she has had her picture painted—a full-length study by Ross Shattuck, artist-husband of one of Hollywood's top publicists, Margaret Ettinger. (A picture of the picture is on page 50.—Ed.)

It also happens to be a picture of Ruth's dog, Shawn, a mongrel combination of Kerry Blue and alleged Hungarian Puli. She insisted that Shawn be in the picture. Her own pose is an elegant one, with a sad, pensive expression á la Sarah Bernhardt. Shawn's expression is not pensive. He looks as if he is thinking of his favorite sport, which is biting studio messengers who come to the house bringing bad scripts—and they're all bad as far as Shawn is concerned. He also likes to bite Bill Walsh, the man who gave him to Ruth.

And that's the story of Ruth Roman—except to add that, according to latest reports, she is still preoccupied. When she was moving to the Valley, Bill Walsh helped her and he happened to find a dusty little radio in a clothes closet. He plugged it in and tuned in a fine symphony program.

As he sat listening, Ruth walked in, face lost in thought. She noticed the radio and gestured toward it. "Throw that out, Bill," she said. "There's something wrong with it. It doesn't play." Then she was gone—not, apparently, having heard a note of the music. The End

CORRECTION

In the story, "You Know Me, Allyson!" by Gwen Littlefield, which appeared in the January issue of Modern Screen, MGM producer Joe Pasternak was described as having a "thick German accent that couldn't be swept away by a tractor."

This description was incorrect. Mr. Pasternak's accent, which is by no means as heavy as Modern Screen's descriptive phrase implied, is not German but Hungarian. He was born in Hungary, came to this country as a youth, and has for many years been an American citizen. One of the most widely respected and popular men in the film industry, Mr. Pasternak has been influential in bringing to fame such stars as Kathryn Grayson, Deanna Durbin, June Allyson and Mario Lanza.

Dream girl, dream girl, beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl

Hair that gleams and glistens from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!...Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

Exclusive! This magical secret-blend lather with Lanolin!

Exciting! This new three-way hair loveliness . . .

Not a soap! Not a liquid! But Kay Daumit's cream shampoo with lanolin. Jars: $2, $1. Jars and tubes: 49¢, 25¢.

1 Leaves hair silken soft, instantly manageable . . . first wondrous result of a Lustre-Creme shampoo. Makes lavish, lanolin-blessed lather even in hardest water. No more unruly, soap-dulled locks. Leaves hair soft, obedient, for any style hair-do.

2 Leaves hair sparkling with star-bright sheen. No other shampoo has the same magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin to bring out every highlight. No special rinse needed with Lustre-Creme Shampoo.

3 Leaves hair fragrantly clean, free of loose dandruff. Famous hairdressers insist on Lustre-Creme, the world's leading cream shampoo. Yes, tonight, show him a lovelier you—after a Lustre-Creme shampoo!

south pacific fashions

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ What could you expect from a super-smash hit that has all the girls mad for Pinza, all the boys crazy for Mary Martin, and everybody whistling "Some Enchanted Evening"? South Pacific fashions, natch . . . from the musical of the same name!

For your prettiest spring clothes, the Cohama textile people have dreamed up heavenly prints and melting shades inspired by the exciting colors, terrific tropical backgrounds and bewitching music of the hardest-to-get-tickets-to show in years. We present a group of them on pages 67-69, and for our money they're knockouts. They all bear an authentic tag with a picture of Mary Martin herself—and you couldn't possibly wear them and not score a hit with your private public.

Geraldine Brooks wears enchanted evening blue

Geraldine Brooks, currently appearing in Volcano, the picture she made in Italy with Anna Magnani, wears one of the prizes in the South Pacific collection.

It's a soft, sea-water blue—as romantic as the southern sea that inspired it—and devilishly flattering to the skin.

The dress is a beautifully molded one-piece butcher rayon, skillfully cut to make the most of the half-size figure. The huge lace pockets are especially dyed to match (matching lace is one of the season's pets). And who could overlook the shawl collar, the softly curved shoulders, and the buttoned cuffed sleeves?

The fabric is by Cohama, in exclusive South Pacific shades of Bali Hai pink, Younger-than-Springtime grey, and tropical luggage. Sizes 12½-24½. by Rite-Fit.

About $7.95. At Hutzler's Downstairs, Baltimore. For how to buy see page 73.

In this issue; gloves by Aris, jewelry by Coro.

Some tinted make-ups cling even while you splash...

But you need this cream to remove them thoroughly

Even in swimming, some girls manage to look lovely. Must be those new "stay-on" tinted make-ups!

But those same cream, cake or liquid make-ups that cling for hours are not easy to remove!

They need a special cleanser—Woodbury Cleansing Cream—specially designed to take off hard-to-remove make-ups (ordinary make-up, too). Because it contains Penaten, Woodbury Cleansing Cream penetrates deeper into the pore openings. It loosens every trace of make-up and grime so you can tissue it off instantly!

So mild, so gentle is this special cream that sensitive skins prefer it. Your skin, too, will look baby-fresh when you cleanse with Woodbury Cleansing Cream! 20¢, 39¢, 69¢ plus tax.

Woodbury Cleansing Cream

penetrates deeper because it contains PENATEN

modern screen fashions

south pacific fashions

or, in love with a wonderful buy

A cock-eyed optimist is scrawled all over this fresh young print dress with shirred bodice and empire waistline. In Cohama's special rayon and acetate South Pacific print. Navy, dusty rose, beige or aqua. Jr. sizes 9-15. $10.95. By Redley.
Where to buy, see page 73.

Bali Hai fruit and leaves bloom tropically on this sophisticated and very wearable dress with smart wide lapels and peg pockets. In Cohama's special rayon and acetate South Pacific print. Blue, dusty rose, dusty grey, or dusty beige. Sizes 12-20. By Redley. $10.95.
Where to buy, see page 73.

Honey-bun yellow lights up your pretty face and shoulders in this hip-pocketed sun-back dress with jacket (right). In Cohama's butcher rayon. Also Happy Talk red, Enchanted Evening blue, Bali Hai pink. Sizes 10-20. By Nelly Don. About $12.95. Where to buy, page 73.

Nylon's the news in this tucked navy figure-flatterer. The fabric is Burlington's "7th Wonder" 20% nylon and rayon combo —and you can wash it like a hankie. Tucks outline the bodice and hips, the collar's rayon faille. Also beige, turquoise, green. Sizes 12-20. By Lenbarry. $10.95. Where to buy, see page 73.

Sweet little, neat little can't-be-beat-little polka dot you'll love and live in. White pique makes the collar, gilt-centered pearl makes the buttons, red patent makes the belt. Rayon crepe. Also poker green, grey, luggage with bright contrasting belt. Sizes 9-15. By Bea Young. $8.95. Where to buy, see page 73.

It wouldn't be spring without NAVY and WHITE

The coat with the triangle-tab back—devil-may-care as anything. The collar flips up, the pockets curve, the back flares. Does heavenly things for your figure! In lush wool and angora, delicious to touch. White, lime, tomato, gold, pink, nude. Sizes 7-15. By Queenstown, $22.95. Where to buy, page 73.

modern screen's fabulous fashion finds dreamboat coats—under $20

And we mean dreamy.
Rarely have we seen such tremendous smartness—at such tiny prices.
We consider both the short-short fling (left) and the topping topper (below) —absolute scoops as high fashion— and beautiful, beautiful buys.

◀ Short-short Fling

(Far left) Shorter and cuter—and sky-high fashion. Shawl collar, dropped shoulders, push-up cuffs, slits to pull the scarf through. Cloud-soft all-wool fleece. Pink, white, lime, gold, red—all with navy scarf. Sizes 9-17. $19.99. How to buy, see opposite page.

▲ Topping Topper

(Above, three views.) From all possible angles—pure swank. Six smart buttons; flip-up collar; dropped shoulder seams; curved yoke back. Deliciously smooth all-wool suede cloth. Pink, gold, kelly, red, navy. Sizes 9-17. $19.99. How to buy, see opposite page.

WHERE YOU CAN BUY MODERN SCREEN FASHIONS

(Prices may vary throughout country)

SOUTH PACIFIC FASHIONS

(pages 67-69)

1. Enchanted Evening blue dress worn by Geraldine Brooks (page 67)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Women's Dresses.

2. Cockeyed Optimist print (page 68)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Junior Dresses.

3. Bali Hai print (page 68)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Misses' Dresses.

4. Honeybun yellow sun dress with jacket (page 69)
New York, N. Y.—Bloomingdale's, 59th St. & Lexington Ave., Economy Dresses, Second Floor.
Seattle, Wash.—Rhodes of Seattle, 2nd Ave. & Union St., Nelly Don Shop, Third Floor.
Washington, D. C.—Frank R. Jelleff, 1216 F St., NW, Cotton Shop, Fifth Floor.

5. Nylon navy with tucks (page 70)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Misses' Dresses.

6. Neat, sweet little polka dot (page 70)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Junior Dresses.

7. Coat with triangle-tab back (page 71)
Baltimore, Md.—Hutzler's Downstairs, 212 N. Howard St., Junior Coats.

8. Short-Short Fling Coat (opposite page)

9. Topping Topper Coat (opposite page)

GRAYSON'S
acramento, Calif.
alt Lake City, Utah
eattle, Wash.

ROBINSON'S
Chicago, Ill.
Philadelphia, Penna.
Chattanooga, Tenn.

You can also order Modern Screen Fashions by mail rder items 1-2-3; 5-6-7 from:

Betty Howard
Hutzler's Downstairs
Howard, Saratoga and Clay Sts.
Baltimore 1, Maryland

rder item 4 from Mail Order Department of ores listed, or write to Modern Screen, Box 5, Murray Hill Station, New York 16, N. Y., r additional stores.

Order items 8 and 9 with this coupon:
GRAYSON • ROBINSON DEPT. MS
601 W. 26th St., N. Y. 1, N. Y.

Please send me the coat(s) pictured on page 72 at $19.99 each, plus 21c each for postage and handling. (Check size; also 1st and 2nd color choice)

SHORTIE	TOPPER
Pink.....	Pink.....
Gold.....	Gold.....
Red.....	Red.....
White.....	Navy.....
Lime.....	Kelly.....
SIZE..... (Sizes 9-17)	SIZE..... (Sizes 9-17)

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....ZONE....STATE.....

☐ Money Order ☐ Check ☐ C.O.D.

Pantaloon— Different! Cute pedal pusher length with gay ruffles accented by white shell edge trim. So comfortable and so practical in quality rayon tricot that can't run. DELIGHTFUL!

FLORAL TONES IN
SIZES 32-38
ABOUT $5.00

Ribbonette— So you want to look pretty... well, take a tip... you'll be happier in a Strutwear slip because it's designed for beauty, cut for comfort and fit, too. Fine rayon multifilament crepe with a froth of lavish lace and faggotted pastel ribbon trim.

White with blue, pink or green ribbon trim.
SIZES 32-40
ABOUT $4.00

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Strutwear

Dull Finish Nylons

It's an EXCLUSIVE.. only STRUTWEAR takes twisted yarn and knits a stocking inside out (Strutwear's Reverse Knit process) for extra dullness, sheerness and beauty ... more snag resistance and wear. In beautiful fashion-tested, fabric-coordinated MusiColors.

SIZES 8½-10½
ABOUT $1.75

Dream Girl

How to be feminine though tailored. Pastel pajama of runproof rayon tricot—the jacket cut extra-long, in spanking white, sparked with color. Washes and dries in a wink. Aqua Lily, Camellia, Bud Green.
SIZES 32-40 $5.00

HOSIERY • GOWNS • PAJAMAS
PANTIES • SLIPS • BEDJACKETS

For the name of your nearest dealer, write

STRUTWEAR, INC., MINNEAPOLIS 4, MINN.

Please send me the following Strutwear fashions:

Pantaloon_____ Dream Girl_____ Ribbonette_____
_____Reverse Nylons _____Size
(in a shade to go with _____)

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____STATE_____

☐ Check enc. ☐ Money Order MS-1

Lux-eez
ALL NYLON garter brief

saves wearing girdle
. . . garter belt

Lux-eez, the prize garter pantie, holds your figure gently but firmly, has 2-way stretch flexibility, can be worn with or without garters. Special nylon tricot wears long, dries fast. White, Blue, Shell Pink, Maize, Black. Sizes 22 to 30—9 to 17—about $2.50, garters extra

AT FINE STORES OR WRITE US

Luxite

Lingerie by HOLEPROOF
Winner of the Fashion Academy Gold Medal Award
® Holeproof Hosiery Company
Milwaukee 1, Wisconsin
In Canada: London, Ontario

she knew what she wanted

(Continued from page 35) climbing Brentwood road to look in on the mysterious Goodriches. Mysterious, I say, because for almost a year all I'd heard out of that household was a flock of rumors designed for a magpie's nest.

Want a silly sample? Okay, how's this: Her highbrow author husband has tamed Olivia into a spineless Trilby since they were wed. Yep, left her with no will of her own, the poor, hypnotized girl, and that's the reason Olivia hasn't said "yes" to a single picture offer since The Heiress. That Goodrich man sent the scripts back. What a shame, too, because here she was with no new picture in sight. And of course you seldom saw them in public, and Olivia never referred to herself as "Miss de Havilland" any more, it was always "Mrs. Goodrich", and . . .

I just couldn't swallow that sort of stuff. For a lot of reasons. One being that years ago I'd asked Olivia why she didn't get married—away back in those restless single-girl days of hers when "The Society for the Protection of Olivia de Havilland" flourished, and Olivia had one lovesick beau after another mooning around. She'd said then, "I'm not in love."

"When will you be?" I asked her, and she answered like this:

"When I find some man I can admire, love and respect." I knew by now that man was Marcus Goodrich.

About that Trilby stuff, listen: Olivia de Havilland not only has a very well-preserved will of her own, but it's made of iron. She's proved that time and again: the most famous instance being when, at the height of her career, Livvy stayed off the screen for 18 months, fighting and winning an exhausting and costly legal battle, not over money but a principle—the principle being that the time a player spends on suspension should be included in the length of time for which the player is under contract to a studio. That classic victory is by now a Hollywood bill of rights for stars.

As for staying out of the Hollywood glamor case—well, Olivia was never in. If she's seemed even more out of sight of late, there's been a pretty valid reason: For seven months Mrs. Goodrich stayed in bed fighting a gallant, tedious battle to have what she's always wanted—a son.

As long as the Goodriches stick around Hollywood—and they plan to for a good long time, thanks—you and I will be hearing all sorts of rumors and crazy conceptions about their private lives. It's inevitable because, as a pair, they don't fit the Hollywood pattern. They know what they want—and they have it—and what it is not showy artificiality but quiet solid living and achievement.

But let's take a good look. That's what I climbed the hill for.

efficiency personified . . .

Olivia herself met me at the door, brushing past her butler in what I knew was not the approved Goodrich style. The reason Livvy happened to answer the doorbell is because I didn't have a chance to buzz it. She'd just come in herself, windblown and ruddy, with her dusty blue cashmere and tweed skirt setting off her pink cheeks to perfection. She still wore her British walkers, and Marcus carried his stick. The Airedale, Shadrack, jumped at their heels.

"Had lunch, finished business, writing's done, walk's over," rattled Olivia, "and now it's time for tea. You're right on the nose."

"Good heavens!" I gasped, "you sound like a memo pad or something. Are you as on-the-dot and disciplined every day?"

She laughed. "That's the routine of the Goodriches. Want the whole program—Our Day?"

I nodded and she was off like this: "Up at seven for a look in the nursery, breakfast at eight, at nine Marcus leaves for his office, I get to work in my room—mail, scripts, and career business. Lunch together at two—a long leisurely one—then croquet, swimming, or a walk with dogs, tea at five with nice people like you, then dressing and dinner at eight with or without guests. Conversation, reading—bed—how's that?"

"Sounds marvelous," I admitted, "but what do you do when something comes along and jams the works?"

"It doesn't," grinned Olivia. "We don't let it."

"You speak of miracles," I sighed, but Olivia caught that one fast.

"The miracle is right down there," she pointed, "Want to see?"

a long battle won . . .

Did I? I've never refused a peek at a baby yet and I never will. And Olivia's baby, anybody will admit, is something special. I don't need to go into the long courageous battle she had to realize her dreams of motherhood. All Hollywood knows about that, and all Hollywood was pulling for Olivia as they never pulled before. Doctors had told her years before she'd have trouble being a mother. That didn't faze Olivia when her chance came. Many times she had an obstetrician standing by day and night. Many other times she weathered risky nip-and-tuck moments when it looked as if her baby were lost. At times she couldn't even listen to the radio, read exciting books or mail. Marcus even had to censor the daily papers before he let her see them—they might send her blood pressure up and threaten the project. Throughout it all Olivia never complained or whimpered, never for a minute lost faith in what she just had to have—a perfect baby, a son.

We walked through the living room, and into the nursery, a whole wing devoted to baby and nurse—a wing which, Marcus ruefully noted, he had picked for himself and the novel he's writing. "Ben pushed me out of that pronto," he laughed. "What book can compete with a baby?"

I wasn't surprised when I saw the quarters Olivia prepared for her infant son. Nothing frilly about it, nothing cute or corny, just solidly sensible with the best of workable equipment from stove and icebox to bathinette and scales, and all immaculate and sterile. She organized it scientifically, properly and sensibly as Mrs. G does with just about everything she tackles.

"Here's where you'll find me on the Big Day of The Week," smiled Livvy. The Big Day, she explained, was nurse's day off. That's when she takes over the whole care and feeding of Ben, from mixing pablum to fixing a fast didy—and loves it. Matter of fact, Livvy said, she was determined, before her baby arrived, that no one but his mama would care for him. And she even went beyond that. "This," Livvy had said in a burst of maternal emotion, "is my career from now on. I'll quit acting, I'll devote myself and my life to bringing up my boy." She meant it then, too. Luckily, though, she listened to reason when her friends, including her own doctor, told her that would be a big mistake—for herself, her boy, her husband and everyone concerned. But it shows how close Hollywood's first lady came to leaving the screen, also the value she places on this bundle of blessedness who peered cockily up from his crib at two worshipping parents and me.

"This 'quick snack' took 14 hours to prepare!"

says WANDA HENDRIX, starring in UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL'S "SIERRA"
Color by TECHNICOLOR

THE SCRIPT CALLED FOR A SNACK . . . THE DIRECTOR CALLED FOR RETAKES. AFTER 14 HOURS, MY HANDS FELT SCORCHED!

RASPING REINS nearly tore out my fingers in one scene . . .

AND CLAWING through laurel was rough on my hands . . .

BUT JERGENS LOTION kept my hands "Screen-Perfect . . .

SO THEY were lovely and appealing for romantic close-ups.

BEING A LIQUID, Jergens is absorbed by thirsty skin.

CAN YOUR LOTION OR HAND CREAM PASS THIS "FILM TEST"?

To soften, a lotion or cream should be absorbed by upper layers of skin. Jergens Lotion contains quickly-absorbed ingredients doctors recommend—no heavy oils that merely coat the skin. Proof? Water won't "bead" on hand smoothed with Jergens Lotion (left hand) as with a lotion or cream that leaves a heavy, oily film (right hand).

YOU CAN PROVE it with this simple test described above . . .

YOU'LL SEE why Jergens Lotion is my beauty secret . . .

Jergens Lotion

used by more women than any other hand care in the world

still 10¢ to $1 plus tax

USED by Hollywood stars 7 to 1 over other hand cares!

You're flower fresh . . .

A Jerell Jr. New York

In Crisp Cotton

$10.95

You're sweet, you're appealing, you're beautiful to see in this delicately fashioned Jerell Junior shirtwaister that moves from office to dates to informal dancing with the same smart good taste.
Made of Bates' PICOLAY* the first and finest all-combed embossed cotton . . . it's easy to wash, hard to wrinkle and wears like true love.

Lilac, Pink, Blue, Aqua Sizes 9 to 15

featured by

Gilchrist's

Boston,
Waltham, Framingham, Quincy, Medford, Brockton — All in Mass.

For Other Fine Stores, Write

Jerell JUNIORS, INC.

1359 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18, N. Y.

* Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Benjamin Briggs Goodrich doesn't look a speck like either his famous mom or his pop. He looks like another Benjamin Briggs Goodrich, a rugged great, great grandfather of Marcus who played a historic role in the building of Texas—fighting, formulating the Republic's first constitution, and all that. Marcus comes from deep in the heart of the Lone Star state, from San Antonio, one of his ancestors even fought in the Alamo. You can't get much more Texan than that.

To prove this resemblance, Olivia ran for a miniature painted on ivory of B. B. G. the First in a funny, old-fashioned frame and put it right beside her pride and joy. There he was—same solid-citizen features, good head, alert eyes, sturdy chin, even the red hair! "We named him Benjamin Briggs long before he was born," she said. "So he just had to look like his ancestor."

"But how'd you know he'd be a boy?" I wondered.

"I wanted him to be," said Olivia, simply, "so he was."

No will of her own? Ha!

the old-fashioned way . . .

I don't have to tell you that Olivia read well-nigh every book published on babies and motherhood while she was so tediously confined, so today she's a walking compendium of knowledge on the care and feeding. She had a head-start too, because 'way back when she played To Each His Own, she had to bathe and dress babies for some camera scenes, and, being the thorough actress she is, Olivia took lessons until she could freshen up a bambino as slick and neat as a professional nurse. Before she entered the Good Samaritan hospital for Ben's arrival, she had become interested in a maternity experiment being conducted there, called "Rooming In." This is a reversal of what had been the "scientific" trend, in that babies were not kept isolated in glass and chromium cages, but were brought into their mothers' rooms and placed beside the mothers' beds for personal and loving attention. It is a return to the old-fashioned belief that babies ought to be with their mothers. That's the way Olivia wanted it. Because "Rooming In" facilities were limited, only those mothers most richly endowed with maternalism were accepted. Mrs. Goodrich qualified on this score and became one of the first mothers to participate in the new system.

I had to smile as Olivia proudly extolled the sterling virtues of her Baby Ben. The wise words he already uttered, the amazing tricks, the masterful maneuvers. How he switched—the genius—right from formula to pablum with barely a burp. I guess mothers are the same the world over.

After a privileged pat I blew Ben a kiss and had just one discreet question as I tiptoed out. "What do you want him to be when he grows up—an actor?"

"No ma'am," said Livvy. "Benjamin," she stated confidently, "is going to be a Justice of the United States Supreme Court!" And I'm warning that whoever sits in the White House—say, around 1995—had better get that appointment drawn up. That Goodrich girl just won't take "no" for an answer.

It's really no wonder the Goodriches came up with a perfect baby. They're a pair of perfectionists themselves if I ever saw one.

The man Olivia married is hardly the austere ogre which an unacquainted Hollywood paints him. Marcus is friendly, likable, humorous, talkative and as full of beans as a Boston deacon. He wore a checked tweed jacket and gray flannels the day I saw him. He's mid-sized and nice-looking, but no pretty man. Sure, he's definitely an intellectual—but not the long-haired, spooky kind who always need a haircut.

He's been a critic and journalist all over the world—even served a writing stretch in Hollywood once—"to support 'Delilah'," he grins. "Delilah" is his best-seller novel written some years ago, which is still required reading in a lot of universities. He took nine years to pen that and expects it will be about that time, all in all, before his next novel comes out. Navy service in World War I gave him the idea for "Delilah," and for World War II Marcus put on his blues again, ending up as a Commander with battle service all over the Mediterranean, in African and Italian waters, and in the Pacific. He saw service in Gela, Sicily, at Salerno, and Okinawa. Quite a man's man. To show you how thorough and painstaking he is about his book—Mark writes an average of just one page a day, polishes it bright and tight, down in the little Westwood office where Baby Ben sent him packing.

Pleasing her husband has been the first order of Olivia's life since the minute she said "I do," and I might add, that's a pretty mutual ambition the Goodriches share. Luckily, both Marcus and Olivia are peas out of the same pod. Both are smart, anxious to order their lives, hunting perfection in everything, and dedicated to a private existence of modest elegance, I might call it. They like the right things at the right time in the right place. I couldn't work my life that way, but heaven help us if we all lived alike!

Mark and Olivia aren't social; I don't think they've been to more than half a dozen big Hollywood parties since they married. They entertain so quietly that you never hear about them—usually at intimate dinner parties, where everything, right down to the last dessert spoon and flower-floated finger bowl, is properly placed and perfect. The antique silver tea set we talked over didn't have a shadow on its gleaming surface and the cakes were crisp and melted in your mouth. They both work at the art of home life, right down to the tiniest grace.

Even with the friends they see most often—Kurt and Ketti Frings, Niven Busch and Teresa Wright, the Darryl Zanucks, of the movie set, Marcus' writer friends and college professors—they observe etiquette and protocol. Invitations are extended properly, accepted, and the party's on. They don't play canasta or rip reputations apart, but, Livvy grinned, the conversation, while on a serious level, is "likely to tear off the roof" at times. The only thing they're both foolish about to extremes is—of all things—croquet. They play the precise and intricate game with heavy narrow English wickets and heavy brass-bound mallets, serious as owls about it too. Darryl Zanuck, who's the Hollywood champ, got them interested. Marcus thinks it's almost as involved as chess, and by now he's got so good he can challenge Zanuck.

I thought the book was much better than the film."

One night, when the Goodriches visited the Zanucks at Palm Springs, Marcus and Mr. 20th Century-Fox knocked balls around strategically all night long, under floodlights, with Olivia shouting out the window periodically, and in vain, "For Heaven's sake, Marcus, come on to bed!" He didn't until the desert sun climbed over the mountains.

In spite of her recent ordeal I never saw Olivia de Havilland look better. Her plumpness is gone, her face was firm without a lump or a line, and her figure as trim as a Powers model's. All that betrayed her new family status is what Mark calls her "mother, dear" look. It's a softening of her rich brown eyes, which always seemed a trifle restless and anxious before.

She told me she can slip right back into every one of her favorite Traina-Norell gowns—even the formal she wore to collect her Oscar for To Each His Own four years ago. Olivia's hair is as untouched-up, self-washed, self-done, as ever.

But appearances can be deceiving, and if you ask me they've never been more so than in Olivia's case. Not about her age—after all, she's only 32 now (which she cheerfully admits)—but about the capable kind of a woman she is beneath the sweet super-feminine facade she's always worn.

on her own . . .

The plain truth is, Olivia is Hollywood's finest actress today. And she's got that way by learning her business studiously, throughout every one of the sixteen years she's been in the studios. She's batted a thousand, too, choosing her pictures in person since that day in 1943 when she broke away from her Warners contract and set out on her own.

Not counting The Heiress which is a hit everywhere, Olivia's last three pictures—To Each His Own, The Dark Mirror and The Snake Pit—have cleaned up over $10,000,000 between them. That's proof enough.

Though she's sent many scripts a month by the town's leading producers, right now, Olivia told me, she hasn't any picture in definite view. But she's not worrying. Way she feels is, "It's more important not to do them than to do them." Which is her cryptic way of saying—"they've all got to be good and right—for Olivia de Havilland." She wants to make a modern romantic drama next, but "one with depth and stature." That hasn't come along yet but it will, she's sure. And when she finds it, you can bet, she'll go straight to town.

Now that she's over the motherhood emotions that overwhelmed her so deeply at first, Olivia admits she won't be able to stop acting until they kick her out—if that ever happens, which I seriously doubt. "I want to act as long as I live," she answered my question. "But," she twisted it back, "I want to live as long as I act, too." And she gave Marcus a smile and reached for his hand.

Those were the only things Olivia de Havilland lacked before—a husband, a home and a baby to back her up, and make her private picture complete. Now she has them—all three—and from a first-hand look, I can report they couldn't be more right for Olivia. The little girl I remember whose Midsummer Night's Dream back in 1935 came true, is no girl anymore—but a distinguished woman and one of whom Hollywood can be very proud indeed. I don't expect her to rest on her laurels, professional or private, myself. And it's funny, too, how those two lives of Olivia's have been knitted together since she married.

Francine du Plessix, young international beauty, makes the fragrance of Evening in Paris Perfume a lovely part of her life. She wears it every hour of the day—carries her purse flacon of this romantic perfume with her wherever she goes.

Wear Evening in Paris the way French women do

Mlle. Renée Jeanmaire, sensational première ballerina of the Ballets de Paris, echoes the scent of her favorite perfume with Evening in Paris Face Powder, applying its clinging smoothness generously, starting at the base of her throat, pressing it onto her lovely skin.

Suzanne Godart, young designer of exquisite clothes for children, keeps Evening in Paris Eau de Cologne in her workroom to freshen up during her busy day, accents her perfect grooming with flawless Evening in Paris Makeup and enchanting Perfume.

Evening in Paris Perfume, $12.50 to $1.65
Evening in Paris Purse Flacon of Perfume, 75¢
Evening in Paris Eau de Cologne, $1.50 to 65¢
Evening in Paris Face Powder, $1.00
All prices plus tax

Bourjois

LEARN THE SECRET OF
"PERMANENT" PIN CURLS
...even in damp weather

set your hair tonight with DeLong bob pins

stronger grip—won't slip out

Yes, you can set your permanent in this chic salon style. Just be sure to use stronger-gripping De Long Bob Pins for lovely long-lasting curls that resist drooping—even in damp weather. Rounded smooth ends slide in and out easily. And De Long pins stay in day or night! Look for the blue De Long card on your counter.

The brush bob by Enrico Caruso, famous hair stylist to New York stage stars. Set top in 4 rows—turn front row toward face, back 3 rows away from face. Begin at right, set vertical rows, turning curls toward face, around head to back of left ear. Set left side counter-clockwise. Brush in all directions, then up in back, down from crown and up off face with rotating motion.

You're always "set" with De Long Hair Pins • Curl Setting Pins • Safety Pins • Hooks and Eyes • Snaps • Pins • Hook and Eye Tapes • Sanitary Belts

It was on her way back to Hollywood last year from accepting the New York Film Critics' crown that Mrs. G. felt woozy and uncertain and it was when she got back home that the baby doctor told her the great news. This year again she captured that same honor and traveled to New York again to accept it.

I asked Olivia if, coming back to Hollywood this time, she had felt quite all right. She laughed. "Perfect—you'll get no headline there, Miss Hopper—not this time!" Which suits me—losing a headline, that is—but I hope it's one I'll be writing again one of these days soon. I know Olivia would like a larger family, because, for one reason, she told me so. For another, I know she's enough of a drama expert by now to know that Benjamin Briggs Goodrich could use a larger cast in that nursery set of his—from which a hungry yelp was already floating.

So I left, wishing the Goodriches, Marcus, Olivia and Ben, the best of luck in whatever production they undertake—whether it's movies, marigolds, croquet mallets or more moppets. I'm sure they'll have it, too, because luck is only enough courage, talent and intelligence to make your dreams come true.

Between you and me, the Goodriches have hit the combination. THE END this time for keeps?

■ The recent separation of Betty Hutton and Ted Briskin, well-to-do manufacturer of home-movie cameras, was the third in their four years of marriage. This time, Ted said, the break was final. "I'm the one who is through, not Betty," he told Louella Parsons when she called him at the hotel to which he had gone to stay. "In the past, she has always packed up and left home."

He didn't reveal exactly what had caused this newest break, simply stating that the trouble had started on his return from a business trip. He said he was willing to allow Betty to get a divorce and that she could have custody of their two children, Lindsay Dianne, four, and Candice, two, providing he could see them whenever he wished. Betty, at this writing, has issued no statement.

The Briskins' first separation occured in February, 1946, six months after their marriage, and lasted only 24 hours. At that time Betty said: "Ted has been after me to give up my career. He wanted to be with me at the studio all the time and even to sit in on my conferences. It just can't be managed that way. I love Ted very dearly but I have worked all my life to get where I am and I can't give it up. Ted says he understands now and that he won't interfere with my career anymore. I am coming back on that basis."

The next separation took place last July. Betty said: "I won't allow anyone to say a word against Ted. If anyone is to blame for the breaking up of our marriage, I am probably at fault. All I can say is, we both tried hard to avoid this break-up, but we just can't seem to get along."

Five days later, they were reconciled. "We've reached an understanding," said Betty. "We agreed that our two children are too important for us to be apart."

Most Hollywood observers believe that such an understanding will again be reached between them. Despite the quarrels, they have seemed to be deeply in love. But even so, it appears that the course of this true love will continue to run far from smooth. A friend of Betty and Ted recently said: "The trouble with Betty is that when she makes a picture she puts so much into it that she's keyed up all the time. This can be mighty hard sometimes on those close to her—such as her husband."

And speaking of Ted, the same friend observed: "Ted is well-heeled and has a flourishing business, but let's face it: Betty goes out and brings in more money than he does. This would give almost any man some sense of inadequacy. His voice of authority is a little muted, he grows irritable and critical. And, in Ted's case, he's tried to assert himself occasionally by attempting to steer Betty's career—and that's dynamite."

they can't stop scott

(Continued from page 33) Tierney put dinner on the table, she discovered that she had put out one plate too many. Only seven had shown up—Scott, Larry, Eddie, Mr. Tierney, Jim and Alex (actor friends of Scott), and herself. She didn't bother to remove the extra plate, however. As she had learned from past experience, someone else might arrive any minute.

Dinner that night proceeded, as it usually does in the Tierney household, with a wild flurry of good conversation. Mrs. Tierney, sitting at the end of the table nearest the kitchen, looked at her three sons and appreciated the healthy, hungry way they attacked their dinner. It was good, she thought, to have them all back at the same table again. Larry, her oldest boy, who for the past eight months had been making a movie in Portugal; Scott, whose meteoric success in movies had taken him away from home a lot lately; and Eddie, just getting a start in this peculiar acting business. Hers was a family to be proud of. . . .

She couldn't help but remember a similar night four years before, just a few months after she'd first come to Hollywood to make a home for Larry and Scott, who had been living in a tiny apartment, and for Eddie, who had just returned from two years' service with the Army in Korea. It had been different then. Only Larry had been working. He had made a big hit in Dillinger, and RKO had big plans for his career. Scott, of course, wasn't serious then about anything. Eddie said that he wanted to write plays. It seemed a long time ago. . . .

going places . . .

Today the Tierney family is back together again, and individually and collectively headed for a bright future. In a few weeks, Larry's first picture in two years, Kill or Be Killed, will be released by Eagle-Lion. Advance reviews indicate that it will put him back on the road to stardom. Young Eddie, who just celebrated his 21st birthday, recently signed with agent Herman Bernie, who thinks he's star material. Scott, whose screen career is currently running away with the honors in the Tierney household, is what they call in Hollywood a "hot item."

Five years ago, if you had told Gerard Tierney—which is Scott Brady's real name—that he was destined to be a movie star, he would have answered you with a hearty horse-laugh. For when he stopped off in Hollywood in April, 1945, after receiving his discharge from the Navy, he thought the town was simply a good place to spend his terminal-leave pay while visiting his brother, Lawrence Tierney. He had no plans except to loaf until his money was all gone. Acting had never entered his mind. Then one day he had lunch with Larry at Lucey's restaurant, and Hal Wallis, sitting across the room, noticed him and invited him to come over to Paramount for a screen test. Scott remembers it well.

"It was one of those interview tests where the director stands off in the dark and says, 'Turn around. What's your name? Where are you from?'—while they run off a few feet of film to see how you look. I stood there stupidly with fear and talent oozing out all over the rug."

Wallis, however, was most encouraging about the test. "You have a very manly face," he told Scott. "You should go places." He did not, however, invite him to stay. Nor did any of the other producers whom Scott trooped around to see during the next month.

Finally, he realized it might help a little if he knew something about acting. So

THE LOVABLE GIRL-OF-THE-MONTH

loves her Lovable Plunging BRA

Miss Georgia Lee
Texas Beauty

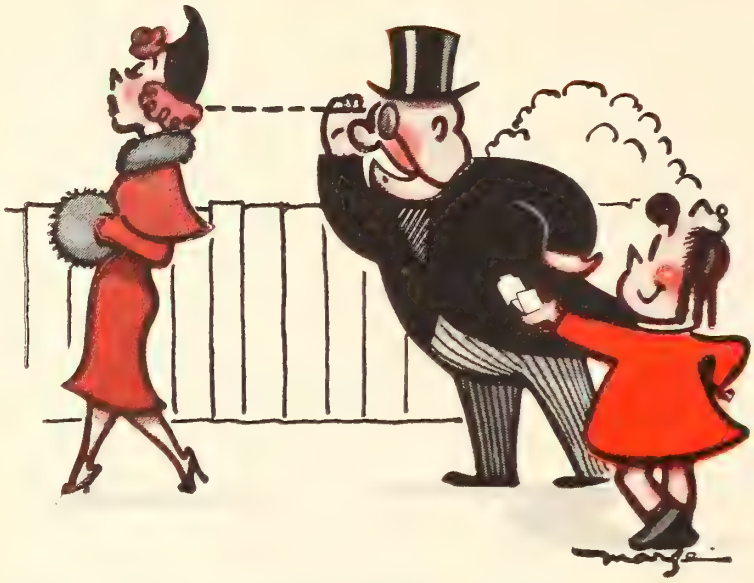
Dress by Filcol

You'll be lovely, too, in a Lovable BRA

PLUNGING BRA WITH WIRED SEPARATION

Here's your perfect bra for low-cut dresses! It fits beautifully, separates smartly—gives you smooth, gently rounded lines. And what value!

only $1.50



Ask for Lovable #950. White and Pink rayon satin and lace. Sizes: A-cup, 32-36; B-cup, 32-38.

THE LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO., Dept. E-4, 358 Fifth Ave., New York 1

FLASH: Lovable Bras are now available in Canada!

LITTLE LULU

You'll get better looking with these!

Little Lulu says: LONG TIME NO SEE? SPARKLE YOUR "SPECS" WITH NEW KLEENEX* EYEGLASS TISSUES. BIG ENOUGH, STRONG ENOUGH. LINT-FREE! AND KLEENEX EYEGLASS TISSUES SERVE YOU ONE AT A TIME. ONLY 10¢.

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. ★T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Dolores has the Secret

"NATURE-LIFT" SUPPORTS YOU AS NATURE INTENDED—FROM THE SIDES AS WELL AS FROM BELOW.

● NEVER CUTS SHOULDERS

● NEVER RIDES UP YOUR BACK

Dolores

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE

Write Dept. 6 for your complimentary copy— "Accent Your Femininity" —from desk of Dolores.

a few weeks later he enrolled at the Bliss-Hayden dramatic school under the GI Bill of Rights. Before he knew it, the bug had bitten him. Scott can't remember exactly when it happened, but one day the realization suddenly came to him. He was an actor.

The night Scott played his first important role at Bliss-Hayden—the lead in Heaven Can Wait—his mother, father, and brother Larry were all out in front in the audience. He felt awkward and awful, until the curtain came down. Then Larry came backstage and said, "I knew you could do it, fellow!" Larry's praise was worth more than all of the applause that his performance had received. The next night, Larry sent his own agent to see the play—and he agreed that Scott was ready for pictures. The next day, he started selling Scott to the studios.

A few days later, Scott found himself reading for David Selznick, who thought enough of his ability to place him in Lester Luther's special talent school at his studio. He also tried out for a number of casting directors around town, none of whom seemed especially interested in his ability. Then one day, while Scott was moping around his room at home, his agent called about the leading role in a prize-fighting picture called In This Corner, which Eagle-Lion was casting.

"Can you box?" the agent asked.

"A little," Scott answered, modestly. "I won a boxing tournament in the Navy."

"That ought to do it," his agent said. "Get over here this afternoon and we'll go see the people at the studio."

time for prayer . . .

Before Scott left home that afternoon, he stopped in the kitchen and said, "Pray for me, Mom. This may be my chance."

Mrs. Tierney, who is devoutly religious, replied, "I will—but I think it would be better if you prayed yourself." And she handed him a fresh copy of the prayer to St. Jude, patron saint of hopeless cases and things despaired of. It is her favorite prayer, and she keeps a number of printed copies on hand to give to her friends who are in trouble and in need.

Scott stuck the card in his wallet and set out for Eagle-Lion to audition for the role. While talking to director Chuck Reisner, Scott pulled out his wallet to show him a recent picture of his brother, Larry, and the prayer to St. Jude fluttered to the floor.

"What's that?" Reisner asked.

"Just a prayer my mother gave me," Scott mumbled.

"Let me see it," said Reisner. He looked at it—then reached for his own wallet and pulled out the identical prayer. "You and I are on the same team, it appears."

Reisner took an immediate liking to Scott and went to bat for him with Eagle-Lion. As a result, when the film began months later, Scott won the lead in In This Corner. When he reported for work, Reisner purposely gave him the toughest scene to do on the first day—a long speech involving nearly five pages of dialogue. Scott came through without a hitch, and the remainder of the picture rolled in beautifully, on schedule.

But it was another low-budget movie, Canon City, the story of a prison break, which solidly launched Scott's screen career. Produced by Bryan Foy, Canon City was what the trade papers in Hollywood call a "sleeper." It made a small fortune for Eagle-Lion and awoke the studio executives to the fine acting talent of its young star, Scott Brady. Immediately, they broke out a long-term contract and began waving it under his nose. Scott signed it, naturally.

Eagle-Lion, however, ceased active production about six months later, and Scott was able to negotiate another contract with Universal-International, a seven-year deal guaranteeing him two pictures a year. For Universal, he has already made The Gal Who Took the West, Undertow, and I Was A Shoplifter, which will be released soon.

Now that Larry has returned from Europe, Universal is planning to co-star him with Scott in a crime drama entitled Payoff. In it, they will play brothers on the opposite sides of the law, and for Scott, it will be the fulfilment of one of his greatest ambitions. He thinks that his brother Larry is as good as they come, and he is quick to flare whenever someone has the tactlessness to mention the wave of bad publicity which Larry stirred up several years ago with his tough-guy arguments in bars and nightclubs. Scott knows his brother for what he really is—an intelligent, sensitive and loyal friend—and he feels that whatever mistakes Larry has made, he has long since paid for them with his own suffering.

"Larry has been responsible for practically everything I've accomplished in Hollywood," he rushes to say. "He taught me most of what I know about acting, he introduced me to all his friends, and he made me work hard. Why, he even was responsible for my screen name, Scott Brady. He found it in a novel he was reading at the time I got my break at Eagle-Lion."

The Tierney family has always been a close-knit unit. When Larry, Scott and Eddie were all kids in Brooklyn, they lived in a big, two-story brick house on a busy, noisy street, the sort of street which swarmed with kids when school let out. Their father, Lawrence A. Tierney, was at that time Chief of the Aqueduct Police, in charge of the 400 men who patroled the New York water supply, and younger than springtime

june allyson
on the may cover of modern screen
on sale april 7

his family and his home were a great joy to him. Every Sunday during the summer, he packed them up and took them to the beach at Rockaway, and his sons all learned to swim like seals. He was as persistent that they should join the Y and go out for athletics as his wife was that they go to church and say their prayers regularly. All the boys became distinguished athletes in school. Larry ran the half-mile, and was constantly bringing his medals home to mother. Scott, when he attended Roosevelt High School, starred in basketball and football. Young brother Eddie managed to do all right, too, playing first-string end on his high-school football team.

But early in life, the boys began to develop the temperament which distinguishes them today. Larry was the quiet one, a voracious reader and a student of life. Scott was the family extrovert, even as a boy full of the exuberant nervous energy that has made him so exciting on the screen. Eddie was a little of each—studious but quite capable of kicking up as much trouble as his brother.

Back in those days, Mrs. Tierney had her problems, especially with Scott. "I always had a hard time keeping track of him," Mrs. Tierney says. "He was addicted to digging caves, and building things in the cellar. I never will forget the time he disappeared downstairs one afternoon with his friend, Charlie, and started hammering and sawing. The noise kept up for a couple of days off and on, and I didn't have the slightest idea what it was all about. Then, one morning, I looked out in front and saw him and Charlie carrying a big cage out of the cellar, and in it was the neighbor's cat, yowling its head off. When he saw me, he yelled, 'Look, Mom, I'm Frank Buck! Bringing 'em back alive.'"

Scott's high-school career didn't indicate any budding theatrical talent. He didn't appear in any school plays. He didn't deliver the valedictory address. In fact, the closest he came to the dramatic was the posing which he did as a lifeguard at Tibbets Brook swimming pool in Westchester, N. Y. Because he was 6-feet-2, weighed 180, and looked impressive in swimming trunks, Scott rarely had any arguments with belligerent gents around the pool. (He still doesn't, for the same reason.)

After high school, Scott entered the naval gunnery school at Pensacola, Florida, and shipped out on the USS Norton, a seaplane tender. Not long ago, while working on the location of I Was A Shoplifter in La Jolla, which is not far from the naval base at San Diego, Scott bumped into an old Navy buddy.

"For the love of Pete," the sailor said. "Jerry Tierney! I hear you're in the movies now."

"Yeah," said Scott. "Wouldn't that frost you?"

"You won't believe it," the sailor continued, "but the other day my sis sent me

Who pays high prices for nail polish and lipstick?

NOT ME
NOT ANYMORE

Millions of women have searched endlessly for a nail polish that won't chip or flake... have switched from one high-priced polish to another in vain. What a pity...

This is the true story of an amazing new miracle-wear ingredient called Enamelon.

It's found only in new low-priced, luxury CUTEX—and it's guaranteed* to give incredible wear...to last longer, chip less than your high-priced polish.

And new, miracle-wear CUTEX is so pure . . . even women with skins so sensitive they cannot use other polishes state that they can safely use new CUTEX.

Thirteen luscious shades. New CUTEX 10¢; de luxe Nail Brilliance size 25¢.

More beauty news. The new matching CUTEX Colorgenic Lipstick...now made by an exclusive CUTEX electronic process. Won't bleed, cake or wear off like so many high-priced lipsticks. 49¢ Also new 25¢ size. Prices plus tax.

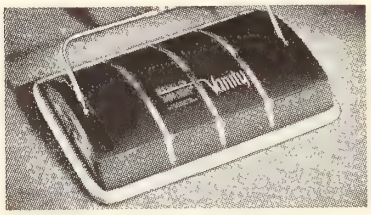
*Money back if not completely satisfied

CUTEX
luxury nail polish and matching lipstick

Frank will catch it...

Frank groans when his pipe tobacco spills all over the newly cleaned rug. His wife will have to get out the vacuum again. And don't think she won't mention her trouble to Frank—LOUD!

Fred won't...



Fred spills tobacco, too. But he whisks up the mess in a minute, with their new Bissell Sweeper. Fred's wife has the perfect sweep-up team . . . a vacuum for heavy cleaning, a handy Bissell® for quick clean-ups.

Only BISSELL has "BISCO-MATIC"* brush action

This miracle-action brush adjusts itself automatically to thick rugs or thin, without any pressure on the handle whatsoever! It even gets the dirt under beds, where you can't press down.

New Bissell Sweepers with "Bisco-matic" Brush Action as low as $6.45. Illustrated: The "Vanity" at $8.45. Prices a little more in the West.

BISSELL SWEEPERS

Bissell Carpet Sweeper Company
Grand Rapids 2, Michigan

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Bissell's full spring controlled brush.

a picture of you out of a movie magazine and asked me if that wasn't my old friend, Jerry Tierney. I wrote her that it probably was. I always expected that you'd end up doing something crazy and offbeat."

"It's a living," Scott said with a laugh.

Movie-acting has become, as a matter of fact, a very substantial living for Scott Brady. At least since he began to consider it seriously as a profession instead of simply a means of picking up some fast money. With two pictures a year guaranteed under his contract with Universal-International, and with one-a-year still hanging fire with inactive Eagle-Lion, Scott's economic future is definitely assured. But he is taking his affluence quietly. He drives the same second-hand Dodge convertible he has owned for two years. He lives on an allowance, and is saving his money to help buy a home for his family. It doesn't have to be an elaborate place; just a good, durable, well-built house that will bear the traffic of his and his brothers' friends. Mom, of course, will as usual preside at the dinner table and over their destinies—the latter with the help of St. Jude. During the last few years, she has had daily prayers said for her boys by the Dominican fathers at the Shrine of St. Jude in Chicago.

Since Scott first began to appear at nightclubs and Hollywood parties, his name has been "linked romantically" with half-a-dozen of the film capital's prettiest starlets. But in the past few months, he has confined his attentions rather specifically to Dorothy Malone and Barbara Lawrence. Marriage, however, is not uppermost in his plans for the moment. "When I get married," he says, "I want it to last an awfully long time. I don't want to rush into it now, and have to regret it later on."

As a matter of fact, it will probably take a fascinating girl to attract Scott away from the daily excitement of his family life. Since Larry returned from Europe, almost every evening is the occasion for a big session of talk over the dinner table. And that's not all. The other evening just before dinner, Mrs. Tierney looked out the window and saw all three of her boys throwing a football around in the street outside their apartment. When she called them in to dinner, they all marched in breathing hard and flexing their muscles. Scott had fallen down and skinned his knee, to say nothing of ripping a hole in his new slacks.

"Movie actors," she said, with mock seriousness. "Your fans should see you now!"

THE END

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

Looking for a way to while away the time on rainy spring afternoons? We thought so, and here's a pleasant suggestion. Read all the stories and features in this issue, fill out this questionnaire and send it to us—pronto! If you're among the first 500 people to return it, you'll win a three-month subscription to Modern Screen. Tell us which stories you like best and which stars you'd like to read about in future issues. Your prize will be—the May, June and July issues of Modern Screen—all for free!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories and features did you enjoy most in our April issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT OF YOUR 1st, 2nd and 3rd choices.

When A Princess Is Born (Rita Hayworth) ☐
Ava Gardner's Startling Romances! ☐
Bringing Up Susan (Shirley Temple) ☐
Busiest Girl in Town (Esther Williams) ☐
They Won't Stop Scott (Scott Brady) ☐
She Knew What She Wanted (Olivia de Havilland) by Hedda Hopper ☐
Bluebird on Their Windowsill (John Derek) ☐
The Courage of June Haver ☐
Fresh Paint (Bob Arthur, Colleen Townsend, others) ☐
They Don't Belong (Gail Russell, Guy Madison) ☐
It Must Be Love (Gene Kelly) ☐
How Doris Day Won Her Son ☐
Why Stars Can't Take Criticism ☐
Roman Candle (Ruth Roman) ☐
. . . And So to Wed (Betsy Drake, Cary Grant) ☐
State of the Union (Jeanne Crain) ☐
Hollywood Pictorial ☐
Modern Screen Fashions ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐
Christopher Kane's Movie Reviews ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

when a princess is born

(Continued from page 20) in five green leather armchairs set in a semi-circle. No one could get into the hotel without being detected. What was more important, it was almost impossible to escape from the hotel without being seen. Of course, the permanent watch became slightly less permanent every evening just after midnight. And sometimes the newsmen slept a little late, and two or three of those green chairs would stay unoccupied during the early hours of the day.

By the time several weeks had gone by, newspapermen made up a large portion of the total number of clients, and the manager was getting frantic trying to cater to their desires and the demands of Aly, whose wishes were often directly counter to those of the press. Aly's wishes, of course, came first. For one thing, his father, the Aga Khan, owns the hotel.

There was an unusual politeness in the air—which had been sadly absent at the time of the Riviera wedding back in May. Aly smiled to the newsmen, the newsmen smiled to Aly. Rita would walk through the lobby, and no one would bother her by going over to ask her any questions. She would usually bundle up warmly in a wide, bulky fur coat, with a large kerchief drawn tight around her red hair, and dark anklets over her nylon stockings.

waiting, waiting . . .

Rita and Aly led a fairly simple life, doing little more than waiting for the baby to arrive. They had made arrangements for the lying-in at the highly-reputed Clinique Mont-Choisi, a neat and solid building about two miles from the Lausanne-Palace Hotel. They had arranged for the services of a world-famed obstetrician, Dr. Rodolphe Rochat. He had already delivered a number of royal babies and knew his business thoroughly—even if he was unprepared for the veritable assault he would be the victim to as soon as the American press moved in.

Rita was busy studying movie scripts as all the preparations went on. Aly reported that she had not yet decided which was to be her next film, but he assured everyone that she was anxious to get back to movie-making.

While the waiting went on at the Lausanne hotel, the score or more of special correspondents tried desperately to keep busy, and polished final details on their planning for the big day—the day of the birth. Special telephone lines were arranged, special apartments near the clinic were rented, and money began to flow from correspondents' hands into the eager hands of the hotel employees and assorted tipsters who were going to be invaluable later on.

On Christmas Eve, the correspondents and photographers chipped in and bought Rita a big bouquet of white lilacs, and Rita and Aly both returned the gesture on Christmas Day by presenting the pressmen with a case of Scotch whisky. Rita and Aly both sent along personal handwritten notes to express their gratitude for the flowers and the sentiment behind them. Princess Rita signed hers "Margarita Aly Khan," and wrote, "Hoping you make the best of Christmas and the New Year in Lausanne."

Rita and Aly went to a Christmas Eve party at the home of Aly's half-brother. Rita's daughter (from her marriage to Orson Welles), five-year-old Rebecca, had helped decorate the little Christmas tree that Rita and Aly had in their hotel suite, and there was a definite "look-how-good-I-am" expression on little Rebecca's face as Christmas—and gift-giving time—neared Looks bigger—

and BIGGER

Your housekeeping money seems to buy less and less . . . so now this big bar of Fels-Naptha, jam-full of the double cleaning action of mild, golden soap and active naptha looks more than ever like the best buy on the soap shelves. Next time you're in the grocery store, why not join other careful shoppers—stock up with Fels-Naptha Soap —at present thrifty prices.

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

GET THE EXTRA CLEANING ACTION OF MILD, GOLDEN SOAP AND ACTIVE NAPTHA

Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

Salon Luxury in a Home Shampoo

It's the real egg* that makes the magic in this luxury shampoo . . . the very same smooth liquid creme used in the famous Richard Hudnut Fifth Avenue Salon to make hair more manageable, tangle-free, easier to do, and permanents "take" better. Whisks in and out like a dream, removes loose dandruff, leaves hair extra lustrous because it's clean, clean, clean! Try this gentler, kinder, luxury shampoo today. Wonderfully good for children's hair, too! $1.00; economy size $1.75

From the Fifth Avenue Salon

Richard Hudnut

ENRICHED CREME
Shampoo
with egg

It's the real egg in Hudnut Shampoo that makes hair more manageable. Home permanents "take" better

*powdered, 1%

On the Tuesday night following Christmas, Rita had a hairdresser bring his equipment to the hotel suite, and had her hair done up specially. The next morning, to the surprise and confusion of all, turned out to be the beginning of the big day in the Lausanne story.

Just before three A.M., Aly rushed Rita down from their first-floor suite into the almost-deserted lobby. He helped her through the wide hotel door into the big black hotel Buick, which had been kept drawn up before the hotel. Aly then sped through the deserted streets of Lausanne and pulled up in front of the clinic.

With Rita safely inside, Aly ran to a telephone and called the police. They were supposed to have provided an escort from the hotel to the hospital—but Aly (and Rita) had been in too much of a hurry to worry about police escorts. Now the secret, prearranged signal was flashed: "Marlborough va-t-en guerre"—which means "Marlborough goes off to war," and is the title of an old French nursery tune.

Meanwhile, back in the hotel, drowsy newsmen were being routed out of bed. Still groggy with sleep, they pulled on their clothes hastily and ran out into the halls, flew down the stairs, raced through the lobby, packed into waiting cars, and sped toward the clinic.

Only when they had finally arrived at the clinic did they learn that Rita had given them the slip—and was already inside, about to give birth to her child.

A long, cold birth-watch now began in the narrow street beside the clinic. The half-dressed pressmen shivered in the cold night air, while from inside the warm and comfortable clinic lights flashed on and off and nurses and attendants peered down from their windows onto the strange scene below. From their houses nearby, the Swiss citizenry looked down, too. One kind-hearted Swiss woman boiled up a big kettle of tea and brought it down for the birth-watchers. A dozen policemen guarded the clinic entrance and forbade newsmen to enter. From the hotel came the manager, bringing a milk can filled with hot grog (rum, water and lemon juice), which he distributed to the waiting press.

it's a baby! . . .

At 11, Aly appeared at the clinic door smiling broadly. "It's all over," he announced. "It's a girl."

The new little princess weighed just under five-and-a-half pounds, and was to be called Yasmin. Yasmin, pronounced "Yaasmean," is a Persian name, and means jasmine (the flower).

Aly reported that Rita had already seen the baby. Apologizing for his lack of modesty, he added that the child had wonderfully pretty, delicate features and was, to put it mildly, a beautiful baby.

As reporters rushed to telephone stories and photographers took scores of pictures of Aly, he stood drinking grog, still smiling. . . .

The next day, telegrams began pouring in to Rita and Aly. "One that I liked especially," Aly said, "came from one of my horse trainers in Ireland. You know, it's the custom when a horse is born to register it at once for all the big races. The trainer wired me: 'Am entering baby in all race classics.'" Aly's father wired congratulations from Cairo, and Rita's father in California announced that the birth pleased him mightily

To celebrate the birth, two musicians in Lausanne wrote songs. Since Aly's mother had been Italian, one wrote one called "Nina Nana Italiana." Since Aly's father is famed for the custom his subjects have of weighing him in gold or diamonds, another songwriter composed a song called

Listen to Walter Winchell, ABC Network Sunday Nights

"My Aly Baby" which began, "You're worth your weight in diamonds."

The lyric wasn't literally true, but it did give a fairly good indication of the way the baby's future seemed stacked in her favor. Someone will probably soon write a song entitled, "The Baby With the Diamond Spoon." Rita is still one of the hottest box-office attractions alive, and whether the family money comes from Hollywood or India it will have the same substantial purchasing power.

On Sunday, New Year's Day, a Lausanne photographer, delegated by Aly to photograph the new Princess, reported to the clinic. There he snapped the first pictures ever of the new family together: Rita, Aly and Yasmin.

The next item of news to issue from the calm and pleasant resort town was that the new little Princess finally had a birth certificate—10 days after her birth. Swiss civil authorities, however, refused to recognize the titles of Aly, Rita and Yasmin. They explained that all three were "ecclesiastical dignitaries" and that it was therefore incorrect to call Aly a Prince, and Rita and Yasmin Princesses. They relented enough to list Aly as a Prince ("out of courtesy," they said), but firmly left Rita title-less, as "Margarita Carmen Cansino." Yasmin also went title-less.

Exactly three weeks after her entry into the clinic, Rita left the clinic for the first time. While Yasmin stayed in bed, Rita was driven to the Chateau Dorigny. The Chateau is the luxurious Lausanne home of one of the former wives of the Aga Khan: the ex-Begum Jane Andrée (mother of Aly's half-brother, Sadruddin). Once again Rita had gone undetected by the photographer who was still living in the hallway of an apartment across the street from the Mont-Choisi Clinic. Rita returned to the Clinic, and left undetected again the very next day, going to the Chateau Dorigny, this time for lunch.

Friday, Rita and Aly went out together, and set off on a drive through town. It was so cold, though, that after 10 minutes the couple headed back to the warmth of the clinic. The photographer across the street finally got his picture of Rita that day.

It was that Friday—January 20—that Aly announced that the little family still intended to go to Gstaad, Switzerland, as soon as Rita and the baby were strong enough. The family plans to spend several months in a rented chalet there.

Almost all the reporters and photographers have now left the Lausanne-Palace, and Lausanne is gradually settling back to normal. But the ancient town will not soon forget the sensational event that will, in the minds of millions all over the world, always be its chief claim to fame.

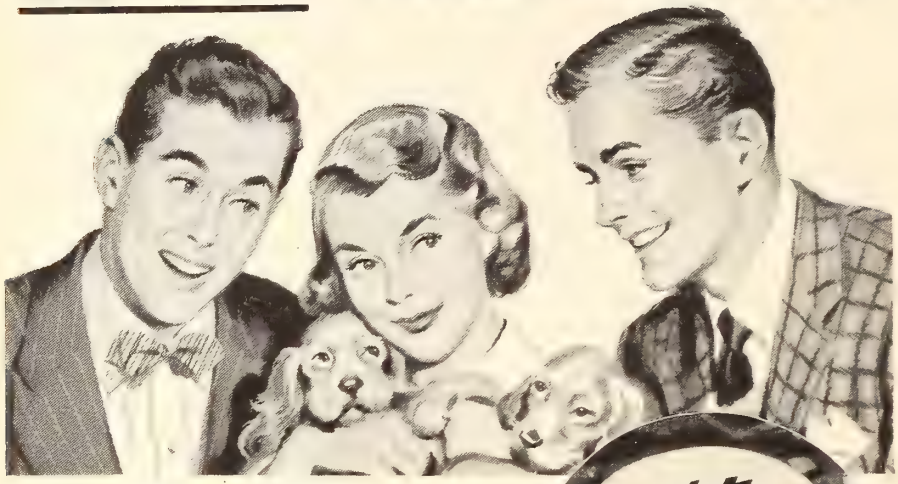
THE END

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ Tyrone Power was so gloomy over being detained on the Marie Antoinette set that director Woody Van Dyke finally let him off to bid a fond farewell to Janet Gaynor, who attended the President's Ball in Washington. Yes, that romance is still very much on.—April, 1938, Modern Screen

Don't look now...

You're shopping in Olvera Street, the Mexican quarter just outside Hollywood. But wait. See who's chatting with that little señor? Here's your chance to steal a good, long look at Ava Gardner! She won't think you're rude... stars expect to be admired. That's why she uses flattering Woodbury Powder (in Brunette) on her lovely complexion!



there's Ava Gardner...

Ava is one of the Hollywood stars who chose Woodbury Powder 6 to 1 in response to a recent survey*. A unique ingredient in Woodbury Powder gives the smoothest, satiny finish you've ever known! Magically warm, infinitely fine in texture, enchantingly fragrant, it clings for hours! 7 heavenly shades glorify every skin type. 15¢, 30¢, $1.00, plus tax.

Veto—Colgate's Deodorant—Gives You

DOUBLE PROTECTION!

1. CHECKS PERSPIRATION...
Quickly, effectively! Veto safeguards you night and day. Rubs in easily and checks perspiration at once. Yet Veto is mild, gentle for normal skin . . . safe for clothes.

2. STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY!
Veto's scientific formula was perfected by the famous Colgate laboratories. Veto works like a charm, is always delightfully smooth and creamy. Let Veto give you double protection!

Veto Lasts and Lasts From Bath to Bath

To ADD fresh COLOR

and LUSTRE

to your hair after a shampoo or home permanent, use Lovalon

For you who do your hair at home, Lovalon is a must. It rinses gorgeous fresh color into your hair. Gives hair sparkling highlights, leaving it attractive, soft and manageable. Blends in yellow, grey streaks. Lovalon comes in 12 flattering shades . . . has none of the disadvantages of a dye . . . washes out with each shampoo. 10¢ and 25¢ at toilet goods counters everywhere.

Try Lovalon—today.

LOVALON

—the Hair Beauty Rinse

it must be love

(Continued from page 45) is, women everywhere want to be loved and happily married. And when they aren't, they sometimes feel a pang of envy towards those who are—such as the Gene Kellys.

"For a while," says Gene, "I couldn't understand it. There we were—Betsy, myself and our little girl, Kerry—as happy as any threesome could be. I had my work, Betsy had hers, Kerry was coming along just fine. And yet, I'd pick up a paper some morning, and there would be something like, 'Is it true that Betsy Blair Kelly is leaving for Europe because she and Gene have been tiffing?'

"At first, such items used to make me mad. I tried to find out how and where they got started. Nowadays I just don't care—I guess I'm used to it.

"We've been married more than eight years, and probably the columnists figure the law of averages is against us. I figure Betsy and I have at least 50 more years to go."

they never left home . . .

Friends of the Kellys insist that they get along so beautifully because they live in Beverly Hills as if they were living in Pittsburgh. They are middle-class people from middle-class backgrounds who lead middle-class lives. Most young couples who come to Hollywood and make a great success immediately establish a new way of life. It's only natural for such youngsters, enchanted by triumph, to go Hollywood, to become sophisticated, to start ordering expensive clothes and custom-made cars. It's natural and it's expected.

When you find a couple in Hollywood whose basic sense of values has not been changed by success, you are finding a rarity. Gene and Betsy Kelly qualify as such a rarity.

Gene currently earns $2,000 a week. Betsy, when she works—she's been in only two or three pictures—makes $750 a week. That's a lot of money even when more than 60% goes to Uncle Sam in taxes. Now, when you're making that much in Hollywood, you are, as has been noted, supposed to do certain things.

First off, you should buy a Cadillac. Practically every top-flight star owns one of those long, low-slung jobs, preferably a convertible. Lana Turner, for example, has one in baby-blue that's simply out of this world.

The Kellys own a convertible. It's a five-year-old Ford.

Secondly, you must send your children to private school, this on the grounds that the offspring of movie stars are a cut above the average run of children.

Kerry Kelly attends the public grade-school in Beverly Hills.

Most screen celebrities hire business managers to take care of financial details. They can't be bothered paying bills and looking after their own expenses. In addition, they like to invest their money in order to make more money. Many order their business managers to invest in oil—this because the Government permits a 37½% tax deduction on the grounds of depletion. Others, like Fred MacMurray, Joan Crawford, John Wayne and Red Skelton, invest in real estate. A few, like Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, invest in anything that will show a profit. Bing, for example, owns a piece of the Pittsburgh Pirates, a directorship in the Jayson Shirt Company, interests in Minute Maid Orange Juice, Breatholators, Nylon Dip and canned milk—and only recently, his Crosby Research Foundation came up with a pill which, when swallowed, is supposed to make straight hair grow curly. Bob Hope owns some of the Cleveland Indians, a sheet metal factory, Texas oil, real estate, and the West Coast agency for the distribution of Du Mont television sets.

The Gene Kellys have no business manager and no business investments.

The Kellys' love story began 10 years ago when Betsy Boger, a 15-year-old high-school girl, was reading a newspaper on a train on her way from Ossining, N. Y., to New York City. The newspaper carried an advertisement for chorus girls at the International Casino. Betsy had gone to dancing school, but she'd never done any professional work. Somehow, though, she decided to try for the job.

When her train reached New York, her mother was waiting at the station. "I told Mother what I wanted to do," Betsy says, "and I thought she'd object, but she didn't. She took me down to Macy's and bought me my first pair of high heels and then she put a little of her own lipstick on me and we went over to the International Casino—where I was hired for $40 a week."

A month or so later, Betsy Boger changed her name to Betsy Blair, in honor of a boy she admired who attended Blair Academy.

Now, at this same period there was living in New York a young man from Pittsburgh named Eugene Joseph Kelly. He was the founder of the Gene Kelly Studio of the Dance. This studio was located in the cellar of his mother's house in Pittsburgh. Mr. Kelly had left all this behind him, however, to come to New York in 1938 to try his dancing luck on Broadway. It turned out to be considerable—and by 1940, he had not only made a name for himself in a couple of musicals and in Saroyan's Pulitizer Prize-winning play, The Time of Your Life, but he had also become dance director for Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe.

billy sent me . . .

It was there that he first met Betsy Blair. She was all of 16 at the time, and she very properly mistook him for a stagehand. She walked down into the club, and seeing him sprawled across two chairs, asked with great dignity, "Is Mr. Billy Rose here?"

"No," said Gene. "He's not."

"Well, that's strange," Betsy said. "He sent me a card asking me to report here for a tryout."

"I'm sorry," said Gene. "He's not here. Besides, I think they've postponed the call until tomorrow. You a dancer?"

Betsy cast him her best look of disdain. "Of course I'm a dancer or I shouldn't be here."

"Any good?" Gene persisted.

"Yes, very good, very, very good."

"Well, if you're that good," Gene smiled, "come back tomorrow."

Indignantly, Betsy stalked out of the club.

But she returned the following day, and she danced for Billy Rose; John Murray Anderson, who was staging the show; and Gene Kelly, the dance director she had mistaken for a stagehand.

Billy Rose said she wasn't sexy-looking enough; Anderson said she was too skinny; Kelly looked into her eyes and said, "Sign her. She's a good dancer."

That's how it began.

A few months passed, and he had her heart in his hip pocket. She had his in her entire being. She still does. They were married in Philadelphia on September 22, 1941, a few weeks after David Selznick had signed Gene on the strength of his Pal Joey performance.

What's the secret of their happy marriage? When you ask Gene, he stops and thinks as if he were trying to condense Wonder lotion promises new beauty for your WHOLE HAND!

1 BEAUTIFIES SKIN. New Hinds is enriched with lanolin to make your hands feel softer instantly—protect them longer. Works wonders on rough, dry skin!

2 SATINIZES PALMS. Even rough palms are soothed and smoothed. New Hinds' "skin-affinity" ingredients actually help to soften calluses.

3 SMOOTHS KNUCKLES. Dry knuckles yield to the smoothing action of New Hinds. Effective emollients "sink in." Hinds dries fast—never feels sticky!

4 SOFTENS CUTICLE. Nails look neater with New Hinds helping to keep cuticle pliable. No ragged edges to "catch." Your manicures stay lovely longer!

WORKS WONDERS! Lanolin-enriched for extra effectiveness, New Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream keeps your whole hand feeling soft in spite of ravages of work and water. Use it to smooth elbows, arms and legs . . . try it as a powder base. Use Hinds to help protect babies' and children's tender skin from chapping! 4 sizes, 10¢ to $1.00.

Hinds Honey and Almond Fragrance Cream

PRODUCT OF LEHN & FINK

NOW IN NEW LARGER BEAUTY BOTTLE

YOUR CHANCE FOR FAME...

Pictured is Judy Tyler, last Stardust beauty contest winner. Enter our 1950 contest now. YOU may win $500 first prize, plus modeling & television career under Harry Conover management, or 27 other awards! Send recent non-returnable photo with height, weight, bust, waist & hip measurements before May 1, 1950. Decisions of beauty judges final. Mail entry P. O. Box 65, Murray Hill Station, N.Y.

LOOK FOR GENUINE Stardust SLIPS, BRAS, UNDIES, GIRDLES, GARTER BELTS & BLOUSES

STARDUST INC., Dept. 48, Empire State Bldg., N. Y. 1

"My Way" says Brenda Marshall

● "Every woman wants to keep her figure looking lovely," says Brenda Marshall, famous screen star. "Ayds helps me to lose weight the way nature intended me to. It keeps me looking and feeling better. Ayds is a wonderful way to reduce."

How to Lose Weight and Look Lovelier

Now! Reduce—and look lovelier while you are doing it! Lose weight the way Nature intended you to! A quick, natural way with no risk to health. If you follow the Ayds plan you should feel healthier, look better while reducing—and have a lovelier figure!

This is because the Ayds way to reduce is a natural way. When you take Ayds before meals, as directed, you can eat what you want . . . all you want. Ayds contains no harmful drugs. It calls for no strenuous diet . . . no massage . . . no exercise.

Ayds is a specially made candy containing health-giving vitamins and minerals. It acts by reducing your desire for those extra fattening calories . . . works almost like magic. Easily and naturally you should begin to look slimmer, more beautiful day by day.

Users report losses up to 10 pounds with the very first box. In fact, you lose weight with the first box ($2.89) or your money back. Get Ayds from your drug or department store—a full month's supply, $2.89.

AYDS VITAMIN CANDY

The Loveliest Women in the World take AYDS

his entire marriage into a paragraph that would explain everything.

"All I know," he says at length, "is that Betsy and I try to live our life as we think best. We don't live for show; we don't throw great parties; we live simply and plainly according to our own tastes. We get on together because we see eye-to-eye on the fundamental things that count."

Those fundamentals, according to Betsy, are "love, family, and work."

"To Gene," Betsy explains, "and also to myself, the most important thing in life is our home. Naturally, love and family go with that. We want Kerry to grow up believing in the dignity and respect which all human beings, regardless of their wealth or environment, are entitled to."

complete agreement . . .

One morning, a few weeks ago, Kerry said to Gene, "May I talk to you for a minute, Daddy?"

Gene placed his daughter on his lap. "What's on your mind?"

Kerry looked at her father with her large, innocent eyes. "What do you believe in, Daddy?" she asked.

"I believe," Gene said, and he said the words very slowly, "that every person on earth should have enough to eat."

Kerry jumped down. "Thank you, Daddy," she said. "So do I."

Gene also believes in the fundamental dignity of honest labor, of doing as much work as will satisfy a person's sense of pride and achievement. He has no objection to Betsy's being active in films.

"I get restless at times," Betsy says. "I have to do things. My emotions aren't crying out for expression or anything like that, but I feel that I should be doing something. That's when I go out and start looking for jobs. Once in a great while, a producer even offers me something. Then, I show the script to Gene. He's had a whole lot more experience than I have. If he agrees, I try to get the part." She's just finished a role in Mystery Street.

What Betsy doesn't say is that when she's not acting and not taking care of her own house and child, she's working at the Birmingham Veterans' Hospital out at Van Nuys. She dances with veterans who are mentally ill; she proves to many of them that they still retain the power of locomotion they insist they have lost.

When it comes to work, however, it's Gene who's the outstanding laborer in the family. Gene is not only a director, dancer, actor, and choreographer, but he's a writer as well. He wrote the screenplay for Take Me Out to the Ball Game. He acted in Black Hand. He co-directed On The Town, and he's currently starring in and originating all the dance routines for himself and Judy Garland in Summer Stock.

It would surprise no one if eventually Gene was given his own production unit at MGM, an objective he would very much like to achieve. Ever since 1942 and For Me and My Gal, every Gene Kelly musical has made money. This keeps the stockholders happy and Gene working.

"And when he's working," his wife says, "he's the easiest man in the world to keep happy. All I have to do is to stuff him with meat and potatoes, never any vegetables. He hates vegetables, almost as much as getting up early. We both like to stay up late and sleep the next day until noon. But I can't. I have to get up for Kerry, and Gene has to get up for MGM."

Marriage in Hollywood endures only when its participants don't go Hollywood. After eight-and-a-half years, it doesn't look very likely that the Eugene Joseph Kellys ever will. THE END they don't belong

(Continued from page 43) from people."

Frankly, I think that she meant more than people. I think she meant Hollywood.

As for Gail herself, it's as she quietly says: "I never fight back. I simply stop talking." She simply announced that she and Guy had separated and she was going to Arizona for a rest. Yet in hardly more than 24 hours they were back together again. This time, Guy Madison had a statement to make. It was brief and seemed to bar any further prying into the subject of their private emotional problems.

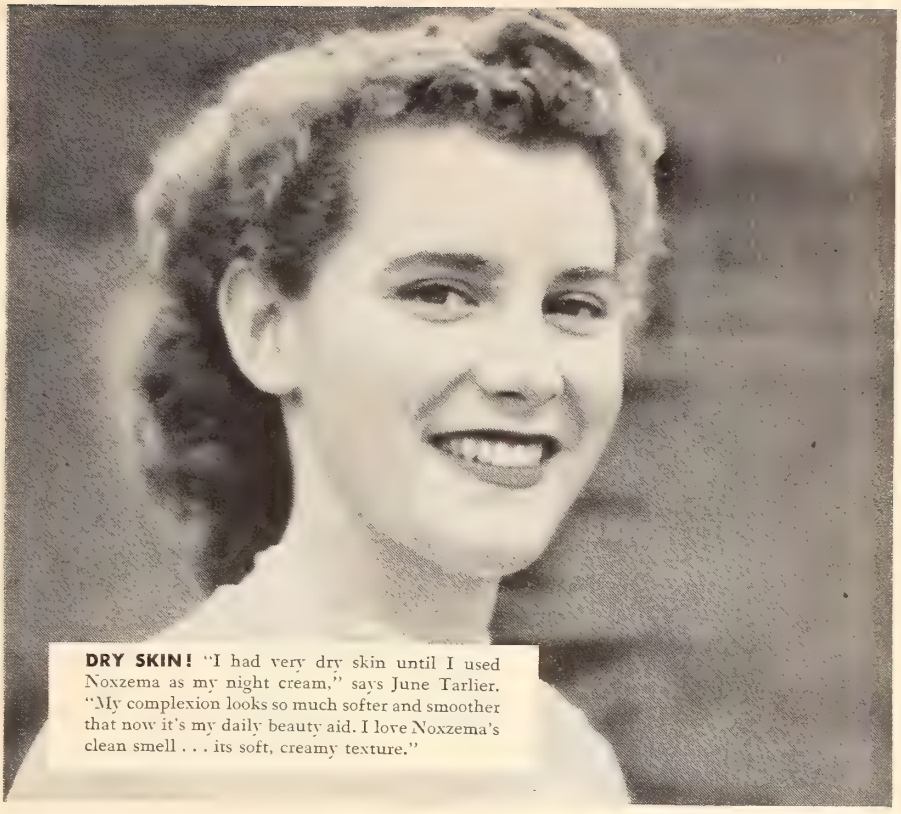
Said Guy, "I was upset about getting out of my contract." (He was referring to his agreement with Selznick. Guy has been almost a year without working—and taking a bride under such circumstances can be a dangerous gamble.) "Gail had just finished a picture for Paramount—The Lawless. We were both tired."

And I can assure you that this was no glibly manufactured alibi. Gail and Guy are both tired. Not physically. But they are weary of fighting things they don't understand, for they are as different from most young Hollywood couples as is night from day. They're a couple of genuine misfits in a glamorous, grasping city which requires iron nerves to maintain the delicate balance between failure and sorrow, and success and happiness.

Gail herself unconsciously revealed to me the reason why these two really don't "belong" in Hollywood. About their careers, she said, "Guy and I are different from most people here. The reason we went into pictures was so we could help our families."

This is true. Most stars, propelled by ambition, rush pell-mell to Hollywood, leaving their families behind in fact and mind. In Guy's case, his parents were of the "poor but honest" classification. They still live in the adobe house which Guy's father built—but things are a lot better now and Guy continues to go home frequetly. Gail, on the other hand, had fewer financial worries. Still, she was less impressed when she was press-agented into the title, "Santa Monica's Hedy Lamarr," and by the chance to become famous as a movie star, than she was by the opportunity to earn a great deal of money and thereby give her mother the things she'd always wanted.

nice people . . .



What happened on Gail and Guy's honeymoon indicates the sort of uncomplicated, genuine people these two are. And please just remember, as you read this report on their acute emotional problems, that it is the really normal youngsters who find themselves "fouled up" in Hollywood.

After their marriage, Gail and Guy rushed off—not to Acapulco or Honolulu, but that regular-folks favorite, Yellowstone Park. The first evening there they were so persistently serenaded by fans that they packed up and drove off to the greater privacy of Lake Tahoe. Here Guy asked the real estate man for a secluded cabin. There was only one, a dingy affair in which no one had lived for years. The real-estate man ventured that they wouldn't like it.

"It's great," Guy said, grabbing the key. "We'll take it."

Some of Gail's yearning for privacy faded when she saw the place. She opened her mouth to protest, but Guy had already started in with the bags.

Inside, she watched her new husband prowl around and then face her sheepish-

DRY SKIN! "I had very dry skin until I used Noxzema as my night cream," says June Tarlier. "My complexion looks so much softer and smoother that now it's my daily beauty aid. I love Noxzema's clean smell . . . its soft, creamy texture."

LOOK LOVELIER IN 10 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

Doctor develops new home beauty routine—helps 4 out of 5 women in clinical tests

● If you want a more alluring complexion, if you've suffered from dry, rough skin,*externally-caused blemishes or similar skin problems—here's news.

A noted Doctor has now developed a new home beauty routine. He found, in clinical tests, that a greaseless skin cream—famous Noxzema—has a gentle, medicated formula that helps heal such blemishes . . . helps supply a light film of oil-and-moisture to the skin's outer surface . . . helps your skin look softer, smoother, lovelier. Here's what you do:

4 Simple Steps

Morning—1. Apply Noxzema all over your face and with a damp cloth "creamwash" your face—just as you would with soap and water. Note how clean your skin looks and feels. 2. After drying face, smooth on a protective film of greaseless Noxzema as a powder base.

Evening—3. Before retiring, again "creamwash" your face. 4. Now massage Noxzema into your face. Remember—it's greaseless. Pat a little extra over any blemishes to help heal them.

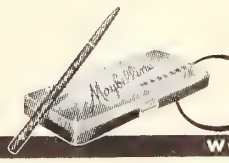
This new "Home Facial" actually helped 4 out of 5 women in clinical tests. The secret? First, Noxzema is a greaseless cream. And secondly, it's Noxzema's medicated formula—in a unique oil-and-moisture emulsion!

Money Back If Not Satisfied

Try this Doctor's new Home Beauty Routine for 10 days. If you don't see a real improvement in your skin, return the jar to Noxzema, Baltimore, Md.—your money cheerfully refunded. That's how sure we are you will be wonderfully pleased with the results.

Powder Base for lovely Marilyn Frost! She says, "I use Noxzema instead of soap and water. It's my powder base, hand cream and all-around beauty cream, too."

Blemishes!* "A friend recommended Noxzema to help heal blemishes*," says Bernice Cole. "It worked! Now I use Noxzema morning and night. It helps my skin look softer and smoother."



Medicated Noxzema Skin Cream is the favorite beauty aid of scores of actresses, models, and nurses. See for yourself why over 25,000,000 jars are used yearly! At all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax.

Something beautiful happens

...AND IT CAN HAPPEN TO YOU

...IN THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

JUST TRY Maybelline

WORLD'S FAVORITE MASCARA AND EYEBROW PENCIL

Excited by Western Movies?

Interested in Western Lore?

Then you'll enjoy the special

TIM HOLT Rodeo Issue of

WESTERN STARS

Magazine

25c at all newsstands

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED and COLORED IN OILS

to size 8 x 10 on double weight paper 89¢

Same price for full length pictures, busts and groups. Your original photo returned with enlargements. Give color of eyes, hair and clothes. Just mail photo, negative or snapshot regardless of size and enclose 89c per picture. Pictures mailed postpaid within 5 days. Satisfaction guaranteed. Payment must accompany order 3 for $2.50

Send your photo NOW.

LEIGH'S Art Studio, Dept. 2

130 West 42nd St. New York 18, N. Y.

IN CHICAGO 29 E. Adams St.

IN BOSTON 16 Bromfield St.

SIZES 1 to 9 ONLY

No feet too small or narrow for us to fit — so send for our illustrated catalog showing enormous variety of styles for every occasion — then order by mail!

For Catalog D. write to Mail Order Dept:—

85 SOUTH STREET • BOSTON 11, MASS.

ly. "Gail, I'm afraid it's outside," he managed to say.

"A fine honeymoon this is turning out to be," Gail exploded. "Not even decent plumbing!" But the situation was too hilarious. Both sat down on their suitcases and howled with laughter. During the entire stay at the cabin they roughed it.

On the last day, as Guy was gathering up their luggage, he called to her. "Hey! Did you put anything in this closet back of the stairs?" As Gail turned around to ask which closet he meant, she saw Guy yank at a reluctant door. It popped open —and the two looked dumbly in.

"So there's where it was!" Gail exclaimed. And there indeed it had been all the time. Primitive and a little dusty, but conveniently there. A shower even. Guy tried to explain why he hadn't tried the door before. "I—I just figured it was a closet, honey!"

I report this honeymoon incident to show that, essentially, these two are small-town people.

From the beginning they were more interested in and needing each other than almost any Hollywood couple I know. Once I asked Gail, "When did you feel you were falling in love?"

Gail said, "Who can say? I remember the first time I felt anything about Guy. It was after he'd hurt his shoulder falling out of a shower at the Beverly Hills Hotel. He was in bed, all bandaged and unhappy. Some friends of his took me along to visit him. He looked so miserable."

not their dish . . .

After that they saw each other frequently. Gail took Guy around Hollywood—to night clubs and parties. They soon found that this wasn't their dish of tea. Guy rescued Gail from the encircling mesh of meaningless social events by taking her to inconspicuous Mexican restaurants on Olvera Street. In the beginning, because Gail yearned so desperately for the plain farm life she'd known when she'd visited her relatives back in Minnesota, she doubtless projected all of her unfulfilled home wishes around Guy's homely personality. In turn, Guy knew that Gail was better adapted to the Hollywood pace than he, so I think he clung to her through a great need.

Frankly, it's a temptation for a reporter on the Hollywood scene to tamper with the lives of the people who live there. You get tired of being always the spectator. You want to go down on the field, so to speak, mingle with the players and perhaps say, "Look here, kiddies, you're calling the signals all wrong."

It's impossible not to feel that way about Gail and Guy—Gail, the girl who used to go to parties and sit alone moodily even though one look in the mirror could tell her she was the most beautiful girl in the place, and Guy, the man who is so genuine and so little interested in career politics and small talk that he frequently is called "dumb" behind his back. (He's dumb, all right—like Gary Cooper or John Wayne or a fox.)

Guy realizes that acting is going to be only a temporary phase in the life of most youngsters who come to Hollywood. Living is more important to him and he continually places unconscious emphasis on that fact.

Once when he drove Gail to location up in Marysville in Northern California, he parked the car on a side street, tucked a blanket around Gail's legs and said, "Don't worry, honey, I'll find the hotel in a jiffy."

On the main street he bumped into a young couple and asked directions to the San Carlos Hotel. Noticing the young man's weatherbeaten clothes, Guy asked how the hunting was around there. When Guy finally returned to a sleeping Gail, he had directions to the hotel—but he also brought along a map directing them to the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Vivian, where they were going to spend the night. It seemed, he explained to his half-awakened wife, that they had an invitation to go hunting in the morning.

As it turned out, the studio was a little frantic about Gail's whereabouts, but she and Guy turned up—with their limit of pheasants—before the cameras began to roll. And more important than pheasants, they had a pair of new and lasting friends.

Why, then, with such mutual simple tastes and a need of each other, did Gail and Guy so soon reach the point of surrender from their marriage vows?

You can't get Gail or Guy to talk about it. One thing is certain: They are not simply two well-heeled young Hollywood stars who lacked the fortitude to face the first adjustment problems of marriage. Guy may feel more secure and strong now that he is back to work again. Some producer may realize that there is gold in the simplicity of this boy, despite his inexperience, for evidence of his strong popularity with the public cannot be denied. And Guy has already given evidence that he can take command of his girl and his marriage.

He proved that by sending Gail packing off to Arizona for a rest. As I write this, Gail has returned after 10 days there—with no announcement beyond the statement that she and Guy are now happily reconciled.

Now they will in all probability continue to search for their future home—a ranch infinitely more suited to their requirements than the charming Brentwood place they now have.

Guy should discover, with his renewed income, that he doesn't have to whittle his tastes down to such a slim bank balance. More than that, Gail may realize that even a place like Hollywood is filled with small-town people who have faced the problem of existing in a whirlpool of humanity, established a small island for living, and still have not turned into resentful hermits.

I'd put it this way: It's true that you never can tell what will happen to marriage in Hollywood. It's true that in this modern age it seems corny to say that a young couple can be so in love that they need little else so long as they have each other. But that happens to be exactly the case with Gail Russell and Guy Madison.

End of report.

Sincerely,
Laddie Marchak

the courage of june haver

(Continued from page 39) of us had the slightest worry. Then for seven weeks, as he kept losing ground, we prayed that if it were God's will, he would live.

"My prayer and my sorrow had brought me closer to God, and when John died, I knew that was His will. Since then, I have wanted to live each day of my own life as though it were my last on earth. Each morning when I wake up, I ask God to help me to be a better, more understanding human being. At night, I thank Him for bringing me safely through my waking hours. It isn't so hard to face life when you know you have someone in Heaven. I still have to get there, and that's my objective in life."

Six months ago, there was not a person in Hollywood whose heart did not go out to June as she sat by John's bedside through his lingering illness. At Warner Brothers, everyone on the set of The

That Other You Could Lose His Love!

Your husband loves the real you—happy, poised, confident of your intimate feminine hygiene. Don't let doubts, misgivings, inhibitions create another you!

YOU'RE sure of feminine daintiness when you douche regularly with "Lysol."

"Lysol" cleanses the vaginal canal even in the presence of mucous matter. No makeshifts like soap, salt or soda can possibly act the same way!

"Lysol" is the famous disinfectant with amazing, proved power to kill germ-life quickly on contact!

Yet, gentle, non-caustic "Lysol" will not harm delicate tissue. Correct douching solution in the simple directions on every bottle. Many doctors advise patients to douche regularly with "Lysol," just to insure daintiness alone, and to use it as often as needed. No greasy aftereffect.

Don't take chances! Don't let neglect create a "dual personality"... another you, full of doubts, misgivings and inhibitions! Don't let that other you destroy your love!

Get "Lysol" brand disinfectant today, and use it regularly.

Preferred 3 to 1 over any other liquid preparation for Feminine Hygiene!

"Lysol" Brand Disinfectant
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Product of Lehn & Fink

A Concentrated Germ-Killer

YODORA
the deodorant that works
2 WAYS

1 stops
perspiration odor

Wonderful Yodora does not merely mask, but stops perspiration odor. Effective for full 24-hour protection.

2 softens
and beautifies underarm skin

Made with a face cream base, Yodora keeps armpits fresh and lovely-looking as the skin of neck and shoulders.

Kind to skin, chemically safe for clothes, it's the perfect cream deodorant . . . You'll adore Yodora!

Tubes or jars
10¢, 30¢, 60¢

Product of McKesson & Robbins, Bridgeport, Conn.

Daughter of Rosie O'Grady knew what it took for June to overcome her own heartache long enough to complete the last scenes of the picture. Today, those people, and the millions of others who know and love June on the screen, will be glad to know that she has found, in her religion, the way to a happy, purposeful life.

It will not be, as one overzealous columnist suggested when John was near death, by retiring to the seclusion of a nunnery. The purpose of her life was, in large part, made clear by the majority of the letters which she received from people all over America when John died, urging her to find consolation in the joy which she brings to other people by her performances on the motion picture screen. One letter in particular, which June keeps in her bedroom, came from a young woman who also recently lost her fiancé. She wrote, in part: "Continue being June Haver as we know her, and your success and happiness in life will be interminable."

"It's wonderful to have the feeling of being needed," June said. "I'll be glad to be back at work next month on my home lot at Twentieth. They have me scheduled to do a fast-moving modern musical called I'll Get By, and I think it will be good for me to work hard and get completely fatigued. It's too easy for your mind to become confused and muddled when you have nothing to do but sit and think."

three days of prayer . . .

The first few weeks after John's death were, of course, the hardest to bear. June returned with John's parents to Rock Springs, Wyoming, to attend the funeral service, which was held on a bright sunshiny November day at Saints Syril and Methodius Church, where John had been an altar boy. All the stores closed, and almost the entire town attended the services. The members of John's high-school basketball team were the pallbearers. June came back to Hollywood the next day and entered the Dominican Retreat House—the Monastery of the Angels—in Hollywood. She stayed there for three days, praying silently.

"When you can feel that close to God," she later told friends, "you are never alone."

After this brief interval of seclusion and prayer, June went back to her apartment and began to pick up the pieces of her life. She read and reread the dozens of letters, poems and prayers which people had sent to her during John's crisis. She found great comfort in talking to John's closest friends about him, and in thinking back over the past year, when she and John had really come to know one another. Her apartment itself, which is one of the units which she and John had planned, built and decorated together, had many memories. Her mother suggested that she might be happier if she moved to another place, a place without memories. But June decided against that.

"I have never seen any point in running away," she said. "I have always found that it is better to go right through your troubles instead of trying to walk around them."

By the end of November, the pressures of her career began again where they had left off when June finished the last dance scene of The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady and rushed to the hospital to be with John. First, there was a big portrait sitting—for what they call "poster art"—and Bert Six, the chief portrait photographer at Warners, claims that June was never lovelier. She posed for pictures in all the costumes from the movie, a long, tedious session in the gallery that would have been difficult under any circumstances. The wardrobe department reported that through the entire sitting June was cheerful, cooperative and helpful, as she usually is.

In December, there was real significance in the selection of the Hollywood Women's Press Club when they named June as the most cooperative actress of the year and invited her down to receive their "Golden Apple" award. June treasures the tiny gold pin which they gave her. But the big basket of real apples which also went with the award June thoughtfully took to the nuns at St. John's Hospital, whom she met during John's illness.

Christmas is always a time of joy and love of mankind, but this year it had a special meaning for June. Never before had she so completely experienced the importance of giving—of giving herself and her time to others. One day just before Christmas, June received a call from her stand-in and close friend, Shirley Clark, who invited her to come out to Birmingham Hospital and help entertain the boys in the paraplegic and aphasia wards. June spent the whole day at the hospital, singing and dancing.

June spent Christmas Eve with her younger sister, Evie, and had a wonderful time wandering around the neighborhood singing Christmas carols with a group of her sister's friends. They finished the evening by attending midnight mass in Hollywood.

On Christmas, June took on the job of entertaining her entire family in her apartment. It was a gay day, with her mother, her two sisters and their families, and her close friends filling her apartment to overflowing. June doesn't know quite how she accomplished it in her tiny kitchen, but somehow she managed to serve a lavish buffet dinner to 25 people that afternoon.

A few days later, June left for Rock Springs with her grandmother to spend a "second Christmas" with John's parents. She meant only to stay for a day or two, but didn't get away until January 2nd, and then she regretted leaving so soon. For ever since June made her first visit to John's home two years ago, she has loved the rugged mountain country of Wyoming. She and John had talked many times about building a home there. As long as June feels that she can help to fill the aching void in his parents' hearts, she will always consider Rock Springs her second home. June and John's mother built a firm bond out of their common suffering during the long hours of uncertainty at the hospital.

Since she returned from Rock Springs, June has again begun to do a few of the

I SAW IT HAPPEN

We had been having lunch in a restaurant in Beverly Hills which presents a mask in the shape of a pig to all its young guests. As we were leaving, my daughter dropped hers and a sudden gust of wind carried it further away. I made several attempts to get it but was unsuccessful. I had given up and was consoling my daughter, when my friend told me that a very handsome gentleman was going after it. It wasn't until he approached me, mask in hand, that I realized it was Robert Mitchum who thought a child's happiness important enough to chase a mask half way up the block.

R. Green
Los Angeles, Calif.

things that characterized her busy and exuberant life of a year ago. Which is as it should be, for June is by nature a cheerful and healthy person. Last month, to get some exercise, she began playing tennis again. In time, she hopes to get her golf game back into the form which won for her the women's championship in the studio tournament last year. Just a few days ago, June called Shirley and said, "Guess what I did yesterday! Believe it or not, I went skiing for the first time in my life."

June went on to tell Shirley about meeting a gang of kids with whom she went to Beverly Hills High School a few years back. They persuaded her to go up to Big Pines with them for a Sunday romp in the snow, and June had so much fun that she plans to continue her ski lessons every weekend until her picture starts.

But since the middle of January, most of June's interest and time have been taken up with a project which is more than a hobby or a way to pass time. Two years ago, June and John pooled their savings and, as an investment, built an apartment house. It is the building in which June now lives, and as apartment houses go, it is an agreeable modern building. It is also a personal achievement of June's, for in addition to making a smart investment of it, June also is responsible for the interior decoration of every room in it.

As a matter of fact, the building turned out so well that June and John were planning to build another one, a bigger building which would include a penthouse apartment for them, to be occupied by them as soon as it became possible for them to be married in the Catholic church. They had the plans all drawn and were looking for a building site just a few weeks before John went to the hospital. After his death, June dismissed the entire project from her mind. Didn't want to think about it.

old plans revived . . .

Then one day about five weeks ago, a contractor friend of John's named George Froley called her on the phone.

"How'd you like to decorate a house I'm building out in Beverly Hills?" he asked her. "It's a big Colonial place with lots of opportunities to use colorful wall papers. I think you'd have a lot of fun doing it. How about it?"

"I'd love to, George," June enthused. "When can we talk about it?"

"Right now," George said. "I'll bring you the plans."

Before she knew what had happened to her, June found herself running around like an anxious bird, looking at paper samples, testing paint colors, and clipping off tiny swatches of fabric. It didn't take George long to approve her selections. They were original, bright, and exactly right for the house plans. Now, for the next three weeks, June will have a big job on her hands, that of supervising the plasterers, painters, and paperhangers.

Out of her enthusiasm for this new undertaking, June has reclaimed the plans for the building which she and John were going to build together. This project is no misty dream to be put into effect in the vague future. June plans to break the ground on the building site sometime this year, and as soon as she finishes I'll Get By, she'll begin on her decoration scheme.

"It never hurts to have a sideline," June laughed, and it was a joy to see her eyes so bright. "I want to have something interesting to do when people get tired of seeing me on the screen."

I saw no reason for answering her with the obvious—that that day would never come as long as she continued to find joy in living and bringing joy to others.

THE END

KEEP KISSABLE WITH Flame-Glo LONGFELLA

No wonder Flame-Glo is more popular than ever before! The new Longfella gives you a better balanced lipstick that's longer and stronger. Not only twice as many applications, but easier to use than other pencil types! Flame-Glo assures extra beauty instantly . . . no smears, smudges or blurry edges, thanks to its longer-lasting, water repellent beauty film. Now featured in thrilling new shades for your new Spring Fashions. Only 39¢ . . . also in regular 49¢, 25¢ and 10¢ sizes. Matching rouge in lovely plastic case, 25¢.

NEW 39¢ LONGFELLA IN STREAMLINED GOLD FINISH CASE

now with FASTENOL for longer-lasting color brilliance

Flame-Glo® LIPSTICK

POPULAR 25¢ SIZE IN GOLD FINISH CASE

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE FLAME-GLO AT ALL POPULAR-PRICE COSMETIC COUNTERS

Perma-scrub is here!

Makes cleaning pots and pans child's play

You've never known such a quick, easy, pleasant way to clean pots and pans! Perma-scrub actually lifts off burned or caked food or grease in a flash. No more sore fingers from metal particles. No more dishwater hands! Comes in many gay colors. Get a Perma-scrub today and banish scouring bother.

OUTMODES OLD-STYLE SCOURING PADS

AT LEADING VARIETY STORES

Modglin Co., Inc., Los Angeles 65, Calif.
New York 16 • Chicago 9 • New Orleans 13

why stars can't take criticism

(Continued from page 48) a hoarse, cruel voice cried.

"Hey—why aren't you in the Army, Bud?"

Milland matched his volume and tone. "Are you kidding?" he yelled. "With a war on?"

A small incident. It proved that the actor was equipped to defend himself with a classic quip, spontaneous or studied, for an eventuality that shriveled his soul. But it was also proof—since Milland was of a mind, it is said, to call off the rest of his trip then and there—of the contention that movie stars can't take criticism.

Because of their temperamental make-up, and because their perch on the rocky pedestal of flicker fame is always a shaky one, stars can't take criticism both for reasons of personal sensitivity and simple business policy.

Stars are paid their handsome salaries as public attractions on the strength of their ability to charm large numbers of people into loving them sufficiently to plunk down huge sums of money to get a look at them. Therefore, it is held by reporters, editors and writers that a movie star has small right to a private life. They, and consequently the reading public, feel then that a star is a fair target for the most personal kind of criticism.

The stars, on the other hand, clutching at the premise that they are eligible for a small serving of dignity, beg at first, then roar for privacy in some matters. For example, Paulette Goddard.

No associate of Paulette Goddard can ever mention in her hearing, her marriage to Charlie Chaplin. If anyone in any capacity at any studio that wanted to ever make a picture with Goddard were to criticize her silence on the Chaplin affair, his head would fall beneath Paulette's pocketbook-size ax before he could finish.

battleground . . .

Goddard is a prime example of the inability of a star to take criticism in any form. They say she has a hate list as long as Sunset Boulevard. Her frequent change of directors is a positive affirmation of this, as it is reported she will not work twice with a man who intimates that she might have done better in that last scene if she had tried a little harder. The rumbles of friction from the stages of Anna Lucasta last year were enough to start small fires.

The star, even the most affable star, can foul up a picture to a fare-thee-well in a pique. Bob Hope, they say, did it in a recent picture when he is said to have heard that the producer had made a couple of remarks at a party about old jokes. Whether by accident or design, the movie took almost twice as long as scheduled to complete. Hope didn't feel good today, had to go to Minneapolis or some place to play a benefit, didn't like the dialogue or the sketch in the ninth reel, and a number of other things. The heads are still bouncing in the gutters.

To criticize Abbott and Costello on their home lot is to tempt the fates that line the people up in front of the state unemployment offices. These lads, for all their knockabout souls, are sensitive. They base their sensitivity on the premise that they've made Universal at least a hundred million dollars—and there are those who go along with them in that contention. No director dares tell them much more than where the camera will pick them up, nor does any set flunky say anything more expressive than "yes."

Unlike most stars, though, they have done something constructive about their temperament. They carry their whipping-boy with them—a small, rugged ex-vaudevillian. Whenever one of the comics feels a rage coming on, or some other emotion that will interfere with the business at hand, he howls for the vaudevillian and anything can happen. He pushes a soft pie in the foil's face, pours a bucket of water in his new hat, or performs any other little funny that might relieve his spleen. The current invective that is said to send Costello into a tizzy is the truthful, "Say, you sure have gotten skinny."

Everybody has enemies, but in Hollywood they are on a more personal basis. The proprietor of a butcher shop in Indianapolis will frankly agree that his enemies expend some of their venom on other folks, and that he is merely a name on a list of victims. In Hollywood that is seldom the case. The motion picture victim is usually convinced that he is the little black spot in the center of the target his enemies are throwing knives at.

A recent illustration is the hue and cry recently in the public prints over the excess poundage picked up on a vacation by Judy Garland.

a matter of weight . . .

Actually, it mattered very little to the one party most intimately concerned, the cameraman, for he could quite easily light and shade the Garland torso and chin line to kill or build the pouches. It is said, and from reliable departments, that Judy went into a rage, then went home and wept uncontrollably when the matter of pudginess was pointed out to her.

Now, if you were to place Judy Garland in a dime store in Wilmington, Delaware, and have someone drop a hint to her that she was developing a tummy and a crease under the chin, she would no doubt have waited until closing time to take a look in the mirror, then, in a day or so, trotted down to the drug store to pick up a package of reducing pills and pledged to lay off sweets and starches for a couple of weeks.

But Judy Garland is a movie star. She has enemies. The first, more than likely, was a columnist who, needing a filler item, chattered that: "Judy Garland, who was so painfully thin last time we saw her, is beginning to look like a blimp."

The second probably was a studio executive who, spotting the item, dictated an inter-office memo: "See if you can get Garland to consider taking off 15 or 20 pounds. Hear she is beginning to look like Elsa Maxwell."

The third might have been an underling who had to approach Judy with a sick grin and say, "Miss Garland, the front office wants to know if you would mind, please, not eating such a big lunch. You're 11 ounces over the weight your contract calls for."

By the time the words were said face to face, Garland had been buzzed and briefed by a hundred friends that her enemies were out to get her—via the waistline—and she blew like a sperm whale on a sunny day.

Most of the female stars have at one time or another been the victims of this overweight assassination. Lana Turner, for one, falls into the range of the weight gossipers' guns at least once a year. She's too fat, they say, or too thin—she looks like a Goodyear ad flying over the house, or else the last discovered tenant of a concentration camp. And Turner has reacted in the true tradition of the star by howling: "I've got enemies!"

FOR GIRLS ONLY: IN THE MAY MODERN SCREEN THERE'LL BE A SPECIAL FEATURE STRICTLY FOR LADIES!

Even patently honest criticism without malice is dangerous in the realm of the movie star. The odd ventures into vengeance on the parts of the stars when in anger over a slight are rather amusing. There was the time that Betty Hutton's husband said something uncomplimentary at the breakfast table, as is a husband's right and duty, and Betty stormed into the office of the executive in charge of keeping Betty Hutton happy and demanded that her mate be barred from the lot. "If he sticks his face in here," she howled, "I leave! It's him—or me!" Before such an order could be issued, however, love won a speedy joust with hate over the telephone, and when Mr. Briskin pressed the buzzer, the door was blown open by a hearty sigh of relief.

There is the Case of the Hairy Lip—or Peter Lawford's Mustache Knows No Fear. There was a period in the young English actor's life when, to him, a thriving patch of fuzz on his upper lip ranked with the Marshall Plan as a thing of consequence. It would have been less hazardous to steal one of his women than to cast a slurring remark about the tickler. A suggestion that maybe the thing was sapping his strength would send Pete into a fury. Finally, convinced that the world was set against his little beauty, he went hog-wild. Cultivation prospered, the mustache grew to fabulous proportions. Along the lip and out it spread until Lawford was faced with playing nothing but officers in the Turkish Army or quitting pictures. It took, they say, the entire MGM front office, four studio policemen, a brace of barbers and a personal plea from the British Ministry of Hair to get it trimmed—and Lawford was a beaten and unhappy man for days. All this because of an initial idle remark that Peter made a mistake when he started his mustache.

don't say that! . . .

If there were a statuette for the most temperamental actress on the screen, at least 5,000 Hollywoodites would chip in to buy a solid-gold one for Hedy Lamarr. She has many sore spots, but the most delicate one has to do with physical well-being. The slightest suggestion that she does not look the picture of splendid health shatters her completely. She is incapable of criticism in this matter, and they might as well close the store for a day or so if she hears, or suspects she hears, a whisper to the contrary.

Robert Mitchum, publicity to the contrary, is violently allergic to allusions to his brief hassle with the law of a year ago. He went along for months with the writers and pals who joked or paddled him for the incident. Then he figured he had taken enough, and today if you mention it within his hearing you're liable to have to go and get your jaw wired back in place.

Even though criticism may be deemed by a majority to be deserved, the stars kick up a fuss. Ingrid Bergman fell in love with Rossellini. She didn't keep it a secret, feeling probably that the fans would understand. The fans didn't understand and criticized Ingrid at every opportunity for her act. Instead of frankly stating her case and asking for a just decision from the people who paid her salary, Bergman haughtily announced that she would never make another movie. They say she intends to keep that promise. And the finish of her career can be laid solely at the feet of the temperament that angered her into deciding the public which criticized her would never get an-

HOW CAN HE EXPLAIN TO HIS sensitive young wife?

THERE'S A WOMANLY OFFENSE—GREATER THAN BODY ODOR OR BAD BREATH!

More than ever before in her life, a young wife must realize how important it is to always put ZONITE in her fountain syringe for hygiene (keeping clean internally), for charm and health—after her periods; that it's difficult for germs to get a foothold when hygiene is practiced. And she must constantly be on guard against an offense greater than body odor or bad breath—an odor she may not detect herself but is so apparent to other people.

That's why well-informed women depend on ZONITE. NO OTHER LIQUID ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE TESTED FOR THIS PURPOSE IS SO POWERFUL YET SAFE TO TISSUES AS ZONITE.

A Modern Miracle!

A woman no longer has to use dangerous products, overstrong solutions of which may gradually cause serious damage. Nor will she rely on weak homemade solutions — none of which has the remarkable deodorizing and germicidal action of ZONITE.

Developed by a famous surgeon and scientist—this ZONITE principle is POWERFULLY EFFECTIVE yet POSITIVELY NON-POISONOUS, NON-IRRITATING. You can use it as directed as often as you want without the slightest risk of injury.

Gives BOTH Internal and External Hygienic Protection from Odor

ZONITE deodorizes not by just "masking"—it actually destroys, dissolves and removes odor-causing waste substances.

Use ZONITE and be assured you won't offend. And ZONITE has such a soothing effect and promptly helps relieve any itching or burning. ZONITE gives daily external hygienic protection, too, leaving you with such a refreshed dainty feeling—knowing that you will not offend. Available at any drugstore.

NO OTHER TYPE LIQUID ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE TESTED FOR THE DOUCHE IS SO POWERFUL YET SAFE TO TISSUES

© 1950, Z.P.C.

Zonite

FOR NEWER

feminine hygiene

*Offer good only in the U.S.

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products Corp., Dept. MR-40, 100 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

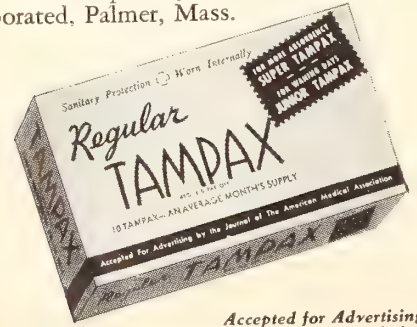
many girls do not know...

about Tampax

Did you know that Tampax provides monthly protection without any need for belts, pins or external pads?

Did you know that Tampax is worn internally and that the wearer cannot even feel its presence?

Did you know that Tampax can be used by both married and unmarried and is very popular in girls' colleges?



Did you know that Tampax need not be removed during tub or shower — nor while in swimming?

Did you know that Tampax cannot cause odor or chafing and is easily disposable?

Did you know that Tampax is made of pure absorbent cotton and has so much less bulk than external pads?

Did you know that Tampax was invented by a doctor and comes in patented disposable applicators?

Buy Tampax at drug or notion counter in 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior). A month's average supply will slip into your purse and provide you with a new peace of mind. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Accepted for Advertising by the Journal of the American Medical Association other look at her for their dollar bills.

Even Clark Gable. When moviedom's hero of World War II arrived back in Hollywood, he was more paunchy than when he had left. The word was passed around the MGM lot that Clark was trying to do something about it, and that he would resent any reference to his change until he looked himself again. The result was a general embarrassment that followed Gable around the studio like a cloudy tail. When he entered the commissary for lunch, all conversation would stop, as though a switch marked MUMBLE OF VOICES had been pulled in the front office. It must have been obvious to Clark, but it had to be. A tribute to a personal vanity.

There are endless tales attesting to the impediment in the character of an actor or actress that bars criticism, valid or not. Maybe it's a good thing. Maybe it is required that a man or woman who makes a living as a public puppet be delicately strung, and to keep them in performing balance, the string of criticism must never be joggled.

If this is true, an enigma exists. It has been the experience of most of these players to prepare for their greatness the hard way. They have, in the main, been buffeted almost beyond endurance in their climb to their current heights. There have been scores of adverse notices of their work, looks and possibilities. Some took these stabs in better grace than others, but they all took them.

Some of them have literally taken tomatoes in the face and have been thrown out of stage doors—all because of their loudly-howled inadequacies. The mob, the press and their own friends have had at them to their fullest desires.

But when that star has risen, when the name they have built is shining bright in lights of neon and frosted white, the imbalance sets in—and everybody begins to tiptoe across the acre of eggs surrounding each and every movie star in Hollywood.

But then, maybe it is we, the press and public, who have become sensitive and have dreamed up this wall that stands between us and our idols. Maybe the coworkers of the stars are the villains of the piece. Try on this last anecdote for size.

It was a Bing Crosby picture at Paramount. About the middle of the afternoon of a fairly hard day of shooting, a pale executive with trembling hands called a producer.

"We're in terrible trouble," he panted.

"What's the matter—are we fired?" croaked the producer, matching the boss's pallid hue.

"Not yet," said the exec. "Worse. I just talked to the production office and they tell me Crosby has to work tonight."

"Oh, my Lord," moaned the producer. "Who's going to tell him?"

"You," said the executive, quickly hanging up and dashing out of his office.

The producer sweated and trembled for a few minutes, then called the director. "You," he said, "go down to the set and tell Crosby he's working tonight."

"Are you out of your mind?" screamed the director. "Nobody's said anything, but already I have the feeling Crosby despises me. I've worked too long at my career to throw it out of the window like that."

"It's your set," stormed the producer, "and your picture. You go right down and tell him he's working tonight or so help me I'll see you never get another job!"

The producer hung up quickly and dashed out of his office.

The director went back to the company, obviously a beaten man. He eyed his aggressive assistant.

"Hey you," he said. "Go on over to Crosby's dressing room and tell him he's working tonight."

"But—" said the assistant director, turning a rare shade of pea green.

"Your wife just had a baby," said the director. "Assistant directors are a dime a dozen. To your duty before something final happens to you!"

The assistant walked over to the water bottle and proceeded to drink copious slugs of the stuff, carrying it to his mouth with two trembling, wet hands. A standin walked by.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked.

"I've got to tell Crosby he has to work tonight," said the assistant. "I'll be all right after I take a couple of phenobarbitals."

The stand-in walked over to Crosby's dressing room, where Bing, smoking a pipe, was reading a paper in the doorway.

"Hi, Bing," he said. "I see we have to work tonight."

"Yeah?" said Bing without looking up. "Guess I better phone my wife and tell her I'll be late for dinner."

And he puffed happily on his pipe.

THE END

how doris day won her son

(Continued from page 47) talents fell into place and she was a success at Warner Brothers studio, singing on coast-to-coast radio shows, making best-seller phonograph recordings.

She realized that the hectic schedule of a band-singer had been largely responsible for destroying her two marriages, and had forced her to relegate to her widowed mother the duties of rearing Terry. She wondered if it were too late to establish a normal mother-son relationship with her five-year-old boy. Perhaps his infant impressions had destroyed his security. He might always look upon her as a woman who tomorrow, the next day or the next, would desert him, leaving him again to seek shelter from another person.

In May, 1948, Doris found a house she could afford in the San Fernando valley. By September, after an exhausting summer of work and intensive shopping for sturdy antique furniture, she had the home ready for Terry and her mother.

"I wondered how it was going to be—having Terry with me permanently," she recalls. "It came to me suddenly that the important things of life cannot be bought with money—only with humble effort. I now had the professional success for which I had been struggling. I was secure, financially, for the first time in my adult life.

"But here I was, more nervous than I had been the day I asked Director Mike Curtiz for my first job in motion pictures, wondering what a six-year-old boy would think of me—his mother—and the home I had provided for him.

"When he arrived, I kissed him, then looked at him a moment. I saw a sturdy boy, looking a little like me, a little like his father. But he was neither of us. He was himself—a human being, the product of his environment—a motherless and fatherless environment.

"I asked him if he wanted to go into the backyard and play. He looked at me silently for several seconds. I would have given anything to know what was going on behind his inscrutable eyes. Then he said very gravely, 'I'd better ask Nana'."

At that instant Doris knew the extent of her problem, for she must take from him a previously reliable source of authority without damaging the respect or impairing the affection he held for his grandmother. Then she must substitute her own authority in such a way that he would respect her as well as love her.

"Mother came to my rescue," Doris says. "She said to him, 'Whatever your mother says is always right.' Terry smiled—and went out to explore the yard."

That evening, Doris and her mother had a long talk. Terry would have the bedroom down the hall from Doris' room, while the grandmother would use the bedroom and bath at the other end of the house.

Without training in child psychology, Doris had to depend upon native commonsense and mother instinct. She knew that Terry's life, up to this time, had been top-heavy with women. His only adult male companion on anything like a consistent basis had been Paul, Doris' older brother, who had been with Terry for about a year in Cincinnati.

Doris could have smothered her son with affection, but instead, turned in one of her most superb acting jobs by returning his "Hi" with "Hi" until the first time he came to her, instead of to his grandmother, for comfort and security.

"It was a little thing," Doris explains—with a softness to her smile that makes her seem more mature than is indicated by her slender figure and prominent freckles. "He'd been playing with the neighbor boys when two of them bumped together. Terry fell hard."

With elbows skinned and lips bruised, Terry came to his mother—not his Nana—for repairs and solace. "I didn't give him the full treatment," Doris says. "I tried to think how a boy's father would have acted. So I treated his wounds. kissed him and told him to go back and play."

the protective instinct . . .

Terry, too, seems very aware that there is no man in his family. In June, 1949, when his mother obtained her divorce from his stepfather, George Weidler, Terry went to Doris and said, "Don't you worry, I'll take care of you. And when I get big, I'll get a job, and you won't have to work any more."

Terry hardly knows his own father, Al Jordan—for Doris and Al, a trombonist with Jimmy Dorsey's band, separated immediately after Terry was born.

Shortly after Terry's arrival from Cincinnati, Doris decided to give him a temporary, 100 percent masculine existence to counteract the influence of women in his life. So she sent him to a camp near Mount Baldy.

"He came back a changed boy, filled with man-talk and a new self-confidence," she says. "But a boy needs the companionship of a man—not merely for a month each year, but every day.

"It is right that Terry should think of protecting me. And when he is in trouble it is logical for him to turn to me—as men have always turned to women—for comfort. But every boy needs a man to whom he can go for advice, or simply for a man-to-man talk about the affairs of the world, the way their women are treating them, or what sort of lure will be the most effective the next time they go fishing."

Terry seems to feel a need for such masculine companionship, and the friendship he has struck up with Marty Melcher, his mother's six-foot-four-inch agent, has been a bright spot in the boy's life. Melcher handles the professional affairs of Doris Day in motion pictures, radio, and phonograph recordings. Consequently, he has many conferences with her. In this way, Marty has become acquainted with Terry, and the warm relationship existing between the man and the boy seems a natural outgrowth of two basically friendly personalities.

Most make-ups shout: "Made-up!"— Magic Touch whispers: "Natural beauty"

Replace that heavy "made-up" look with natural-looking loveliness by using Magic Touch. No puff, no sponge.

39c and 1.00 everywhere
6 magic shades

Magic Touch is NEW . . . a tinted cream make-up so sheer your skin glows through! . . . yet it hides each tiny blemish while it smooths and softens and adds glorious color. . . . Apply with fingertips (with or without powder)—so quick, so easy, so naturally lovely!

DRAW ME!

COPY THIS GIRL AND

Try for $1,200 in Prizes

5 PRIZES IN THIS APRIL CONTEST! 5 Complete $240 Art Courses, including Drawing Outfits!

Here's your big chance, if you want to become a commercial artist, designer, or illustrator! An easy-to-try way to win FREE art training!

Whether you win or not our instructors send you their comments on your work, if your drawing shows promise! Trained illustrators and artists now making big money. Find out now if YOU have profitable art talent. You've nothing to lose—everything to gain. Mail your drawing today.

RULES: You must be amateur. Our students not eligible. Make copy of girl 5 ins. high. Pencil or pen only. Omit lettering. All drawings must be received by April 30, 1950. None returned. Winners notified. For winner-list, send stamped self-addressed envelope.

MEMBER NATIONAL HOME STUDY COUNCIL

Art Instruction, Inc.

MINNEAPOLIS • CHICAGO • NEW YORK • LOS ANGELES

ART INSTRUCTION, INC., Dept. 3690
500 S. 4th St., Minneapolis 15, Minn.

Please enter my attached drawing in your April drawing contest. (PLEASE PRINT)

NAME_____ AGE_____

ADDRESS_____ PHONE_____

CITY_____ ZONE___ COUNTY_____

STATE_____ OCCUPATION_____

Is Your Daughter A WALLFLOWER Because of Periodic Pain?

No modern girl need be "a wallflower," miss parties and break dates because of the time of month. Midol has changed all that by bringing quick comfort from menstrual suffering.

MIDOL RELIEVES HEADACHE

Midol brings amazingly fast relief from menstrual headache because it contains two highly effective, proven medical ingredients that are often prescribed by many doctors.

MIDOL EASES CRAMPS...

Midol contains an exclusive anti-spasmodic ingredient which quickly eases cramps. Even women who have suffered severely report that Midol brings quick comfort. And Midol does not interfere in any way with the natural menstrual process.

MIDOL CHASES "BLUES"

The mild stimulant in Midol helps lift her out of the depression and "blues" which often attend the menstrual process. So see that your daughter takes Midol and takes it in time. She'll be her charming self even on days she used to suffer most.

MOTHERS: Free copy of "What Women Want to Know", explains menstruation. (Plain wrapper). Write Dept. C-40, Box 280, New York 18, N. Y.

MIDOL

is the Thing to Take for FUNCTIONAL
PERIODIC PAIN

Shortly after the 1949-50 school year started and Terry began second-grade work, Marty gave the boy a man-sized lunch bucket with a special thermos container for chocolate milk—Terry's favorite beverage.

Prior to that, Terry had shown virtually no interest in his mid-day meal at school. But when he carried his lunch, he developed a better appetite.

Then, one evening as Doris was getting him ready for bed, he opened a conversation of the type that frequently bewilders mothers.

"Mommy, do you pay for the milk they give me at school?" he asked.

"Why, yes. I pay for it each month in advance."

"Well," said Terry, shrugging into his pajamas, "next month don't pay. I don't drink it now that I've got Marty's lunch bucket. I carry my own milk."

This concern of Terry's, who is not yet eight years old, for the needless spending of money reflects, Doris knows, the insecurity in his life through the years when she was a band-singer struggling for recognition.

financial worries . . .

Not long ago he wanted to get a paper route. "I can make plenty of money that way," he declared.

Doris, too, thinks it's a good idea for a boy to work a little and thus establish his independence. But when she investigated, she learned that Terry must wait until he is 10 years old before he can become a newsboy.

"By the time he's 10," Doris smiles, "he'll probably want to be an airplane pilot."

Shortly before Thanksgiving, Terry had another inspiration. He said to his mother, "Say, have you paid for my entire school year in advance?"

"Why?"

"Well," said Terry, "just in case you haven't, I could quit school the first of next month and save you quite a lot of money."

Doris began to laugh silently, but Terry wasn't finished. "I might as well, anyway," he continued, "because if I ever get to be President, I'm going to close all the schools."

Doris explained that he'd be a lot better off going to school for at least a while. "Especially if you plan to be President," she said, and tucked him into bed.

Terry seems entirely unaware that his mother is an important Hollywood personality. He knows that she makes pictures and records and appears on radio programs. But he accepts this as simply something his mother does for a living.

Incidentally, Terry is not one of Doris Day's most enthusiastic movie fans. He's seen It's a Great Feeling five times—it's happened to have been coupled with cowboy pictures on double bills. The last time he returned from such a show, his grandmother asked how he liked the picture.

"It was a swell Western," he replied.

His grandmother should have dropped the subject right there. But she persisted. "How did you like It's a Great Feeling?"

"Gee," he replied, "how many times can a guy laugh at the same jokes?"

But Terry has proved that as far as he is concerned, age does not necessarily impair a joke.

"He's always killing himself with a joke that is months old," Doris explains. "Recently, he's been giving Hallowe'en jokes a terrific ride. The other morning at breakfast he asked, 'Mommy, is Hallowe'en over?'"

"Certainly. Months ago."

"Then why are you still wearing your mask?"

"With that," Doris says, "he practically fractured himself. No wonder Milton Berle is one of his favorite TV programs!"

Although Doris has a house that is quite small, Terry has complete freedom within it. When writers interview her, or when big deals are being talked out, Terry's life goes on as usual. If he and his friends are pursuing "rustlers," a swarm of sombreros may pass through the living room to the accompaniment of numerous bangs and the whistle of bullets.

The matter of getting another house is a pressing problem with Doris today. She wants more room—not so much inside as outside.

"I'd like to have space enough for a volley ball or badminton court, and a small swimming pool. It would make a wonderful place for Terry and his friends to play. And I could play with him, too," she adds, glancing down at the jeans she was wearing at the time. "I try to play with him, and I like to be dressed for a romp or a rough-house."

The manner in which Doris dresses when she has a chance to spend a portion of a day around the house with Terry, seems to reflect a subconscious desire to be both a mother and a father to Terry. Her normal attire on Sunday morning is either jeans or pedal-pushers with a T-shirt. Dressed this way, she's ready at a moment's notice to play with Terry and Smudgie—or with Terry alone when the dignity of the French poodle seems violated by the cavorting of the two human beings closest to his heart.

This manner and mode of the Day household gives added meaning to Doris' words when she frankly admits she wishes she had a husband. "Certainly I want to get married," she says. "Every girl does. And not simply because Terry needs a father, either. A woman should have a husband—the right sort of husband. I believe I know now exactly what I want in a man—love, friendship and respect."

Making movies, appearing regularly on the Bob Hope radio show as well as making frequent guest appearances on other programs, and turning out a heavy schedule of phonograph recordings—all this prevents Doris from spending as much time with Terry as she'd like.

Movie-making probably interferes more with her routine than her other two main activities. For example, when Warners started shooting Storm Center, early in December, Doris had to be away from Hollywood for several days.

When such location trips separate her from Terry, neither likes it. But now, after nearly a year-and-a-half of real home-life, both Terry and Doris take such separations in stride.

"He knows he is my boy," Doris says. "He knows we belong together. If I have to stay away for a few days, he knows I am coming back—not going off on a tour with a band that will keep me away for so many months that he could almost forget I'm his mother!" THE END that's hollywood!

A magazine writer was interviewing Ava Gardner at Le Chambord Restaurant. "Does gossip annoy you?" he asked. "Certainly not," said Miss Gardner. "What would you like to tell me?"

Irving Hoffman in
The Hollywood Reporter

(Continued from page 24) to the fore once again. The rumor-mongers began to go to work on Ava. "Of course," said one. "I saw them together in New York."

"That's nothing," said another. "I hear that if Frankie gets married again, Ava is the one."

"Isn't it true," asked a third, "that Ava was at Frank's New Year's party at Palm Springs? And didn't he give her a beautiful piano for Christmas?"

Actually, what had happened was this: Frank and Nancy Sinatra had quarreled, as all wives and husbands occasionally do. Rather than have his children sense the strained atmosphere around the house, Frank had packed a wardrobe trunk and had moved into his office for a few days.

During those few days, he spent some time with old friends—one of whom was Ava. And in the course of those same few days, a large Steinway piano arrived at his office, and Frank let Ava play it. When those few days elapsed, and his anger had worn off, Frank returned home.

Of all the people he had been with during that time, only Ava made the gossip columns. Apparently, whenever the lovely North Carolina brunette is connected with a news item, the reaction is feverish.

The day in 1941 when Ava first arrived in Hollywood with an MGM contract, she was taken on a tour of the lot. She was led to the stage where Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney were playing a scene for Babes on Broadway.

When the scene was finished, Ava was introduced to the principals. Rooney, who'd been in the entertainment business all his young life and who'd been around beautiful women from the day he first could see, had never been around anything like Ava. He looked at her and did a double take. This girl was beautiful. What was even more important, she seemed to generate sex-appeal.

Mickey gulped and drank in all this beauty. A few nights later, he called and asked for a date. In six months' time, Ava Gardner, the lovely farmer's daughter, was Mrs. Mickey Rooney.

You've probably read a good deal about Ava's short-lived marriage to Mickey. When Ava married Mickey, she didn't particularly care about her career. "All I wanted to do," she says, "was to take care of Mickey. I wanted to make a go of our marriage. If someone offered me a part, I played it. If I wasn't offered any part, I didn't worry about it. To me, Mickey was the most important thing in life. I used to be very lazy about my acting. But I was never lazy about my marriage."

Ava has always been in love with love. As she herself says, "Each time my marriage has broken up, it's been like dying. I tried hard to make them work. I even quit movies because they take too much out of you. They don't leave anything for your husband."

the simple things . . .

To Ava, marriage is and always has been the main objective of her life. There are some who would have you believe that she's a siren who collects men as a queen bee collects suitors.

Not true. Ava has played the field pretty widely, especially between her two marriages and since her divorce from Artie Shaw in 1946. But she has had a discriminating eye cocked on matrimony.

"What I want out of life," she says, "is what my momma and daddy had, and I don't see why I can't have it. I need marriage and a home and kids to feel like I'm really living."

In short, Ava is ready to give up all the tinsel and glitter and phony romance for the real thing—a husband she can love and respect and grow with.

This she did with Artie Shaw, whom she married in 1945. A musician who knows Ava well and therefore prefers to remain nameless, says, "If Artie asked Ava to come back to him, I'm sure she would. Ask anyone who knows anything about their marriage, ask Ava if she still isn't in love with him, and I'll bet you she'll say 'yes.'

"Artie Shaw is one of the great lovers of this generation, and he understood Ava better than anyone ever will again. And he really loved her.

"Ava did everything to make him happy. And he did wonders for her. Before Shaw, you must admit, she was a pretty poor actress. She had no perception, no insight, no understanding of a role. But after Shaw, she came up pretty fast. She knew what she was doing in Whistlestop. She knew what she was doing in The Killers, and she knows what she's doing in East Side, West Side."

star-struck kid . . .

Another intimate of Ava's concurs in that belief. "Ava's greatest period of growth," she says, "was during her marriage to Artie. She used to be a small-town girl with the typical small-town prejudices. But he broadened things for her. He introduced her to a world of intellectuals, to a world of intelligent men and women that she'd never before known.

"My own feeling about Ava is that she was star-struck when she married Mickey Rooney. She was determined to make him a good wife, but though I think she respected Mickey for his talent, I doubt if she loved him with the ardor she had for Artie.

"Artie is basically a self-centered, egotistical fellow, and I think that five years ago, Ava wasn't capable of understanding and controlling him. His ways puzzled her. She couldn't fathom him. Some of his talk and actions, you know, called for great patience and fortitude."

Ava herself will get into no psychoanalytical discussion concerning Artie Shaw. As a matter of fact, she is reticent about discussing any of the men in her life, but the apparent truth is that subconsciously she compares practically all of her escorts to her last husband.

Howard Duff, with whom she ran around for three years but stopped seeing late in 1949, intrigued her for a while. Duff is a moody, taciturn young man whose voice and looks have been the basis of his success, but he lacks Shaw's wide range of interests and, what is even more important, Artie's dynamic impetuosity.

Duff, in short, is the kind of fellow who grows on girls of a type. He was engaged for a short while to Yvonne de Carlo, which explains more eloquently than any words the kind of beauty that attracts him.

Ava used to say, whenever she was asked about her relationship with Howard, "I'm very fond of him and we're devoted friends. Naturally, there's a deep feeling, since we've been pals for three years—but not to the extent that we're going to get married. We're not romantically serious."

This, more or less, is how she answered queries concerning Peter Lawford, who probably will one day wind up the richest man in the Hollywood graveyard. "Peter," Ava says, "is a charming fellow and a wonderful dancer. I've been out on dates with him from time to time, but there's nothing serious between us."

"The first thing I notice about a man,"

she adds, "is his personality. His clothes don't impress me. Some of the most fascinating men I've known could never be placed in the 'best-dressed' category."

Another thing Ava notices very quickly about men is whether or not they're married. Under no circumstances will she date a man who has a wife, even if his marriage is in the process of dissolution. That's why all the talk about Ava and Sinatra was so ridiculous, although if Frank were free and eligible, it might not be.

A few years ago, a crooner, now dead, met Ava. He obtained Ava's telephone number from a friend of hers who's in the music publishing business and began a telephonic courtship.

Ava was most civil and polite. "I think you're a very nice fellow," she said, "and it's nice of you to ring me up. But you're also married, and I simply will not go out with any married man."

Persistent, if nothing else, the crooner refused to give up. He'd call Ava and leave his name and phone number. When she refused to answer, he would call and leave the name of Ava's friend.

Ava finally put a stop to it by showing the gentleman she meant exactly what she said. She wouldn't even talk to him on the telephone.

Back in the middle 1940's, she took her night-club fling, with a new escort every evening—but she soon realized how empty that sort of life was. So instead of on men, she concentrated on her acting. She surprised studio officials by requesting that certain films be run in the projection room so that she might study them. She began to read books on the modern drama. Soon she was getting better roles.

When Jack Conway began casting The Hucksters, Billy Grady, the Metro casting director, suggested Ava for a part. Conway went to Gable, who had seen Ava in The Killers.

"She's got what it takes," the King said. That was tantamount to law and into The Hucksters Ava went.

It was just about then that she met Howard Duff. After the picture was finished, she began seeing Howard more and more frequently. As she did, her interest in acting diminished. You see, the possibility of love existed in this relationship, and whenever the love-possibility enters Gardner's life, her career takes a back seat.

Ava is a girl who owes her success to her face and her figure. The beauty in both of these is transient, and she knows it. Essentially frank and honest, she knows, too, that she has a long road to travel before she can become an actress of genuine stature.

At the moment, she is a personality, as Jane Russell is, and while she has achieved a little confidence, she still suffers from an inferiority complex in the presence of well-educated men. When she first came to Hollywood, she would freeze up when she stepped into a crowded room, but nowadays she has managed to achieve a certain stage presence which nullifies this shyness.

The point, however, is that in her heart, Ava knows she is not a great actress, ready to achieve a great role.

What she does know in her heart, however, is that she is a full-grown, well-developed woman, that she is nearing 30, and that she is capable of achieving a marriage with love, passion, and devotion.

In short, her problem is the same one which today taunts millions of other American girls—"Where do I find the right man?"

According to statisticians and geographers, Hollywood is the worst spot, Alaska the best. But they don't make motion pictures in Alaska. And a girl has to eat—especially if she wants to maintain a figure like Ava's. THE END

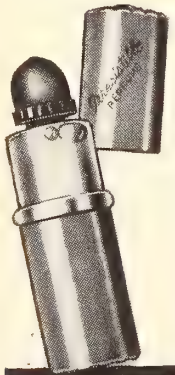
state of the union

(Continued from page 62) suddenly come down with a craving for something with relish and mustard on top. And when their second son, Michael Anthony, was on the way, it didn't surprise Paul in the least when Jeanne, after laying out her costume for a fancy-dress ball they were going to, and bathing and putting on her make-up, quietly crawled into bed and went to sleep instead.

Today, with the health and welfare of the children to be studied and considered, the original policy has had to be revised to permit full discussions of all family questions. However, the spirit of agreement is every bit as strong and evident as before.

Jeanne was 16 when she first met Paul, and she was smitten hard. How hard? Well, about the first time they went to the beach together they were standing shoulder high in the breakers when he suggested that they swim out to a raft about a hundred yards off shore. Jeanne, her eyes on Paul, dreamily agreed. She took a couple of strokes, hanging on with one hand to his shoulder at the same time, and then a wave came along and she disappeared. Paul went diving for her and pulled her onto the beach. You see, Jeanne had completely forgotten she couldn't swim!

Not only can Jeanne swim now, but she's taught little Paul, who is hardly three, to swim across their pool and even dive into the shallow end to bring up his toys from the bottom. And Michael Anthony, who is a year old, swims a creditable six to seven inches, dog-paddle fashion. All you have to do is deposit him face down in the water and give him a fond pat on the tag-end to start him off.



Sixteen when she started going with

Irresistible
LIPSTICK
long length swivel case 39¢

Don't just sit and dream, darling. DO something! Shape your lips for glamour, romance. Make them irresistible, excitingly soft to kiss with Irresistible Lipstick ... the smoother, softer, non-drying lipstick. Whip-text for color brilliance.

Irresistible PERFUME
in purse-size, spill-proof
FLACONETTE
Your secret magic... Carry it with you always!
25¢

Carry it like a love charm

Would you believe my gleaming GOLD hair IS REALLY DRAB BLONDE?

Make your dreams of romance and exciting dates come true! Learn the secret of glamorous girls who beautify dull, drab hair with Nestle Colorinse.

It's like a miracle to see that rich, natural-looking color give your hair radiant beauty and sheen! And notice — Colorinse's lemon-rinse action removes soap film...leaves hair soft, shining! Get genuine Colorinse.

TO GLORIFY BLONDE AND RED HAIR
(Choose Your Shade Now!)

BLONDE ... true shining honey blonde.
PLATINUM ... glorious silvery blonde.
AUBURN ... like red-gold sunshine.
HENNA ... rich glowing red-bronze.

6 Other Enchanting Shades!
Also try
NESTLE COLORTINT
Same beautiful shades in a triple-strength rinse.
Lasts through 3 shampoos!

Nestle COLORINSE 6 rinses 25¢

Paul, Jeanne is 24 now. This means, as she points out, that she has not only spent one-third of her life knowing Paul, but hasn't known adulthood without him. "That makes him so much more a part of my own life," she explains, "and makes us so much closer to each other."

According to anyone who knows them, they have an awareness of each other that is instant and constant. When Jeanne recently had her hair snipped just a bit shorter at the studio for her role in Pinky, Paul didn't notice it specifically—but the second he saw her he did know something was different and said so.

"My hair," she said. "Just an inch or so off at the ends. Do you mind?"

"I don't know," he replied—but didn't look too happy.

"Well?"

"Well . . . I guess it's that now there's just that much less of you," was his answer.

That hair is now getting to be as long as it was, and will not be altered again for any role without a special conference on the subject in the Brinkman home. The kind of man Paul is, he has to be conditioned for surprises like this, Jeanne realizes.

Without thinking about it, both Jeanne and Paul, out of habit in the first year, would occasionally shop separately for clothes. Slowly, and without any talk about it, this practice came to an end. It just didn't work out. They both learned that the appearance of each is very much part of the life of the other and that a suit or gown they both liked and approved gave them 10 times more satisfaction than anything bought independently. Or, as Jeanne puts it simply, "It sort of makes marriage more."

As newlyweds they had an unsettled time to begin with, having to live in a steady succession of hotels, motels, and short-term apartments. It wasn't just the housing shortage that caused this; they happened at the time to be foster parents of a young lioness, a studio gift to Jeanne. They got to be quite adept at sneaking the lioness into a new room or apartment —usually in a laundry basket. But every landlord they had seemed to have the hunting nose of a Tarzan. He'd soon uncover their tawny cat and order them to begone with the beast and never let her scratch his door again—not to speak of the floors and upholstery.

Once there was a little sewing to do on an overstuffed chair that their 300-pound pet had playfully worked over with her claws. Paul asked Jeanne if she'd please get busy with needle and thread. That was when he learned that she couldn't sew. Paul just couldn't understand. "Why, that's impossible," he said. "Every woman knows how to sew. . . . Doesn't she?"

Jeanne thought that over. She must have—because today she is rated a top hand at running up her own clothes. Her last creation, made in her studio dressing-room where she does most of her sewing, was a full-cut, cerise-colored skirt with scalloped bottom and cut-out felt faces of different colors around the hem.

Not till Jeanne was about to give birth to Paul, Jr., was the house they were building ready for them. To be truthful, it wasn't quite ready. Jeanne had to stay 16 days in the hospital, and was afraid the baby was going to be able to walk out by himself, before Paul finally told her she at last had a bedroom all her own to go to.

They finally parted with the lioness, but when little Paul was two years old they bought him a pair of shoes with eye-hooks in them. Result: The same as a lioness with claws. For their fourth anniversary they gave each other a mutual present, a spinet piano, and that piano represented the final item necessary to furnish their house completely. But on account of those shoes with the eye-hooks, this achievement was only a technical one. The shoes, which cost $4.95, have caused $495.00 worth of damage to the living-room furniture, having untufted the tufting on the divan, unveiveted the velvet covering on the best chairs, and cut grooves and scars on most of the harder wood surfaces. So now, the Brinkmans are prepared to start right in refurnishing.

Despite their own happiness, neither Jeanne nor Paul will presume to give one word of advice on marriage. It isn't that they are keeping anything secret. They frankly think they are just lucky. Dissension pops up its nasty little head once in a while but it hasn't much chance against a quality of their relationship that can be described most simply as an active "togetherness."

They look at life and the world from the same viewpoint, socially, religiously—even politically. Their tastes match in everyday things. Paul, who manufactures furniture, has business interests to occupy his mind and balance his home life. Jeanne, of course, has her career.

Jeanne never deliberately brings her career home, but she's so impressionable and gets so lost in the parts she plays, that it gets there just the same. When she portrayed a young small-town girl in Margie, Paul would catch her skipping down the street instead of walking. When she starred in Apartment for Peggy, the story of a mother-to-be, she learned that her own Michael Anthony was on the way. And when she made Pinky, a moody drama, she was the gravest wife and mother her family had ever seen.

Paul has never objected to Jeanne's career, but on several mornings Paul, Jr., opposed it so eloquently that he almost talked her into his point of view.

It happened when she was making her current picture, Cheaper by the Dozen. She plays Anne, the eldest of the "dozen" children, with Clifton Webb and Myrna Loy as the parents. There are a number of scenes in which Jeanne is seen playing with the other children, and one day

Would you believe my satiny RICH BROWN hair IS REALLY DULL AND FADED?

No need to envy popular girls their lustrous colorful hair. For you can easily glorify dull, faded or graying hair with Nestle Colorinse that rinses in, shampoos out.

It's breathtaking to see that rich, natural-looking color give your hair shining beauty! Note—Colorinse's lemon-rinse action removes soap film. Leaves hair sparkling, silky, easy to manage. Get genuine Colorinse.

TO GLORIFY BRUNETTE HAIR
(Choose Your Shade Now!)

WARM BROWN . . . shining burnished brown
CHESTNUT BROWN . . . rich lustrous brown.
DARK BROWN . . . gorgeous, gleaming, dark brown
BLACK . . . deep satiny black.

6 Other Enchanting Shades!

Also try
NESTLE COLORTINT
Same beautiful shades in a triple-strength rinse.
Lasts through 3 shampoos!

Nestle COLORINSE 6 rinses 25¢

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

Variety's the spice of life . . . and the American Broadcasting Company is putting plenty of that variety into the programs designed for our daytime listening. Yes, ma'am, those ABC people are doing right well by us with morning and afternoon programs that rate for great entertainment.

Why I'm just about ready to bounce the dishes right off the table when dandy DON McNEILL and "THE BREAKFAST CLUB" start me marching around the breakfast table. Then on to "MY TRUE STORY" (with a complete story every day) . . . followed by BETTY CROCKER'S home and food hints on her famous "MAGAZINE OF THE AIR." For fine nutrition and health commentary there's VICTOR H. LINDLAHR, an outstanding expert on food and diet. A little later in the morning there's BILL CULLEN'S "QUICK AS A FLASH" and immediately thereafter, "LADIES BE SEATED" with JOHNNY OLSEN—two programs that keep the girls (and me) jumping with joy. Then in the afternoon things really start perking again when JOHN NELSON chimes in with "BRIDE AND GROOM" and the wonderful WALTER KIERNAN drops over with his "ONE MAN'S OPINION." See what I mean about variety on ABC?

Of course, there are the "thrillers," . . . such as "HANNIBAL COBB" (hey, ABC, having a half-hour mystery series right smack in the middle of the afternoon—2:30 EST—is a slick bit of hit programming) and the kids' delights . . . the mighty "CHALLENGE OF THE YUKON," "GREEN HORNET," dashing "JACK ARMSTRONG" and "SKY-KING." The kids tell me there's nothing better than that 5-6 P.M. (EST) "Adventure Hour" for excitement and thrills.

All of which brings me right back to the original fact of the matter—the American Broadcasting Company (through your local ABC station) makes daytime listening real gay-time listening. Drama, mystery, music, romance, quizzes, comedy, news and views, health and harmony . . . these and many more are in store for your leisure-pleasure during the day on ABC. It kind of makes your housework seem lighter and go faster when you're really enjoying something on the radio. At least, that's the way I feel . . . so . . .

Here's a coast-to-coast toast to variety and fun—
ABC has great daytime entertainment for everyone!

Joan Lansing

she took little Paul with her to the studio and he watched the filming of one of these. Naturally, he wanted to play, too. And for several days afterward, whenever she prepared to leave for the studio he had announcements to make to everyone in the house.

"Mommy doesn't want to go to the studio this morning and play with the other children," he would chant. "Mommy wants to stay home and play with me and Michael Antelope (his name for his brother, Michael Anthony). Doesn't Mommy? Huh?"

It was a little tough to leave after that.

In Jeanne's life, and in Paul's, there are many warm moments and memories like this to tie them to each other and to their home and children. That's the kind of marriage it is.

Perhaps the best illustration of it is furnished by something that happened a few months ago. Jeanne and Paul decided to plant some trees back of their house. However, they didn't plant just ordinary trees. The way their minds run, they planted sequoias—the longest-lived things on earth, with a possible lifetime of 4,000 years. THE END

You won't want to miss the complete screen story of Jeanne Crain's latest movie, Cheaper by the Dozen, in the April issue of Dell's SCREEN STORIES. It's one of the brightest features that sparkling magazine has ever carried.

bluebird on their windowsill

(Continued from page 38) us—we haven't learned Canasta yet—Bill and John were kidding around and John hit the jackpot for the first time. He didn't even whistle!"

But there was the night when their prize-winning shepherd dog, Annie, had her pups. Pati, who knows a lot about dogs and loves them, sat up with the soft-eyed mother-to-be all night. John, who admits he doesn't know much about dogs, especially when they have pups, loves Annie too, and wanted to help. Pati, calm and efficient, comforted their pet up until the eighth and last tiny canine made its appearance. John, amazed and wonder-struck after the first puppy came on the scene, wandered off and fell asleep on the couch . . . awaking to the straggly dawn, a tired Pati and Annie, and the assorted yips of eight new and hungry creatures.

Since that night, the little house in the Valley revolves around the dogs which fill it. One by one, as they are old enough, the puppies are being given away to good homes. Still, the four remaining, with Annie, herself, require a lot of attention. They have a place of their own off by the garden. Annie, as befits her standing, has the run of the house.

Strange things happen, though, to the best-laid plans. The night Pati and John went to the glittering première in Hollywood of All the King's Men, and on to a party afterwards, it was nearly two A.M. when they finally drove up to the house, tired and happy at the triumphant reception the picture had received.

John halted abruptly as they entered the dark living room.

"Something's wrong," he said, quietly. Pati rushed to turn on lamps. She looked around for Annie, who always met them as they came in. No Annie.

"Good heavens, where is she?" she cried excitedly, as she raced from room to room, wildly anxious. Then John discovered the door leading onto the patio was open. They both looked at each other—and said in unison, "The pool! The pups!"

As though to confirm their horrified thoughts, just then a feeble bark and a tiny whimpering came from the dark patio. John switched on outside lights. There, in varying degrees of wetness, were the four miserable puppies, dejectedly ranged around the pool, while an equally wet Annie went from one to another, trying to lick them dry.

There was no sleep for the Dereks that night. The pups were wrapped in Turkish towels, brought into the warm house. Annie was rubbed dry . . . milk was heated . . . a vet was called. Next day, none was any the worse for wear—and the tired dog-owners finally got some rest.

In fact, while John and Pati were sleeping it off, the pups, cozily ensconced in the house, chewed up a sleeve of the new suede jacket Pati had bought for a surprise for John and had left in its box on the floor of the closet near where the pups lay. Adding insult to injury, the ungrateful and now thoroughly dry fur-balls of mischief pulled down John's wallet from a table and chewed up everything but his driver's license.

To this day, nobody knows exactly what happened that wild night. Probably Annie somehow worked loose the well-fitting catch on the patio door, went to visit her pups, left open their door, and then rescued them one by one as they tumbled into the pool. (Pati admits that Annie probably should have gotten a ribbon for heroic endeavors that night, instead of the scolding she did get.) Doors are locked tight now, whenever John and Pati go out.

The two are planning for the time when they'll need a bigger place. "After June," says John dreamily, with an arm about his pretty, vivacious wife. June will be the joyous month when there will be three Dereks instead of two. And since they've had that wonderful information, Annie and the pups have taken a decidedly secondary place before the greatest wonder of all.

"It'll be a boy," says John with assurance. Pati smiles. "Maybe not," she says softly. But neither cares too much. Boy or girl, it'll be a bundle of happiness for them.

John hopes some day to have a big ranch where he can raise horses. He is unquestionably one of the finest horsemen in town. Until that day, however, John and Pati will both settle next for a place of their own—not rented—after the baby comes.

Pati, who has been in this country only four years, was born and brought up in Europe, and attracted attention of talent scouts who saw her dancing in Paris. Brought to this country, her career hadn't even started when she met John and they decided, soon after, that they couldn't live without each other. Ever since, their marriage and John's meteoric rise to popularity have just about filled up Pati's life—to say nothing of the junior Derek on the way.

Nevertheless, Pati wonders a little wistfully what her career would have been like. "Some day, maybe I try it again!" she says with just a trace of an accent, but without too much determination. Marriage, very definitely, comes first.

For there at the Dereks', though you can't see him, peeping in from the windowsill where he sits with blue wings folded, is that wise old Bluebird of Happiness, straight out of a fairy tale. He's all set for a long, long stay. THE END

. . . and so to wed

(Continued from page 61) Christmas. Could they be married on Christmas? Would Howard Hughes, who was handling everything, be able to have the license clerk on hand and select a place where clerk and minister and they could meet for the ceremony in privacy?

He could and did. And so it was Christmas, and they flew to Phoenix, and the minister began, "We are gathered here . . ." —meaning Betsy and Cary, and the license clerk, and the rancher and his family, and the pilots and the man who met them with a car at the lonely flying-strip where they landed.

With her stage-trained ear for voice pitch, it came to Betsy that the minister was speaking in a monotone—was not being particularly dramatic about . . . well, about her wedding! But worse than that, when it came time for her and Cary to respond, she realized they were both taking their tone-cue from the minister and sounding just as undramatic!

Then suddenly it was over, Cary was kissing her and she was glad she had decided not to wear her glasses. Then things got a little confusing because somebody was insisting that she cut the wedding cake while somebody else was insisting that she hold an empty glass. She heard a popping of corks and figured out quickly that if she took that glass somebody would be sure to pour champagne in it. It was wiser to get the cake-cutting over with first.

here comes the bride . . .

Champagne and cake with people you had never seen before and all of them looking very happy and wishing Cary and her well. So that was a wedding. But that wasn't the full feeling of it. That came later, when they flew back to Los Angeles and banked over the city at night before landing.

Down below them was Los Angeles in holiday glow. It was like flying over a gigantic Christmas tree alight with millions of gleaming bulbs. That was more like it, more in the spirit of what had happened.

The Cary Grant of the movies would have done something with a moment like that. He would probably have pointed to the gala sight below and said something like, "A little thing I arranged for you."

But not the Cary Grant she married. He looked down and was content to be just as impressed as she was, and without any cute remarks about it.

For that moment they were alone—for the first time since the wedding. Then the plane started down and Betsy knew they would soon be part of the lights and glitter below.

The next day was still a holiday. Cary took her to visit a children's hospital and Betsy was almost startled when he introduced her. For the first time she heard aloud whom she had become. "This is my wife," Cary said. "Mrs. Grant."

The day after that, Mrs. Grant reported back for work at Warner Brothers studios where she is making Pretty Baby, with Dennis Morgan, Zachary Scott and Edmund Gwenn. And, just because she had become Mrs. Grant, she was confronted with a fine problem.

"You'll have to take your wedding ring off," an assistant director said, pointing to the plain gold band Cary had given her. "In the picture you are unmarried."

"Oh, no!" Betsy came back in dismay. "I can't do that!"

There was a conference. After all, it is a problem that has come up before in studios. Somebody thought of flesh-colored tape and a thin strip of it was neatly wound around and around the ring—while it was still on her finger. People with sharp eyes will still perhaps be able to tell she is wearing a ring when they see the picture.

And soon she was before the camera and everything was the same. But not quite. She would go home to Cary now, to the house he'd bought three years ago. He was going to get an architect. He was going to do it all over. And, as she later told her women friends who asked about it, he was going to do it over, not she.

"Cary has excellent taste," she said. "I know I'll like it. All I've asked for are closets and bookshelves."

That was one of the things their romance had been founded on, their liking for the same things; the same cheese and salads; the same wine—white and very dry; the same sort of comedy—Ed Wynn; the same sort of music; the same sort of quiet, simple life in every way.

For the first week after their marriage they went nowhere—except to that children's hospital. And then, New Year's Day and the day afterward they spent at Irene Selznick's—seeing eight films, four each day.

After that Cary started a picture, Crisis, at MGM, which is a good 10 miles away from Warners, so for a spell it was a case of just "Hello" and "How have you been?" the brief hour or two they could be with each other daily, what with early-morning rising to go to work, and pages of script to study nightly if they were to give any account of themselves at the studio.

Not till Cary's birthday, January 18, did they go out again, and then only to a private party with Dore Schary of MGM as their host. Still, it was an event. For the first time Betsy could wear the pearl necklace Cary had given her for a wedding present—a string of beautifully graduated pearls. Cary loyally wanted to wear the socks she had knitted for him but she talked him out of it. Though she had taken from August to Thanksgiving to do one sock, and from Thanksgiving to nearly Christmas to finish the other, they didn't come out quite right—by inches in some places.

Yes, Betsy Drake and Cary Grant married quietly last Christmas, and today they are quietly married. But then, even their romance was a quiet one. And as for Betsy, no star has ever walked through the Hollywood scene with as quiet a footfall.

no gay young thing . . .

Columnists or commentators who make a living noting departures from the norm in the behavior of celebrities have always drawn a blank in her case. She flung no flings, was never seen in this bright spot or that, and somehow was never overheard saying the oracle-like things that seem to come endlessly from most of the others —to be repeated just as endlessly.

As a matter of fact, only once since she has been in Hollywood has Betsy ever been seen in a night club—in Ciro's, for exactly one hour.

"What have you got against night clubs?" she was asked once.

"Nothing that some windows in them wouldn't fix," she replied. "I can't breathe, that's all."

Instead, Betsy used to study, and to go to out-of-the-way lunch places with Cary, and to talk to him about the business they are both interested in—acting.

At first they used to go to Romanoff's a lot, but there were always people stopping by at the table for a chat. And since few people know Betsy and almost everybody knows Cary, she would have to sit quietly by and listen.

They used to do a lot of driving. Betsy

DOUBTFUL what to use for INTIMATE FEMININE HYGIENE?

Then Read the Extra Advantages of This Greaseless Suppository. Gives Hours of Continuous Medication.

Here's a higher type of intimate feminine cleanliness called Zonitors—so much easier, daintier and less embarrassing to use, yet one of the most effective methods ever discovered—so powerfully germicidal yet absolutely safe to tissues.

How Zonitors Work . . .

Zonitors are greaseless, stainless, snow-white vaginal suppositories—each sealed in a separate glass vial—so easy to slip in your purse or carry if away from home. When inserted, Zonitors release powerful germicidal and deodorizing properties for hours. Positively non-poisonous, non-irritating. All you need is this dainty suppository. No extra equipment!

Destroy Offensive Odor

Zonitors actually destroy offensive odor; help guard against infection. They kill every germ they touch. While it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, you can depend on Zonitors to immediately kill every reachable germ without the slightest risk of injury to delicate tissues. Get them today!

Zonitors (Each sealed in separate glass vial)

FREE: Mail this coupon today for free booklet sent in plain wrapper. Reveals frank intimate facts. Zonitors, Dept. ZMR-40, 100 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____

*Offer good only in U. S.

SITROUX
...say SIT-TRUE
TISSUES softer, finer, stronger than ever
SITROUX TISSUES
SITROUX TISSUES
SITROUX TISSUES
REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

loves to drive and she has been responsible for a basic improvement in driving conditions on the bridle path stretch of Sunset Boulevard leading into Beverly Hills.

Betsy used to make a slow, careful job of it entering the boulevard from a certain side street. A motorcycle policeman stopped her one afternoon and suggested that she be a little more snappy about it as the time she consumed in the turn made her a road hazard.

"Oh, no!" countered Betsy—and pointed to a line of high bushes running along the middle of the boulevard which obstructed one's view of crossing traffic. "I have no idea of what might be coming against me and I wouldn't think of going fast."

The policeman studied the situation and then told her that she was right. He made a note of it and two days later the whole line of bushes was lopped off.

But the activity in which Betsy really wanted to get places when she came to Hollywood was her film work. When she was on the stage she thought she knew a little about her job, but when she gets in front of the camera she feels she is more lost than found.

"It's something like driving west in Hollywood's traffic when the sun is setting," she says. "The sun shines you almost blind and you're in a golden glare in which you barely sense the cars moving on either side of you, and you pray that you're keeping in your own lane. On the movie set the glare comes from all the lights, people are busy at dozens of other things, other actors are all about you, you get cues, you talk, you move—and you just hope it's all making sense. You don't really know."

It was in this quandary that she looked at Cary, who has made about 70 pictures and is considered a master of himself in front of the camera.

"When will I know what I'm doing on the set?" she asked him once.

"It works out in a funny way," he replied. "You just keep on working and trying, and you don't feel you are progressing at all. Then, suddenly, you wake up one morning and you have it!"

Betsy doesn't think that morning has come yet. But she's content to work hard and wait. And, pending that morning, she is waking up quite happily these days as Mrs. Cary Grant. THE END

I MAKE ALL MY EXTRA MONEY
IN MY SPARE TIME !
NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED!
THIS EASY, PLEASANT WAY
★$50 IS YOURS
for selling 100 boxes greeting cards at $1. Stationery or napkins with name on. Send for selling plan & samples on approval. Costs nothing to try MERIT, 370 PLANE ST., DEPT. 13, NEWARK 2, N. J.

DRESSES WITHOUT COST! and besides earn up to
$23.00 WEEKLY!
Here's an offer you just can't beat:—Act as our representative. Take your pick of dozens of stunning Fashion Frocks—without paying out a single penny. Wear them and win the envy of your friends. Send us all the orders you receive and collect big cash commissions for every one. In this way, you can earn up to $23 a week, and have lovely new dresses for your own use besides!
NO CANVASSING
NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED
It's an easy, dignified way to add to your income in spare hours. No canvassing required. Anyone can do it. Everything you need furnished Free. You must act quickly. Send no money. Today, rush your name, address and dress size on penny postcard.
Free PORTFOLIO
LATEST STYLES as low as $2.98
Write
Fashion Frocks, Inc.
Desk D4054
Cincinnati 25, Ohio

bringing up susan

(Continued from page 28) For a few minutes my tiny girl strutted about the room, her eyes glued on the shiny birdcage. And as soon as I left her alone for a moment, she tiptoed to the cage and gave it a good yank. From the next room I heard shrill cries from the birds and the clanging of the metal chain. I rushed in as the cage crashed to the floor, missing Linda Susan by inches.

At first, her ears tucked between her hunched shoulders, Linda Susan was too stunned for tears. But when the tears started to form she noticed the two love birds stalking out of their cage. They flipped their wings a couple of times and then took off for one of the big ceiling beams. There the pair sat, chirping happily in their new freedom.

When Linda Susan became aware that I'd been watching her, she peeped at me sheepishly. There was a small grin on her face, half amused, half guilty.

That's when I decided the time had arrived to administer a little corporal punishment. I didn't spank Linda Susan hard, just enough to impress on her the danger of such an act and that a little girl must consider the rights and welfare of others, including pets.

Of course I learned what is meant by "it hurts the parent more than the child." But the realization that Linda Susan might have been badly injured if the birdcage had fallen on her helped me feel justified.

After a few minutes Linda Susan was happily romping about the room again—but it took me two hours to get the birds back into their cage.

I have made it a rule never to say "don't" to Linda Susan. Instead I've simply said, "I wouldn't"—and, except in the case of the birdcage, it has always worked. "I wouldn't" lifts Linda Susan to a higher level. It makes her feel more responsible for her own actions—more grown-up. And that is what she likes, apparently—because there's nothing she resents more than being called a baby.

Just as the doctor had told me she would, Linda Susan started to develop a temper soon after she passed her first birthday. At first, when she got angry, she'd throw herself on the floor. But as soon as she found out that this procedure hurt her head and didn't get any reactions from me, she switched to an easier method. She'd sit down, slowly—then clench her fists and start bawling.

To break the habit, I told her she was acting like a baby. Since, as I've said, Linda Susan doesn't like being called a baby, she usually stops crying now before I can say "Jack Robinson." However, if that doesn't work, I have an alternative that has never failed yet—I start singing "Happy Birthday." I don't exactly know what magic influence "Happy Birthday" has on my daughter—but maybe it is that the memory of her huge birthday cake lifts her out of the unhappy thoughts that originally sent her to the floor.

Another point in her training that I am emphatic about is baby talk. When explaining something to Linda Susan I never use baby talk. It's not always easy for me to adjust myself to the logic and reasoning of a two-year-old. But so far I've been quite successful in explaining things to Linda Susan in an adult manner while keeping my explanations on her own age level.

Since Linda isn't, and never has been, used to baby talk, some of the oddest situations occur when adults gurgle meaningless syllables at her or try to carry on some kind of imbecile conversation. Usually Linda Susan just looks at them with a bewildered expression that seems to say, "What on earth are you trying to tell me in that weird language of yours?"

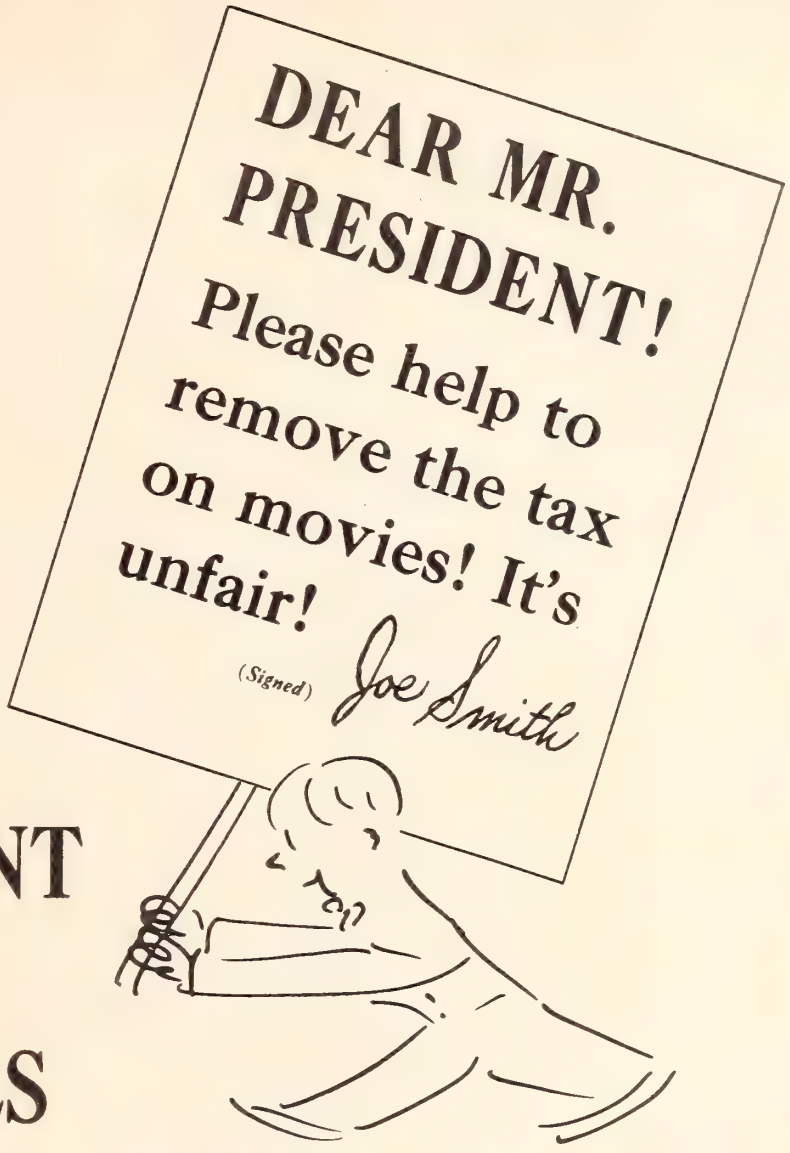
Yes, my two-year-old daughter is really growing up. She is even getting clothes conscious now.

I intentionally dress Linda Susan in shirts and overalls in the morning and in pretty dresses in the afternoon. In the morning she putters in the sandbox and roughs it in the yard. In the afternoon she usually goes for a walk or plays in the house with the dolls, stuffed animals and toy cars she got for her second birthday. Or else she sits in her little garden swing—her favorite Christmas present—and chirps "Push me—push me," till someone weakens and gives her a shove.

I want Linda Susan to become aware that she can play in the sand and get messed up when she's wearing jeans or play clothes. And in the afternoon, in party dresses, she'll have to behave like a little lady and not like a tomboy.

My method has proved so effective that my little daughter has reached the point where she really enjoys getting all dressed up in the afternoon—in my clothes.

I first observed this one day when I fol-



WRITE TODAY!

Either post card or letter to

HARRY S. TRUMAN
PRESIDENT
WASHINGTON, D. C.

He will listen to the plea of America's movie fans!

IF YOU WANT TO GO TO THE MOVIES MORE OFTEN, WRITE TODAY!

Why should there be any tax on movies? If you and all the fans in America ACT NOW you'll see ACTION in Washington. Write the President NOW!

Also Important! Ask your Theatre Manager for the names of your Representatives in Washington! Write them now!

THIS SPACE HAS BEEN CONTRIBUTED BY

MODERN SCREEN MAGAZINE

for the benefit of our readers

ROSAMOND MARSHALL'S Newest Novel!

CELESTE

Now a dell book only 25¢

You read and enjoyed "KITTY" and "DUCHESS HOTSPUR"

NOW You'll thrill to Celeste!

The fascinating story of a ravishing, golden haired beauty and fabulous California of the early 1900's.

A story full of the excitement of rich oil strikes and feverish gambling—of roughshod passion and tender love. A novel you'll read today and remember long after tomorrow.

ASK FOR IT AT YOUR FAVORITE NEWSSTAND

NOTE:

Due to the tremendous demand, this book may not be available locally. To be sure of your copy, send this coupon NOW

MAIL TO: Dell Publishing Company, Inc. MS
Box 125, Murray Hill Station
New York 16, New York

Please send me postpaid, ... copies of Dell Book No. 382 "CELESTE". Enclosed is 25c for each copy ordered.

Name.....

Address.....

City, Zone & State.....

This offer good only within the continental limits of the U. S. A.

lowed her into my room and watched her try on some of my clothes. She adored the fur coats—especially a short cape with long, soft fur. She loves everything with long, soft hair. That's why she likes Lannie, our collie, better than Chris, the boxer—Lannie has longer hair.

Anyway, that afternoon I watched Linda Susan drape my fur cape over her tiny shoulders. Then, clutching in her right hand the orchid my father had given me the night before when I had gone to a première, she gleefully strutted up and down the room, her short blonde hair bobbing about her head, her big brown eyes dancing. Then she stopped in front of the long mirror to admire herself. Not till I'd cleared my throat a couple of times did she tear herself away and make a bee line for Lannie with the long brown fur. As usual, the collie welcomed her with a good-natured wag of his tail.

Lannie is good for Linda—as pets are always good for children. I'd been warned that collies can get dangerous when they play with children, but my experiences have been exactly the opposite. Patiently Lannie lets Linda Susan stroke him and even strike him, kiss his head or pull his hair. When he gets tired of too much playing, or too much bossing, or too much affection, he just struts away. Sometimes Linda Susan hangs on to him. Then she goes where Lannie goes. Till she lets go of him she doesn't have much choice.

It's nice that Lannie and Linda Susan are getting along so well, because she doesn't have too many other companions. I've kept her away from big gatherings and parties because I've been afraid that she might catch the usual childhood diseases. Maybe I'm too careful. But then, I've got only one Linda Susan.

Recently, however, she acquired one close companion who is also her first cousin. Scotty, two weeks older than she, is one of my brother Jack's two children.

progressive education . . .

Already Scotty has given Linda Susan her first lesson in how to take care of herself. It was a useful lesson, but I do hope that, if Scotty plays teacher again, he won't use such drastic measures.

Scotty is quite a Don Juan, but his actions are a great deal more reminiscent of the great John L. Sullivan than the great lover. Scotty has spent most of his two years in the company of older children. His brother Stanley has reached the ripe old age of six. His other companions vary between his and Stanley's ages. It was truly a man's world Scotty was living in and he soon became effectively able to take care of himself. Unfortunately, the day after he'd arrived at my house he took care of himself at Linda Susan's expense—and by a very fundamental but most effective method: He bopped her one on the head.

Bawling as if she'd been stung by a bee, Linda Susan rushed to me and buried her head in my lap. For a few moments I didn't know what to do. Then I decided to let her work out her own problem, because if I interfered, Scotty would resent it, and this certainly wouldn't result in warmer relations between the two.

When my daughter realized that I wasn't going to get her out of her predicament, she further realized that she had to find her own solution. And she did. She hustled back to Scotty—and landed a right jab on his chest that pushed him into an abrupt sitting position on the floor. Thereafter they became the best of friends.

Linda Susan had solved her first boy-girl problem. THE END

(Another delightful installment of "Bringing Up Susan," by Shirley Temple, will appear in next month's MODERN SCREEN.)

WORRIED... ABOUT

OILY SKIN? DRY SKIN?

"COMPLEXION FORMULA"

Sayman Soaps

Pure all-vegetable soap . . . quick-acting pore cleanser. You feel the "tingle" as it penetrates! Special aid for adolescent skin problems. Grand for your shampoo, too!

Dry, sensitive skin? Now, enjoy a "peaches and cream complexion!" Rich in Lanolin . . . rich in lather . . . a delightfully scented beauty soap. A de Luxe sudsy bath treat!

If dealer cannot supply you, send 50¢ and dealer's name for 3 cakes of either kind. Sayman Dept. D. G. St. Louis (3).

QUICK RELIEF! Use Sayman "Camphorated" Salve for externally caused skin rashes, pimples, eczema, athlete's foot, psoriasis, etc. Satisfaction guaranteed. Get a jar today . . . only 35¢

SAYMAN PRODUCTS CO., St. Louis 3, Mo.

ONLY 19¢ EACH

NEW SILK FINISH

ENLARGEMENT

GOLD TOOLED FRAME

Beautiful 5 x 7 enlargement made from your favorite snapshot, photo or negative and mounted in a handsome gold tooled frame. Be sure to include color of hair, eyes and clothing for complete information on having your enlargement beautifully hand colored in oil. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman 19c each for the enlargement and frame plus cost of mailing. Satisfaction guaranteed. Limit two to a customer. Originals returned with your enlargement. Offer limited to U. S. A.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS

7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. M257, Hollywood 38, Calif.

AMAZING OFFER—$40 IS YOURS FOR SELLING ONLY 50 BOXES

FREE SAMPLES IMPRINTED STATIONERY

Also entirely different, new Deluxe All-Occasion assortment with feature television card. Floral scented stationery. Little Pearle Hankie Gift Greetings, other surprise items. Samples on approval. Write today. It costs nothing to try.

CHEERFUL CARD CO., Dept. S-28, White Plains, N. Y.

FREE PHOTO

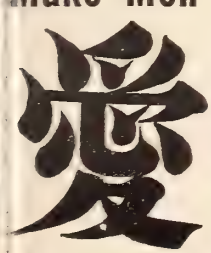
DIRECT FROM HOLLYWOOD

LARGE SIZE OF YOUR FAVORITE

MOVIE STAR

(DELUXE TYPE — Suitable for Framing)

SPECIAL OFFER—FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY



Write Photo you will also receive FREE CATALOG listing ALL stars plus 14 ADDITIONAL PICTURES of popular stars on cover. Also tells how to get ADDRESSES BIRTHDAYS, and photos of STARS HOMES. Send name of your favorite star and only 15¢ for handling.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STAR CENTER

Box 2309, Dept. L-40, Hollywood 28, Calif.

Do You Want to Make Men OBEY YOU?

Do you want to make him love you wildly, fiercely? Do you want to make him say, "Darling, I adore you. I worship you. I'll do ANYTHING for YOU!" Do you want to make him OBEY your every command? Then use CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume) to help you CONTROL Men. One woman told me that CHEZ-ELLE is the STRONGEST perfume she ever used. Another woman told us that she blesses the day she first used CHEZ-ELLE, because now her husband comes home at night to help her.

Just send me your name and address and I will rush a Trial Bottle of CHEZ-ELLE (What a Perfume), to you. When the postman delivers CHEZ-ELLE in a plain package, deposit only $2 plus postage (3 for $5) with him on this GUARANTEE. Use CHEZ-ELLE for 10 days. If you don't agree that CHEZ-ELLE is the most POWERFUL perfume you ever used, return it and I'll send your $2 right back. Write NOW to

TRULOVE, 58 Walker St., Dept. 102-CC, New York 13

busiest girl in town

(Continued from page 31) kinds of people. Business is fun, and Ben and I have learned so much from meeting its challenge and from our association with people in every walk of life. The things we learn from them about pictures! I wouldn't miss that barometer for anything."

What's more, she feels that a business partnership is one of the best ways to cement a marriage and keep it happy. "Too many couples break up because they haven't enough things to do together. Believe me, Ben and I have so many interests together that our only problem is getting away from all the business projects long enough to have vacations. Ben should have started his new television show months ago but he was waiting for me to finish Duchess of Idaho so we could get away to Sun Valley for a couple of weeks. Then we're going to Honolulu for a week together before I start work in Music on the Waters and Ben starts his new TV show. This carefree time together is essential and it's the balance for the busy life we lead. We're always going to steal vacation time. We have from the beginning. We used to fly all the way to Acapulco for week-ends because we had had such a heavenly honeymoon there and we knew we could always recapture the peace and the magic."

Esther's complete practicality dates back to that honeymoon. They loved the house at Acapulco so they bought it and have rented it out for a substantial income ever since.

good for all . . .

Also rented is their island in Crystal Lake, near Waupaca, Wisconsin, a wedding gift from Mama and Papa Gage. The next business venture was the gas station. Then Esther's brother Dave had a severe attack of asthma and was ordered to the desert at Twenty-Nine Palms. Esther and Ben used to visit him there and were much concerned because of Dave's difficulty of finding employment in such a small town. If the climate was so beneficial for him, they decided, it would be good for others, too.

They put their heads together and envisioned a building project. They'd build small, compact houses—say, 850 feet square—but very modern and with two bedrooms. Dave, who had never built a house in his life, took charge of construction. Esther and Ben have now financed five houses, three are sold, two are rented. They call the project the Wil-Gay Investment Company, and they now have additional plans for Twenty-Nine Palms.

The next real-estate venture was of a different sort—a mountain-top lot for their own home, and six months ago they were busy with blueprints and plans. Esther wanted that home very much and she was surprised when Ben suggested that they buy The Trails Restaurant.

"Oh, Ben," she said, "there must be lots quicker ways to lose money than that! Besides, we can't buy the restaurant and build the house."

They talked about it a great deal. One night Ben suggested that it was silly to build the house when they could buy the restaurant and within a year it would build that house for them.

"He knew what would get me," laughs Esther. "And it did. This venture was a real challenge for we knew nothing about the restaurant business and this particular one had been in financial troubles. It's much more difficult to build up a place which has won a poor reputation than it would be to start from scratch.

Color...

A TOUCH MORE

Glamour...

SO MUCH MORE!

You're more exciting, more romantic, more desirable when your hair glows with Marchand color. Yes, just that extra bit of rich, natural-looking color can change drab hair to color-bright hair that men love to touch.

Your hair can be like that whether you're blonde, brunette, brownette or redhead. Simply follow each shampoo with a Marchand Rinse in the shade that gives the color effect you desire.

For caressable hair that sparkles with color and gleams with highlights, be sure you get Marchand's Rinse. Safe, easy to use.

COLOR WASHES OUT READILY!

Marchand's*

"MAKE-UP" HAIR RINSE

2 Rinses 10¢ • 6 Rinses 25¢

PLUS TAX

★By the Makers of Marchand's Golden Hair Wash

She won his love because...

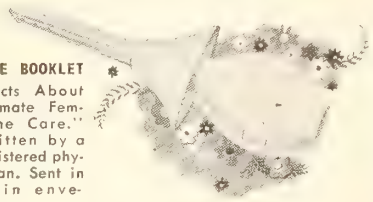
Sally was smart. She knew that Monthly Blues, nerves, irritability just don't go over with a man. "Be wise," says Sally. "Don't let nervous tension, periodic headache and cramps play havoc with your romance! Instead—help relieve those symptoms with these wonderfully effective Chi-Ches-Ters Pills!" Packed in three convenient sizes. Get Chi-Ches-Ters Pills at your druggist today.

CHI-CHES-TERS PILLS

DIAMOND BRAND

For relief from "periodic functional distress"

FREE—New illustrated booklet of intimate facts every woman should know. Mailed in plain wrapper. Write today! Chichester Chemical Company, Dept. 17-E, Philadelphia 46, Pennsylvania.



"Send for free booklet described below"

be confident of your

Feminine Daintiness

THE FAULTLESS Feminine Syringe

Designed specifically for personal hygienic care, Faultless Feminine Syringes assure gentle, but thorough flushing action. Simple, quick, convenient to use . . . no accessories to handle . . . inconspicuous, easy to put away. $1 to $2.98 at drug stores.

FREE BOOKLET "Facts About Intimate Feminine Care." Written by a registered physician. Sent in plain envelope.

Feminine Products Div., Dept. MS-40,
The Faultless Rubber Company, Ashland, Ohio

"Luckily, we had such good help and counsel. Ben is always making friends with people and it pays off in the most unexpected and delightful ways. Take Bob Kreis, for example. He's the head chef for all the Brown Derbies and we've known him for years. We love to explore kitchens—we used to go back into the Derby kitchens all the time, and that's how we got to know Bob.

"Well, when we got into this restaurant deal, we went to talk with Bob Kreis and what had been a very pleasant friendship turned into the most intensely important business contact. He found us a chef, one who'd been at the Beverly Brown Derby for 10 years, he explained about food costs and operative costs and menu planning. He advised us on everything and still comes out all the time to check and be sure we're 'doing good.'

loyal friends . . .

"Waiters—we had no trouble getting. I'll never know how the word got around, but those waiters came from everywhere. Some of them Ben had known at the Town House when he was stationed in Santa Anna, some came from the Brown Hotel in Louisville, Kentucky, where Ben used to sing. They just adore Ben, and here again his interest in people and his complete friendliness have paid off big dividends."

Just to be sure their restaurant got off to a good start, Esther and Ben had a dress rehearsal the night before opening, to give their personnel a chance to get into action. They invited columnists and friends and put on an impromptu floor show. Producer Joe Pasternak directed, Gordon MacRae sang, so did Connie Haines, Lina Romay, and Ben and Esther. Keenan Wynn and Jim Backus had the guests hilarious, so did Bullets Durgham, an agent who is what Esther calls "a character."

Esther and Ben still sing at The Trails and Ben m.c.'s the place. "Many families come with their children," says Esther, "and Ben sings to the little girls. Sometimes he dances with them and it's so cute, the little five-year-olds and big Ben."

At least three times a week, Esther hurries from the studio to have dinner at The Trails, to sing with Ben, to help as waitress and act as hostess to the Westchesterites who have made the restaurant a community affair. "I'm no movie star to them," Esther says. "Ben and I are just the host and hostess. It's fun and we've learned so much."

Esther is up at six to feed young Benjie, by 7:30 she's at the studio. After a hard day of acting or swimming, she leaves at six and dashes for dinner at The Trails, then home at seven to bathe her baby and give him his last feeding. The bathing is, in reality, a swimming lesson. For 15 minutes the baby paddles his arms and legs while Mother supports chin and tummy. He was out of his bathinette at three weeks and into the big tub where his aquatic exercises have given him an excellent start on muscular coordination. He now stands (with someone holding his hands) and sits erect, something of a feat for a tot his age.

Between-times, Esther fulfills her contract with Cole of California to design and model bathing suits; talks over countless business projects with Ben—who says she is the most efficient and thrifty girl he's ever known; and, on free afternoons, drives across town to visit the blind children whom she taught to swim while she was pregnant. To them, also, Esther is no celebrity. She's a great swimmer and a loving friend whom they are free to touch and question and who always comes with some wonderful surprise—such as a doll which one Williams fan designed especially for "feel," a game, or a story.

Perhaps her greatest contact with the American public is via her replies to fan mail. Rather than have these handled by a secretary, Esther has it done by her mother, Beulah Williams, formerly a school teacher and now on the staff of the Institute of Family Relations. A trained psychologist, Mrs. Williams is particularly alert to those letters from young people with problems. She reads these over with Esther, and together they map out an answer.

Recently there was a letter from a young girl, "unattractive, tall," who had thought the only way to attract boys was to neck, and now found herself with a bad reputation. Lacking the courage to try to live down a bad name, she was writing Esther as a last resort, for like Esther, she liked to swim, and the actress seemed the epitome of what she wished to be.

Esther and her mother read that letter with care—then Mrs. Williams typed out an answer which only the mother of Esther Williams could have written. She told how the actress also had been overly tall in high school, awkward and something of a wallflower. She told how hard Esther had worked at her studies and how she had devoted herself to what she liked best, swimming, and the development of the strokes which were to make her a champion. Every person, wrote Mrs. Williams, has a creative center—and the aim should be to find and develop it. "Keep busy," Mrs. Williams wrote. "If you will keep busy and develop your talents, your hobbies and yourself, you'll build a good life. Esther did—and during that process, she not only became a good swimmer, she became beautiful. She has never stopped building that busy life."

She has not, indeed. By being the busiest girl in town, she has matured mentally, emotionally and spiritually.

Esther is never too busy to send her thoughts and letters to people in hospitals; to visit blind children; to get to know the electricians and technicians who work on her pictures, to understand their jobs—as she does the jobs of the boys at the restaurant and the gas station.

As could only a very busy person—she has time. For really busy people, like Esther Williams, make time—by making the best possible use of it. THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

When Peter Lawford was making a personal appearance tour in Houston, Texas, for the opening of The Red Danube, he was applauded quite loudly when he came onto the stage. After he had been talking for a while, he was interrupted by a loud wolf whistle. Peter smiled and asked the person who had whistled to stand up and introduce herself. A girl, not more than 10 years old, stood up. She was dressed in blue jeans and a long shirt. He was rather surprised and asked her to whistle again. She puffed up and once more the whistle was heard through the theater. Peter laughed and said, "They start early here, don't they? Even at my age, I can't do that, and living in Hollywood, one gets lots of practice."

Kathleen Finke
Houston, Texas

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guaranteed. Money back if you are not delighted. Write Now! JUEL Co., 4727 N. Damen, Dept. G-603, Chicago 25, Ill.

EASY DOLLARS EVEN FOR BEGINNERS

SELL PLASTIC GREETING CARDS, Scented Stationery, irresistible novelties. Profits to 100%. Bonus. No selling experience needed. Friends buy unique Little Pearls, Hankie Gift Greetings, Metal Foil cards on sight! Complete line Everyday assortments, Gift Wraps, Children's Books, Secret School Bag, household items. Write for free samples. Imprinted, Decorated Stationery and Deluxe All-Occasion samples on approval, including feature television and special offers.

PILGRIM GREETING CARD CO.
111 Summer St., Dept. M-3, Boston, Mass.

FREE! Imprinted Stationery Samples and New Catalog

CORNS also Calluses. Quick, easy, and economical. Just rub on. Jars, 30¢ and 50¢. Buy Mosco at your druggist.

REMOVED BY MOSCO

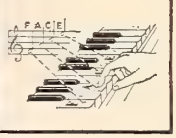
Your money refunded if not satisfied. The Moss Company, Rochester, N.Y.

WHY PAY FOR DIAMONDS

When you can buy genuine Oriental mined Zircons for a FRACTION OF THE COST—and only you will know. Dazzling brilliance, true backs, stand acid. Gorgeous solid gold settings—write for complete story. Rush name today.

FREE Catalog

UNIVERSAL JEWELRY CO.
Box 744, Dept. A Steubenville, Ohio



REMOVE HAIR

Remove hair INSTANTLY ABOVE AND BELOW THE SURFACE OF THE SKIN. Everyone loves hair free skin. Your skin can be so much lovelier without that unwanted hair. BE ATTRACTIVE INSTEAD OF ATTRACTING ATTENTION. Remove that ugly unwanted hair at once. Just return this advertisement with 25c and receive prepaid a generous size package of a tried and tested hair remover that will remove hair instantly above and below the surface of the skin. Results guaranteed.

ECHLER LABORATORIES Hair Removing Specialists)
560 Broadway, Dept. D-4 N. Y. 12, N. Y.

Easy as A-B-C

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME THIS MONEY SAVING WAY

Simple as A-B-C. Your lessons consist of real selections, instead of tiresome exercises. You read real notes—no "numbers" or trick music. Some of our 850,000 students are band LEADERS. Everything is in print and pictures. First you are told what to do. Then a picture shows you how. Soon you are playing popular music. Mail coupon for our illustrated Free Book and Print and Picture Sample. Mention your favorite instrument. Send today: U. S. School of Music, 1444 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y. 52nd Successful Year.

FREE BOOKLET

U. S. School of Music, 1444 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. 10, N. Y.
Please send me Free Booklet and Print and Picture Sample. I would like to play (Name instrument).

Have you
Instrument.....Instrument?.....

Name.....
(Please Print)

Address.....

movie reviews continued from page 4

CINDERELLA

Cast: Walt Disney cartoon characters.
RKO

Cinderella is Walt Disney's first feature-length cartoon since Bambi. (Ichabod and Mr. Toad was only semi-feature length.) It took six years to complete, and it's enchanting. The heroine is blonde and slender and sweet-tempered. The stepmother has cruel eyes, and a deep voice and a really frightening presence. The two stepsisters are harpies. The fairy godmother is a dumpy, absent-minded little lady. These are all marvelously cartoonable figures, of course, and to piece out the story, Disney has invented some new characters. There are mice, birds, a horse and a dog, all friends of, and sympathizers with, poor Cinderella. The mouse destined to become most famous is Gus-Gus, a gallant, dopey little character whose real name is Octavius. (He calls Cinderella Cinderelly.) There's also a villainous cat called Lucifer (Lucifee, to Gus-Gus) who has no virtues, and who likes to chase Gus-Gus and the other mice until their small hearts thump in terror. The Technicolor and settings in Cinderella are lavish—the great manor-house where Cinderella scrubs and slaves, the ballroom at the royal palace, the coach and gown produced by the fairy godmother. If you've ever doubted that cartoons were the proper medium for rendering fairy tales, go look at Cinderella. No flesh-and-blood girl ever captured a prince with such musical grace.

THE BLACK HAND

Cast: Gene Kelly, J. Carrol Naish, Teresa Celli, Marc Lawrence
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

The Black Hand deals with the early 1900s, when Italian immigration to the United States was heavy, and the reception accorded the new citizens was heartbreaking. Immigrants came expecting to find the streets paved with gold, and stayed to discover that nobody'd rent apartments to Italians, except in the slums, that the only kind of work Italians could get was digging ditches, that they weren't even called Italians, but dagoes, and wops. Part of the feeling against the Italian minority was based on the exploits of an illegal organization called The Black Hand. Composed mostly of thieves and murderers who'd fled Italy, and entered the United States illegally, The Black Hand preyed on impoverished new citizens, demanded protection money, ran all kinds of rackets. Decent Italians, hating the terrorism, the newspaper stories headlining knife slayings by Italians, the whole messy business, tried fighting back. This is the story of a young man named Johnny Columbo (Gene Kelly) and an elderly detective named Louis Lorelli (J. Carrol Naish), who led that fight. Columbo's father had been killed by The Black Hand, Lorelli had spent all his life as a detective trying to find some Italians brave enough to testify against the men who were victimizing them. Together, Kelly and Naish make a marvelous team, their adventures are moving and exciting. The acting's flawless, the suspense is constant, and a blow has been struck for a little more understanding.

Pleasant TO TAKE

Pleasant IN ACTION

Pleasant FOR CHILDREN & GROWN-UPS

When Nature 'forgets' remember

EX-LAX

THE CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

10¢

NEW! SOLD ONLY BY MAIL!

No Time Limit HOSPITAL PLAN

GOOD ANYWHERE IN U.S.

Protects You in Case of
SICKNESS & ACCIDENT
COSTS only 3c a DAY

More coverage! Less cost! Individual or family eligible, birth to age 70. Policy pays Hospital Room and Board as long as you remain confined. NO TIME LIMIT! You get Doctor Benefits in case of accident . . . Cash Benefits for 74 Surgical Operations . . . Compensation for Loss of Time in case of accident (age 18 or above) . . . Cash Payment for Loss of Eyes, Hands, Foot . . . Lump Cash for Accidental Death . . . special Infantile Paralysis coverage. Only 3c a day for adults; 1½c a day for children to age 18. Sold direct. No agent will call.

POLICY PAYS

HOSPITAL ROOM AND BOARD FOR SICKNESS OR ACCIDENT
Per Month $150.00
(No time limit)
DOCTOR VISITS IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)
74 SURGICAL OPERATIONS
$10 to $100
LOSS OF TIME IN CASE OF ACCIDENT
Per Week $25.00
(No time limit)
ACCIDENTAL DEATH
$1000 to $3000
LOSS OF EYES, HANDS, FOOT DUE TO ACCIDENT
$250 to $3000
INFANTILE PARALYSIS
Maximum $1500
AMBULANCE SERVICE
$10.00

FREE! MAIL COUPON

NORTH AMERICAN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY
Dept. DM 4-50, Wilmington, Del.

Please send me, without obligation, details about your "3c A Day Hospitalization Insurance Plan".

Name.....
Address.....
City.....State.....

Fibs*

is the Tampon with rounded ends...the only Tampon "Quilted" for comfort..."Quilted" for safety...

Next time try Fibs

{internal sanitary protection}

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

High School Course at Home — Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, H414, Drexel at 58th, Chicago 37

TEETHING PAINS RELIEVED QUICKLY

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

Buy it from your druggist today

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION

Just rub it on the gums

Paid In Full: Lizabeth Scott has just run over the only child of Diana Lynn and Bob Cummings. She makes a desperate atonement.

Young Man With A Horn: Kirk Douglas is Rick Martin, trumpeter who yearns to blow impossible notes. Doris Day sings with the same band.

PAID IN FULL

Cast: Robert Cummings, Lizabeth Scott, Diana Lynn, Eve Arden.
Paramount

I bet you've never seen anything like this before. It's based on a factual story, but if I hadn't been told different, I'd swear whoever dreamed up Paid in Full had been smoking hashish. Here goes: Lizabeth Scott loves Robert Cummings who loves Diana Lynn (Liz' sister). Diana Lynn's enamored of a millionaire, but when he throws her over, she agrees to marry Robert. He only gets $15,000 a year, but he has prospects. Liz, who's brought Diana up, swallows her tears, and wishes the young couple well, but you've had a glimpse of Diana in operation, and you know Bob's a chump. Diana wants parties, clothes, young men to kiss her. Having a baby only aggravates her selfishness; she wants to own the baby's soul. Sick in the head, you can plainly see. She decides on a divorce, accuses Liz and Bob of having an affair. Liz goes leaping out of the house into her car, and runs over the baby who's playing in the driveway. Since Diana couldn't have another baby (physical impossibility) even if she weren't divorcing Bob, this puts her right into a sanitarium for mental patients. Meanwhile, Liz has decided she's got to fix things. She invites Bob to take her to Mexico, where they get married (I'm a little fuzzy about Bob's and Diana's divorce, but I guess it doesn't matter), and Liz gets herself with child. Now you see her plan. Liz knows she'll probably die in childbirth (it's a problem her whole family suffers from) but she's determined Diana and Bob will have back the child they lost through her. She goes to a strange city, has the baby, and Diana and Bob show up before she passes to her reward. They promise to take care of the baby—Diana's all cured, and out of the booby hatch—and give it a home. Of course, Diana doesn't know it's her own husband who's the father of her child (if he still is her own husband, which I don't know) and if the baby grows up to look like Bob, I guess the shock will put her right back in the sanitarium. Still, Liz is convinced she did right, and that's all that seems important. A more preposterous picture you would go far to find. Speaking of finding, the new Broadway sensation, Carol Channing, is supposed to be in Paid in Full somewhere, but I couldn't find her, either.

YOUNG MAN WITH A HORN

Cast: Kirk Douglas, Lauren Bacall, Doris Day, Hoagy Carmichael.
Warners

I admit I can't review Young Man With a Horn without prejudice. For me, it was a great short novel, a work of art, and I think it's been thoroughly loused up. Maybe if you've never read the book, you'll think it's one of the best pictures of the year; I don't know. Rick Martin's a lonely young boy who falls in love with a trumpet, and comes alive. So okay, Kirk Douglas is sensitive, but does he look 20 years old? Rick's best friend in the book is a colored boy named Smoke Jordan, whose sister, Jo, becomes a singer. In the movie, Smoke is Hoagy Carmichael (Smoke Willoughby, that is) and Doris Day plays singer Jo Jordan. I guess Warners figured they paid for every name in the book, might as well use 'em. There's Amy North, Rick's neurotic wife. He's crazy about her because she's different from him, deep, strange. Lauren Bacall, the movie Amy, has been handed an endless line of babble that makes her about as mysterious as a high-school girl playing Marlene Dietrich. Then there's Art Hazard, the Negro trumpeter who teaches Rick how to play. He's a successful musician, a man of parts, but the movies make him call Doris Day "Miss Jo" and, in the end, depend on Rick's good nature to keep his job for him. Still, my main kick is with the character of Rick himself. Here's a fellow who only wants to do one thing—play a horn. It's his life. He's got one sure talent, and he believes in it. In the end, he's destroyed by it, because he starts demanding things of a horn that a horn can't do. He tries for notes that don't exist, and he busts wide open. There are other things that speed him to his downfall—a bad wife, a lot of liquor, a refusal to compromise. But the main thing is him and his horn, and when the horn lets him down too, he has nothing to live for, so he dies. Warner Brothers' Rick, down and out, dying in an alcoholic ward, suddenly hears the wail of an ambulance, and sits up. "They told me there was no such note," he whispers, and the last thing you see is a happy ending with Kirk blowing his horn, and sounding just like an ambulance siren. All I can say is, "Nuts." This is no way to treat a masterpiece.

Learn here the TRUTH about

PSORIASIS

IS IT A SKIN DISEASE OR INTERNAL?

For the past several years a number of Physicians have reported amazing success in treating Psoriasis with LIPAN—a new medical wonder taken internally. LIPAN (registered U.S. Patent Office) is a combination of glandular substances that treat certain internal disorders which many medical men now agree to be the cause of Psoriasis. Clinical results show LIPAN successful in over 90% of the cases treated. Even stubborn lesions are alleviated to a degree almost beyond belief. Absolutely harmless! Ask your druggist for LIPAN, or write direct for free booklet. Or send for month's supply (180 tablets), enclosing check or money order for $8.50.

SPIRT & COMPANY. DM-40, Waterbury, Conn.

Be an ARTIST

LEARN AT HOME IN YOUR SPARE TIME! Trained artists are capable of earning $65, $80 or more a week. By our practical method step by step we teach you COMMERCIAL ART, DESIGNING and CARTOONING all in ONE course. FREE BOOK—"Art for Pleasure & Profit" describes training and opportunities in art. STATE AGE. Course G.I. Approved.

STUDIO 804-W, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115—15th ST., N. W., WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

NEED MORE MONEY?

Earn big profits selling famous Bostonian shirts, rainwear, hosiery, underwear and other everyday needs for men, women and children. Spend few hours per day. You get big profits, immediate cash and big selling kit. Thousands now making a good income. No experience needed. Big Spring season ahead. Write Bostonian Mfg. Co., Dept. 105, 89 Bickford Street, Boston 30, Mass.

Write for FREE Selling Kit

$30 FOR YOU! Sell only 50 $1 boxes beautiful Everyday Cards from FREE SAMPLE DISPLAY! Friends, relatives buy on sight! Complete line to choose from—New Metallic Cards—Imprint Stationery—Novelty Gifts—Gift Wrappings. FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOG! Deluxe boxes on approval! Send no money. CREATIVE ART PUBLISHERS, Inc., 45 Warburton Ave., Dept. EG, Yonkers, N. Y.

WHY DON'T YOU WRITE?

Writing short stories, articles on homemaking, business, hobbies, travel, local and club activities, etc., will enable you to earn extra money. In your own home, on your own time, the New York Copy Desk Method teaches you how to write the way newspaper women learn—by writing. Our unique "Writing Aptitude Test" tells whether you possess the fundamental qualities essential to successful writing. You'll enjoy this test. Write for it, without cost or obligation. VETERANS: This course approved for Veterans' Training.

NEWSPAPER INSTITUTE OF AMERICA
Suite 5710-D, One Park Avenue New York 16, N. Y.

LEG SUFFERERS

Why continue to suffer without attempting to do something? Write today for New Booklet—"THE LIEPE METHODS FOR HOME USE." It tells about Varicose Ulcers and Open Leg Sores. Liepe Methods used while you walk. More than 40 years of success. Praised and endorsed by multitudes.

FREE BOOKLET

LIEPE METHODS, 3250 N. Green Bay Ave.
Dept. 49-D, Milwaukee, Wisconsin

DESTROY UNWANTED HAIR FOREVER

TEMPORARY RELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH

ONLY BY KILLING THE HAIR ROOT CAN YOU BE SURE UNWANTED HAIR IS GONE FOREVER. BRINGS RELIEF AND SOCIAL HAPPINESS. DO NOT USE OUR METHOD UNTIL YOU HAVE READ OUR INSTRUCTION BOOK CAREFULLY AND LEARNED TO USE THE MAHLER METHOD SAFELY AND EFFICIENTLY. USED SUCCESSFULLY OVER 50 YEARS.

"NEW BEAUTY FOR YOU"

SEND 6¢ COINS OR STAMPS FOR BOOKLET

MAHLER'S, INC., Dept. 36-D, Providence 15, R. I.

BE A Nurse

LEARN AT HOME

Practical nurses are needed in every community . . . doctors rely on them . . . patients appreciate their cheerful, expert care. You can learn practical nursing at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. 51st yr. Earn while learning. High School not required. Men, women, 18 to 60. Trial plan. Write now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 234, 41 East Pearson Street, Chicago 11, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____
City_____ State_____ Age____

Side Street: Poverty stricken, Farley Granger foolishly turns to crime when he discovers wife Cathy O'Donnell will soon have a baby.

SIDE STREET

Cast: Farley Granger, Cathy O'Donnell, James Craig, Paul Kelly.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

I'm afraid this is an attempt to cash in on the critical praise reaped by that fine RKO picture, They Live By Night. T.L.B.N. was artistic, and touching, and it cast Farley Granger and Cathy O'Donnell as ill-fated lovers, Side Street casts Farley and Cathy as unfortunate lovers, but it is neither artistic nor touching, nor anything else very good. Farley plays a boy who wants to buy minks for his wife. Can't do it on his salary as part-time mailman. Cathy's going to have a baby. One place where Farley delivers mail, he notices a big envelope of money in a filing cabinet. He steals it. It belongs to Edmond Ryan (a crooked lawyer) and James Craig (a powerful thug) who got it out of a blackmail racket, and who can hardly claim it, since they've murdered the lady who turned it over to them, and they don't want the whole matter dug up, so to speak. But Farley's astonished when he discovers just how much gold he's really made off with, and from there, things get horribly complicated. More murders, several beatings, a couple or robberies (in the middle of everything, poor Cathy has a baby) and as we fade out, police captain Paul Kelly's calm voice assures us that our young couple is going to be all right. Farley and Cathy are still an appealing, un-Hollywood twosome, Jean Hagen, a comparative newcomer from Broadway, gets herself murdered in a nice professional way, and there's an exciting chase down around the waterfront, at the end. It's no A picture, though.

JOHNNY HOLIDAY

Cast: William Bendix, Hoagy Carmichael, Stanley Clements, Allen Martin, Jr.
United Artists

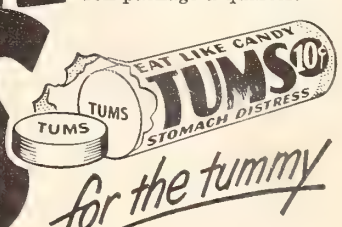
Some 12-year-old boys, if their widowed mothers go off to the hospital, act nice. They join a Boy Scout troop, work a paper route, grow up to be good insurance risks. Johnny Holiday (Allen Martin, Jr.) is nothing like that. He's a 12-year-old boy who falls under the influence of an older, rattier type lad (Stanley Clements) and before you can say reformatory, they're both in the Indiana Boys

HELEN NEUSHAEFER explores neu cosmetic horizons

During Helen Neushaefer's recent trip to Hollywood she visited screen favorites to learn their up-to-the-minute cosmetic preferences. Her lipsticks and nail polishes combine these star-favored preferences to give you the most flattering cosmetics on the beauty horizon. TODAY, SEND FOR HELEN NEUSHAEFER'S FREE BOOKLET on hand care for NEU hand loveliness.

NEU NAIL AND LIP BEAUTY

Helen Neushaefer Lipstick in 6 glowing shades in the case with the color-teller-tip, 39c.



Helen Neushaefer Nail Polish with exclusive chip-proof Plasteen in 12 shades, 10c and 25c sizes.

At your favorite five-and-dime and drug store. Money back if you're not satisfied.

HELEN NEUSHAEFER, Dept. D • COLLEGE POINT, N. Y.

TUMS Let you eat what you like

Millions now eat foods they never dared touch—without fear of acid indigestion distress—by taking a couple of Tums after eating. Almost instantly, heartburn, sour stomach, gassy bloat of acid indigestion are relieved. And Tums are so pleasant to take...just like candy mints. Don't deny yourself food you like. Get Tums from your druggist today. Only 10¢ a roll; 3 roll package a quarter.

for the tummy

NEED A LAXATIVE TOO?

Try a 25¢ Box

Nature's Remedy
NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

Heiress

Dolly Brill, beautiful model, inherited lovely hands, and keeps them soft and lovely all winter long with famous Italian Balm.

Smoother, softer, chap-free hands—that's Italian Balm's promise! Balm's concentrated formula softens roughest, driest skin quicker. So different from thin or watery lotions. Amazingly economical—one drop serves both hands. 25c, 50c, $1 per bottle.

Campana
Italian Balm
—for Chap-Free Hands

EVEREST & JENNINGS FOLDING
WHEEL CHAIRS
LIGHTEST and STRONGEST

FOLDS TO 10 INCHES

Ideal for TRAVEL, WORK, PLAY
Lightweight...Beautifully Designed Chromium Plated

EVEREST & JENNINGS Dept. 66
761 N. Highland Ave., Los Angeles 38, Calif.

"There's nothing like whirling water for thorough cleanliness"

Marvel WHIRLING SPRAY
50 Years World Standard Syringe for Women
GOLD MEDAL Paris 1900 GOLD MEDAL Paris 1925
3.50 All Drug Counters
Booklet Free MARVEL CO.
604 EAST 6TH STREET, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

SENSATIONAL OFFER!

(For Blondes Only)

Unusual blond products tested over 30 years. Thrilling blond hair any shade golden to platinum. Blondes with "light ends" & "dark roots" will be amazed at the thrilling results. Men love lovely blond hair. Check & return this ad with two dimes for regular dollar box of a thrilling blond product. ( ) I want to lighten my hair just a few shades ( ) I want to lighten dark roots. ONE TIME OFFER.

Address: SAMPLE DEPT. D-4
Box #10, Prince Station New York 12, N. Y.

Johnny Holiday: Allen Martin, Jr., says goodbye to his mother in the hospital—where Bill Bendix has brought him from the reformatory.

School. Johnny Holiday's not really naughty. He likes Sarge Walker (William Bendix), the man in charge of the school's stable, and he loves Nellie, a horse. He'd reform like a shot, but Stanley Clements keeps working on him, and then one day Sarge Walker has to kill Nellie (to save her foal) and that turns Johnny really sour. But there's no such thing as a bad boy (with the possible exception of Stanley Clements, that snake), and Johnny works out his salvation by foiling Stanley's escape, and saving Sarge Walker's life. Hoagy Carmichael plays himself here (he entertains at the school, New Year's Eve), the Governor of Indiana also plays himself, and Greta Granstedt is Johnny's widowed mother.

THE SUNDOWNERS

Cast: Robert Preston, Robert Sterling, Chill Wills, John Litel.
Eagle-Lion

Here's a Technicolored Western that's different, exciting, terrific. In fact, you'd better keep impressionable kids away from it. The villain is so fascinating, they're likely to take him as a model. Story deals with Robert Sterling and his young brother, John Barrymore, Jr., trying to make out on a cattle ranch. They're new in the community, and their neighbors—mostly thieves—resent their coming, and make off with most of their cattle. Up rides Robert Preston, known far and wide as Kid Wichita. He's a gunman, but Sterling lets him stick around because he needs help. Wichita gets back the stolen cattle, and more besides, though he has to murder a couple of folks in the getting. Young brother, meanwhile, is developing a crush on Wichita, making him his hero, and Sterling's worried. Well, that's part of it. Then there's a secret about Wichita's real identity, there's excellent acting, there's tremendous suspense. In a way, it's too bad Preston makes Wichita so magnetic. He's a cold-blooded murderer, but he's got a sense of humor and a brand of charm that could turn a Bryn Mawr girl into a gun moll. Go ask any Bryn Mawr girl. As for John Barrymore, Jr., he's a lanky lad, and I can't see the much-heralded resemblance to his handsome father, but he has plenty of talent and personality. That goes for everybody in the picture.

THE GREAT RUPERT

Cast: Jimmy Durante, Terry Moore, Tom Drake, Frank Orth.
Eagle-Lion

Rupert is a trained squirrel (he dances the Highland Fling), but nobody books his act, and his owner, who's been living in a garage, is evicted for non-payment of rent. Sadly, owner frees Rupert in a park, tips off a friend (Jimmy Durante) that the garage is now vacant, and fades. Jimmy's delighted about the garage. He's an unemployed acrobat, once balanced his wife (Queenie Smith) and daughter (Terry Moore) on his shoulders, but those days are over. Wife's waistline has thickened, and daughter's practically six feet tall. Or, anyway, too tall to perch on her old lady's shoulders. Mr. Dingle, who owns the garage—and lives in the house adjacent—wants rent in advance, but his son (Tom Drake) takes a look at Terry Moore, and fixes things temporarily. Now, Mr. Dingle's a tightwad. Main thing he likes is money—to hoard, not to spend. When an old investment pays off, he cuts a hole in the wall baseboard, and stuffs $1500 a week into it. Meanwhile, Rupert, the squirrel, bored with park life, returns to live in the rafters of the garage. Once a week he picks up the $1500 Mr. Dingle stuffs in the wall and sprinkles it down on Jimmy Durante's head. Jimmy's family thinks God is responsible for the miracle, and they help all the little businesspeople in the neighborhood, and prosperity reigns. There's some confusion, what with the income tax people, and Rupert's burning the Dingles' house to the ground, and Tom Drake's getting some music published, but everything works out. Everything. This is a picture with at least five different happy endings. Even Rupert's old boss, and Rupert, go on to make a success of their act. (Before the crowned heads of Europe, I shouldn't wonder.) Durante's delightful, enchanting, lovable. If you can say bad things about a picture he's in, you're braver than I am.

SHADOW ON THE WALL

Cast: Ann Sothern, Zachary Scott, Gigi Perreau, Nancy Davis.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Ann Sothern's sister (Kristine Miller) is married to Zachary Scott, but carrying on with Tom Helmore. Tom is Ann's fiancé. Now, since childhood, sister's always got everything away from Ann, due to her superior allure (not evident to the naked eye), and this Tom business is just too much. Ann goes to sister's house to squawk, finds sister and Zachary have had a big fight (over Tom business, also) and Zach's lying on the floor unconscious. Sis lets him have it with a handmirror or something. Ann shoots sister in a moment of pique, is overheard by Sis' and Zach's child, Gigi Perreau, but doesn't know it. Zach goes to jail, is going to die in the electric chair for wife's murder. Gigi is in a state of shock. A child psychiatrist (Nancy Davis) starts working on her. The kid knows something. Maybe they can find out what it is, save her father. Ann's worried now. Half the time she resolves to be a good girl, 'fess up, the other half, she plots ways to rub out Gigi. I find it particularly unpleasant to watch somebody attempting murder on a little child, even when I know it's just a movie.

NEW! smart idea!

For home permanents, cosmetics—special top holds wave lotion, package gives you clean cotton as you need it! Get it today.

COTTON PICKER ®
Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton

A CURITY Product
BAUER & BLACK Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

Birthstone Ring GIVEN AWAY

"Order one today and get thrill of your life"

A lovely design, expensive looking, made in 1/40-14k solid rolled Gold plate with simulated BIRTHSTONE set—your size and month GIVEN for selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Products at 25¢ per box, returning $1.00. Order 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve or 4 bottles of famous Rosebud Perfume. Send NO Money—We trust you.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 21, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

MAKE MONEY
ADDRESSING ENVELOPES

Do this profitable easy work in the privacy of your home-in your spare time, experience unnecessary. Our complete instructions show you how, and also reveal names and addresses of many firms who constantly address thousands of envelopes. Send only $1—with your name and address and we will send you everything to get started immediately.

The Congress Co., Dept. B450 1019 Congress Bldg. MIAMI, FLORIDA

Fascinating vocation learned at home by those with aptitude. Thrilling pastime. National method brings out life-like colors. Free booklet.
NATIONAL PHOTO COLORING SCHOOL
1315 S. Michigan, Dept. 2364, Chicago 5

stop Scratching

Relieve itching caused by eczema, athlete's foot, scabies, pimples and other itching conditions. Use cooling, medicated D. D. D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes, comforts and checks itching fast. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Don't suffer. Ask your druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription.

Start high as $3,450 A YEAR!

Men, Women. Prepare NOW for next examinations. Veterans get preference. Write immediately for FREE 40-PAGE BOOK with list of positions and full particulars telling how to qualify for them. (Not Government Sponsored.)

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. C-108, Rochester 4, N. Y.

The Kid From Texas: Betrayed by his former comrades, Audie Murphy dramatically prepares for a last-ditch stand, backed by Gale Storm.

THE KID FROM TEXAS

Cast: Audie Murphy, Gale Storm, Albert Dekker, Shepperd Strudwick.
Universal-International

This is a sympathetic story about Billy the Kid, and I don't know how much of it's fiction. It's absorbing, and the Technicolor is gorgeous. Audie Murphy (as Billy) turns up in New Mexico during a fight between two big land-owning factions. Both factions want control of the range. Albert Dekker and his partner Shepperd Strudwick are on one side of the fence, Dennis Hoey's on the other. Hoey's side hires gunmen, but Strudwick's a peaceful soul. He takes on Billy as a ranchhand, to the displeasure of partner Dekker. Strudwick makes a friend of Billy, and the young sharpshooter puts away his guns, determined to live peaceable. Nobody's ever treated him like a human being before; Strudwick becomes his idol. When Strudwick's killed by Hoey's gangsters, Billy goes back to his old ways, vows to get every man who had anything to do with Strudwick's murder. Dekker says okay, sends his men, led by Billy, to get Hoey's bunch, but after a lot of people on both sides are killed, Dekker shifts the whole blame to Billy, tells the governor of the territory he never authorized his men to murder anybody. Billy becomes an outlaw, still intent on revenge. (There are a couple of men implicated in Strudwick's death that Billy hasn't yet caught up with.) Billy's finally trapped by his love for Dekker's young wife (Gale Storm) but there's plenty of excitement first.

KEY TO THE CITY

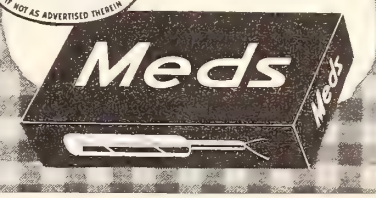
Cast: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Frank Morgan, Marilyn Maxwell.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

If you can believe that all the mayors in the U. S. are having a convention in San Francisco, then I guess you can believe that Clark Gable, self-made man and ex-stevedore, is the mayor of some town (I can't remember the name), and Loretta Young is the mayor of still another town (I can't remember the name of that either). Loretta's prim, scholarly, a Harvard grad. Clark's all brawn and sex appeal. When his city council doesn't agree with him, he dumps them into a fish pond outside the city hall.

Yours FREE!

Safe to bathe? What about cramps?

For all those things you might want to learn about how to stay healthy, happy, comfortable every day of the month—read "It's So Much Easier When You Know."



It's for young girls. It's for older women. It's for you.

FREE! Write for yours, plus free sample package of Meds, mailed in plain wrapper. Personal Products Corp., Dept. MS-4, Milltown, N. J.

Go Meds... Go Merrier with the Modess tampon

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping — REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Acceptable for advertising in the Journal of the American Medical Ass'n

FREE samples bring you EXTRA MONEY

Profits to 100%. Sensational novelty greeting cards, gift wraps, children's books. Customers buy on sight. Free samples personalized stationery, napkins, coasters, matches. Big demand. No experience needed. Write today. SENRAB CO., 129 North Warren St., Syracuse, N. Y.

Sell Plastic Greeting Cards and Personalized Items

"I'm a teacher...

I can't afford CORNS, can you?"

"I don't dare risk sore feet. So when a corn appears, I use a BLUE-JAY Corn Plaster." Nupercaine* soothes surface pain; gentle medication loosens hard "core," you lift it out in a few days! Get BLUE-JAY today (on sale at drug counters everywhere). Free Booklet! "Your Feet and Your Health." Write Dept. DMO-4, BLUE-JAY Products, 131 S. Franklin St., Chicago 6, Illinois.

*Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Ciba's Brand of DIBUCAINE

BLUE JAY REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. — AMERICA'S Largest Selling CORN PLASTER

RELIEVES HEADACHE NEURALGIA
NEURITIS PAIN
FAST
ANACIN
ANALGESIC TABLETS
TWELVE TABLETS
Here's Why...
Anacin® is like a doctor's prescription. That is, it contains not one but a combination of medically proved ingredients that are specially compounded to give FAST, LONG LASTING relief. Don't wait. Buy Anacin today.

Foot Relief
Instant-Acting, Soothing, Cushioning Foot Plaster
To instantly relieve painful corns, sore toes, callouses, bunions, tender spots, burning on bottom of feet—use Dr. Scholl's Kurotex. You cut this soothing, cushioning, flesh color, superior moleskin to any size or shape. At Drug, Shoe, Department and 10¢ stores.
Easily cut to any size or shape
Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Use DERMOIL
Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.
Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test." Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Caution: Use only as directed. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 3925 Strathmoor Station, Dept. 3609, Detroit 27, Mich.
SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE
DERMOIL
PSORIASIS
EXTERNAL USE ONLY
©1935 LAKE LAB

WESTERN FASHION BELT
SUSAN
COMPLETE WITH YOUR FIRST NAME
Tooled and jeweled genuine top grain cowhide with solid nickel-plate buckle, loop and tip that looks like heavy silver. Sparkling simulated jewels, nailheads and gold bronco coins inset. YOUR first name emblazoned in silvery metal on the back. Waist sizes 24 to 44. Handsome Western Russet or Black. 3.79
GAYLORD Dept. DD-94 Fifth Ave., McKeesport, Penna.
I enclose $.....for.....Western belts with names of.....
(No COD's) (Print name and address in margin) Money Back Guaranteed

Key to the City: Stevedore-turned-mayor Clark Gable fights off assailants while lady mayor Loretta Young offers good advice, but no help.

No trouble with drys in his state—the legislators are always wringing wet. Well, love blooms between Loretta and Clark, but she mistrusts him on account of flashy atom dancer Marilyn Maxwell (she certainly can can-can), and the late Frank Morgan plays an Irish fire chief, and Lewis Stone plays Loretta's uncle with-the-kindly-twinkle who hopes Loretta will learn to live dangerously, but what's the difference? It's perfectly absurd. It's also pretty funny.

THE THIRD MAN

Cast: Joseph Cotten, Valli, Trevor Howard, Bernard Lee, Orson Welles.
Selznick

Joseph Cotten, down on his luck, arrives in the American zone of Vienna and goes looking for his old school friend, Harry. Harry has a business of some sort and he's written Joe to come to Vienna if he wants a job. Only Joe's too late. Harry's dead. A number of people will testify to that. The two men who picked up the body after Harry was run over by his own chauffeur, and the girl who loved Harry—she's an actress named Anna (Valli). A porter tries to give Joe some information (he says there were three men carrying Harry's body) and he (the porter) is murdered shortly thereafter. Now Joe's both angry and curious. He thinks Harry's death was no accident. After a while, he has reason to think Harry isn't even dead. It seems Harry was mixed up in some unsavory black market dealings (Harry wasn't above watering penicillin for sick children) and the body in Harry's grave may not even be Harry's. Harry (Orson Welles) may be hiding out, biding his time. The authorities, particularly a British officer named Calloway (Trevor Howard) advise Cotten to give up trying to solve his little mystery. Go home, take the first plane, they urge. Vienna's not a nice place to be, and there's no use looking for trouble. But Cotten's stubborn; besides, he's fallen in love with Anna. Anna smiles, when he tells her. "If you'd phoned and asked me what color your hair was, I wouldn't have known," she says sadly. She's still in love with the memory of Harry. Harry'd never quite grown-up. Harry'd never cared too much about right or wrong, but Anna loved him.

make it a habit

Reading
Modern Romances
every month

Listening to the
"Modern Romances"
radio program
every day!

You'll thrill to these frank and human dramatizations of true-to-life stories. The same joys, sorrows and loves that you or your neighbors might experience in your own daily life.

Yes —
Make it a habit to read and listen to
"MODERN ROMANCES"

Broadcast Monday thru Friday over the ABC Network

See your newspaper for local time

It would be too bad to give away the rest of the plot, because knowing takes some of the fun out of seeing. It's enough to say this is an excellent thriller. It's based on a story by Graham Greene, it's directed and produced by Carol Reed, and it's acted with the same taste and intelligence which characterizes the writing and direction. Joseph Cotten's never been so good. That goes for Valli, and everybody else, too. . . . Among the picture's other unusual features is the haunting zither music—which runs right through it, from the title to the finish. It's strange, moody, exciting stuff.

MOTHER DIDN'T TELL ME

Cast: Dorothy McGuire, John Lund, June Havoc.
20th Century-Fox

Dorothy McGuire, coughing like a bull moose, phones doctor William Lundigan. Then she rushes into a filmy negligee, and plays Camille. (William Lundigan is her type.) So they get married. But every time she puts dinner on the table, he's off softening somebody's arteries. Occasionally he takes time out from his practice, only to accomplish such feats as sinking all his money into a broken-down house (the seller just showed him a picture). Even after the twins are born, Dorothy can't resign herself to this erratic way of life. Not only is she snubbed whenever she tries to put in an edgewise word about the habits of ulcers (she wants to belong, when her husband has his doctor friends over), but her husband takes a lovely girl-doctor into his office as a partner, her mother-in-law swipes away at her from the sidelines, and a charlatan psychiatrist (Leif Erickson), tells her she's misunderstood, and would she care to dance? It's unbelievable but mildly amusing.

DEAR WIFE

Cast: William Holden, Joan Caulfield, Billy De Wolfe.
Paramount

Dear Wife is the sequel to Dear Ruth, with the same cast playing the same characters. Ruth (Joan Caulfield), married to Bill (William Holden), discovers that being a bride is often a headache, never a bore. For one thing, Bill resents living with her family. Hurts his pride. Besides which he has his wife's old job, in the town bank, and his wife's old boyfriend (Billy De Wolfe) for a boss. (De Wolfe is always giving him pompously confusing advice like, "Hit the ball hard; keep pitching!") Ruth's adolescent sister Miriam (Mona Freeman) is frightfully civic-minded, so she starts a campaign to run Bill, whom she admires, for State Senator against whatever candidate George Stiver, the local political boss, chooses. She finds out too late that her own father, the Judge (Edward Arnold), is Stiver's man. By this time, she's already written a letter to the paper, roasting "Stiver's Stooge." Her father says to her mother (Mary Phillips) plaintively at one point, "Do you think if I pulled some strings I could get that child deported?" But Miriam's only just begun to fight, and the political battle is on, and Ruth and Bill nearly split up (there's a redhead running his campaign), but all's well that ends, you know.

THREE CAME HOME

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Patric Knowles, Florence Desmond, Sessue Hayakawa.
20th Century-Fox

This outstanding picture is based on the actual experiences of writer Agnes Newton Keith. Mrs. Keith (played by Claudette Colbert, who gives one of the best performances of her career) was an American, living in Borneo with her husband (played by Patric Knowles), a British colonial official, when the war with Japan broke out. The Japanese occupied Borneo, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith were separated, sent to different prison camps, their little boy going with his mother. This is chiefly a story of those years in prison, and their effect on a sensitive woman. Mrs. Keith was capable of great objectivity; looking back to a time of particularly intense suffering, she said, "At that moment, I hated all mankind—not just the enemy. A race which still allowed wars to happen to innocent children. Was there any hope for such an animal?" Because she was so unusual a person, her pain and hunger and loneliness are particularly affecting. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Keith and their son were finally liberated and reunited, in 1945. It's good to know that these three did come home.

Three Came Home: Fearful for their lives, prisoners Claudette Colbert and Florence Desmond are forced into obedience by a Jap guard.

Dear Wife: Mona Freeman lays plans to run brother-in-law Bill Holden for senator, despite the fact that her father is running, too.

BLONDES-Wash Hair Lighter SAFELY!

GIVE IT LOVELY SHINE WITH NEW "Creamy" Shampoo

Make this rich, creamy shampoo at home—FRESH, as you need it. Contains Andium—helps keep hair from darkening, brightens faded hair...gives it lovely, light, lustrous shine. Safe for children. Get it at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

BLONDEX Shampoo

MADE SPECIALLY FOR BLONDES

Glamourize Your Hair

mervin Wave-O-Matic

The Only Automatic Waver

• NO HEAT • NO LOTION

AT CHAIN STORES, DRUG & DEPT. STORES 25¢

★ ★ ★ FREE!!!

Do you want a REAL PHOTOGRAPH of your FAVORITE MOVIE STAR?

Send 15c for handling and mailing and receive a lovely photo direct from Hollywood and our beautifully illustrated catalog listing hundreds of STARS. ALSO ASK for COLORED BROCHURE describing most unusual OFFER yet made to movie fans. LIMITED SUPPLY ON ABOVE OFFER —SEND TODAY

★ HOLLYWOOD STARS ★

Dept. M6 4633 Hollywood Blvd., Box 9865 Hollywood 27, Calif.

Montgomery Clift

NEW! BIRTHDAY PARTY PACK

Be first! Sell this sensational new assortment. Contains everything but the food. . . The invitations, table cover, napkins, nut baskets, place cards, snapper hats, cups, plates, game booklet and six different games; a complete party for eight. Write today. ELMCRAFT, 5930 S. Western Ave., Chicago 36, Illinois.

FREE RACHEL FACE POWDER

Send today for free liberal supply of this high grade Face Powder. BEAUTIFUL Cosmetic catalog in colors furnished. Help bring out your loveliness by using our glamorous blend of Face Powder Mention shade wanted—Light or Dark. Be Lovely to Look At—Nice to Know. Don't wait. Send Now! J. E. McBRADY & CO., (Est. 1894) 1041-49 W. Van Buren, Dept. 102, Chicago 7, Ill.

WANT TO BE A PRACTICAL NURSE?

EASY TO TRAIN AT HOME

ACT NOW—HELP FILL THE NEED

Now you can prepare for practical experience as a Trained Practical Nurse in spare time. Many earn while learning. Ages 18 to 55. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Write for free information and sample lesson pages. WAYNE SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL NURSING, INC. 2525 Sheffield Ave., Desk K-50, Chicago 14, Ill.

NERVOUS STOMACH

ALLIMIN relieves distressing symptoms of "nervous stomach"—heaviness after meals, belching, bloating and colic due to gas. ALLIMIN has been scientifically tested by doctors and found highly effective. More than a ¼ billion sold. At all drug stores.

ALLIMIN Garlic Tablets

WRITERS

Conscientious sales service for your short stories, articles, books and plays. Send today for FREE circular "Your Road To Writing Success."

DANIEL S. MEAD LITERARY AGENCY

Dept. DM16, 419 Fourth Ave., N. Y. C.

TAKE ANY 9 of these 12 Best-Sellers

Beautiful Big, FULL-SIZE Books You'll Be Proud to Own!

YES—ALL 9 FOR ONLY $1.49

WHEN YOU JOIN THE BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA

ORDINARILY, Book League members get 2 FREE BOOKS when they join, plus another free Bonus Book with every 2 Selections—8 FREE books in all! But on this offer, YOU get all 8 at once! And you also get ANY NINTH BOOK you wish, for just $1.49, plus shipping charges!

You Get ANY 9 YOU WANT for just the Bargain Price of ONE Club Selection

1—CLOAK OF FOLLY, by Burke Boyce—When handsome Lord Oxford's amorous escapades got him into the Tower of London—his charm got him out!

2—HIGH TOWERS, by Thomas Costain—To save her honor, Felicite married Auguste De Mariat, who shocked even the corrupt court at Versailles.

3—BRIEF GAUDY HOUR, by Margaret Barnes—What shocking secret drove Anne Boleyn into the arms of Henry VIII—and changed the course of history?

4—SHORT STORIES OF DeMAUPASSANT—Over 50 of the most daring stories ever written! Tales of love, hate, intrigue, madness, jealousy, and passion!

5—LORD JOHNNIE, by Leslie Turner White—This dashing rogue risked death to possess the woman who married him only because she expected him to die!

6—PRIDE'S CASTLE, by Frank Yerby—One woman sacrificed her honor to win ruthless Pride Dawson—the other only pretended goodness to become his wife.

7—THE GOLDEN FURY, by Marian Castle—Caroline Lawlor tried desperately to forget her scarlet past—yet continued to love the one man who made her remember it!

8—ARABIAN NIGHTS—The fabulous "thousand-and-one" tales of adventure, magic and romance which have enchanted millions of readers for generations!

9—JANE EYRE, by Charlotte Bronte—The tale of a passionate love affair between a sophisticated Englishman and a young governess—haunted by a screaming secret.

10—THE QUEEN BEE, by Edna Lee—Eva Avery stopped at nothing to destroy the rich husband she tricked into marriage, and the lonely young niece she first pampered, then crushed!

11—BEST KNOWN WORKS OF ZOLA—Includes the incomparable NANA—scarlet woman of the streets who became one of literature's most famous heroines!

12—TALES FROM THE DECAMERON—Boccaccio's lusty tales—about the amorous antics of outraged husbands and outrageous lovers, of sinning "saints" and saintly "sinners."

ALL 9 SHIPPED TO YOU AT ONCE!

Mail WITHOUT MONEY to

BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA
Dept. DM04, Garden City, N. Y.

Please send me at once the nine best-sellers whose numbers I have encircled below (worth up to $20 in the publishers' editions) and send me a bill for just ONE of them as my first Selection at the Club's special low members' price of only $1.49, plus a few cents shipping charges. The other 8 are mine to keep, and you may enroll me as a member.

(Read descriptions for books above, then encircle ANY NINE of them below. Do not choose more nor less than NINE).

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12

As a member, the best-selling book I choose each month may be either the regular Selection or any other popular book described in the Club's monthly "Review." Although the same titles may be selling for $3 or more at retail, I am to pay only the special bargain price of $1.49 each plus few cents shipping charges; and I may cancel my subscription at any time after buying twelve books from the Club. There are no dues or club fees for me to pay; no further cost or obligation.

SPECIAL NO-RISK GUARANTEE: If not delighted, I will return all 9 books AND your bill within 7 days, pay nothing—and this membership will be cancelled!

Mr. }
Mrs. } .....
Miss. } (Please PRINT Plainly)

Address.....

Zone No.
City.....(if any).....State.....

Slightly higher in Canada. Address 105 Bond St., Toronto 2

SEND NO MONEY! PAY POSTMAN NOTHING!

Here's WHY "America's Biggest Bargain Book Club" Makes This Amazing Offer:

We want you to have ANY NINE of the best-sellers shown above to prove to you that you will be delighted with your membership in this famous book club. You never pay any dues or club fees—and every month you get your own choice of the finest new novels of romance and adventure . . . best-sellers by authors like Steinbeck, Maugham, Hemingway and others equally famous.

1: Your Savings are TREMENDOUS! Although the best-seller you choose each month may cost $3 or even more in publisher's edition, YOU pay the Club's bargain price of only $1.49, plus few cents for shipping—a clear saving of up to $1.50 on each book you take! Just THINK of the great savings you'll make on the twelve books you receive during the year. And think, too, of the great pleasure you'll get right away from the 9 volumes you select from those pictured above!

2: You Choose Your Own Best-Sellers! The best-selling novel you receive each month need NOT be the Club's regular Selection. You are free to choose any one of the OTHER splendid new books described in the Club's publication "Review," which is sent to you without charge.

SEND NO MONEY

Just Mail Coupon Now!

Mail coupon today—without money—and receive your BIG membership package containing ANY 9 books described on this page . . . books that would cost you as much as $20 TODAY in publishers' editions!

WITH your books will come a bill for $1.49, plus few cents shipping cost. This amount is to pay for your first Club selection. The OTHER eight books described here are YOURS FREE, IN ADVANCE! If you don't agree that this is the most generous book offer you have ever received, you may return the nine books (AND the bill for only one) and forget the whole matter! Mail "no-risk" coupon TODAY!

BOOK LEAGUE OF AMERICA, Dept. DM04, Garden City, N. Y.

Truly - you'll be lovelier with Solitair

SKIN-SAFE SOLITAIR! The only foundation-and-powder make-up with clinical evidence*—certified by leading skin specialists from coast to coast—that it DOES NOT CLOG PORES, cause skin texture change or inflammation of hair follicle or other gland opening. No other liquid, powder, cream or cake "foundation" make-up offers such positive proof of safety for your skin.

*biopsy-specimen

Gown by Cell Chapman. Jewels by Seaman-Schepps.

See the loveliest you that you've ever seen—the minute you use Solitair cake make-up. Gives your skin a petal-smooth appearance—so flatteringly natural that you look as if you'd been born with it! Solitair is entirely different—a special feather-weight formula. Clings longer. Outlasts powder. Hides little skin faults—yet never feels mask-like, never looks "made-up." Like finest face creams, Solitair contains Lanolin to protect against dryness. Truly—you'll be lovelier with this make-up that millions prefer. No better quality. Only $1.00.

Cake Make-Up Solitair

Fashion-Point Lipstick

Seven new fashion-right shades

Contains Lanolin

Yes—the first and only lipstick with point actually shaped to curve of your lips. Applies color quicker, easier, more evenly. New, exciting "Dreamy Pink" shade—and six new reds. So creamy smooth—contains Lanolin—stays on so long. Exquisite case. $1.00

*Slanting cap with red enameled circle identifies the famous *Fashion-Point and shows you exact color of lipstick inside. U. S. Pat. No. 2162584

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT ON 30-DAY TEST OF CAMEL SMOKERS...

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS!

YES, THESE WERE THE FINDINGS OF NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS AFTER A TOTAL OF 2,470 WEEKLY EXAMINATIONS OF THE THROATS OF HUNDREDS OF MEN AND WOMEN WHO SMOKED CAMELS—AND ONLY CAMELS—FOR 30 CONSECUTIVE DAYS!

COLLEGE STUDENT Anne Hogan: "My doctor's report after my 30-day test proved what my own throat told me from the start—Camels are wonderfully mild."

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD COLE of Fresh Meadows, N.Y., made the test under observation of a throat specialist. Both agree, "Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette!"

PERSONNEL DIRECTOR R. R. Lamkie: "Camel mildness agreed with my throat right from the start. I like everything about Camels—they're my cigarette!"

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Start your own 30-Day Camel MILDNESS Test Today!

Smoke Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days. Compare them in your "T-Zone" (T for taste, T for throat). Let your own throat tell you about Camel's cool, cool mildness. Let your own taste tell you about Camel's wonderful flavor.

FOR GIRLS ONLY see page 32 may 15c

modern screen

A DELL MAGAZINE

COPYRIGHT DEPOSIT
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
APR 0 1950

june allyson

New Loveliness begins with your First Cake of Camay!

MRS. WILLIAM S. DILES the former Mary Kathryn Heaton of Scarsdale, N. Y. Bridal Portrait by Skou

Get set for new beauty! Be ready for romance! Your first cake of Camay will make you lovelier! Just change to regular care—and use Camay alone. Let no lesser soap touch your skin.

Where will you find a finer beauty soap than Camay? Camay is mildness itself. It caresses your cheek with its gentle, creamy lather and brings you that "beautifully cared-for" look.

And no other soap has ever quite captured Camay's flattering fragrance. No wonder Camay is called "The Soap of Beautiful Women."

NOW! BUY CAMAY BY THE CARTON!

"DREAM GIRL" BECOMES CAMAY BRIDE!

Mary was chosen "dream girl" of Bill's fraternity, the same week their engagement was announced. The prize was a string of pearls!

The "Enchanted Isle" of Bermuda was the scene of Mary and Bill's honeymoon. Mary will never tire of singing gentle Camay's praises. Her first cake brought new beauty!

Camay The Soap of Beautiful Women

Yes, you can keep your mouth and breath more wholesome, sweeter, cleaner—by guarding against tooth decay and gum troubles both. So don't risk halfway dental care. Use doubly-effective Ipana care for healthier teeth and gums—better protection for your whole mouth.

Keep your Whole Mouth Wholesome!

"I use Ipana with confidence . . . it's made by Bristol-Myers," says Barbara Ann March of Roselle, N. J.

Bristol-Myers, makers of Ipana Tooth Paste, have worked with leading dental authorities for many years on scientific studies of teeth and gums. You can use Ipana with complete confidence that it provides effective care for teeth and gums both. It's another reliable Bristol-Myers product.

Fight tooth decay and gum troubles with the one leading tooth paste specially designed to do both!*

Yours can be a healthier, more wholesome mouth—if you simply do what dentists advise: guard against gum troubles as well as tooth decay.

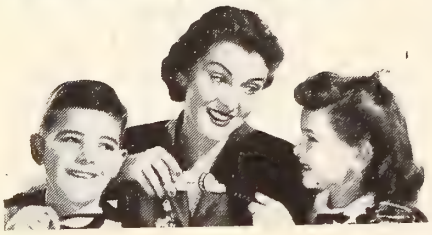
With one famous tooth paste—*with Ipana and massage—you can guard your teeth and gums BOTH.

For no other dentifrice has been proved more effective than Ipana in fighting tooth decay. And no other leading tooth paste is specially designed to stimulate gum circulation—promote healthier gums.

Remember, Ipana is the only leading tooth paste made especially to give you this doubly-protective, doubly-effective care.

So get Ipana and get double protection—to help keep your whole mouth wholesome. You'll like Ipana's wholesome flavor, too—it's so refreshing. Start using Ipana today.

NEW!
Big economy size Ipana saves you up to 23¢



IPANA

For healthier teeth, healthier gums

NO OTHER DENTIFRICE OFFERS PROOF OF SUCH RESULTS! PROOF THAT USING

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

2 years' research by LEADING UNIVERSITIES proves that using Colgate's right after eating helps stop tooth decay before it starts!

More than 2 years' scientific research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories—proves that using Colgate Dental Cream as directed helps stop decay before it starts! Modern research shows that decay is caused by acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate Dental Cream as directed helps remove these acids before they can harm enamel. And Colgate's active penetrating foam reaches crevices between your teeth where food particles often lodge.

The Most Conclusive Proof In All Dentifrice History On Tooth Decay!

Yes, the same toothpaste you use to clean your breath while you clean your teeth, has been proved to contain all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care. No risk of irritation to tissues and gums! And no change in Colgate's flavor, foam, or cleansing action! No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth with Colgate Dental Cream as directed is a safe, proved way to help stop decay!

ALWAYS USE COLGATE'S TO CLEAN YOUR BREATH WHILE YOU CLEAN YOUR TEETH – AND HELP STOP TOOTH DECAY!

COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Economy Size 59¢ ALSO 43¢ AND 25¢ SIZES

MAY, 1950

modern screen

stories

COLLEEN TOWNSEND'S FLIGHT FROM HOLLYWOOD ..... by Louis Pollock 24
HEARTBREAK FOR SINATRA? ..... by Kathy O'Shea 27
INGRID'S FORGOTTEN CHILD (Ingrid Bergman) ..... by Consuelo Anderson 28
HOLLYWOOD TAKES ITS MEDICINE (Robert Walker, Ava Gardner, Robert Mitchum, etc.) ..... by Hedda Hopper 30
FOR GIRLS ONLY ..... by Marie Wilson and Lizabeth Scott 32
I LOVE A CHARADE (Anthony Curtis, Barbara Lawrence, etc.) by Beverly Ott 34
MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED ..... by Loretta Young 37
PETE'S PLACE (Peter Lawford) ..... by Duane Valentry 38
I'M YOURS! (Elizabeth Taylor) ..... by Cynthia Miller 40
NO TIME FOR LOVE (Ann Blyth) ..... by Kirtley Baskette 42
MAD ABOUT MONTY (Montgomery Clift) ..... by Shelley Winters 44
SOMETIMES I HATE MY HUSBAND ..... by June Allyson 46
WHY OUR MARRIAGE WILL WORK (Jane Powell) ..... by Geary Steffen 48
MY HEART STOOD STILL (Farley Granger) ..... by Christopher Kane 58
BRINGING UP SUSAN ..... by Shirley Temple 61
HOW INGRID GOT HER DIVORCE ..... by James McArthur 80

features

THE INSIDE STORY 4
LOUELLA PARSONS' GOOD NEWS 6
MODERN SCREEN'S HOLLYWOOD PICTORIAL 51

departments

MOVIE REVIEWS ..... by Christopher Kane 16
YOUR LETTERS 25
FASHION 65

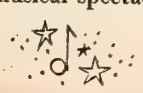
ON THE COVER: Color Portrait of June Allyson by M-G-M
Other picture credits, page 104

CHARLES D. SAXON, editor

DURBIN L. HORNER, managing editor
WILLIAM JEFFERS, story editor
GLORIA LAMPERT, associate editor
FERNANDO TEXIDOR, art director
BILL WEINBERGER, art editor
CONSTANCE BARTEL, fashion editor
CHRISTOPHER KANE, movie reviewer
CARL SCHROEDER, western manager
BEVERLY OTT, western editor
BOB BEERMAN, staff photographer
DIANA BARNARD, assistant editor
IRENE TURNER, research editor
CAROL CARTER, beauty editor

POSTMASTER: Please send notice on Form 3578 and copies returned under Label Form 3579 to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, New York

Vol. 40, No. 6, May, 1950. Copyright, 1950, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 261 Fifth Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Published simultaneously in the Dominion of Canada. International copyright secured under the provisions of the Revised Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Chicago Advertising office, 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago 1, Illinois. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; Helen Meyer, Vice-President; Albert P. Delacorte, Vice-President. Single copy price, 15c in U. S. and Canada. Subscriptions in U. S. A. and Canada $1.80 a year, $3.50 two years, $5.00 three years; elsewhere $2.80 a year. Entered as second class matter Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious—if the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301778.



M-G-M BRINGS THE FAMED STAGE HIT TO THE SCREEN AT LAST!

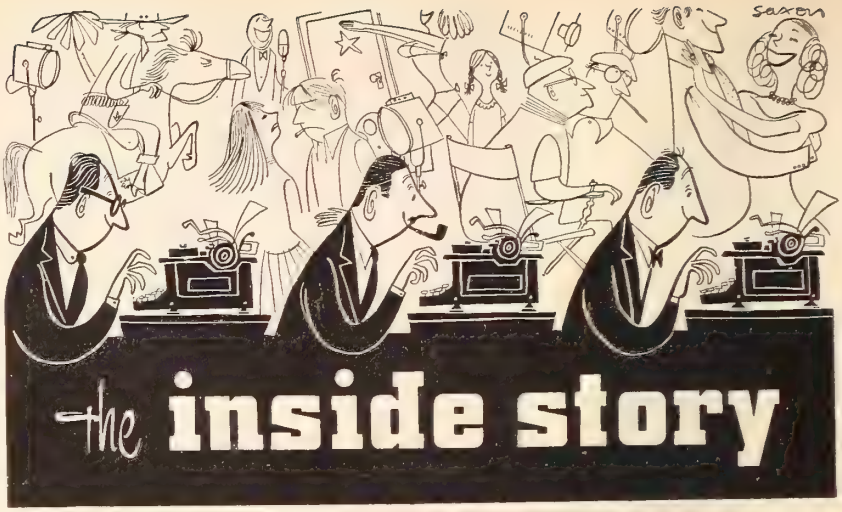
It played three years on Broadway! Road companies toured America! A triumph in the world's capitals! Now the screen's biggest Technicolor musical!

11 IRVING BERLIN SONG HITS!
"There's No Business Like Show Business", "Doin' What Comes Natur'lly", "You Can't Get A Man With A Gun", "The Girl That I Marry", "They Say That Falling In Love Is Wonderful", "My Defenses Are Down", "I'm An Indian Too" and others!

BIG CAST! BIG THRILLS!
The fabulous Buffalo Bill Wild West Shows... cowboys... Indians... riding girls... the great Buffalo Stampede... cast of hundreds in a wonderful musical spectacle!

'ANNIE GET YOUR GUN' An M-G-M Picture STARRING BETTY HUTTON • HOWARD KEEL with LOUIS CALHERN • J. CARROL NAISH EDWARD ARNOLD • KEENAN WYNN • Color by TECHNICOLOR • Screen Play by Sidney Sheldon • Based on the Musical Play with Music and Lyrics by IRVING BERLIN and Book by HERBERT FIELDS and DOROTHY FIELDS • Musical Numbers Staged by ROBERT ALTON • Directed by GEORGE SIDNEY • Produced by ARTHUR FREED

for Enchanted Moments



For your enchanted moments—at last a lipstick that will not smear...at last a lipstick of such exquisite texture that it goes on easier and stays on longer than any you have ever used.

The new, exclusive Tangee formula makes all this possible for the first time.

In Tangee Pink Queen and six other enchanting shades.

THE New Tangee LIPSTICK

MEN, WE FIND, generally fall or are pushed into categories. The first and more prevalent variety is known as "sloppy." The members of this category behave as if they'd never heard of coat hangers or green vegetables and have to be threatened before they'll have their hair cut. The telephone, to them, is an instrument of torture and more times than not its clarion call is answered with the simple invitation to drop dead. The second category, scientifically termed "neat" is rapidly becoming extinct and maybe it's a good thing, too—even though Dick Powell happens to belong to it. He and others of his stamp are usually the great organizers and rearrangers. This drives June wild. For instance—but June tells more about his fantastic cruelty in Sometimes I Hate My Husband on page 46.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE IS Bringing up Susan on page 61—but the two-year-old seems to have the situation well in hand herself. Linda Susan took her first plane ride to Hawaii the other day and comported herself as if she'd been born with wings. Ate a whopping good meal, made conversation with the other passengers and probably would, if they'd asked, have given sound advice to the pilots. And when we think how wildly excited we used to get over our weekly horse-and-buggy ride . . .

SHELLEY WINTERS AND Monty Clift are practically blood relations. Six years ago they were both learning the Broadway ropes, getting bit parts and darn glad to be eating regularly. Now they're both in Hollywood, and times have changed—but not Monty. He still can eat three steaks and four desserts at one sitting, he still doesn't go for the brassy nightspots, he's still in love—with acting. All of which goes to show why she is, was and always will be Mad About Monty (on page 44.) Well, move over Shelley—you've got company, kid.

WE USED TO think that Hollywood parties were nothing but champagne, caviar, and glitter. Dresses down to here and patent leather pumps for the men. We couldn't have been wronger. MODERN SCREEN's Bev Ott got an invite (along with Dick Long, Peggy Dow, Douglas Dick, Anthony Curtis and other bright young things) to a charade-type party and there was nary a drop of champagne and nobody got dressed—at least not up. It's something we can't explain, but you can read the hilarious and mystifying experience in I Love a Charade on page 34.

WANT TO KNOW how girls get ahead in Hollywood? Do you think it's talent? —or luck?—or knowing the right people? Well, there's a surprise in store for you on page 34. Lizabeth Scott and Marie Wilson reveal all in For Girls Only. (And no self-respecting male we know is going to let an inviting title like that stop him.)

WE'LL BE BACK on the same corner next month with special coverage on Liz Taylor's wedding plans. We're also telling how Clark Gable's new wife is making certain changes in the King's heart and home. We're telling all that and lots more when we go on sale— May 10!

y Grable and Harry James sit with their sweet-faced youngsters, six-r-old Vickie and two-and-a-half-year-old Jessica for a portrait. The es are rightfully considered one of the happiest families in Hollywood.

Tyrone Power finds time between scenes to chat with Hugh Marlowe, 20th Century's newest nominee for stardom. Ty and Hugh are on location at Lone Pine, in the Rockies, for Rawhide—rugged new stagecoach drama.

M Freeman and her husband, Pat Nerney, are among the 300 guests erman Billingsley's party in the Stork Club. The party, which lasted wn, was given for Louella Parsons on her recent trip to New York.

Emmett Kelly, the sad-faced and most famous clown of all, greets Sylvia and Clark Gable at the première of Key To The City. Gable played the role of mayor in the film which starred him and Loretta Young.

date Betty Hutton sure gives the big the idea that English are staid and c beaux. Staid? Prosaic? Not this boy. n the moment he set eyes on blonde, shell Betty at Ciro's just a few nights she separated from Ted Briskin, he has pursuing the belle with the ardor of a cavalier.

t, Stewart got a cameraman to intro- them. Then he immediately moved in danced every dance with Betty. When eft the café to attend a private party, went Granger.

vard dawning, when the Hutton group ed by the Van Heflins for scrambled and coffee, the smitten Stewart was anging on!

Without a wink of sleep, he reported to MGM to work the next day on King Solomon's Mines. But the minute the company was dismissed, Granger was ringing Betty's doorbell.

The lady, flattered but flabbergasted, asked how come?

"You're having dinner with me tonight, and tomorrow night and the next night—I hope," said the dashing actor.

Betty couldn't help laughing. But she told Stewart she isn't doing any dating, except in groups of friends, so soon after her separation from Ted Briskin.

"All right," said Granger. "Invite lots of people."

What can you do with a cavalier like that? Exciting, I calls it—I'll bet Betty does, too!

* * *

The invitations to Adrian's spring fashion show read, "So many men have asked me, 'Why can't we come to your fashion show and see what our wives are buying?' "—that he invited the gents.

Even so, seeing Clark Gable sitting beside his bride, Sylvia, who carefully marked all of Adrian's best numbers down, was something I thought I'd never live to witness! Yes, there was King Gable, looking as interested as all get-out—and seeing him was worth paying admission for. At first I thought Clark was blushing, but it was only a deep sunburn!

Loretta Young's husband, Tom Lewis, sat

"Soaping" dulls hair— Halo glorifies it!

Not a soap, not a cream— Halo cannot leave dulling, dirt-catching soap film!

Gives fragrant "soft-water" lather —needs no special rinse!

Removes embarrassing dandruff from both hair and scalp!

Halo leaves hair soft, manageable— shining with colorful natural highlights!

Yes, "soaping" your hair with even finest liquid or oily cream shampoos leaves dulling, dirt-catching film. Halo, made with a new patented ingredient, contains no soap, no sticky oils. Thus Halo glorifies your hair the very first time you use it. Ask for Halo—America's favorite shampoo—at any drug or cosmetic counter!

Halo reveals the hidden beauty of your hair!

Rhonda Fleming, star of The Eagle and The Hawk, is caught prettily by the camera on her well-earned vacation in Las Vegas, Nevada.

next to me and he said: "You know, Clark isn't looking at the clothes at all—he just keeps looking at Sylvia and agreeing with her."

Adrian really started something new in Hollywood by inviting the husbands to see his collection, feeding the hungry creatures and plying them with champagne. Believe me, it was no ordinary fashion show. He put on a revue Ziegfeld might have envied.

For instance, in the "Frogs in the Organdy Garden" number, he had seven beautiful girls in diaphanous organdy, each gown more beautiful than the other. But to top it all, there were two huge frogs who croaked their appreciation!

In the "Shepherd's Dream" number, he had one black sheep in a flock of white. In the "Colony" number, the entrance to the Colony restaurant in New York was duplicated to a T—all the girls wearing the smartest cocktail and dinner clothes.

I can tell you, it was a night to remember. Not one person—not even a male—left before the show was over.

Irene Dunne, looking like a model herself, checked off number after number of the more conservative gowns—but I also saw her mark a very swirly and beautiful evening gown.

Next to Gable, the biggest surprise of all was to see Darryl Zanuck, boss-man of 20th Century-Fox, sitting quietly by the side of his lovely Virginia and pointing out the dresses he thought she should buy. When I commented on his being there, Virginia said, "Oh, he always goes with me when we're in Paris."

Clifton Webb picked out a few numbers for Mabelle, his favorite mother.

If you ask me, I think Adrian has started something new in this town. From now on there won't be any trouble getting the men who pay the bills to come with their wives to his beautiful shows.

* * *

Elizabeth Taylor's mother said, "Poor little thing! She didn't get to announce her engagement like other girls, at the party she planned for 20 of her girl friends. The story

The Daughter of Rosie O'grady

IN COLOR BY TECHNICOLOR

STARRING JUNE HAVER · GORDON MacRAE

WITH JAMES BARTON · CUDDLES SAKALL
AND WARNERS' HANDSOME DANCE-SOME NEW STAR GENE NELSON

DIRECTED BY DAVID BUTLER · PRODUCED BY WILLIAM JACOBS

SCREEN PLAY BY JACK ROSE, MELVILLE SHAVELSON & PETER MILNE • FROM A STORY BY JACK ROSE & MELVILLE SHAVELSON • MUSICAL DIRECTOR RAY HEINDORF

Deodorant News to Delight You!

New finer Mum more effective longer!

NOW CONTAINS AMAZING NEW INGREDIENT M-3—THAT PROTECTS AGAINST ODOR-CAUSING BACTERIA

New Protection! Let the magic of new Mum protect you—better, longer. For today's Mum, with wonder-working M-3, safely protects against bacteria that cause underarm perspiration odor. Mum never merely "masks" odor—simply doesn't give it a chance to start.

New Creaminess! Mum is softer, creamier than ever. As gentle as a beauty cream. Smooths on easily, doesn't cake. And Mum is non-irritating to skin because it contains no harsh ingredients. Will not rot or discolor finest fabrics.

New Fragrance! Even Mum's new perfume is special—a delicate flower fragrance created for Mum alone. This delightful cream deodorant contains no water to dry out or decrease its efficiency. Economical—no shrinkage, no waste.

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Mum's protection grows and GROWS! Thanks to its new ingredient, M-3, Mum not only stops growth of odor-causing bacteria instantly—but keeps down future growth. You actually build up protection with regular, exclusive use of new Mum!

Now at your cosmetic counter!

New MUM cream deodorant

A PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

Jennifer and David Selznick, sitting with Selznick's ex-publicity chief, Paul MacNamara, have fun at the opening of Felix Young's nightclub.

leaked out, even the date, and my baby is so disappointed."

She was talking about Elizabeth Taylor's "surprise" that she is marrying Nicky Hilton, son of the millionaire hotel man, on May 6th. I was one of the first to tip the date on my radio show, and the word spread like wildfire—so Elizabeth's pretty announcement party was definitely on the anticlimax side.

Mrs. Taylor says that luscious Liz and young Nicky have been "going steady" ever since Christmas when they met on the Paramount lot. Frank Freeman, Jr., son of the Paramount executive, introduced them after Nicky told him he wanted to meet Elizabeth more than any girl in the world.

Well, all the world knows now that our teen-age American beauty will be married with a big church wedding with six bridesmaids and matrons, including Janie Powell. Ann Westmore, daughter of the Wally Westmores of cosmetic fame, will be her matron of honor.

Helen Rose, MGM designer, will do Elizabeth's wedding gown and Edith Head, the Paramount designer, will make her going away suit and several dresses for her trousseau. Ceil Chapman, of New York, will make the rest of her clothes.

Maybe it ain't so bad being a "poor little movie star" after all.

(For further details about Liz Taylor's engagement, see page 40.—Ed.)

* * *

"Charleston, Charleston, Get hot, Charleston! . . ."

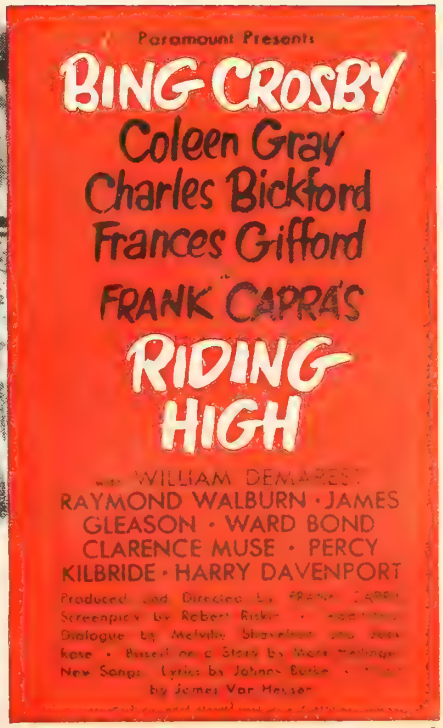
I tell you, our town has gone crazy about the revival of that dance from the roaring Twenties, and the place they are going the starkest raving mad is at the Mocambo, Monday nights.



At that time a musical group calling themselves (heavens knows why) "The Firehouse Five Plus Two" takes to the bandstand and the Pied Piper himself never attracted a more glamorous swarm of dancers than those crowding the floor and practically shagging up the walls of the famous old nitery.

The Firehouse bunch wears red shirts and

Bing Crosby's greatest is Frank Capra's Riding High

The "Blue Skies" kind of music . . . the laughter of "Road To Rio"... the heart-warmth of "Going My Way" ...all wrapped up in the happiest Bing picture of all time!

BING SINGS HIS BIGGEST HITS...IN HIS BIGGEST HIT OF ALL!...
"Sunshine Cake" • "Sure Thing" • "The Horse Told Me"
"Somewhere On Anywhere Road"
"Whiffenpoof Song" "Camptown Races"

Paramount's Joyful Springtime Hit! See It Soon At Your Favorite Theatre!

Let it fall!

It can't break—
It's PLASTIC!

New!

Shulton

SHAMPOO

5¾ oz. .85

Perfumed with the famous Old Spice

Made by Shulton, long famous for soaps and toiletries, this wonderful shampoo is tops in every way—and gives you

- more glory lights in your hair
- more glamour in its perfuming
- plus an unbreakable plastic bottle!

At Drug and Department Stores

SHULTON
Rockefeller Center, New York

helmets and dangling suspenders. When they aren't tooting their hot jazz, they work on the Walt Disney lot as artists, carpenters and technicians. But man and boy—do they go!

Just to give you a rough idea, her Nibs, Bette Davis, recently contested in the Charleston—and the gal is good!

Another big thrill was when Ginger Rogers and Ann Miller, both terrific dancers, answered a roar of popular applause with an exhibition "sister act." They were so wonderful dancing the Charleston together that they could easily step into a Broadway show without another rehearsal.

So far, they haven't been able to lure Joan Crawford out onto the floor—though Joan was the Queen of the Charleston addicts at one time. But she's beginning to show up on Monday nights, and the bets are that she won't be able to hold out much longer.

* * *

Everybody's been asking me, "What was Katharine Hepburn really like when you were interviewing her for your radio show?" This girl gives so few interviews (never gives them is nearer the truth) that press and public seldom get a glimpse of her real personality.

Well, let me say she was swell!

She is quite the most devastatingly honest person I have ever met. From time to time I have chided her in my column for her political views. Instead of ignoring what might have been an embarrassing topic, she led off with, "How come you invited me on your show when you think what you do of my politics?"

I had to laugh. "Well, I've never thought you were other than a swell actress, Katie," I told her.

Another "touchy" topic she took up immediately was the subject of her imitators—some of them have been really cruel.

I hope you heard my show with Hepburn, because if you missed her imitating her imitators you missed the one and only Hep-

FREE SUBSCRIPTIONS!

If you have spring fever, we can sympathize with you. We know what it's like. We love to sit and pull petals off daisies, too. We like to have things nice and easy—like this contest we dreamed up for you. It's so simple—all you do is tell us which stories you liked best in this issue and which you liked least. And tell us which stars you like, too. Then send this questionnaire to us right away, because we're giving a prize to the first 500 people who do so—a prize that'll help you pass the time of day all summer. For free, you'll get the June, July and August issues—so come on! Don't put it off another minute!

QUESTIONNAIRE

Which stories did you enjoy the most in our May issue? WRITE THE NUMBERS 1, 2 and 3 AT THE RIGHT of your 1st, 2nd and 3rd choices.

Colleen Townsend's Flight from Hollywood ☐
Heartbreak for Sinatra? ☐
Ingrid's Forgotten Child ☐
Hollywood Takes Its Medicine (Walker, Gardner, Mitchum) by Hedda Hopper ☐
For Girls Only (Lizabeth Scott, Marie Wilson) ☐
I Love A Charade (Barbara Lawrence, Anthony Curtis, etc.) ☐
My Prayer Was Answered (Loretta Young) ☐
Pete's Place (Peter Lawford) ☐
I'm Yours! (Elizabeth Taylor) ☐
No Time for Love (Ann Blyth) ☐
Mad about Monty (Montgomery Clift) ☐
Sometimes I Hate My Husband (June Allyson) ☐
Why Our Marriage Will Work (Jane Powell) ☐
My Heart Stood Still (Farley Granger) ☐
Bringing Up Susan (Shirley Temple) ☐
How Ingrid Got Her Divorce ☐
Hollywood Pictorial (Janet Leigh, Kirk Douglas, Linda Darnell) ☐
Christopher Kane's Movie Reviews ☐
Modern Screen Fashions ☐
Louella Parsons' Good News ☐

Which of the above did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 MALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What 3 FEMALE stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them, 1, 2, 3, in order of preference.....

.....

What MALE star do you like least?.....

What FEMALE star do you like least?.....

My name is.....

My address is.....

City..... Zone..... State..... I am ..... years old

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN
BOX 125, MURRAY HILL STATION, NEW YORK 16, N. Y.

MICKEY ROONEY

It's a new kind of role for Rooney... the rough, tough, tense story of a guy who yields to one temptation—and can't stop 'til he hits bottom! A picture that must be seen by every boy...and girl...

"QUICKSAND"

A SAMUEL H. STIEFEL PRODUCTION

"QUICKSAND"

Starring

MICKEY ROONEY

with

JEANNE CAGNEY · BARBARA BATES · PETER LORRE

Directed by IRVING PICHEL • Original Story by Robert Smith
Mort Briskin, Producer • Released thru United Artists

Which Twin has the Toni?

Eleanor and Jeanne Fulstone of Smith, Nevada. "Toni is the one wave that never frizzes my hair—but always leaves it soft and natural looking," says the Toni Twin. Can you tell which one she is? See answer below.

Hair styles in this picture by Don Rito, famous Hollywood hair stylist

Toni looks as lovely as a $20 permanent —feels as soft as naturally curly hair*

Isn't it wonderful? Now for only one dollar you can get a wave that's marvelously soft—like naturally curly hair . . . and guaranteed to look as lovely, last just as long as a beauty shop permanent costing $20. (*Including shampoo and set.)

What's Toni's secret? It's the lotion. Toni waving lotion is an exclusive creme formula—a gentle-action formula especially created to give you a wave that's free of harsh frizziness—a wave that feels and behaves like naturally curly hair. But remember, only with Toni Home Permanent do you get this superb waving lotion.

Wonderful results—again and again! What better proof of Toni quality! Toni is the only permanent that has given over 67 million lovely, long-lasting waves. Letters of praise come from women with every type of hair—even gray, bleached and baby-fine hair. So whether it's your first Toni or your tenth, you can be sure of getting a wave that looks as lovely as a $20 permanent—feels as soft as naturally curly hair. Eleanor, the twin on the left, has the Toni.

P. S. For a lovelier you, get Toni Creme Shampoo and Toni Creme Rinse, too.

"Now daddy calls both Mummy and me his Toni Twins," says Barbara Wiltgen of Evanston, Illinois. "Everywhere we go people say our hair is so soft and pretty and natural-looking . . . guess that's why daddy's so proud of us and our Toni waves!"

NEW!

TONI MIDGET SPIN CURLERS

For perfect neckline curls far easier—far faster!

Wonderful for new, short hair styles. Winds short, wispy ends closer to the head for longer-lasting curls.

SPECIAL! Toni Refill Kit with 6 Midget SPIN Curlers and tube of Toni Creme Shampoo. $1.50 value only $1.33 burn at her very best and most humorous.

Monty Clift recently mastered the art of handling a billiard cue—something he learned for a scene in Paramount's A Place in The Sun.

* * *

Around Town: Howard Duff, looking like a private thunder cloud when his date, Gloria De Haven, sat on the piano bench and sang with the pianist at the new Encore cafe . . . Almost every set you go on, some star is telling fortunes or reading cards and palms. Joan Fontaine turned her dressing room into a "Gypsy Tent" and read palms all during Bed of Roses. Lloyd Bridges, working with Valli in White Tower, reads palms and cards for his co-workers. A very good handwriting analyst is Signe Hasso. Everybody's doing it! . . . Linda Christian (Mrs. Tyrone Power) goes in for the Oriental when she dresses formally for the evening. She has a Chinese coat—several of 'em in fact—and she twists her long hair into a bun on top of her head with exotic pins stuck through the coils. . . . Arlene Dahl brushing her lips against Lew Ayres cheek as they sit side by side in a quiet corner of their favorite night club. . . . Ginger Rogers closes her eyes when she dances with Greg Bautzer. . . . Shelley Winters is acting temperamental again. Shelley, I thought you said that was all over. . . . Kirk Douglas astounding Stanley Kramer by telling him he will make another picture for him for the same salary he got for Champion—which was $50,000. Now Kirk's salary is $150,000 for a picture. That's what I call $100,000 worth of gratitude!

* * *

I might as well have been in Hollywood the five weeks I spent in New York and Florida—I saw so many of our stars.

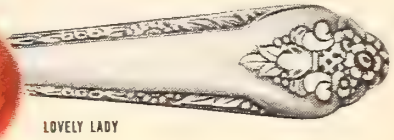
Sherman Billingsley, of the Stork Club, gave me a wonderful party for 300 of his and my most "intimate" friends. All the visitors from Hollywood were there dining and dancing until the wee small hours.

Alice Faye was having a marvelous time and it was good to see her. Alice greatly admired Carol Channing in Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, and the way she talked gave me an idea that Alice may be hankering after the movies again.

I have to tell this on Baby and Bogey. While the tough guy (Continued on page 105)

Dream house, Dream pattern . . . with these

New SPRING GARDEN



Happy young home planner!
And so very, very wise . . . for the pattern of her choice is by Holmes & Edwards, the silverplate that's Sterling Inlaid!

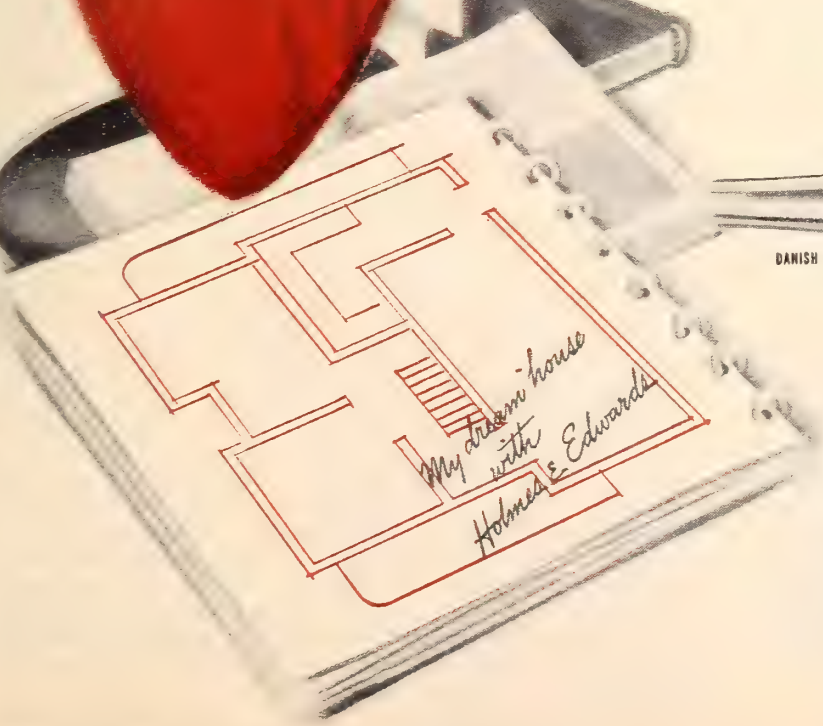
YOUTH

Two blocks of sterling silver are inlaid at the backs of bowls and handles of most-used spoons and forks to keep Holmes & Edwards lovelier longer.



LOVELY LADY

And why take years buying silverware by "place settings," when tonight you can serve a dinner for 8 with Holmes & Edwards for only $49.95, and no Excise Tax.

DANISH PRINCESS*

HOLMES & EDWARDS
STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

HERE HERE
It's Sterling Inlaid

COPYRIGHT 1950, THE INTERNATIONAL SILVER CO., HOLMES & EDWARDS DIVISION, MERIDEN CONN. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

*ALL PATTERNS MADE IN U. S. A.

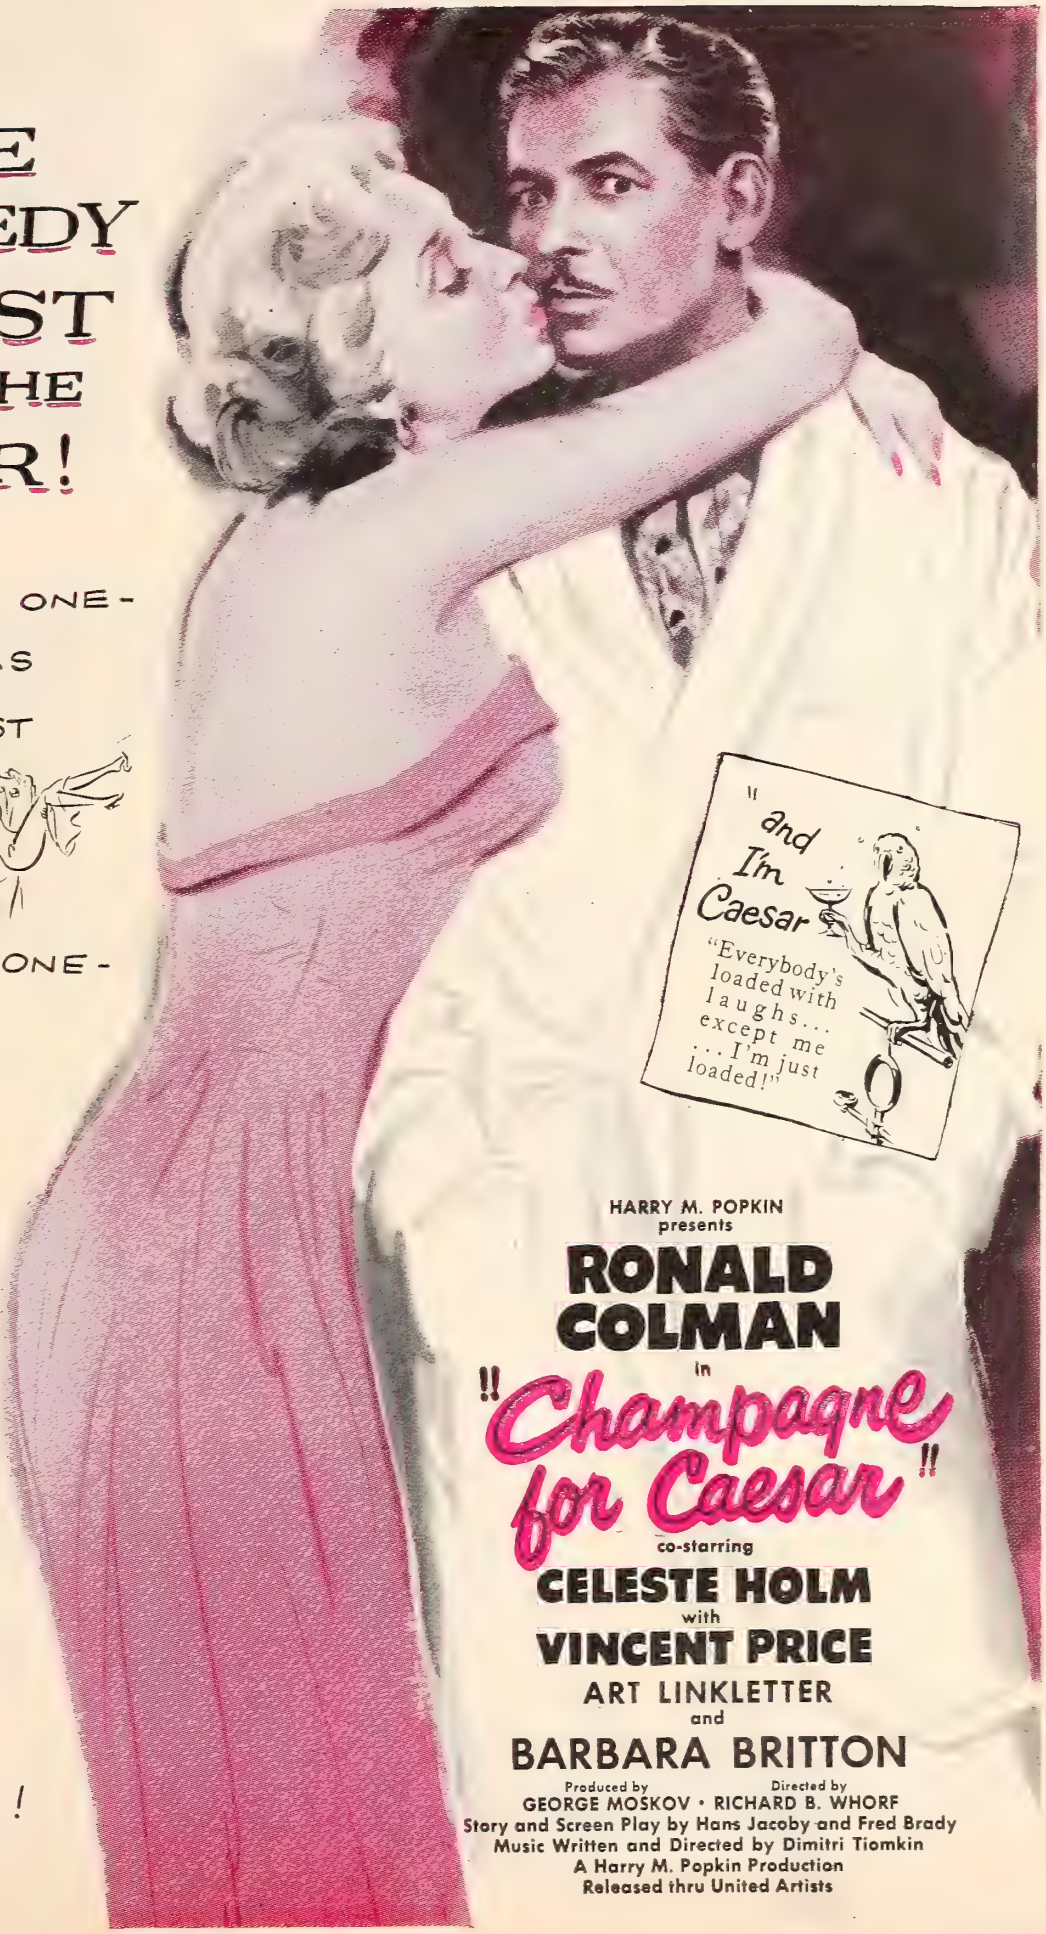
Picture of the Month

Clarence Muse provides the gay string music as Bing Crosby and Coleen Gray let themselves go before the big race in Paramount's Riding High.

MOVIE REVIEWS

by Christopher Kane

RIDING HIGH



● Bing Crosby, who's always talked to horses, talks to a girl (Frances Gifford), and it's love. But if he weds this girl, he'll have to be head of a paper-box factory (girl's father owns everything in town) and paper boxes bore him silly. He gets rid of all his horses except one—he keeps Broadway Bill for sentimental reasons—and tells himself his youth is over. It's time to settle down. Father-in-law-to-be demands the ultimate sacrifice: Part with Broadway Bill. Never! cries Bing. I'd rather part with your daughter. Bing leaves town with horse and sidekick (Clarence Muse); they're off to the races. Ex-fiancée's younger sister, Coleen Gray, also loves Bing. She follows him to Imperial City, where he's planning to enter Broadway Bill in the Derby. She raises the horse's entry fee, she stands by and helps nurse the horse when he gets sick (the barn where he's quartered leaks when it rains), and she's at Bing's side the day of the race. As if having just got over the horse equivalent of pneumonia isn't enough, Broadway Bill's got a crooked jockey on his back (a big gambler's paid the boy to throw the race) and the horse has to fight his own rider, as well as the other horses. Does Broadway Bill win, does everything work out? Well, I won't spoil the story. There's a tremendous cast of characters and bit players in this picture. All of them are good; most of them are funny. You see Raymond Walburn and William Demarest as racetrack habitues, Gene Lockhart has a tiny part as a rich old man, Oliver Hardy (without Stan Laurel) plays a bettor who loses his shirt (vast though it is), and Jimmy Gleason's a crisp track official.

THE COMEDY TOAST OF THE YEAR!

COLMAN'S A ONE-MAN RIOT AS THE SMARTEST MAN IN THE WORLD.

CELESTE IS A ONE-WOMAN RIOT SQUAD WHO REALLY SMARTENS HIM UP! IT'S THE BUBBLIEST, FROTHIEST, TICKLIEST MOVIE YOU EVER CELEBRATED!

HARRY M. POPKIN
presents

RONALD COLMAN

in

"Champagne for Caesar"

co-starring

CELESTE HOLM

with

VINCENT PRICE

ART LINKLETTER

and

BARBARA BRITTON

Produced by GEORGE MOSKOV · Directed by RICHARD B. WHORF

Story and Screen Play by Hans Jacoby and Fred Brady

Music Written and Directed by Dimitri Tiomkin

A Harry M. Popkin Production

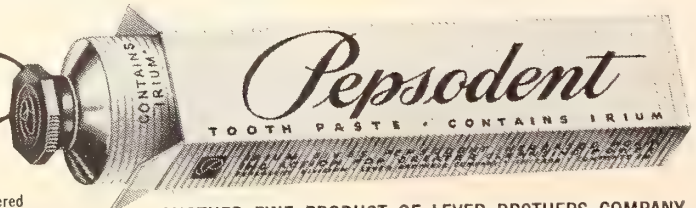
Released thru United Artists

FILM GLUES ACID TO YOUR TEETH !

Tooth decay is caused by the acid that film holds against your teeth. This acid is formed by the action of mouth bacteria on many foods you eat.

PEPSODENT REMOVES FILM ! HELPS STOP DECAY !

When you use film-removing Pepsodent Tooth Paste right after eating, it helps keep acid from forming. It also removes the dulling stains and "bad breath" germs that collect in film.



FILM NEVER LETS UP !

Film is forming on everyone's teeth day and night. Don't neglect it. Don't let decay start in your mouth. Always brush with film-removing Pepsodent right after eating and before retiring. No other tooth paste can duplicate Pepsodent's film-removing formula. No other tooth paste contains Irium* or Pepsodent's gentle polishing agent. Use Pepsodent every day— see your dentist twice a year.

YOU'LL HAVE BRIGHTER TEETH AND CLEANER BREATH when you fight tooth decay with film-removing Pepsodent!

Ask your Dentist!

*Irium is Pepsodent's Registered Trade-Mark for Purified Alkyl Sulfate.

ANOTHER FINE PRODUCT OF LEVER BROTHERS COMPANY

Stage Fright: In Hitchcock's newest thriller, Richard Todd, accused of murder, flees from the London police into the arms of Jane Wyman.

STAGE FRIGHT

Cast: Jane Wyman, Marlene Dietrich, Michael Wilding, Richard Todd, Alastair Sim.
Warners

Alfred Hitchcock's new one is good. It's pleasantly tense—with only small doses of horror—and a large, flawless cast makes watching and listening a delight. Richard Todd (the Hasty Heart star) plays a young man of London fleeing from justice. He gets girl friend Jane Wyman to take him to her father, out on the seacoast, where he, Todd, can lie low. Todd tells Jane that his mistress, musical comedy star Marlene Dietrich, has murdered her husband. He went to Dietrich's house to get her clean clothes (she was a trifle bloodstained) and was seen there by her maid. Now he has to run from the police. There are complications, including Jane's getting a job in Marlene's employ, in order to discover the truth about the situation, and then a charming detective (Michael Wilding) comes into her life, etc. Surprise ending, too. But real joy of this movie is the acting, including that of Alastair Sim as Jane's faintly diabolical father; Dame Sybil Thorndike as Jane's vague, yet bossy mother; Kay Walsh as Marlene's maid; and a lady named Joyce Grenfell, who operates a shooting gallery with the most comical accent you've ever heard. That is, she doesn't operate the shooting gallery with the accent, but she . . Oh, well. Jane and Michael have a wonderful love scene, and Marlene sings a song about all the money she'd have if she wasn't forced to turn down propositions because of being the laziest girl in town. Though maybe the censors will catch up with her before you ever get to see that act.

PERFECT STRANGERS

Cast: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, Thelma Ritter, Margalo Gilmore
Warners

This starts out like one of those FBI-ish documentaries. You see a big office with books of names, and a man calling off every seventh name. All these names are typed up, and rolled around in a barrel (I've left out several steps) and this, you're informed, is how a jury is picked in a big city. Now on to the serious business. On our jury are Gin-

Comtesse de la Begassiere, French Resistance heroine, like so many Frenchwomen, makes Evening in Paris a lovely part of her life. She completes the effect of her lovely clothes with Evening in Paris, applying it at the tips of her ears, at her temples, curve of arms, wrists and neckline, letting the warmth of her skin float its loveliness about her.

Wear Evening in Paris the way French women do*

Suzy Solidor sings and entertains in her Paris nightclub, Club de l'Opera. Her long-lasting Evening in Paris Lipstick goes on smoothly, evenly, matches her complexion and her fashions. Final touch—Evening in Paris Perfume where there is a pulse to keep the fragrance warm, alive!

Evening in Paris Perfume, $12.50 to 75¢
Eau de Cologne, $1.50 to 65¢
Face Powder, in 8 shades, $1.00

All prices plus tax

Comtesse Yves de Saint Seine, connoisseur of art, lavishes her body with stimulating Evening in Paris Eau de Cologne after her bath. Frequently, she bathes her wrists, throat and temples with its fragrance. Even on the warmest days, Evening in Paris Eau de Cologne keeps her refreshed, cool!

Madame Edouard Prat, popular member of Paris society, chooses her delicately scented Evening in Paris Face Powder to compliment her clear, fair skin, but varies the smooth, clinging shades for day and evening—so easy to do with such a choice of flattering colors.

* It's the largest-selling fragrance in France!

Bourjois

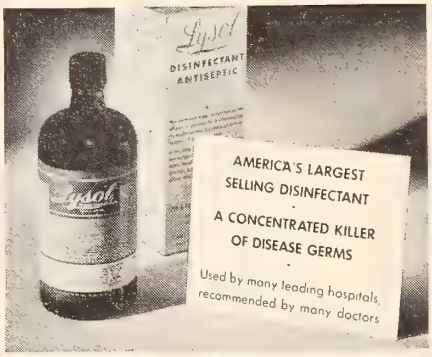
THIS MONTH

SPRING CLEANING

Must Guard Against Germs

MRS. FRANCIS BARR, DALLAS, TEX., declares: "Spring cleaning calls for extra vigilance, with potent 'Lysol' for all cleaning . . . woodwork . . . walls . . . our whole house."

Wise Mothers Fight Infection Risks



MRS. B. VERNON SMITH, BALBOA, CALIF., says: "I use 'Lysol' when cleaning bathroom shelves, all cabinets, other dust collectors, as well as all the routine places."

A CLEAN HOUSE, these clever young mothers realize, is not necessarily hygienically clean. Because many disease germs lurk in ordinary house dust. So these, and other wise mothers from coast-to-coast, add potent, effective "Lysol" brand disinfectant to the cleaning water, daily, to fight infection risks.

"EVERY DAY," they say, they use "Lysol." And in a thorough job like spring cleaning, they use it all through the house. Walls, floors, everywhere. Just 2½ tablespoons of economical "Lysol" to a gallon of water—and house cleaning becomes an important step in guarding family health.

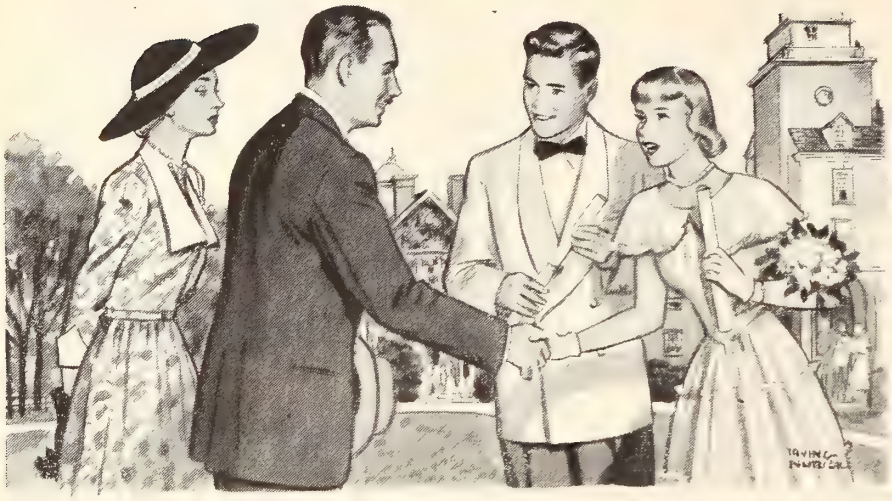
MRS. ELVIN ERICKSON, BAY RIDGE, N. Y., says: "'Lysol' works wonders . . . I add it to the water when cleaning the kitchen, the baby's room . . . and our whole house."

IN YOUR HOME, as you get rid of winter's dust and dirt, fight disease germs with effective "Lysol," as these and millions of other smart mothers, all over America, do.

ger Rogers, separated from her husband, Dennis Morgan, married father of two children. Also 10 other more or less familiar types, such as the society lady (Margalo Gilmore), the amorous traveling salesman (Anthony Ross) and the simple, good-hearted truck driver's wife (Thelma Ritter). This jury's sitting in judgment on a man whose wife has fallen (or was she pushed?) off a cliff. The man's admittedly in love with his secretary, and the state contends that he did away with his helpmeet. Dennis and Ginger, however, fall in love themselves (the jury's locked up for the duration of the trial, so it won't be influenced by outside opinion, and Dennis and Ginger see lots of each other), and they decide the prisoner isn't guilty. According to a studio synopsis, they discover, "it's wholly possible for a married man to fall honestly in love with another woman, and such a love need be no motive for a criminal thing, nor something that necessarily must end in dishonest action." Ginger and Dennis convince the other jurors the guy didn't do it, and he's freed. But Ginger and Dennis suddenly know they can't be happy if they make Dennis' wife and kids sad, so goodbye. I'll love you all my life, it could have been so beautiful, etc. Last we see of Ginger, she's going back to her estranged husband in Cleveland. Lord knows why. I thought she couldn't stand him. There isn't much action in this movie, but there's characterization galore (you get to know all 12 of those quaint jurors) and the whole business is based on an old play by Hecht and MacArthur. I'm told the play was a terrible flop.

THE CONSPIRATOR

Cast: Robert Taylor, Elizabeth Taylor, Robert Fleming.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer



Plot: Aging communist Robert Taylor marries schoolgirl Elizabeth Taylor. Suggested motto: The hand that robs the cradle rules the world. Anyhow, Robert's a respected English officer (subversive, under the skin), Elizabeth's an American girl visiting abroad, they fall in love, get married. Liz doesn't know Robert's a communist, not even when he gets all fixed up with horn-rimmed glasses and a trench coat and goes off into the night with irritating regularity. Liz is a social butterfly; politics bore her. The Communist Party, however, is very resentful that Bob has seen fit to wed without its sanction. "Rub her out," they say coldly, referring to Liz. Oh, what a fix. Shall Bob rub her out, or shall he resign from the Party, or will the Party resign him with a bullet through his head? That's the thanks you get, after being a faithful party worker since you were a mere lad. The real crisis comes when Liz discovers Bob's dastardly other life, and demands that he throw off the scarlet chains that bind him. (Scarlet sounds more dramatic than red, don't you think?) Bob takes Liz on a hunting trip and almost blows her brains out, before she gets the notion that maybe he'd rather dispense with her than his ideals, peculiar as those ideals appear to be. This isn't what you'd call a powerful picture, but Liz is very pretty to watch, whether she's squealing with delight, or horror. She does quite a bit of both.

Story and Screenplay by LAWRENCE KIMBLE • Directed by HUGO FREGONESE • Produced by LEONARD GOLDSTEIN

A UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL PICTURE

Are you in the know?

To make a favorable impression on his family —

☐ Greet them in Spanish ☐ Affect a chawmin' accent ☐ Avoid Slurvian

"Widen Bill tell me you were here? I bin dine to meetcha." You wouldn't say that, *any*way! But in all your chatter, avoid Slurvian—if you'd win favor with this family. It's the language that slurs words, lops off syllables. Like "widen" for "why didn't" . . . "dine" for "dying." Good diction builds confidence. And to stay confident on certain days, do yourself the favor of choosing Kotex: made to stay soft while you wear it. This softness really holds its shape. Keeps you serenely comfortable!

If wrinkles worry her, should she bring —

☐ Just denims
☐ Double-dark sun glasses
☐ Her new organdie dress

Your holiday's better with a bit of la gla*mour*. So if "wrinkle-phobia" tempts you not to pack that dreamy cotton formal—here's news. Now many cottons are crease-resistant. Even organdie can shed wrinkles! And even at calendar time you can be your smooth, unruffled self—with Kotex. For no telltale outlines show. With those flat, pressed ends you're free from outline-phobia! And by trying all 3 Kotex absorbencies you'll find Regular, Junior or Super suited to you.

In removing a bone, should you use —

☐ Your fingers
☐ A napkin
☐ A spoon

Don't use your dinner napkin as a "catcher" or a "curtain"! Get the bone back to your plate quietly, neatly, with your fingers. Learn how to save yourself embarrassment, in all sorts of situations. On "problem" days, Kotex is the answer. That special safety center gives you extra protection—and you're so comfortable with your new light weight Kotex Wonderform Belt. It's made with DuPont nylon elastic—non-curling, non-twisting. Washable. Dries fast!

*T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

More women choose KOTEX than all other sanitary napkins*

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

Woman of Distinction: Innocent victims of a newspaper-promoted romance, astronomer Ray Milland and Dean Roz Russell find true love.

WOMAN OF DISTINCTION

Cast: Ray Milland, Rosalind Russell, Edmund Gwenn, Janis Carter.
Columbia

Roz Russell is dean of a women's college. Got no time for romance. Ray Milland is an astronomer. Over from England on a lecture tour. Janis Carter's a press agent who thinks astronomy's dull. Wants to liven up Ray's tour. So she promotes a newspaper romance between him and Roz, and Roz gets very indignant and follows Ray around smashing him across the face with a large handbag, and love is so terrific. Before they admit they were made for each other, Roz has been drenched by a garden hose, had mud slathered on her face, been taken for a ride in a hot rod. Ray has worn ill-fitting riding breeches, fallen off a broken bicycle, and been shoved into a river. Now, what have I forgotten? Roz has a child she adopted in France, but both Ray and Francis Lederer claim to be the kid's father because they don't believe that adoption story, and they're chivalrous. Jerome Courtland, as a college kid (owner of the hot rod) who thinks Roz loves him, is the funniest thing in the picture. Every time Roz comes near him, he ducks painfully, and cries, "Ah, gee whiz, Dean, cut it out."

STROMBOLI

Cast: Ingrid Bergman, Mario Vitale, Renzo Cesana, Mario Sponza.
RKO

By now, you must have heard nearly everything there is to hear about Stromboli, and there's not much point in my putting my two cents' worth on paper. But anyhow . . I think Ingrid Bergman is pleasantly natural (for the first time in years) as the girl who marries a simple fisherman in order to get out of a European detention camp. I think Mario Vitale is remarkably wonderful as the simple fisherman (especially since he's supposed never to have acted before in his life). I think the story is interesting, up to a point. You can believe in a sophisticated woman's horror when she's brought to live on the island of Stromboli. Barren, rocky, with a live volcano, a little cemetery, a view of the sea, a few fishing boats—that's Stromboli. You can also believe that such a woman, trapped in such a place, would go to any lengths—even attempted seduction of a priest—to free herself. But you—or at least I—find it hard to believe the rather abrupt ending which has Ingrid, in the shadow of the volcano, suddenly repentant, ennobled and, indubitably, saved. Not that she isn't basically decent enough to be saved, just that the conversion comes so fast you'd think they'd been trying to cram the whole thing into a half hour on television.

CAPTAIN CAREY, U.S.A.

Cast: Alan Ladd, Wanda Hendrix, Francis Lederer.
Paramount

Alan Ladd's an ex-OSS officer. In Italy, during the war, somebody betrayed his outfit's hiding place, and now, after the war, Alan's going back to find the guy and kill him. Alan thinks his Italian sweetheart, Giulia, is dead, and this makes him especially vengeful in attitude. In Italy, however, he discovers Giulia (Wanda Hendrix) not only alive but kicking. She's married to a baron (Francis Lederer), but she still loves Alan; her grandma, the Countess, had told her Alan was killed so she'd marry the baron. Since you know Alan and Wanda have to wind up together, figure out who's that betrayer. You got it—husband the baron. Worked with the Nazis during the war, helped Grandma the Countess get Wanda's brother out of a German prison camp by telling the Nazis about the OSS hideout, and the partisans in the village. (Grandma the Countess is the actual betrayer, in cold fact.) Twenty-seven partisans were shot by the Nazis, the night of the double-cross, so nobody in the village is too delighted to see Alan when he shows his face in those parts again. But he sets things straight in fine Alan Ladd fashion. His name, by the way, is Captain Carey, U.S.A.

NANCY GOES TO RIO

Cast: Ann Sothern, Jane Powell, Barry Sullivan, Carmen Miranda.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Gorgeous Technicolor, sweet music, thousands of actors—oh, MGM does give you a ride for your money. Here Ann Sothern's a famous actress, toast of Broadway and everything. Her daughter Nancy (Jane Powell) has aspirations in the same direction, but nobody takes her seriously. Ann falls in love with a new play, goes to Rio with her papa (Louis Calhern) to study it. Jane stays home, meets the man who wrote the new play. Lo and behold, he decides she should play the lead; Ann's too old. Well, Jane doesn't know that Ann's up for the part, and Ann doesn't know that Jane's up for the part. Jane goes to Rio, to have her mother coach her, discovers her mother's reading the same script, and decides to drown her sorrows in marriage with Barry Sullivan. (She met him on the boat coming down.) Sullivan isn't in the mood to get married—until he sees Ann—but everybody figures he's the father of Jane's unborn child. Not that Jane has an unborn child; it's all a lot of misunderstandings. So—Sothern is beautiful, Powell is cute, Sullivan has S.A., and Carmen Miranda never made me laugh more. P.S.: Jane gets part, Ann gets man.

AMAZING SHAMPOO DOESN'T ROB HAIR OF NATURAL OILS

Doesn't destroy precious natural oils your hair needs to be...

PROCTER & GAMBLE'S GUARANTEE

Buy Shasta. Use only once. If you're not overjoyed with beauty results, return unused portion to your dealer and get your money back.

Even dull, dry, unruly hair looks unbelievably softer, shinier, more beautifully groomed, after your first Shasta shampoo. New, improved Shasta doesn't rob hair of its natural oils. That's important because your hair must have these natural oils to be naturally soft, shiny—healthy.

If you're not entirely satisfied with the appearance of your hair, try new, improved Shasta today. See how lovely your hair can look. Remember, Shasta doesn't rob it of its natural oils.

NEW, IMPROVED

SHASTA beauty cream SHAMPOO

Doesn't rob hair of natural oils

There's a long road ahead for courageous Colleen Townsend—a humble road of service to God. Behind her lies her movie career.

BY LOUIS POLLOCK

Colleen's FLIGHT FROM HOLLYWOOD

■ It hung in the window of one of Los Angeles' most fashionable stores early this spring—a white, strapless formal with lovely tulle bouffant around the shoulders. Colleen Townsend, young enough at 20 to ache for it, and with the money to buy a hundred like it, knew she would never wear it.

She knew more than that—she would probably never again in her life be able even to consider buying anything that expensive. Just that morning she had given up her movie career—a career already highlighted by early stardom—to devote herself fully, and for always, to spreading the teachings of Christ. She would need all the money she had saved to complete her religious training. And she was content.

This was last February. A year before, many people in Hollywood had been skeptical when MODERN SCREEN broke the news that Colleen was primarily interested in Christian work, and only secondarily in acting. She had said, "If I felt that it was God's will that I shouldn't be in the movies I would leave them." That was exactly how Colleen did begin to feel a few months ago when she was finishing When Willie Comes Marching Home, in which she is co-starred with Dan Dailey, and Corinne Calvet.

Her problem (Continued on page 87)

your letters . . .

NO MORE MOB SPIRIT

Dear Editor: I am so glad fans are finally beginning to treat the movie stars like human beings! Last month, a popular male star was dining at a hotel here. He was spotted by three big-eyed bobby-soxers. As they made a beeline for him, I thought he'd had his last bite of dinner for the night. But to my relief and amazement, instead of falling all over him, the girls merely said "hello" and told him they'd enjoyed his latest picture! Then they left him to enjoy his dinner!

MARGIE WELCH, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI

BABY TALK

Dear Editor: That story you printed in the April issue about Rita Hayworth, Aly Khan and Yasmin just about made me sick. Honestly, I never saw such a stupid fuss over the birth of a little baby, as if there were anything so unusual about that, princess or not!

MARIANNE DUNCAN, SEATTLE

Dear Editor: Shirley Temple's story, "Bringing Up Susan," in the April issue was one of the best you've ever printed. Really, I was so deeply touched by Shirley's description of her baby's cute behavior that I cried as I was reading it! Shirley certainly is a brave young woman to try so hard to carry on in the face of her disaster. I think she's wonderful, and I'll look forward to future installments of "Bringing Up Susan."

MRS. NORMA GOLDBERG, CHICAGO

LINES ABOUT LIZ

Dear Editor: Why, oh why did you devote so many pages of your magazine in March to Elizabeth Taylor? It doesn't seem fair that one star should get all that attention. I suppose she has a lot of fans, but surely not that many. Please give the other stars a break from now on.

ROSITA GUTIERREZ, HOUSTON

Dear Editor: Your wonderful magazine is even more wonderful since you printed all that grand stuff on Liz Taylor in the March issue, and I love you for it. Liz is my favorite star, and I think she deserved every inch you devoted to her. So do lots of other people. Thanks!

MARIAN JEFFRIES, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

PLEASING PICTORIAL

Dear Editor: I have wanted to write you for some time now to tell you that I think your Modern Screen Pictorial is one of the best, if not the best, features in your magazine. It's so packed with human interest, so full of action, so realistically done in comparison with what most screen magazines try to do in showing what the stars are like in their daily lives, that I want to congratulate you in all sincerity on the fine job I think you're doing.

JOSEPHINE BURNS, BOSTON

INGRID'S BAD EXAMPLE

Dear Editor: I admire the stand writer Arthur L. Charles took on the Ingrid Bergman case in his story in the March issue. It is nice to know that there are those who sympathize with Ingrid without condoning her actions. Perhaps, though, it would be best for the press to drop the whole matter. Then there would be no bad example for the public and less suffering for Ingrid.

NANCY LYONS, NEW YORK CITY

Beauty is my business—

says EVELYN McBRIDE, Stunning Cover Girl

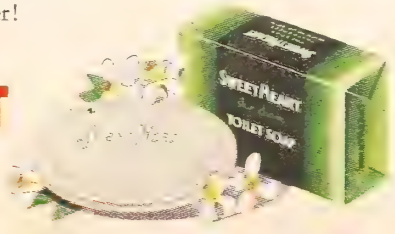
And SweetHeart Care Does So Much for Me!

"For it agrees with my delicate skin—reveals the peaches-and-cream look that photographs beautifully. So it's really SweetHeart Care that keeps my date book full."

9 out of 10 Cover Girls Use SWEETHEART Soap

• All the world looks fresh and young, so be part of the springtime picture! Awaken your complexion's true radiance and dewy-fresh young look the way America's glamorous cover girls do.

For the one heavenly gentle beauty care almost all cover girls choose is SweetHeart Care. Try it and you'll see why! Just one week after you change from improper care, your skin looks softer . . . smoother . . . far fresher and actually younger!



Beauty is my business, too!

• Nadine Koehne, 10 months old, is already a popular model. And every day—like grown-up cover girls—she enjoys a real beauty bath with pure, mild SweetHeart Soap.

SWEETHEART

The Soap that AGREES with Your Skin

• Today get SweetHeart Soap in the new, large satiny bath cake.

You'll be drifting in a cloud!

Remember the delicious dizziness of your first kiss? Or the way a certain voice explodes in your heart . . . or how a bar of music surrounds you with clouds? You'll get that whirling, sparkly sort of lift when you first wear Dream Stuff.

Dream Stuff is a tinted foundation-and-powder . . . magically blended into one brand new make-up! Not a drying cake or a greasy cream. Pat it on with its own puff—it clings for hours! It can't spill in your purse. Four dreamy shades, only 49¢, plus tax.

NEW! TINTED FOUNDATION AND POWDER IN ONE!

WOODBURY Dream Stuff

ONLY 49¢ PLUS TAX

heartbreak for Sinatra?

Gossip comes easy about him and Nancy. But who ever told the truth about Sinatra—the kid who climbed out of the gutter, who fought for the right to live?

BY KATHY O'SHEA

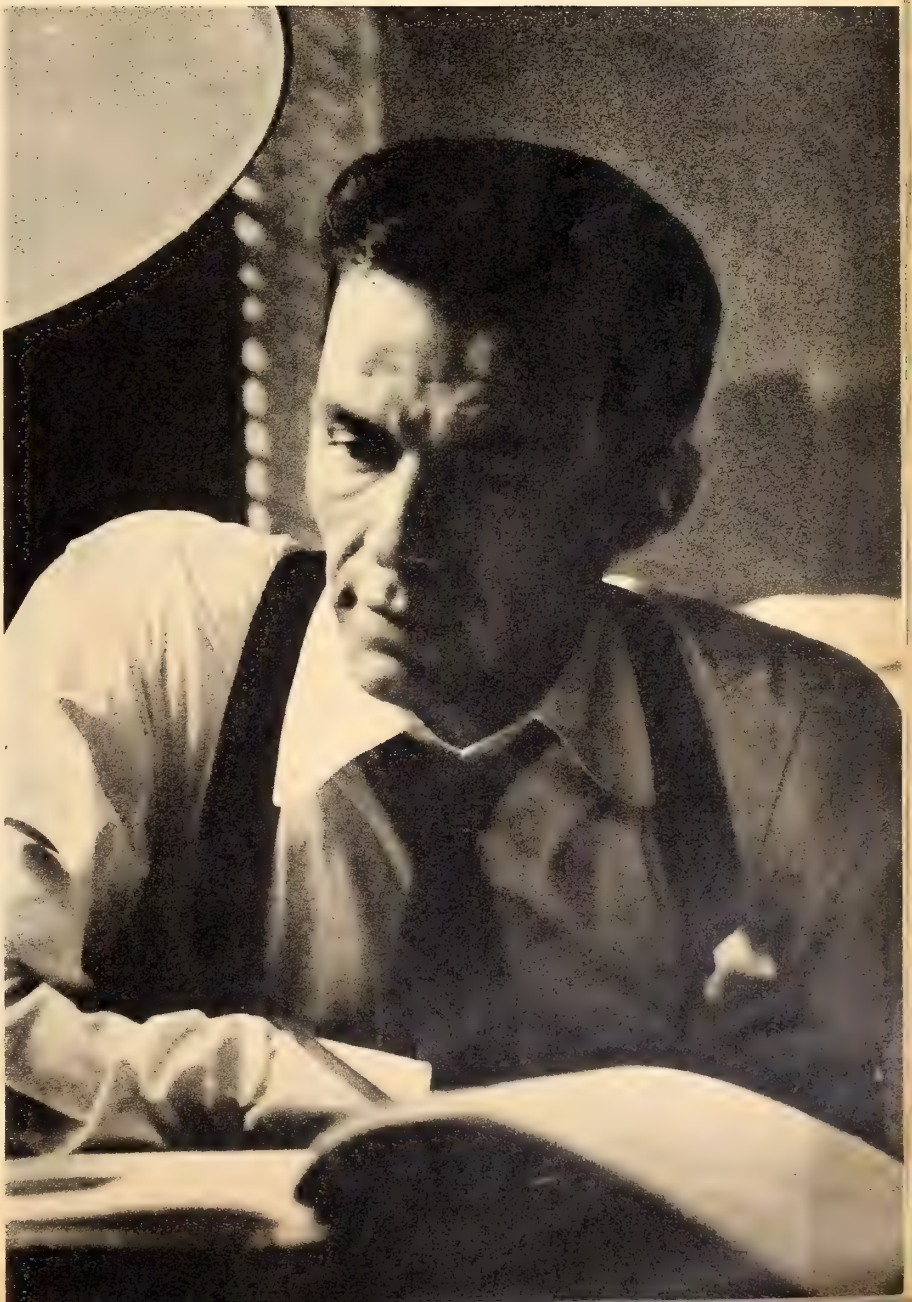
■ You all know Frankie Sinatra, the fighting, loving, wisecracking crooner.

That is, you all know the Frankie Sinatra his publicity paints.

But almost none of you knows the essence of this man, his true character and background. And the reason for this is simply that the truth about him has never been told.

Oh, sure—over the years there've been dozens of stories printed with the claim that here, as last, is the "real" Sinatra. A few of them have, superficially, hinted at the truth. The others have all been phonies.

Why hasn't the true Sinatra story been plainly stated?



The answer is that it's been considered too unbelievable, that it's too raw, too tough, and would violate the legend the public has been taught to believe about him.

But the millions of Sinatra fans who have given Frankie their support and loyalty have the right to know the truth about him and his background and his separation from his wife, for they have been responsible for his success. They are not children to be insulted with storybook falsehoods. They are young men and women entitled to be told the blunt facts.

So, to begin with, let's present the facts about his separation from Nancy.

Frank didn't want that separation. He felt and still feels that the problems of his homelife can be worked out. But Nancy felt that her pride and self-respect called for some sort of direct action.

Whatever you (Continued on page 89)

Ingrid's

Overlooked amid the sensational tumult of the Bergman-Rossellini affair, there stands a small, pathetic figure— Ingrid's daughter, Pia Lindstrom. What is she like, what are her feelings as the mother she so adores is swept from her side in a bewildering storm of scandal? Here, in a moving and illuminating story, is the first complete portrait of this innocent victim.

forgotten child

by Consuelo Anderson

■ The story of Ingrid Bergman's little girl, Pia Lindstrom, must surely have a happy ending. There will be a wonderful reunion with her beautiful mother one day, and after awhile others will make new headlines and the story of Bergman and Rossellini will recede and be forgotten. Pia will proceed with the business of growing up. Bruising her knees roller-skating and getting bubble gum in her hair . . . thrilling to her first orchid and her first kiss . . . falling in love and then out again. And people will say, "Youth is resilient. See—she has forgotten everything."

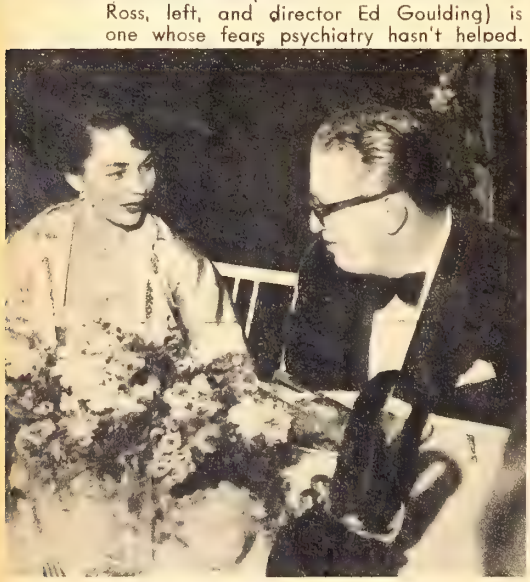
Yes, Pia will recover—but she will never forget what it was like to be 11 years old. Some things you can't forget as long as you live. . . .

There was a bright blue morning last summer. Pia, visiting on a farm in Minnesota, was hurrying through her breakfast, thinking of the sunshine and activity outdoors. There was a rap on the door, and two newspapermen stood there. Masquerading as broom salesmen, they had gotten past the hired hands, and they stood there now facing the small girl in blue jeans. They asked her questions like, When is your mother coming back? and What does your father say about her? and Are you lonely for her? Questions that put a lump in her throat and hot tears in her eyes. Something is wrong, Pia thought, lying wide-eyed in her bed that night. And frightened, she longed for the warmth and comfort of her mother.

Pia and her father were living in the San Fernando Valley with the John Vernons (John is Dr. Lindstrom's close friend and advisor) when he told her the terrible thing: Her mother didn't love him any more, and had fallen desperately in love with Roberto Rossellini.

Perhaps Pia had already guessed the truth. She is an intelligent and sensitive child, and in spite of Lydia Vernon's best (Continued on page 75)

Pia goes shopping with Mother—getting the same thrill from it that all little girls do. This rare photo was taken in Beverly Hills shortly before Ingrid left for Italy.



ROBERT WALKER is Hollywood's outstanding example of how psychiatry can help sick minds if the patient has enough courage.

JEAN ARTHUR (here with ex-husband Frank Ross, left, and director Ed Goulding) is one whose fears psychiatry hasn't helped.

AVA GARDNER, after her divorce from Artie Shaw, sought psychiatric guidance—on his advic Living with the intellectual, emotionally-complicated bandleader had given her a sense of inferiori Now, mental therapy has built up her self-confidence—to the point where she may re-wed Sha

JENNIFER JONES wisely consulted a psychiatrist to be sure she knew her own mind before her happy marriage to David Selznick.

PAT WILDE'S marriage was ruined by film ambitions. But psychiatry, which made her see greater value in homemaking, may reunite her with Cornel and Wendy.

VICTOR MATURE recently took his d Genius, to a mind doctor when Genius ill—and, claims Vic, the doc cured h

Hollywood takes its MEDICINE

by hedda hopper

Stars whose emotional mix-ups threaten to wreck their personal lives are facing facts with the aid of science—and finding happiness.

■ I've wanted to write this story for a long time—ever since one day last year when a young Hollywood star, calm and clear-eyed, sat in my sunny patio and told me how a modern miracle of science had brought him back to a new life and a new career from the very brink of the deep end.

Robert Walker had suffered from a desperate mental illness; now he was back on balance, confident and happy. He was deliberate in recalling every detail of his cure at the Menninger mental clinic in Topeka, Kansas. "I want to tell this straight," he said, "so people will understand that a mental illness is nothing to be ashamed of. There's needless and cruel suffering among the mentally sick. I know, I've been one. Maybe in talking about myself, revealing personal things, I can show people, I can help. . . ."

A few months before, Bob had been fleeing from every question and snarling at every criticism of his rash, unbalanced acts. He was resentful and hostile to almost (Continued on page 101)

DOROTHY MITCHUM persuaded Bob to see a psychiatrist—who warned him to say "no" to phony friends. But Bob learned too late.

BETTE DAVIS began divorce action against William Sherry because of his temper. Now he visits a psychiatrist regularly and he and Bette are back together.

SUSAN HAYWARD and Jess Barker found the way to married contentment through the helpful advice of a marriage psychologist.

No doubt about it,
a girl in the movies
must learn the facts of life.
Here, two experienced and forthright ladies tell with remarkable frankness how Hollywood has taught them what every young girl should know.

FOR GIRLS ONLY

by Elizabeth Scott

■ I've learned about life from men. And most of the lessons I've learned they taught me the hard way.

Once upon a time, a playwright was my beau. His masculine directness and poetic nature seemed very necessary to my happiness. I respected him and I respected his opinions—except one. This particular belief of his I thought was nutty as a fruitcake.

"Women of the theater," he used to say, "so steep themselves in make-believe that they lose the naturalness which made us admire them to begin with."

My hackles would rise whenever he'd make this solemn pronouncement—but I had enough sense (I thought) not to argue with him. I wanted to wait to prove he was wrong.

So six years ago when I did Rain in summer stock, I invited him to the opening. "This'll show him!" I thought. "He'll watch me as that hard-boiled Sadie Thompson, and afterward when he sees the real me he'll understand I'm the same natural, feminine female I always was."

The third act curtain was barely down opening night before I floated to my dressing room, heady with applause, to wait for him. Not only was I eager to point out to him how I'd disproved his theory; I was also anxious to get his reaction to my performance.

I threw open the dressing room door before he even had a chance to knock. "Well?" I asked breathlessly. He gave me a long, studied look. Then, with finality, he said, "You (Continued on page 85)

by Marie Wilson

■ I've been fighting my way up through Hollywood since I was 15 years old, so I know what I'm talking about: Hollywood is a man's town.

And I'm sure your town is, too. All this talk about women's emancipation and equal rights is grade A malarky. Men everywhere hold the whip hand—and most of the time they crack it hard enough to get what they want, when they want it.

It was on my first day in Hollywood, when I got off the street car, suitcase in hand, and walked the three blocks to the realtor's office, that I learned that sad lesson. Or should have.

"Hello," I greeted the realtor, a Mr. Jonah, my eyes shining with all the self-assurance of an innocent 15-year-old. "I want a house that looks down on Hollywood. Not that I'm a snob, you understand. It's because I'm going to be a movie star."

"A movie star!" he echoed mockingly, fixing me with his business-wise eyes. I could feel ANAHEIM written all over me in neon letters. He sized me up, down and across the middle. I had the distinct impression he thought I should go back where I came from via the most direct route.

But he was a business man, so he condescended to show me a big, empty, frame house up on Verbena Street in Hollywoodland. If I'd ever had anything in mind, this was it. And I had to go and open my big mouth and tell him so. I was "delighted" in the living room, "enchanted" in the dining room, "thrilled" in the kitchen. By the time I'd peeked into the first bedroom, I (Continued on page 96)

For the party's first charade, Barbara Lawrence tries to convey the title I Was A Shoplifter to girl teammates Piper Laurie, Peggy Dow and Anne Pearce, who guess gaily. Tony Curtis, Dick Long and Jerome Courtland, of the opposition, watch anxiously.

I love a charade

Think Hollywood parties are all mink and champagne? Not the ones—like this one—that are the most fun!

BY BEVERLY OTT

■ As Western Editor of MODERN SCREEN, I was over on the Universal-International lot on some glamorous business or other when I ran into Anne Pearce. She seemed in an awful hurry.

"Hi!" she gasped. "Can't stop to talk. The gang's coming over tonight. Don't know how I'll ever make it! I work till six, then have to rush home to get things ready for the party."

"Sounds like fun to me," I said. (A genuine Hollywood party! . . . Champagne sipped by a swimming pool . . . Orchids strewn around . . . In the distance, an orchestra of strings led by Jascha Heifetz . . . White ties and tails, dresses down to here . . .) "Sure does sound like fun."

I must have sounded as wistful as I felt. You see, I'm new to Hollywood.

"Say," said Anne, "why don't you come? A wonderful crowd will be there, you should meet them. You must come!"

She grabbed a near-by paper cup, scribbled an address (Continued on page 36)

continued→

Peggy eavesdrops as, before the charades start, the boys think up things to stump the girls. She figured anything was fair in a battle of the sexes—but bearded Douglas Dick caught her.

Barbara and Tony give their version of an ad for Eskimo Pie. They were each other's blind date—blindfolded, they were introduced to one another as Charlie Clift and Hedy Toren.

Jerome tries to catch an olive tossed by Piper (he made it!) as the gang attacks party eats, prepared by hostess Anne Pearce.

Jerome sews away on the third syllable of Superstition Mountain at Anne Pearce's zany party.

Anne has put all her dramatic fire into pantomiming Buccaneer's Girl, and now someone's on the verge of guessing it.

Time's running short as Barbara frantically enacts Peggy—but the girls got it just in time!

The second word of Piper's charade, Sleeping City, has her a bit worried before she manages to put it across to her teammates

Peggy forgot rules and answered Dick's charade. "Don't look now, your brains are bulging," he says.

Peggy peers into the distance and then rows across the floor. "Deported!" shrieks her team—when she's done it five times.

on it, and before I could say, "What shall I wear?" she was on her way.

So a few hours later, back in my apartment, I was on the phone confiding to this friendly girl that I didn't have a mink coat to my closet. Anne laughed and set me straight. "A sweater and a skirt will be most appropriate," she said. "We're going to play charades and it's strictly informal."

It sounded like something that would happen back home. And later, when I found myself sipping coffee—with not a mink coat or a swimming pool in sight—I really felt at home. . . .

Barbara Lawrence, Piper Laurie, and Peggy Dow were at Anne's when I arrived. They were having a bull session on the living-room floor and the main topic of conversation was Barbara's blind date. His identity was a fine mystery. Barbara, who'd been working in Peggy every day of her loanout from 20th Century-Fox on the Universal-International lot, hadn't had much of a chance to get to know the younger set. For all she knew, this guy's name was Charles Clift—as Anne had told her it was. And the gentleman, when Anne had telephoned him, had been equally mystified. He'd been told he had a date with a beauty named Hedy Toren.

Meanwhile, Jerome Courtland had been invited for Piper. Peggy's date was Richard Long. And Anne's partner was her old friend, Douglas Dick.

The gabfest broke up when the doorbell rang. Anne reached for a large hankerchief, folded it carefully and tied it over Barbara's eyes. "This is a blind date that is a blind date," said Anne firmly.

"I should have brought along a seeing-eye dog," Barbara murmured.

When they opened the door, it was like a meeting of great minds—because the boys had had the same idea. There were Jerome and Douglas, leading a blindfolded Tony Curtis.

"Charlie?" said Barbara hopefully.

"Hedy?" queried Tony expectantly.

Off came the handkerchiefs and, if Tony was surprised, he didn't show it. But he was pleased—and he did show it. He clicked his heels, bowed low, and offered his date his arm. "To the Casbah," he said, and the couple swept superbly into the living room.

When Dick Long (Continued on page 82)

At first I prayed for reward, then I prayed for understanding— and I discovered the mysterious ways in which a prayer can be answered.

MY PRAYER WAS ANSWERED

by Loretta Young

■ When I was 15 I saw the play Berkeley Square. I knew it was to be made into a picture at Fox and I immediately decided the leading feminine role belonged to me. I was doing very well in pictures but this part was just what I needed to make me really important. I was under contract to Warners. Fox was going to make the picture. But that was a mere detail. God would take care of that!

I prayed earnestly, specifically for the part. "Dear God, please give me the part in Berkeley Square." Day after day I made this request—adding courteously, "If it be Thy will." I lived with the conviction that the part was mine and waited confidently for my studio to phone the order, "Loretta, go over to Fox. They want you for Berkeley Square."

But as time passed and the telephone call failed to come, I became impatient. Mindful that "the Lord helps them who help themselves," I went to the casting director of my studio. "Hasn't anyone from Fox called for me for the lead in Berkeley Square?"

No one had. "Well, then," I said, "you call Fox. Tell them I'll make a test for it." And shortly afterwards I was told to go to Fox to make the test. I walked on air. The test was a mere technicality. I would be tolerant of such studio gestures. The test made, I waited almost smugly.

Then came the bombshell.

I was totally unprepared for the announcement in the paper. Unbelievingly (Continued on page 95)

SIXTH in a series

Pete checks over his large assortment of socks. Today one of the best-dressed young actors, Pete can remember the time not many ye

Pete's place

Taking his ease in the den of the Brentwood home he shares wit his parents, Pete uses the coffee table as males universally do—c a convenient foot-rest. He designed the house and its furnishinc ago when he could afford few clothes.

It's warm and happy now

where Peter Lawford lives.

But he's known what it means to be out in the cold . . .

BY DUANE VALENTRY

■ Softly, the rain began to fall. Peter Lawford and his father, out walking that autumn night in Hollywood, hurried their steps toward home. As a sudden gust of chilly wind shook drops from the shining leaves onto their shoulders, Sir Sydney pulled closer the collar of his tweed jacket.

"A bit like England, this rain," he said cheerfully.

Peter nodded. Then, whatever he was about to say remained unsaid, as suddenly he stopped short, listening. . . .

His father, a few steps ahead, looked back. "What is it, son?" he asked.

"I heard something. . . . Wait, there it is again!" Peter bounded off into the darkness. His father looked after him, somewhat impatiently. "I don't hear anything but rain," he said.

But then he too heard the little sound. A faint mewing, it seemed to come from the air about them. The General peered into the shadows toward Peter. "It sounds like a very small kitten in a very small place," he murmured. He began, like Peter, to explore the shadows and bushes. The cry was continuous now, and plaintive.

"Sounds as though it's coming from that can there . . . though surely it couldn't be," said Peter, moving towards the vague outline of a garbage can against the wall.

He wrenched off the lid. A tiny black object hurtled into the air, landed in a puddle, righted itself, and began to purr about his ankles. Peter reached down and picked it up. The kitten meowed loudly, twisting in his hand.

"Why you poor, forlorn little creature," said Peter, gently. "How did you ever get in that garbage can, anyway?" And, pulling out a large silk handkerchief, he began to mop the wet black fur. The rain came down, suddenly, in a torrent.

"Let's get home, Dad," yelled Peter, pushing the kitten into the pocket of his jacket and making off at a run.

Today that kitten is a fine, sleek creature, and one of Peter's best friends. When Peter listens to his favorite records, his languid length sprawled out on the red leather cushions in his den, the feline orphan of the rain curls companionably beside him, purring gratitude and contentment. . . .

Like that kitten, Peter Lawford knows what it is to be out in the cold. And he knows that there's no cold quite like that of being Nobody when you desperately want to be Somebody.

Even though the family name's an old and respected one, and the family income as assured as the Bank of England, and you're definitely Somebody to loving parents and friends—all this doesn't help. The (Continued on page 60)

The living room reflects the two worlds to which Peter Lawford belongs. Here are family heirlooms from the Lawfords' bombed-out English home, in contrast to up-to-date things like Pete's tiny radio on the foreground table.

I'm yours!

"He's so right for her," they all said—keeping their fingers crossed. And now, at last, Elizabeth Taylor has given her heart to the man of her choice.

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

■ She stood there in her bridal gown, a dream in white, her face radiant in its glow of happiness.

Elizabeth Taylor was about to be married.

Spencer Tracy walked her down the aisle. He was her father, and he was giving her away. As they reached the altar, and Spence moved away, director Vincente Minnelli called, "Cut."

The company broke—all but Elizabeth Taylor. She remained fixed, her eyes focused on infinity, her mind carried away by the play-acting. She seemed to be saying to herself: "So this is what it's like. This is what it's like to get married."

A woman walked up to her. "How do you feel, my dear?" she asked.

Liz turned her head. "I feel so wonderful," she said, "I could cry."

This marriage ceremony occurred on the set of Father of the Bride which Elizabeth has just finished with Spencer Tracy, Joan Bennett, and Don Taylor. But a real marriage ceremony starring Liz will take place on May 6.

The cast of characters, of course, will be slightly different. For one thing, Conrad Nicholson Hilton, Jr. is scheduled to play the groom.

Twenty-three-year-old Nicky is the son of Connie Hilton, the hotel magnate who owns the Waldorf-Astoria (New York), the Plaza (New York), the Manor (San Diego), the Caribe (Puerto Rico), the Palmer House (Chicago), the Mayfair (Washington, D. C.), the—but why go on? I'm sure you get the general idea: Nicky Hilton, who's been going with Liz since early last December, comes from a family that doesn't have to be too careful about turning the electricity off.

And the attractive Nicky's family believes in young marriages. Nicky's brother, Barron Hilton, is 15 months younger than Nicky and is already the father of two.

A tactful and well-bred young man, Nicky would say nothing about his honorable intentions toward Liz when I asked him prior to the announcement except that "we're going steady, I'm more than fond of her, and anything connected with weddings, engagements, and formal announcements will have to come from her parents.

"I see that my father, when he was in New York, said that Liz and I were scheduled to be married on May 6th—but I can assure you that I'm a whole lot closer to Liz than my father is.

"I don't know. Maybe he has some inside information. Maybe Liz has been holding out on me. But if you don't (Continued on page 98)

A bit of perfume is the last touch as Liz prepares for a date with fiancé Nicky Hilton—who (right) brings his lady orchids.

NO TIME FOR LOVE

Ann Blyth is Hollywood's prettiest puzzle. The whole town adores her—but can't figure out why her unselfish heart is still her own.

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

■ "And now," boomed the announcer, all heartiness and smile, "stepping up to our microphone is that lovely teen-ager, Ann Blyth. Will you say something, Ann?"

"Yes, I will," replied Annie, frowning with mock indignation under the spotlight. "You've made a terrible error. I'm no teen-ager—I'm 21! . . . Still," she added, breaking into a grin, "sometimes I guess I behave like one, at that."

That happened the other night at a Hollywood première. And the same error gets pulled wherever unbelievable Annie floats around Hollywood, trailing girlish sunshine and charm.

But the late Mark Hellinger, as keen an observer as Hollywood ever saw, had this to say of Ann after he got to know her three years ago while making Swell Guy: "Outside, she's as untouched as a convent girl—and inside, she's as wise as a woman of 50."

It's no wonder that the young lady has acquired an extensive knowledge of life. Ann Blyth has been as busy as a beaver ever since she was five years old, building the career that's been her everything—with little time for fun or frolic. At six she played so many kid radio shows she can't remember them and at eight, she sang in grand opera. She made a Broadway stage hit at 13, bucked the rigors of a nation-wide road tour at 14, came to Hollywood the same year, and (Continued on page 92)

Ann got a shillelagh from Mayor Bowron of Los Angeles on becoming honorary mayor of Toluca Lake. She takes the job seriously, happy to help.

Roddy McDowall often squires Ann around—yet, as are the other boys she goes out with, he's on a gay but strictly friendship basis with her.

First he made me forget my sandwich, later he made me forget my woes, now
he's made me forget our love scenes aren't real. Ah, yes—I'm . . .

MAD ABOUT MONTY

by Shelley Winters

■ Back in New York in 1943, I was sitting alongside my girl friend, Lyn Whitney, in a restaurant booth on 45th off Broadway. I was having a minor experience everyone's had a hundred times: I was carefully eating a tomato, cheese, bacon and lettuce triple-decker sandwich—carefully, since because it must be illegal or something to serve triple-decker sandwiches without first slicing them into four collapsible sections, every time I took a bite I had to hold the arrangement just so or all the insides would fall out. This takes concentration.

So I didn't even notice when this guy walked in and parked himself in the booth opposite. But Lyn, who was merely having a double caramel marshmallow sundae, dug her elbow into my ribs.

I jumped and said, "Whub?"

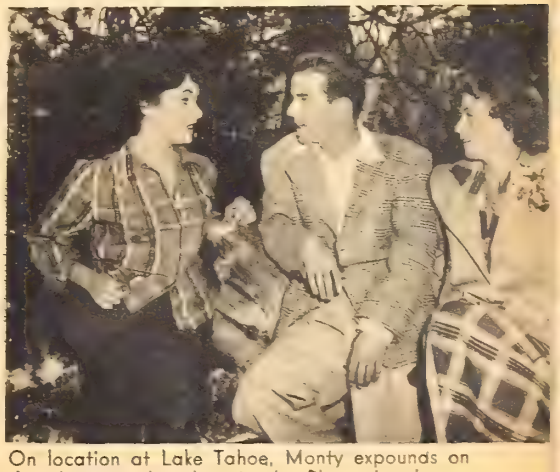
She pointed with her eyebrows. So I turned and looked across at him.

"It's him!" she whispered.

"Yeah!" I whispered back, letting my sandwich fall apart and not caring.

The lad under our goggle-eyed observation was Montgomery Clift.

That, as I say, was back in 1943. Now the scene shifts. We got a scene six years later—October, 1949, at Lake Tahoe in Northern California. Two people are in a rowboat on the lake. The man is Montgomery Clift. The girl is me.



When we are well out from shore, Monty stops rowing. We have a little talk about this and that. Then the boat tips over and we are tossed into the water. I drown.

Now, the ghost of Shelley Winters isn't writing this story! For right after I drowned in the icy waters of Lake Tahoe they fished me out and handed me a towel and some dry clothes.

Then we did it all over again. (Continued on page 72)

A make-up man mops Monty, the hard-working, between the shots of a scene with a deglamorized Shelley Winters for A Place in the Sun.

On location at Lake Tahoe, Monty expounds on the character he plays in the film—who drowns his girl, Shelley, so he can switch to Liz Taylor.

I'm sure he loves me,
and I sure do love him.
I guess he'd cross
the burning desert barefoot for me
if I said please.
And yet—

Sometimes I hate my husband

by June Allyson

■ I wouldn't trade the big lug for any 10 men out of the Union League Club, the Brain Trust or the 4-H Club, but there are times when I have a strong urge to bash him in the head with a piano.

It isn't that Richard's inconsiderate or unkind—the wonderful guy couldn't be that way if he tried. But he is possessed of a few little habits and idiosyncrasies that sometimes make me want to retire to a clothes closet and count to 2,000 while I regain a calm frame of mind.

There is, for instance, his habit of lecturing me to be prompt. Which is silly in the first place because I'm always on time for appointments and am irritated when other people are late. But I understand his motive; it all stems from his desire to be doing something, to be thinking of something every minute. And so it is that he comes into my dressing room each time we have an engagement for the evening.

"Wife," he says, "we are due there at seven, you know, so please try to get yourself ready in plenty of time."

I restrain myself from the obvious answer, which is that it is now only five o'clock, and I have all the time in the world. Instead, I dutifully run the water in the tub and discard my beloved blue jeans, and at 6:30 present myself, dressed to the teeth,

Like all husbands, Dick Powell has his little quirks; like all wives, June Allyson sigh

How can men wear such huge things, anyhow? And why must Dick leave them around for June to trip over?

The guy's got a mania for removing the trees around the house. June hates to see the poor things chopped down—but here gives wifely aid in eliminating one.

Even binoculars can't help her decipher her own bookkeeping code. Dick knew the code wouldn't work. He's so irritatingly right!

in his dressing room. There I find him, in slacks and sport shirt, talking busily on the telephone. He swings in his chair and looks at me, aghast at my trim and waiting presence.

"Why, doll! Dressed already?" he says. "Now, you just wait a minute—I have a couple more phone calls and I'll shower and be with you in a jiffy."

So I go downstairs and sit until after seven o'clock, all bound up in new clothes, and gaze moodily out the window.

Once I conceived what I considered a brilliant idea, and determined to stay in the tub until Richard was dressed and ready. On trial, it turned out rather badly, as I was submerged for more than an hour and finally had to give up for fear of erosion. And then when I finished dressing, he wasn't ready anyway.

Sometimes I think he should have married a telephone instead of me. As it stands now, the accursed instrument is my only rival for his affections. When he comes home at night he kisses me only if I happen to be standing inside the door. It is a hurried little kiss, unworthy of the name, and more like a cold wind going by. He zooms past me and into the den and soon I hear the dial clicking merrily away.

"Hello—Joe?" (Continued on page 100)

nd puts up with all of 'em.

All ready to go out, June has plenty of time for a waltz with Dick's coat while he sings in the bath. He usually hurries her into dressing—then is late, himself.

But, with all his little husbandly flaws, Dick is still to June just about the most wonderful thing in the domestic line since the invention of the vacuum cleaner—and her affectionate feelings carry her away as she rehearses a radio show with him.

Sure, like any young couple who dream of sharing a life, Janie and I had problems. But together, we've made our dreams win through. Now we know . . .

why our marriage will work

by Geary Steffen

■ When Janie and I were married last November, I happened to overhear one of the reporters who was covering the affair talking to his photographer.

He was a youngish, matter-of-fact cynic, this reporter, with the kind of face that very early in life begins to look like a family portrait. I guess he'd covered 50 or a hundred weddings, and no man could blame him for feeling complacent about this one.

"Well, Joe," he said, as the photographer popped his last flash bulb, "this one should last all of six months."

Now, I don't know. Maybe it's fashionable to be skeptical about Hollywood marriages. Certainly, there's enough reason to be. Only somehow, that crack so sandpapered my temperament that for a minute I wanted to grab hold of that reporter and say, "Look, wise guy, you're the kind of heel who gets a big kick out of telling two-year-olds there isn't any Santa Claus."

But then I stopped and thought for a moment—and thinking, I realized how people might come to the conclusion that our marriage was destined to a bitter brevity.

There are few working actresses today who are still married to their original husbands. A fellow like myself may be called "Mr. Jane Powell" any day in the week. Jane earns a whole lot more money than I.

And there are dozens of reasons why any marriage may go on the rocks. But the Jane Powell-Geary Steffen marriage? Never! And I'll tell you why.

To begin with, Jane and I are very much in love, yet we entered marriage not through any adolescent and romantic haze, but after sound and simple reasoning.

Janie and I have known each other four years. I met her first in 1945. Tasie McCarthy, Mike Kirby's sister-in-law (Mike is Sonja Henie's skating partner) introduced us. We took it from there.

When I say we took it from there, I mean we started going around with each other under all sorts of circumstances. Janie knew at the start that I didn't want to spend my whole life on skates. She understood my varying moods. I came to understand hers.

She seemed so honest and down-to-earth, so plain and unaffected that for a while I thought she was putting on. Then, "My father used to manage apartment houses during the Depression," she told me one night, "so that we could have a place to live. So I never had any luxuries."

When a girl tells you something like that, you know she's not putting on or merely trying to make a good impression when she says, "Save your money. I'd rather have an ice-cream soda than go to the Mocambo."

Over the years you exchange confidences with a girl. Janie quickly came to realize that sports meant a good deal in my life. She herself had had no opportunity to learn any. I taught her to skate and ski and ride. She in turn, opened up a whole (Continued on next page)

Good housewife that she is, Janie gives the apartment's linen closet a brisk tidying. Besides linen, many wedding gifts are stored here—for the day when she and Geary have room enough to use them all.

Janie fixes dinner, her favorite domestic duty—cooking has been one of her hobbies for many years. Below: Being a sensible wife, she makes herself beautiful for her husband before he gets home.

why our marriage will work

(Continued from preceding page) new musical horizon for me.

Our engagement lasted 11 months. In those 11 months we saw each other practically every day. It's impossible to camouflage your basic emotions and your natural instincts for that length of time. If Janie weren't the girl for me, I would certainly have found it out in that length of time.

So I'm sure I know my wife and all her strengths and weaknesses. I knew these before we got married. I gathered my information from many sources. For example, one of the best information sources in any studio consists of the people who work with an actress, the extras and grips and electricians.

Lots of times I'd be waiting for Janie to finish a scene and some grip would come up to me and say something like, "You've got a good one in that little girl. Not a false bone in her body." And workers who didn't know of my connection with Janie would tell me out of thin air, "That girl is going to make some guy a wonderful wife."

And she has indeed. She does all our washing. We have no help of any sort. We live in a small apartment. Janie does the cleaning. Mornings when she has to be at the studio by eight, she gets up extra early and fixes breakfast which she leaves in the kitchen for me.

I love Janie and she loves me. Our love is founded on common interest, mutual respect, and combined objective. That's reason number one why our marriage is going to work and last.

Reason number two is that we both have our feet on the ground. I work for the Murrell Brothers Agency in Los Angeles, and I write insurance for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company. The organization pays me a fair salary. It isn't anything compared to what Janie makes, but no other industry can compare salary-wise to the entertainment business—except, of course, in the very top brackets.

I was in the entertainment business myself for several years when I toured the country with Sonja Henie's ice-skating troupe, and I like it and understand it, but I prefer the insurance game even though it pays less. For one obvious thing, I can still have a career in it when I'm old and gray, and how long does the average entertainment career keep a paycheck coming in regularly?

We're a sensible young couple living on a budget that I can afford. I have my pride and so has Janie, and I'm not the kind of husband who would let his wife support him.

Janie and I have worked out a very equitable system as regards finances. We pay and pay alike for everything. It's strictly a 50-50 proposition. We had this understanding before we were married, and Janie has abided by our agreement perfectly.

She's not a girl who has expensive tastes. For example, we bought a lot of our furniture unpainted and then painted it together. It's a whole lot cheaper that way. Janie also makes her own clothes and really knows how to economize on the cooking.

Fortunately, Janie is not a night-club fiend. It costs very little to go ice-skating and to play badminton. When we go dancing, it's not at Ciro's or Mocambo. We go to the Biltmore Bowl or the Ambassador or some other place where I can get away with $5 or $10 for the evening's fun.

Janie and I make believe that she's getting no more than the average secretary's salary. Janie's in the position right now where she could go out and buy a large house and expensive car, but if she did, what would we have to look forward to?

This way, if I work and save, and we buy things jointly, our eventual enjoyment and appreciation will be much greater.

We're also blessed in that we have no in-law trouble. I'm extremely fond of my mother-in-law, Eileen Burce, and, I think, she is of me. After Janie and I returned from our honeymoon, we found that our apartment wasn't yet ready. So we moved into Janie's house. Know what Janie's mother did? Moved right out. Checked into the Knickerbocker Hotel and let Janie and me have the house all to ourselves.

"Newlyweds," she said, "should never be bothered with a mother-in-law cluttering up their home."

Janie's mother and father have been separated since last year, but I get on just as famously with my father-in-law as with my mother-in-law. Paul Burce runs an ice-cream parlor, and Eileen Burce gets a salary from MGM for looking after Janie. I call them by their first names.

Janie is simply crazy about my whole family. When she learned that my father was once a prizefighter—he won the world's championship under the name of Willie Ritchie—she was really overwhelmed. "Why didn't you tell me you were the son of a famous boxer?" she demanded.

"That's simple," I said. "You never asked me."

I have a married sister, Barbara Covington, whose husband runs the fuel and ice company up in Idlewild, California. When we go up to visit her, Janie and Sis just can't do enough for each other. Matter of fact, only a few weeks ago, we went up there to ski, and Janie wound up as the baby-sitter. Barbara has two little boys, and Janie's mad about them.

"Taking care of babies," she says, her eyes twinkling, "gives me practice."

"I know exactly what you mean," I answer, "and what's more I agree." Janie and I both want kids of our own. I'd like our first to be a boy. Janie wants a girl. But of course, we'd both be terribly happy with either.

One night before Janie and I got engaged, we were parked in my Buick, talking about life and love and all the things young lovers talk about. "What do you think," I asked Janie, "breaks up most marriages around town?"

Well, we sat and thought that one out. Four reasons came quickly to mind: career trouble, financial trouble, in-law trouble, and fading-love trouble.

We also listed such other causes as selfishness, cruelty, lack of manners, indifference to the other's aims and interests, laziness, impatience, and lack of consideration.

After that, we took inventory of ourselves, but honestly. The only obstacle that stood in our way a year ago was the financial one. I didn't have a job and a future. That lone problem has now been solved.

So now Janie and I are Mr. and Mrs. Geary Steffen, a very happy married couple. We'll be that always. THE END

modern screen's hollywood pictorial

■ Tearfully happy as she embraces a jumbo token of esteem from friends and neighbors, Janet Leigh on the opposite page has just reached the high point of a recent flying visit to her home town of Stockton, California. She hadn't been back since the day three years ago, when she took off for Hollywood to become a movie star—and one of Stockton's fondest boasts. Among the affectionate celebrations, formal and informal, that the home folks put on for her, was a testimonial banquet, complete with the mayor, educational and business big wigs, and that gilded key to the city. In other ways, too, Janet found her native city extremely nice to come home to—as you'll learn in detail from the story and pictures on the following pages.

continued→

Away three years, Janet Leigh returns as a movie star to her home town of Stockton, California, with her parents, Fred and Helen Morrison.

janet's homecoming

by tom carlile

■ Stockton, a friendly northern California city of about 75,000 people, is bursting with civic pride these days. It has the only inland seaport on the West Coast. Which is fine. It has the beautiful College of the Pacific. Which is splendid. And it has a famous and pretty native daughter known to the world as Janet Leigh. Which is wonderful!

Janet, greatest reason for the city's pride, is known to Stockton as Jeanette Morrison. Most of the citizens can remember her as a pretty little girl who, dressed in a gay, fur-trimmed skirt and red booties, led the Stockton Scouts band on every festive occasion. A good many others, who went to high school or college with her, remember her as a nice looking teen-ager who blossomed into a lovely young woman before she went away to Hollywood. In short, they remember her as a home-town girl, (Continued on next page)

Her first night home, Janet brings herself up-to-date on her boyfriends and their new wives at a party given her by fo College of the Pacific classmates at the Naval Officers' C entimental stop before the house they lived in is for Janet and her ents the high point of their early-morning sightseeing tour of ckton's streets. Janet points nostalgically to her old bedroom.

Janet broadcasts with Eddie LeBaron, the College of the Pacific All-American football hero, to open officially the town's March of Dimes drive. She excitedly fluffed several responses to announcer Arthur Farey.

lergrad Eddie takes alumna Janet for a tour of the COP campus—ch, though it's grown some since she was there, still holds countless nories, and is still "the most beautiful school in the world" to Janet.

On their way to a reception at Janet's sorority, Alpha Theta Tau, Eddie gets Janet to stop by with him at his Omega Phi fraternity house—he wants the other brothers to turn green with envy. And do they!

et meets some new sorority sisters as Mrs. Velma Turner, the house her, conducts her down the receiving line. It's easy to see why the rority has a reputation for pledging the school's prettiest girls.

Finding time to visit an old Stockton friend, Marie Boyle, and her husband, Janet patty-cakes happily with their little girl—who, like the children of most of her young friends, she'd never met.

continued ➤

Janet Leigh and All-American Eddie LeBaron speak up for the March of Dimes at Stockton's Fox Theater. The pair inspired big donat and they still can't quite get over feeling a little amazed when she appears on the local screens as a full-fledged movie star.

As a rule, it doesn't take long for glamorous Hollywood to completely overshadow the average star's home town. In no time at all, the place she hails from has become just another small item in her press biography. And if the star ever goes back home, the celebration usually turns out to be an artificial affair in which both the townspeople and the star find themselves behaving with staid formality and uncomfortable ceremony.

But when Janet Leigh went home, it wasn't that way at all. Not that Stockton didn't do her honor. If her welcome had been any greater, Janet perhaps couldn't have stood it. As it was, the welcome made her easily the happiest girl in California that day. . . .

Janet had just finished a very emotional scene in Jet Pilot when the letter arrived. John Wayne, who plays her jet-pilot husband in the movie, had just discovered that she was a foreign agent, stealing his secrets as she cooed sweet nothings in his ear. It had required several extra takes for Duke to hit her convincingly. So Janet was pretty tired when she settled down in her dressing room to read the letter. It was from a college chum, Marian Jacobs, and it said:

"Dear Jeanette: I find that I am on the March of Dimes Committee again, and I was wondering if you could come (Continued on page 77)

JANET LEIGH GETS THOROUGHLY KISSE

That night, at a banquet for her, Janet s autographed photos plus kisses for the dri Chancellor Knoles of COP is the first custom

After autographing for an hour in the theater lobby, Janet gets a lift from her Marine Guards—a souvenir hunter has swiped her shoes!

CITIZENS OF HER HOME TOWN WHO PAY FOR THE DELIGHTFUL PRIVILEGE WITH CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE MARCH OF DIMES.

Carlos Souza, San Joaquin's sheriff, gets a good grip on himself and Janet to display his simple yet effective technique.

Football star John Poulous collects a kiss for a shy business man. (Taking no chance on losing them again, Janet holds on to her shoes.)

Another COP gridiron hero, John Rohde, is the other enthusiastic kiss-collector for bashful purchasers. This is much more fun than football!

hollywood pictorial continued ➤

IT'S ALL IN WHAT YOU SEE—BUT LINDA DARNELL

■ The hands at the right do not belong to a pair of people playing some sort of kids' game. They are those of Linda Darnell and Valentine Becker, California State Vocational Rehabilitation Officer for the Deaf. He's giving her a lesson in sign language—a means of communication she employs in her role in 20th Century-Fox's No Way Out. No, Linda isn't doing a Johnny Belinda in the movie. But in it she and co-star Richard Widmark must use sign language to talk with Widmark's deaf-mute film brother, played by Harry Bellaver. Mr. Becker, acting as technical adviser, has been instructing them. Linda has been an earnest student. "I'm so afraid I'll forget the signs," she reported, "that I keep practicing wherever I am. When I got home the other night and my husband asked me something, I found myself trying to answer with my hands. And I caught myself doing it to a salesgirl in a store the other day!" Still, it's a handy thing to know.

IT'S ALL IN WHAT YOU HEAR—BUT KIRK DOUGLAS READS HIS LINES WITH GESTURES

Performing for the eye as well as the ear, Kirk warms to his role as he stars in a "Suspense" radio drama.

Kirk portrays a supermarket clerk who's falsely accused by the butcher of carrying on with his wife. Here Kirk defends himself—and begins to perspire a bit.

Kirk locks himself in a refrigerator to escape the furious butcher—who then accidentally kills himself. Kirk knows he'll be blamed.

HAS TO LISTEN ATTENTIVELY TO LEARN THE ART OF SPEAKING SIGN LANGUAGE.

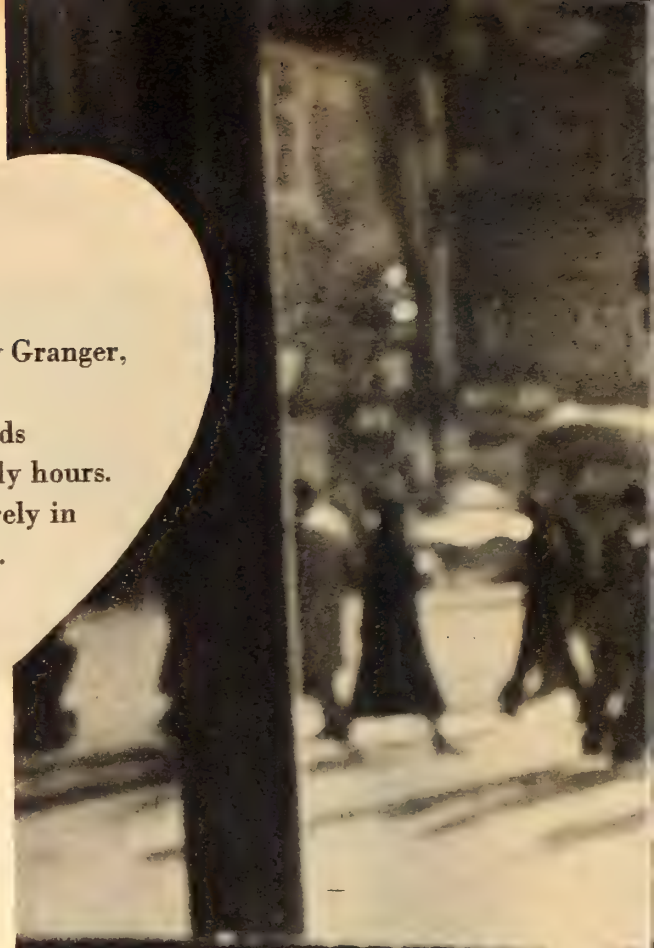
Linda gets a sign-talk lesson from Valentine Recker, of the California Department of Education, for her role in No Way Out.

Linda, long noted for her expressive hands, makes rapid progress. In the film she plays a normal character who must communicate with a deaf-mute.

Linda soon can hold simple conversations with her teacher—and, at home, she forgetfully tries sign language.

AND FACIAL EXPRESSIONS, EVEN ON A RADIO SHOW.

■ When Kirk Douglas starred recently in one of CBS's "Suspense" radio plays, he gave the studio audience as well as the far-flung listeners at home a fine time.



The half-hour drama was called "The Butcher's Wife," and it was quite up to the grisly standard of enjoyable horror that "Suspense" maintains. Kirk played Harry, a supermarket clerk, who after hours one evening is chased about the premises by a knife-wielding butcher, who incorrectly thinks Harry has been making passes at his wife. Harry ducks into the meat refrigerator, slamming the glass-panelled door—through which he sees the charging butcher slip and impale himself on his knife. So there's poor Harry, locked in the icebox—with, it develops, the dead body of the lady in question. Clearly, he'll be charged with two murders he didn't do. End of drama.

As these pictures taken at the broadcast show, Kirk's performance was quite a sight to see.

I used to have a crush on Farley Granger, but that was before we held hands for three heavenly hours. Now, I am merely in love with the guy.

BY CHRISTOPHER KANE

My heart stood still

■ A while ago, I became the movie critic for MODERN SCREEN, and developed a very blasé attitude toward movie stars.

"Stars," I would say in a bored voice. "I make 'em and break 'em every day." (None of the people to whom I said this believed me, but it's one way of amusing yourself if you're a movie critic.)

The chink in my armor developed the night I saw Farley Granger in Roseanna McCoy. I had to be carried out.

"Oh, something I ate," I said airily, gasping between words. If that doesn't sound airy to you, never mind. A while later, I saw Farley Granger in They Live By Night, and had the same experience. "Nonchalance at all costs," I muttered, as RKO officials poured water on my head.

So to make a long story even worse, when MODERN SCREEN assigned me to do a story on Farley Granger, my heart ——— ———. (See title of this story.)

However, I kept my dignity. "Why me?" I said, fixing the editors of the magazine with a fishy eye.

"Oh, no special reason," they said. "Except you have 47 pictures of Farley Granger on your bedroom wall."

"It's to cover up the (Continued on page 99)

Lovely lady... Lovely hair

She's a "Rayving Beauty" now!

"Rayve Home Permanent is my wave from now on!" says Terry Thomas

PROMISING NEW YORK MODEL

"I'm ready for the camera any time since the day I had my Rayve Home Permanent. It left my hair so lustrous and softly waved right from the start. As natural as could be. Believe me, that's important to any woman!"

WANT TO DO YOUR HAIR LIKE MISS THOMAS? Write Janet Wakefield, Dept. D, Pepsodent, 80 Varick St., New York 13, N. Y. for free, easy-to-follow instructions.

No other is faster... yet the Dial-a-Wave makes it so sure! Now you can wave your hair in much less time, yet be sure of getting exactly the amount of curl you want! Rayve's exclusive Dial-a-Wave gives you the fastest waving time for your kind of hair. There's no guesswork!

A Rayve wave lasts longer... yet looks lovelier from the start! It will shimmer with highlights... and almost set itself! No frizzy ends, ever... for Rayve's improved waving lotion is so much gentler, safer for hair. And because it's timed individually for you, your Rayve permanent stays lovely weeks longer!

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Accepted by the Committee on Cosmetics of the American Medical Assn.

COMPLETE RAYVE KIT $2

RAYVE REFILL $1

WHAT ABOUT CURLERS? Use any plastic curlers ... for Rayve's lovelier results come from the gentler solutions and individual Dial-a-Wave timing.

Rayve Home Permanent

ANOTHER FINE PRODUCT OF LEVER BROTHERS COMPANY

P.S. KEEP THAT "RAYVING BEAUTY" LOOK BETWEEN WAVES... with Rayve Creme Shampoo. Not a soap... gets hair cleaner!

pete's place

(Continued from page 39) nagging, devilish, driving imp within isn't satisfied. Ambition, with one goal in view is a whip-wielding master and a tyrant until that goal, and none other, is achieved. Peter Lawford, from childhood on, was driven by an ambition sparked by the strong feeling—almost an obsession—that he could act.

Today, Peter is a Somebody—in his own right and in the way he chose. But having his cup filled with the wine of fame, after thirsting for it for so long, has left him a bit breathless. And adulation is a heady thing. But Peter learned a few hard lessons in humility a while back that should enable him to withstand its intoxicating influence.

Drab and dingy, cheap and cheerless were the only rooms Peter could afford when he was an usher in the Westwood Village Theater. Watching the guys and girls up there on the screen doing what it seemed to him he was born to do, he often had to force himself to snap out of his dreams. After all, he'd reason, he had a job, he could pay his room rent—he was lucky. Real lucky. Patience, Pete learned then, was a virtue not to be despised. Yet, back in his drab quarters, some of the lustre of dreams that refused to fade out lent the ugly rooms a certain glow. . . .

In the beautifully-furnished and comfortable home which Peter Lawford shares today with his parents in Brentwood there are many signs of real appreciation for the security he's achieved. There are signs, too, of the tradition-steeped past that is his family background, and which forms further acute contrast to the tempo of his life today.

among their souvenirs . . .

Although most of the family possessions were bombed-out in England during the war, a few treasures survived—and they make islands of Old World charm in the snug and attractive modern home. Two small tables in the living room came from the ancient Pekin summer palace of the Empress of China—as did a wonderful 58-piece jade collection, of which only a solitary gold-figured piece remains.

A 13th-Century French Bhul clock, sparkling with exquisite color and design, is atop the spinet piano, where Peter's mother may have her favorite "Blue Danube Waltz" on the music rack. Around the room are photographs of such world figures as the King and Queen of England; the Aga Khan, an old friend of many years; the former King and Queen of Belgium. There's a water color of Peter's father—a retired British general who, as a young officer, fought in the Boer War—in full military regalia.

Contrasting these objects are Pete's up-to-the-minute record collection; the tiny, streamlined radio that was a gift from fans on a recent personal appearance tour, and the bronze bust of Peter done by the nationally-known sculptor, Gladys Bush.

His parents, Lady Lawford and Sir Sydney, are certainly as attractive folk as can be found in Hollywood. Strong ties of affection and respect join the three.

"Peter designed this house and its furnishings," says his mother with the pride the two parents feel in their boy who overcame obstacles of ill-health, family taboos and the disdainful cold-shouldering of producers before succeeding in the career on which he'd set his heart. Long ago they gave up any sense of distaste concerning his heart's desire, realizing that if this were the thing with which his happiness was bound up, they could only pray he'd make the grade.

Far removed (Continued on page 62)

She packed her small toothbrush and seized a large lollipop—she knew
she was going,
though she didn't know where, for Hawaii to her sounded like "bye-bye."

Bringing up susan

by Shirley Temple

Here's the second charming story from Shirley in her series about her and her tiny daughter—a little girl who is, in so many delightful ways, exactly like other little girls you know. And once again Shirley indirectly reveals herself—as a young mother who is not allowing her own recent tragic experiences to cloud in any way her daughter's sensible and happy upbringing.—THE EDITORS

■ For the third time, Linda Susan had untucked the skirt of my grey dress which I had just neatly folded into my suitcase. The first time she did it I thought it was a game. When she did it again while my back was turned, I had warned her, "I wouldn't, Linda Susan." But when, unlike her usual self, she ignored my warning, I became curious about what she was up to. And as I tucked in my dress for the third time—I discovered she had pushed her tiny toothbrush beneath the dress! It was her own little share of packing for our trip to Hawaii.

When I first told her that as a second-birthday present for her, Grandpa was taking her, Grandma, Linda Susan's nurse, Mrs. Halversen, and me to Honolulu for three weeks, it hadn't made much impression on Linda Susan. Beautiful-sounding names like Waikiki and Lanakaoi didn't mean anything to her—but Hawaii sounded like "bye-bye." So as we packed she knew we were going some place, and she intended to help with the preparations by bringing along a very necessary —and very cherished—item: her toothbrush.

Linda Susan's affection for her toothbrush dates back to last September when she first got acquainted with a habit most children dislike, brushing teeth.

Until last fall I used to do the brushing for her, and I don't think she liked it any (Continued on page 71)

Linda Susan is a sleepy girl as she and Shirley wait to board the plane for Hawaii. She soon perked up and was the life of the party on the trip—her birthday gift from Grandpa.

DANGEROUS CURVES AHEAD...

in a Catalina

Left: Bow Peep in Laton taffeta. $11.95

Right: Shirred, slim Laton taffeta. $11.95

Both have straps for swimming.

LOOK FOR THE FLYING FISH

Write for folder of other Catalina styles, and name of nearest store. Catalina, Inc., Dept. 612, Los Angeles 13, California

(Continued from page 60) from the Peter Lawford who so often makes headlines as a youthful Don Juan of the Ciro-Mocambo circle is the tumble-haired, be-sweatered fellow who daily says family prayers in his home with his mother and dad—a Lawford custom of long standing that is faithfully followed.

Last month Peter Lawford, the Ronald Colman of tomorrow, signed a new long-term contract with his studio, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It looks as if Peter, no mere flash in the pan, is on the screen for keeps, and his studio is building him that way. From now on there will be less "playboy" and a lot more dignity in his publicity.

On his recent 10-weeks' personal-appearance tour of most of the nation's large cities, both Pete and his studio were surprised at the wild reception he met everywhere. Surprised, because while response of movie-goers to Pete has always been healthily active, it wasn't known to be of the "Oh, Frankie!" variety until he met the crowds face to face. In every city, they mobbed him and stormed theaters where he appeared with his picture, The Red Danube. At the Capitol in New York City, where he did a comedy routine and dance, it was necessary to schedule 72 shows a week to take care of the lined-up bobby-soxers.

On the same bill was the veteran comic, Jerry Lester, who shook his head as he watched the irrepressible throngs gang up on Peter. "I've worked with a lot of movie celebs in my time," he said, "but I swear I haven't seen anything like this in a long, long while! Not since the days when Sinatra first made them swoon in droves."

family black sheep . . .

To Peter's staid British kin, the world of theater was a world apart and alien, and the idea of any scion of the Lawfords doing a session of comic patter and jitterbugging would have met with reactions of horror. As would the cry, "Hi, Loverboy!" which usually greeted Peter as he emerged from stage doors into the myriad clutches of passionate autograph-seekers.

It was a weary young man who returned home to Brentwood to catch up on a few hundred hours of sleep and sunshine.

The pleasantly English-hedged home is comfortable but a bit small for the three Lawfords. Recently Pete decided to put aside certain savings for a bachelor wing for himself. Maybe one or two rooms—a place to bring friends late at night where, without disturbing Peter's parents, they could hear the latest King Cole or Billy Eckstine recordings on which he dotes.

"Two or three thousand ought to do it," decided Pete. Then he got estimates.

"My plans evaporated fast," said Pete ruefully, "when I found I couldn't get anything built for less than $8,000. That seemed a little steep. Actually, I'm not home much, anyway—so I guess we'll manage a while longer with our 'cottage,' as Mother calls it."

Pete is likely to be home even less since the success of his tour. The studios have decided there is no better way to sell a picture than to send its stars on the road.

One of the cities on Peter's tour was Washington, D. C. He had no sooner established himself in his hotel than, as usual, the phone began to ring. His friend and secretary, Peter Sabiston, answered it. He listened awhile, gravely, murmured a polite thank you, and hung up. He turned to Lawford.

"Well, what d'you know?" he said. "That was a personal invitation from the Russian Embassy to a cocktail party to meet Vishinsky!"

The two looked at each other. Very nice—but after all, Pete was in town to ballyhoo his picture, The Red Danube, and there was no sidestepping the fact that this was an anti-Communist film. What did one do in such a case?

So Sabiston got on the phone. Called the British Embassy and found the British Ambassador would be present—it would be quite proper to go. Checking elsewhere, he got the same answers.

So Peter Lawford went, and had an interesting time, and met Mr. Vishinsky—all quite without strain, while up the street, a scant half-block away, theater lights boldly announced his presence in The Red Danube—and its theme.

In Hollywood, the English Peter's friends are, among others, the very American Van Johnsons and Gary Coopers—as well as many students, boys and girls, from nearby UCLA.

Occasionally Peter will entertain, with his parents, at a small, formal dinner at Romanoff's. But usually his parents do their own entertaining while he's off with his crowd—at the beach, for volley ball, or at the many University dances, where the presence of a movie star doesn't excite as much interest as any football name. And there is tennis, at which Peter is quite expert; and going to football and baseball games—he's a fan of both. Recently Peter got himself a green jeep, and finds it swell for rocketing to the beach and studio.

"Next thing I've planned," he says, "is to take up skiing, something I've always wanted to learn."

One thing he doesn't plan for the near future is marriage. Although his name has been coupled with more glamorous femininity than any other five male stars, there isn't, as his fans know, any particular One. Not right now, there isn't. Still, next week could be a different story.

charmed circle . . .

Columnists have been making much of Peter's interest in the international charmer, Sharman Douglas, daughter of our ambassador to the Court of St. James and friend of Princess Margaret Rose. Peter and Miss Douglas have had several Hollywood dates and he has been a guest of the Douglases at their Arizona ranch. While there, he flew back to Hollywood to pick up a present for Sharman—a gold wrap-around bracelet set with diamonds. As Louella Parsons observed, "engagements have been popped on a lot less evidence—in Hollywood, at least."

But, when Peter has been asked when he'll quit the fast-diminishing Hollywood bachelor list, he has answered emphatically, "Not before I'm 30." After all, he's as yet barely used to the feeling of the solid fact of security after those long and anxious years.

Preparing his own breakfast of tea and eggs and toast before dashing off to the studio these mornings, Pete will remember those far-off days when he made $15 a week, and the bare rooms and motels that went with it—when he had preceded his family here and was hanging on by sheer persistence to his Dream.

Or perhaps, as he tans his lithe body in the little, grassed, walled-in patio, Pete thinks of more pleasant memories—all the earth's elegant corners he knew as a child and adolescent, when the Lawfords traveled to the Riviera, Paris, Palm Beach.

Some kids have all the luck? No, not when that hankering is going on inside you, when the only skies that look blue are the remote and seemingly impossible skies of a place called Hollywood.

Under those skies at last, and knowing he belongs, Peter Lawford is enjoying the satisfaction of having reached the goal he set himself—and enjoying every minute of the hard work it entails.

He doesn't plan too much the details of the future. This is it! He's found his place.

THE END

Dream girl, dream girl, beautiful Lustre-Creme Girl

Hair that gleams and glistens from a Lustre-Creme shampoo

Tonight!...Show him how much lovelier your hair can look...after a

Lustre-Creme Shampoo

Exclusive! This magical secret-blend lather with LANOLIN!

Exciting! This new three-way hair loveliness . . .

Not a soap! Not a liquid! But Kay Daumit's cream shampoo with lanolin. Jars: $2, $1. Jars and tubes: 49¢, 25¢.

1 Leaves hair silken soft, instantly manageable . . . first wondrous result of a Lustre-Creme shampoo. Makes lavish, lanolin-blessed lather even in hardest water. No more unruly, soap-dulled locks. Leaves hair soft, obedient, for any style hair-do.

2 Leaves hair sparkling with star-bright sheen. No other shampoo has the same magic blend of secret ingredients plus gentle lanolin to bring out every highlight. No special rinse needed with Lustre-Creme Shampoo.

3 Leaves hair fragrantly clean, free of loose dandruff. Famous hairdressers insist on Lustre-Creme, the world's leading cream shampoo. Yes, tonight, show him a lovelier you—after a Lustre-Creme shampoo!

Are you always Lovely to Love?

Suddenly, breathtakingly, you'll be embraced . . . held . . . kissed.

Perhaps tonight.

Be sure then, that you are always lovely to love; sweet and alluring. Never uncertain. So many lovely girls depend on Fresh Cream Deodorant because it is completely effective —stops odor—stops perspiration worries completely. Fresh is different from any other deodorant you may have tried—creamier, more luxurious, and really effective.

Test Fresh against any other deodorant—creams, messy liquids, hit-or-miss sprays or powders. You'll never change to another once you've begun to use Fresh Cream Deodorant.

New! Here is a Fresh Cream Deodorant in a handy new tube for those of you who find a tube more convenient.

wardrobe for a summertime sweetheart

by connie bartel, fashion editor

■ Love is lovely all the time—but if it happens to happen in summer, it's most delicious of all. June, moon, and so on. The scent of wisteria, or maybe honeysuckle. A dance tune you'll (both of you) never forget. You know.

In this issue we have rounded up a wardrobe calculated to give romance a gentle shove. Our chosen fashions are all designed to make you look pretty and feminine and as though your phone rings constantly. More cagily, they have been carefully selected to cover practically every occasion which could possibly turn up.

We begin, therefore, with the darling sunback Mona Freeman wears opposite. Suppose you meet him sunning on someone's terrace? Or, suppose it happens while you're dancing? Here's your dress, either way . . . bare-shouldered and bewitching.

On pages 66 and 67 we offer two cute cottons that could turn up absolutely anywhere. The pastel's for your demure moods; the dotted camisole is rakishly what-the-heck!

Page 68 features sweaters and skirts, which you naturally can't live without—and which men can't seem to see enough of. On page 69, a super-slick shantung suit—for moments when you want to look woman-about-town. And on page 70—denims, from hat to sandals, if your guy likes to date his girl outdoors. All in all, we think we've covered every boy-girl situation from beach to balcony, and from sun-up to midnight. Why don't you just buy all of them, and bank on a beautiful summer?

Mona Freeman bares her shoulders in pink pique

Mona Freeman, currently in Paramount's Dear Wife, looks like the typical summertime sweetheart all the boys dream about. She shows her pretty shoulders in a pale pink pique sundress which can go sunning or dancing with equal grace. The bodice is lightly boned, the skirt swings gently, and the little matching jacket has a tiny square neckline and buttons snug to the waist.

Waffle pique, also in blue, maize or aqua. Junior sizes 9-15. By Betty Barclay. $8.95.

All fashions this issue at The Hub, Baltimore. How to buy, page 72.

Pumps by Capezio, Necklace by modern screen

fashions

the cutest girls

Sweet and smooth
as a Jordan almond.
Pale lavender dress,
with palest pink portrait
neckline and inset sleeves.
Pima broadcloth in blue with pink neckline, pink with blue, grey with maize, maize with grey.
Sizes 9-15. $10.95.
By Miss Peggy Ann Jr.
At The Hub, Baltimore.
How to buy, see page 72.

deLill bags
Grandoe gloves
Coro jewelry
Capezio shoes

wear Cotton

Look, ma, no sleeves!
The smash hit camisole dress—lime-dotted navy over lime inset bodice and pleat—with a cummerbund to brag about your waist.
Sanforized broadcloth.
Also navy with coral;
brown with aqua. 9-15
By Perky Frox . . . $10.95.
At The Hub, Baltimore.
How to buy, see page 72.

proportioned skirts

■ Big boon to sweater-and-skirt girls. Proportioned skirts—for happy hemlines—whether you're tiny, tall, or medium. Look: the trio above are all wearing the same skirt in the same size 12—yet each skirt hits each girl in exactly the right places. Proportioned skirt in tall, medium and short lengths, also sweaters, at The Hub, Baltimore. See page 72.

THE SKIRTS: Washable Soap 'N' Water butcher rayon with snug-tex waistband. Cherry, aqua, beige, green, navy, toast, black. Sizes 10-18 short; 10-20 medium; 12-20 tall. $4.95. By College-Town.

THE SWEATERS: Button front, slip-on, or plunge. Cotton-and-rayon boucle. Flame, lime, blue, maize, oyster. $3.95. By Little Miss English.

shantung pocket suit

Four pockets where they'll do the most good: two high on the breast, in the French manner; two curved at the hips, to cut a figure. A super summer suit for street, travel, dates. Silky rayon shantung. White, gold, pink, blue. Jr. sizes 9-15. Misses' sizes 10-18.

By Joselli . . . . . $22.95.

The Hub, Baltimore.

How to buy, see page 72.

Agnew necklace
Jana bag
Grandoe gloves

denim from head to foot

Beautiful, dutiful denims—ready for anything from maximum bareness to complete coverage—topped and bottomed with denim hat and shoes. Above, jut-pocketed skirt with waist-whittling semi-belt; sleeveless striped blouse with longer-than-usual pockets.

Above, when you're serious about sun but don't want it in your eyes: brimmed denim hat; moulded halter bra; beautifully cut shorts with triangle cuff pockets. Soon as you're toasted—quick, the long-sleeved jacket (right) with coolie collar!

Blouse, $2.95 . . . Skirt, $3.95.
Hat, $1.69 . . . Halter, $1.95.
Shorts, $2.95 . . . Jacket, $4.95.
All in faded blue, pink, maize or dark green denim.
Blouse in Superset chambray.
All in sizes 10-18. By Korday.
All at The Hub, Baltimore.
How to buy, see page 72.
Denim shoes by Cobblers.

sunglasses by Wills

(Continued from page 61) better than I did at her age.

But knowing Linda Susan's love of imitating, I let her watch me when I brushed my teeth. After a couple of times she wanted to try it, too. So I gave her a brush of her own and ever since, without any pleading or prompting on my part, whenever I brush my teeth, Linda Susan keeps me company by brushing hers. In fact, it has become a pleasure for her because it makes her feel more grown up. It was no pleasure for me, however, until I decided to put an apron on her—Linda Susan not only takes delight in swallowing her toothpaste, she also smears it all over her face and lets it dribble on her dress via a shortcut down her dimpled chin. On top of that, she either groans or chatters during the process. (All this she hasn't learned from me!)

Linda Susan had no intention of leaving such fun behind when we were getting ready for our journey.

All along I was afraid that once we got to the airport, Linda Susan would be frightened by the plane or the people rushing about in the usual commotion that accompanies any departure. In anticipation of tears, I had fortified myself with half-a-dozen extra handkerchiefs. I should have known her better.

The people didn't scare Linda Susan. Neither did the plane. And the photographers? That was old stuff. She's been used to photographers since she was four months old—when her first picture was taken.

not-so-camera-shy . . .

Incidentally, her introduction to cameras and flashbulbs has made a lasting impression on her. When that first flash went off one-and-a-half years ago, like any child or grown-up she blinked her eyes. Ever since, she associated cameras with flashbulbs and flashbulbs with blinking eyes. As a result, whenever she sees a man carrying a camera she immediately starts blinking her eyes. She was doing it continuously at the airport the day we left—that, and saying "bye-bye" to everybody.

There was, however, a moment when I thought she was going to cry. I had given Linda Susan a lollipop when we left our house, hoping to keep her occupied till we had settled in the plane. In the rush of boarding the plane, it slipped out of her hand and shattered into a dozen pieces. Linda Susan looked heartbroken for a moment—but swallowed her tears. Too many other exciting things were going on.

When we took off, Linda Susan was hunched in the seat next to mine. It was the first airplane ride for both of us—so neither knew what to expect. I must confess, however, that Linda Susan was a lot calmer than I was.

So smooth was the take-off, I didn't even realize we had left the ground till the stewardess unfastened our safety belts. I felt as comfortable on the huge clipper as on the grey couch of my living room.

And Linda Susan? No need to have worried about her! She had a wonderful time. I had expected she'd fall asleep on my lap after a short while because of all the excitement and also because she'd gotten up so early that morning. But no indeed! She stayed awake till long after we had arrived in Honolulu. And did my little daughter get airsick? The only way she almost got sick was by overeating. Linda Susan ate so much at her two meals it was almost embarrassing. People might have thought we didn't feed her at home!

I worried that she'd get in the way of other passengers and the crew because she toddled all over the plane chirping "bye-bye" to everyone. No one seemed to mind, though. As a matter of fact, one elderly lady told me that Linda Susan's unconscious little shows greatly helped everyone pass the time.

Linda Susan soon found a playmate on the plane in Buster Crabbe's daughter. In spite of the nine years' difference in age, the two nevertheless got along fine for the better part of the ten hours' flight.

When we arrived at the Honolulu airport we received a wonderfully warm welcome. People immediately took Linda Susan to their hearts. And as usual my daughter made the most of it with "bye-bye's"—and a few "hi's" and "no's" thrown in for variety.

Although awake for over 14 hours, Linda Susan still didn't show any signs of weariness when we arrived at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel. After dinner, members of the hotel band came to our room to serenade us with Hawaiian music. Worn out as the rest of us were, we couldn't help feeling inspired by the exuberant antics of Linda Susan—trying to keep in time to the exotic, vibrant rhythm with her version of the hula-hula!

But when I put her to bed an hour later, the trip finally caught up with her. I usually make a game out of undressing Linda Susan. I talk, and count her toes, and explain her garments—trying to make going to bed fun for her, so she doesn't mind it. But that night in Hawaii, her little head kept falling forward. It had suddenly gotten s-o-o-o heavy.

My tiny girl fell asleep long before I had her undressed. THE END

(There'll be another heartwarming story by Shirley Temple in this "Bringing up Susan" series in the June issue of MODERN SCREEN.)

TONE triumph!

Ombre-striped washable broadcloth at a "find price"

Only
$5.98

Debtimer's face-framing, square-necked flatterer triumphs in fashion, price and fabric! It is glorified by six beautiful tone-on-tone color effects on the wide skirt and slim-waisted bodice. This value-minded dress in vat-dyed, sanforized* broadcloth is a dream to wash and wear. Aquamarine, cocoa or blue tone-on-tone ombre stripes. Sizes 7 to 15.

Debtimer 1359 Broadway New York 18, N.Y.

Please send me "Tone Triumph", $5.98 (plus 21c for postage and handling).
Size ____ Color ____ Second Choice ____
Name ____
Address ____
City ____ Zone ____ State ____
Money Order ☐ Check ☐
C. O. D. ☐
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

you'll make a pretty picture in your new

Sea Nymph

swim suit by jordan

Artfully yours with its french-piped ruffle top . . . its slimming, trimming reversible V-front, and the clever side-boning that keeps you confidently strapless. SATIN LASTEX in Navy, Lilac, Daisy, Emerald, Rose, Deep Sea. Sizes 32-38. About $8.95 at smart shops, or write to Mary Kirk

JORDAN MANUFACTURING CORP.
1410 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 18

Round 'n' round goes the circular stitching . . . Criss-cross go the fagotted seams . . .
That's the Secret in the Circle

PETER PAN

bras for the subtle silhouette

pointed NO rounded YES

The patented Merry-Go-Round cup is your secret to a bustline naturally rounded — not pointed. Softly sculptured, subtly accentuated for today's new fashions! Regular and plunging necklines; bandeau and long-line styles. From $1.50 to $5.00.

PRE-TESTED SHRINKAGE CONTROL— FIT and LIFT won't wash out

PETER PAN FOUNDATIONS, INC. 312 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK 1 Dept. D-1

Want subtle curves? Write for FREE booklet, "Your New Guide to Bustline Beauty."

Where You Can Buy Modern Screen Fashions

WARDROBE FOR A SUMMERTIME SWEETHEART
pages 65-70
currently featured at
The Hub
Baltimore & Charles Streets
Baltimore 2, Maryland

Mona Freeman bares her shoulders in pink pique (color photo, page 65)
Junior Miss Shop, Second Floor.

The cutest girls wear cotton (pages 66-67)

Pastel dress and dotted dress
Junior Miss Shop, Second Floor.

Proportioned Skirts (page 68)
Boucle Sweaters (page 68)
Sport Shop, Second Floor Mezzanine.

Shantung pocket suit (page 69)
Junior Miss Shop, Second Floor.
Misses' Suits, Second Foor

Denim from Head to Foot (page 70)
Sport Shop, Second Floor Mezzanine.

You may also order by mail from:
The Hub
Baltimore & Charles Streets
Baltimore 2, Maryland

mad about monty

(Continued from page 45) Of course, we were making a movie. It's called A Place in the Sun, and it's based on Theodore Dreiser's terrific classic, An American Tragedy. I'm a happy girl to have played in it. And certainly one big reason I am is because I worked with Monty Clift.

Yards and yards of words have been poured out about this "rising young star." Most writers have used their best superlatives for Monty. Real rave stuff. Well, if you think I'm going to rave about him some more—you're right! I find it hard to remain calm on the subject of Montgomery Clift.

But let's flash back to 1943.

I'd love to be able to say I "discovered" Monty Clift that day in the restaurant booth. But—shucks!—somebody else had seen him first. He was then already well-established as a young Broadway star.

I didn't even meet the guy that first day. I just got a look at him. But I was affected in much the same way he's since affected a few million movie fans. This reaction may be summed up in one little word: Wham!

I learned that Monty was playing in Lillian Hellman's The Searching Wind. I was playing a teeny-weeny part in a musical called Rosalinda, in a theater close by the one housing The Searching Wind.

That night, when I wasn't on stage during the second act, I sneaked over to the Fulton Theater to see the second act of Monty's play. (It's against Equity rules to leave the theater during your own performance, so maybe you'd better not mention this to anyone.) There was Monty Clift, on the stage. And it happened again. Wham!

At a party a few nights later, we were introduced. I remember exactly what we both said. Oh, it might have been yesterday.

Monty said, "Hiya."

And I said, "Hello."

After that sparkling introduction Monty and I became friends. I saw him several times during the following months. When you work in show business in New York you move in the same circles with other young hopefuls. Some of them are working. Some of them are just making the rounds and living on hope and mighty little else.

But you all have a strong common bond—that great, wonderful, make-believe business, the theater. So Monty and I found a lot to talk about. We both loved show business. It filled our lives in those days. It still does.

In Hollywood today, the word is around that Monty is not very sociable. They say he never drops in at the plush night clubs and fancy restaurants.

"Look," says Monty. "Just because I don't happen to like the glitter spots, is that wrong? I have fun just sitting around hoisting a few beers with friends. We have some good talk, and we don't get hoarse trying to compete with a 16-piece name band."

The "good talk" Monty likes is about—what else?—the theater. The Broadway stage, and the Hollywood sound stage. That's Monty Clift's whole world.

After those first meetings with Monty in New York, our paths separated. I got my first chance in Hollywood. I was signed at Columbia, and I rushed out here prepared to take over for Bette Davis. But it didn't quite work out that way. Bette's brilliant career went smoothly ahead. And mine ran smack into a stone wall. I played a few very small parts, then my contract was dropped. After that I did some free-lance work, but the going was rugged.

Then one night at a party at the Gene Kellys' I looked up and there was Monty.

"Hey, Shelley!" he hollered when he saw me. "How you doing?"

Well, I told him I was doing fine. I said everything was going great, I was a big success. But I wasn't fooling Monty. He caught on right away that I was feeling pretty low. So then and there he gave me a much-needed fight talk.

"Look," he said, "This town isn't so tough. They need and want young players with experience and talent. You'll get going. It's just a question of time. You can't miss."

Naturally that made me feel better. There's nothing like a pat on the back from a friend. But there's a little more to this episode. I found out later that Monty had come to Hollywood to make a screen test. It hadn't worked out. So he was about ready to pack his bags and head back to Broadway.

How do you like that? Right in the middle of a great disappointment for him he takes time out to cheer me up. And not one word does he mention about his own troubles!

What follows after that is pretty well known. Monty was soon back in Hollywood, signed by Howard Hawks to make Red River. Then he went abroad to play in The Search. After the two pictures were released it was clear as day that he'd become a big star.

I'd talked to Monty on the Red River set. I worked in the picture exactly one day. Between takes he came over and sat down beside me and gave me another pep talk.

"Don't give up, Shelley," he said. "I'm getting my break now. Soon you will, too. I know it."

And not long after that it happened. I was signed to play the waitress in A Double Life, which starred Ronald Colman. That got me my present contract with Universal-International. Since then I've played opposite William Powell, Alan Ladd, and Howard Duff.

And now—Montgomery Clift.

Within his powers, Monty leaves no corner of a role unexplored. And believe me, those powers are very great. In a scene with Monty you feel his earnestness. It's so great it's almost a passion. And it inspires confidence in those around him. I know.

Let me tell you something that happened while we were on location at Lake Tahoe. In this scene Monty and I were going on a picnic. We had a lunch basket, and I had my coat and a scarf. We were supposed to be a little embarrassed—Monty because he had something on his mind, and I because I was very much in love with him.

Well, we rehearsed the scene, and then we started to play it. Then something fresh as a daisy!

jane powell
on the june cover of modern screen
on sale
may 9

Double Duty

knitted cotton blouse

by

Old Colony
makers of famed Scotch Nap Sweaters

Wear it with shorts . . . wear it with skirts . . . wear it from dawn to date. Old Colony designs a versatile knitted cotton blouse to keep you cool and pretty looking. Deep ribbed bottom whittles your waist . . . roomy puffed sleeves . . . flattering plunging neckline with wide ribbed collar. Comfortably skin-caressing combed cotton in 12 wonderfully washable colors that stay fresh and new through all the gay times of the season.

Sizes small, medium and large— $3 —at department and better specialty stores everywhere, or write

Old Colony Knitting Mills
1410 Broadway, New York 18 Mills: Newton Center and Hingham, Mass.

went wrong. I was a little late for a cue, then I jumped in too soon and crowded Monty's lines. Then—horrors! —I dropped my scarf.

Now, as you probably know, if this sort of thing happens on the stage, you're trained to work your way out of it. You must never, never step out of your character. But in Hollywood it's different. If you make a mistake somebody says, "Oops!" or words to that effect, the director says, "Cut!" and you do the scene over again.

So, when I dropped my scarf, I expected that the next voice I would hear would be director George Stevens saying, "Cut!"

But no. The next line was Monty's and he was still playing the scene for all it was worth. I took one look into his eyes and I could almost hear him pleading, "Come on! Stay with it. Don't let go of the character." He was giving me a helping hand and letting me know he was right in there with me, working all the time.

Well, I leaned down to get my scarf, and Monty did, too, and we bumped heads. But he kept right on playing. And I went along with him. Then we picked up tempo and went on through to finish the scene.

I looked up just as George Stevens said, "Print that," which meant that the scene was okay. He was grinning as he walked toward us. He said, "That was wonderful! You were supposed to be a little embarrassed. So your momentary confusion made it look absolutely real."

And that's the sort of thing that happens when you work with Monty Clift.

But I think I've rambled on enough about Clift, the actor. Now let me tell you about my friend Monty who is also quite a fella.

For one thing, you may have read that he has a huge appetite. I believe it's been reported he often eats two whole steaks at a sitting. I want to deny that statement. It's absolutely untrue. Montgomery Clift does not eat two steaks at one meal. He eats three!

And they've said that for breakfast he polishes off four or five eggs in addition to coffee and a few side dishes. Another lie. He has six.

And for dinner, three desserts. I've seen it with my own eyes. The other night he had some fruit, and then he had a piece of apple pie. After that he said, "Guess I'll just have an order of cheese and crackers. To go with my coffee. Always like a little something to go with my coffee."

How he does it I'll never know. And he's still as thin as a rake handle. Maybe it's because he moves around a lot and burns up so much nervous energy.

You ought to see the way he handles a car. We had some scenes up at Lake Tahoe in an old battered Ford coupé. And the way he hurtled that crate around those narrow mountain roads, I used to shut my eyes every time we'd come to a curve.

"Say," I asked him once, "how'd you ever learn to drive a car this way? Did you work in a parking lot?"

"Nope," Monty said. "In fact, I never worked anywhere. Never had a job except acting."

"You mean—you never worked as a soda jerk or an office boy or a truck driver, maybe? Just acting?"

"That's right. No—I take that back. I had one job. One summer up in Napa Valley, California. I worked a couple of months laying irrigation pipe."

(Maybe that gave him his muscles. He doesn't look it, but he has 'em!)

Monty's quite a swimmer. When he churns along in the water he looks like a reduced edition of Johnny Weissmuller on his way to mix with a team of crocodiles.

His swimming prowess came in handy while we were on location at Lake Tahoe. Director George Stevens wanted a long shot of the tragedy that happens out on the lake.

"Our camera," explained George, "will be high on the side of the hill. After the drowning, George Eastman (that's Monty) swims to shore, struggles up over the rocks and scrambles his way up the hill. Then he disappears briefly in a clump of bushes and comes out to finish the scene right in front of the camera."

"Why disappear?" Monty wanted to know. "Wouldn't it be more realistic if the camera followed him all the way?"

"Of course," George agreed. "But that's a long swim with all your clothes on. And then that long hike up the side of the hill. We ought to use a double for that. Be easier on you. The double can disappear in the bushes and we'll pick you up coming out the other side."

Monty shook his head. "No doubles for me. I'll make the whole shot. If I'm tired by the time I get to the camera we'll have greater realism."

And that's the way it was done. Not once but four times. Monty skinned his legs and arms on the rocks, and when the day was finished he was thoroughly bushed but he and George Stevens agreed they had a fine scene.

Working with Monty Clift has been a real experience for me, a liberal education in the art of acting. But it hasn't all been work. We've had fun, too.

In A Place in the Sun, Monty and I have four love scenes. And as I've pointed out, Monty is all for realism.

Wham!

THE END

You'll enjoy the bright feature on Monty Clift in the current issue of SCREEN STORIES—another Dell magazine.

ingrid's forgotten child

(Continued from page 29) efforts to protect her, some of the gossip must have reached her. In any event, she took the news standing up—and in the manner of children when they are deeply hurt or deeply moved, she changed the subject.

"Daddy," she said softly, "let's buy a tent so we can go on hikes, and sleep in the woods."

"Fine," her father said. "I'd like to." Tall, thin Dr. Lindstrom, with his heart aching, his illusions shattered, went out and got that tent, and for three consecutive nights he and his little girl slept outdoors, 50 yards away from the house.

What does a little girl think about, lying under the stars, knowing that nothing will ever be the same again? She remembered the three of them around the dinner table, close and secure. And Christmas morning with her mother and father opening her hand-made presents and looking at her and at each other. Never any more. Pia remembered other things. The funny slang her mother learned when she was making The Bells of St. Mary's with Bing Crosby, and the jitterbug steps the soldiers taught her when she toured overseas, and which her mother in turn taught her long-legged, serious-faced father. (How they had all laughed that night when he was learning!)

She remembered the first time she realized that her mother was an important actress. Driving in New York traffic with Pia, Ingrid had broken some minor rule of the road and had been given a ticket.

"What will happen, Mother?" Pia had asked anxiously.

"I made a mistake," her mother had explained, "And it will cost me five dollars."

"Five dollars!" Pia had gasped. To Pia that meant months and months of allowances, dozens of ice cream cones. It meant practically all the money in the world.

"Where will you ever get five dollars?" Her mother smiled at her and squeezed her hand, and afterwards Pia's nurse had told her that they paid her mother a good-sized salary for all the hard work she did.

so young for tears . . .

Pia remembered visiting her mother in New York when she was starring in the play Joan of Lorraine, and being allowed to go to the theater twice to see the first act. She had watched both times, her heart bursting with a curious mixture of love and pride, and had then been bustled home by her nurse before the second act.

"Why can't I stay?" Pia would plead. And her nurse would explain, "The next act is sad. You're too little to be sad."

Lying in the tent in the quiet dark, Pia remembered that. "I am 11 years old now," she told herself staunchly, "I am not too little any more."

Somehow, a little girl gets through her first heartbreak. Pia is lucky in that she has a restrained and understanding father —one who seems to see inside her heart and does all he can to make her ordeal easier. He took her out of school at a time when he felt that the curious eyes and small sharp tongues were more than she should be called upon to bear, and he re-enrolled her when he felt that Pia's own adjustment to the situation had somewhat insulated her from her classmates' gossip.

When her beloved dog, Laila, a Labrador Retriever, was run over by a car, the doctor couldn't bring himself to tell his already over-burdened little girl the truth.

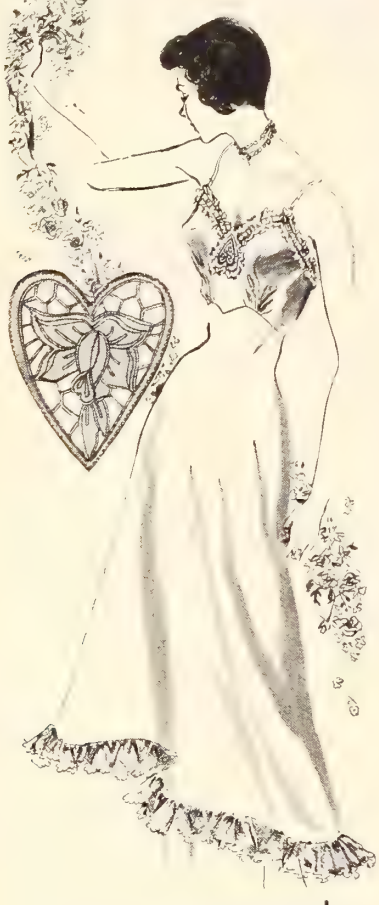
"Our Laila ran away," he told her gently, and—though Pia misses him—she is sure that he has a fine new home somewhere. Meanwhile, she consoles herself with her nice Welsh terrier, Happy.

ONLY

PERMA·LIFT

Panties have the Magic Inset

"No Bones About It—
Stays Up Without Stays"



Insure your fashion future with a sleek, smooth "Perma·lift"* Pantie. Designed to make every girl a beauty queen, your "Perma·lift" Pantie is comfortable beyond belief. The Magic Inset, delicately designed in the front panel, does the trick. No poking bones or pinching stays to bother you, yet your "Perma·lift" Pantie can't roll over, wrinkle or bind. The patented all-elastic legband construction is something special too—your pantie won't ride up, always stays comfortably and firmly anchored in place. At your favorite corsetiere's—$5.95 to $10.00.

Also enjoy a "Perma·lift" Bra—America's best loved bra with
"The Lift that never lets you down"

"Perma·lift" a trade-mark of A. Stein & Company (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

"Flower Fancies"
INTERPRETIVE LINGERIE
by Seamprufe®

ROSEBUDS ON PINK—you're lovable
FORGET-ME-NOTS ON BLUE—you're unforgettable
DAFFODILS ON YELLOW—you're vivacious
NARCISSUS ON WHITE—you're fastidious

Pick your flower, on its color true,
And it will tell a tale of you!

FLOWER FANCIES are enhanced with interpretive flowers on heart-shaped medallions of exquisite Richelieu work! The color of each slip and matching petticoat is inspired by its particular flower. Misted with shirred nylon net, FLOWER FANCIES are fashioned of multifilament rayon crepe.

Slip and Petticoat each about $4.00

A sachet leaflet perfumed with Early American Friendship's Garden gives delightful fragrance to each Flower Fancy—and to your lingerie drawer.

©1950

Dr. Lindstrom, who knows from experience that keeping very, very busy is one antidote for loneliness and unhappiness (he himself often works 14 hours a day), has arranged a great many activities for his youngster. There are ballet lessons, piano lessons, and ballroom dancing lessons—and when he has an afternoon off, they go horseback-riding together. In the evenings, though he may be dead tired from long hours of surgery, he visits with her.

"I learned a new step today," Pia will tell him.

"Fine," the doctor will say, smiling his slow smile. "Let's see it."

"You have to do it with me." He gets up from his chair, on goes a record, and for a little while Pia and Dr. Lindstrom are just any little girl and her devoted pop—except that there is nobody there to watch them with shining eyes, to applaud like mad when the record is over.

In November, Ingrid Bergman's personal representative, returning from a trip to Italy, brought Pia a package of gay Italian dresses from her mother. Holding them in her arms, almost smelling the familiar scent of her mother's perfume—the mother she hadn't seen in over half a year became a reality again.

"Is—is she coming home soon?" Pia wanted to know, hoping again just for a minute, believing again for the space of a heartbeat that everything might still be all right. The answer to that, of course, was "no."

On December 12, Dr. Lindstrom read the headline in a Los Angeles newspaper that announced his wife was expecting a baby. It was the very first word he had had about it. If he had only known before, how different things might have been. If Roberto Rossellini had gone to Dr. Lindstrom, if Ingrid herself had written him and told him of her pregnancy, the chances are that the doctor would have granted his wife a quick divorce so that her son would not have been born out of wedlock.

As soon as he read the report, he wrote to Ingrid for confirmation—but his letters were never answered. While the rumors were vigorously denied, reliable sources insisted that they were true, and at length, there was nothing for the doctor to do but tell his daughter as kindly as he could. Pia listened, tight-lipped and still, but what she thought about it is her own secret.

like father, like daughter . . .

They didn't talk about it very much, this father and daughter who are so close, so alike in many ways. (Those few people who knew Ingrid and her doctor intimately say, "There is more of Peter in Pia than there is of Ingrid.") But one day soon afterward, Pia went to the hardware store and bought a hammer and a bag of nails. That night she gave them to her father.

"Here is a present for you," she told him simply—and he knew that she was really saying, "Please don't feel so hurt. I'm here. I love you."

Pia spent the Christmas holidays with the Gary Coopers and their little girl, Maria at the Coopers' magnificent new ski lodge in Aspen, Colorado. The only harsh intrusion for Pia on those blessedly beautiful white days and silent nights was the news broadcast stating that Roberto Rossellini's Austrian divorce had come through on December 23—and that the dark-eyed stranger was now free to marry her mother as soon as her mother's divorce came through. But this had not yet happened It still might not happen, Pia's thoughts ran. In the midst of so much beauty and so much kindness, it was impossible to feel really unhappy.

Pia returned from the mountains, tanned and glowing, with so many things to tell her school friends that she simply wouldn't her mother. And then, a few short weeks later, the news came that started them all whispering again, all looking at her in that funny way that made her cold inside.

On February 3, the newspapers front-paged the story of the birth of Bergman's baby boy. Pia, Ingrid's first-born, the little girl whom she had brought to this country at the age of 15 months and whom she had carried everywhere, papoose fashion, in a snug fur bag, must have read the story furtively, her 11-year-old heart breaking. While Renzo Rossellini, Roberto's eight-year-old son, was being rushed into the chintz-decorated suite at the Villa Margerhita Clinic to see Ingrid, here was Pia 6,000 miles away.

How some of Ingrid's quoted statements must have hurt—the one that she was "fiercely happy," the rhapsodies about her new son. How hard a thing it all must have been for a little girl to understand. Suddenly her own mother had become an alien creature—a name in a garish newspaper headline, a smudged picture staring with challenging eyes from every newsstand, a woman gossiped about on every street-corner.

Can you imagine her feelings about Rossellini? The black hatred she must bear him? Yet everyone claims that when she meets him, he will woo her and win her. There are those who say that the 43-year-old Roberto is irresistible. In Rome, he has frequently been called the Ace of Hearts, Il Asso di Cuore.

saint and sinner . . .

Anna Magnani, the fiery Italian actress who knew and loved him before Ingrid came along, says, "When a woman is with Roberto, she feels that she's on the brink of a spiritual whirlwind. He is more than a man; he is a hurricane."

Marlene Dietrich, another Rossellini friend, says, "He is a charming, intelligent, talented human being."

Renzo Rossellini, Roberto's brother and a musical composer who has written the scores for more than 50 films, reportedly says, "He's an incorrigible sinner and a profound mystic."

When Pia Lindstrom tries to find out what sort of man stole her mother's heart, she will discover much that is puzzling, for this man Rossellini is cunning, wise and devious.

He claims that he was under the influence of drugs when in 1936 he married Marcella de Marchis, a slender, warm-hearted brunette. It wasn't, however, until December of 1949—having fallen in love with Ingrid Bergman—that he had that marriage annulled. This was 13 years later, by which time he had had two children by Marcella, one of whom died.

He claims to be a great believer in freedom and democracy, and yet, under Mussolini, he made some of the best Fascist propaganda pictures the dictatorship ever turned out.

Yes, Pia Lindstrom will find her Latin step-father a man of many talents, of many moods, possessing a temperament quite incomprehensible to a girl of Scandinavian blood. She will be puzzled, for instance, to hear it alleged that a week before he became a father for the third time, Roberto was so depressed that he contemplated suicide because of the publicity he and Ingrid were receiving. Yet, despite all this, Pia is sure to be charmed off her little feet when she first meets him sometime this year.

Rossellini is a great director of children In his pictures, Paisan, Open City, Germany Year Zero, his understanding of a child's mentality and motivation is absolutely masterful. At this moment, he must know that Pia despises him and, knowing this, he will employ all his wiles on her a Pia's mother, it is believed, will make her home in Italy—because Italy is Roberto's home and the birthplace of the son she calls Robertino, and—most important—it is a nation of broad-minded people who cast no stones. She says that she is finished forever with making motion pictures. Yet it seems safe to predict that she is finished for only a little while. In time she will find surging mightily through her the great, driving, unquenchable desire to act. Someday, this girl who once said that acting was her life will act for the films again.

As for Pia, when she is grown and knows all the facts in the case, she will be certain that this woman, whose flesh is her flesh, was—aside from any moral judgment of her conduct—a woman of courage and pride, a woman who, undaunted, defied the whole world for the yearning of her heart.

As long as she lives, Pia Lindstrom will never exist in obscurity. Always, she will be known as "Ingrid Bergman's daughter."

Whether this title shall bring her pride or shame only we, the public, can decide.

THE END

janet's homecoming

(Continued from page 54) back home to help us launch the campaign this year. I know you're making a movie right now, but Stockton would be very grateful to you if you could talk your studio into giving you a day off to come up."

A few minutes later, Janet was telling John Wayne about the invitation.

"Do you think the studio would let me go?" she asked, hoping that Duke would reassure her by saying he thought so. But Duke is a realist.

"Honey, you know the schedule as well as I do," he drawled—and then, seeing that she was disappointed, added, "But it certainly wouldn't hurt to ask them."

Jet Pilot has been one of those pictures with a murderous schedule, for its co-stars. Janet and Duke are in almost every scene, and with production costs still way up in the stratosphere, studios naturally are not inclined to allow the non-professional activities of their stars to interfere with movie-making. It didn't look very likely that Janet could go, March of Dimes or no March of Dimes.

But as it turned out, Janet found she had a day off on January 15—the day which, it just happened, was the national kick-off day for the March of Dimes campaign.

"Oh, how I'd love to go back to Stockton," Janet told the unit manager of Jet Pilot. "I haven't been back for nearly three years. Please, please, don't let anything happen to my day off."

But because motion picture schedules sometimes change faster than you can say "filmed in gorgeous Technicolor," Janet didn't know definitely that she could go to Stockton until just four days before she did. And as she dashed off the set on Saturday afternoon, the last words she heard from the assistant director were:

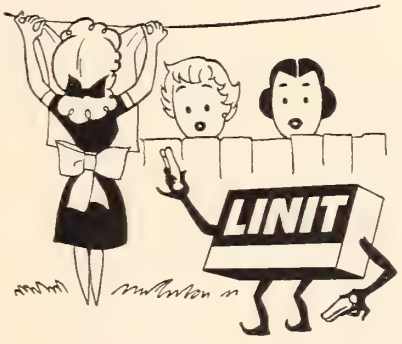
"Have fun up there, Janet. But don't forget you have a make-up call back here at eight o'clock Monday morning."

As she drove toward Stockton, 400 miles away, with her mother and father, Janet sat excitedly on the edge of her seat, paying very little attention to her father's warning that she should get some rest.

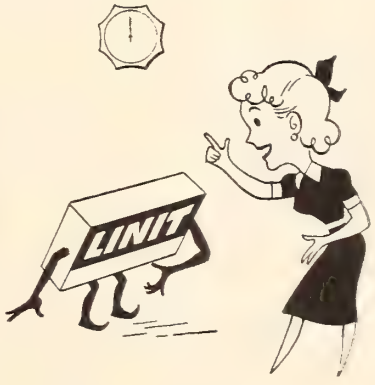
"I understand the town has some big plans for you," he cautioned.

"Why, I couldn't sleep," she replied. "It's broad daylight."

She was still wide awake six hours later when they drove into Stockton and pulled



LITTLE LULU



And something new - a Kleenex* Pocket-Pack!

Little Lulu says: TAKING A TRIP? STASH HANDY KLEENEX POCKET-PACK TISSUES IN YOUR SUITCASE! 24 SOFT, STRONG KLEENEX TISSUES (12 PULLS) IN A NEW TINY PACKAGE — SERVES YOU ONE AT A TIME. ONLY 5¢

© INTERNATIONAL CELLUCOTTON PRODUCTS CO. ★T.M. REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Heed a smart neighbor
(That's pert Betty Hine):
"LINIT saves labor,
Speeds wash to the line!"

"Mix LINIT, thin it –
That's all that you do.
Takes just a minute –
Makes clothes look like new!"

It's so easy to get PERFECT results

Yes, PERFECT! Because it evenly penetrates the fabric, LINIT® Starch gives a truly like-new finish, without cooking. Get LINIT today—at your grocer's.

Directions for all fabrics on package

★ The only starch recommended by leading dress manufacturers youth is yours IN Desco Debs®

FAYE $3.95

ONLY $3.95 AND $4.95

let's go with Desco Debs®

DESCO SHOE CORPORATION
47 WEST 34TH STREET, NEW YORK

up in front of the old Stockton Hotel. Her letter-writing friend, Marian Jacobs, was waiting for them in the suite upstairs, and after an exchange of greetings, told Janet a few things about her schedule.

"Tonight, a lot of your friends from the college are throwing a party out at the Naval Officers' Club. You'd better get dressed right away."

There were more than 40 of her college friends at the Club when she arrived, and Janet had a busy time for the first hour meeting the new husbands her girl friends had acquired, and the wives her old boy friends had acquired. It was a wonderful evening, and she didn't get back to the hotel until 2:30 a.m. As she explained to her folks, she'd stopped with some of the kids at Ferguson's drive-in and had had a Fergyburger. Hadn't had one for three years and couldn't resist the urge.

The next day started off with a bang for Janet when, up bright and early, she saw the headline in the morning paper which announced, "MAYOR MORRISON PROCLAIMS TODAY JANET LEIGH-EDDIE LEBARON DAY." In the story below, the Mayor—who is Janet's uncle—was quoted as saying, "Because of the achievements of these two young people, and the honor which they have brought to Stockton, I have issued my first formal proclamation, naming this day as Janet Leigh-Eddie LeBaron day."

gridiron napoleon . . .

At breakfast, which Janet had with her folks, Judge Robert Sullivan and her high-school music teacher, she met Eddie LeBaron, her fellow celebrity for the day. Eddie is a guy about three inches taller than Mickey Rooney, who, last year playing football for the local College of the Pacific, climaxed three years of brilliant play by being named an All-American. Stockton thinks he's a pretty special young man—and it wasn't hard for Janet to think so, too, just a few minutes after they met.

"You're even prettier than I thought you would be," he told her sincerely. Even a movie star likes to hear that!

After breakfast, Eddie and Marian took Janet for a quick tour of the COP campus, which has grown some since Janet was there. Eddie pointed out the new students' lounge, built last year, and Janet caught herself wishing she could come back for another semester just to enjoy it. . . .

"I hate to break up your reverie," said Marian, "but we're due over at the radio studio right now."

College of the Pacific has its own radio station, which presents some of the best special events broadcasts in town. Fifteen minutes later, Janet and Eddie were seated in front of a microphone there, telling the Sunday stay-at-homes why they should give generously to the March of Dimes this year. Janet made several rather bad fluffs that would have dismayed her directors—and her—in Hollywood. But it didn't matter much here. She was back home, and a little excitement was understandable.

When they left the radio studio to attend a reception at Janet's old sorority house, Eddie grabbed her elbow and said,

"Do me a favor, will you? Stop by with me at my fraternity house. I want to see the guys' eyes drop out when we come walking up." Naturally, she did. Naturally, the Omega Phis' eyes dropped out.

Janet's sorority, Alpha Theta Tau, has a campus reputation for selecting beautiful girls as members, and this year, they pledged a bumper crop. There were about 30 of them sitting around the living room when Janet arrived. After Janet had walked down the receiving line with Mrs. Turner, the house mother of Alpha Theta, it wasn't long before the party had broken up into informal conversational groups. For more than an hour, Janet made friends with the new girls.

They took her upstairs to her old room and showed her the new coffee mugs that have become a house tradition since Janet left school. Then, back downstairs, Janet had a chance to talk to many of her former teachers—including Mr. Brown, the college drama director who once told her she didn't have enough dramatic ability to be an actress. While Janet was talking to Mrs. Turner a few minutes later, a good-looking young man in his twenties tugged at her sleeve.

"I'll bet you don't remember me," he said, with a smile.

For a moment, Janet had an inner struggle—and then she exploded, "Roy! Roy Kirsten! How are you? Daddy, look who's here."

Her father didn't remember Roy at first either—until Janet told him that Roy was the boy she used to play with when she was in grammar school and lived on California Street.

Reluctantly, Janet and her parents had to say goodbye to the Alpha Thetas and rush back to the hotel to get ready for Janet's appearance at the Fox theater that afternoon. She ate a sandwich hurriedly while she put on a plaid dinner dress. Then she walked out to meet the two stalwart Marines who were her guard-of-honor for her appearance at the theater—the marquee of which boasted, "IN PERSON, STOCKTON'S OWN JANET LEIGH."

Eddie LeBaron was waiting for her at the curb, and she had to tell him right there about the first time she'd been in the Fox Theater. It had been the day it opened, and she'd stood in line for more than an hour to get a seat. She was eight years old at the time—never dreaming she'd someday see her name in lights on the marquee.

Suddenly, she and Eddie were out on the stage. When the applause had died down Mayor Morrison read his proclamation and introduced them to the crowd.

"Never before in my life have I had the privilege of proclaiming a day which gives me as much pleasure as this one. Janet and Eddie, on behalf of the people of Stockton, I want to say thanks for your participation in the opening of the March of Dimes campaign this year. Especially to you, Janet, for making the trip up from Hollywood."

return of the native . . .

"Thank you, Uncle Dan," Janet said. "I'm the most thrilled girl in the world to be here. I feel that I should be up in the balcony there, holding hands, instead of down here on the stage." This provoked a series of shouted invitations from the balcony. When they ended, Janet smilingly went on, "Coming back to Stockton would be wonderful at any time, but I'm glad the studio let me come up here now to help launch the March of Dimes. I'll always be grateful to Stockton for the fun I had here. Thanks for the memories."

Then Eddie made a speech, too—after which they both spent nearly an hour in the lobby signing autographs. When the crowd finally thinned out, Janet found that some ardent fan had stolen her shoes, which she had slipped off while signing autographs. Her two Marines gallantly carried her out to her car, and her father and Judge Sullivan took over when they reached the hotel. A barefooted actress looks pretty silly, even in her own home town. But fortunately, she'd brought an extra pair of shoes to wear to the banquet that night.

Stockton's biggest restaurant, the Pump Room, was filled to overflowing for Janet and Eddie's testimonial banquet. When Mayor Morrison got up to introduce her, he said, "Now that she's a big movie star, maybe I shouldn't tell this about Jeanette. But about 15 years ago when I first knew this young lady, she used to come into my drug store at California and Sutter, twirling and tossing her baton around. She'd make a complete circuit of the store and, nine times out of 10, she'd have a package of gum or a candy bar in her hand when she went out. Remembering those days so well, it is a real privilege for me, as Mayor of Stockton, to extend the key to the city of Stockton to this beautiful young woman who has brought so much fame to her home town."

It took two people to bring the huge golden key up to the table, and when Mayor Morrison gave it to her, Janet finally did what she'd almost done several times before that day: She cried.

"Look at me," she sniffled. "And I'm a big girl now, Uncle Dan. . . . But I wish I could tell you all how happy it has made my mother and father and me to come back to Stockton for this day. I'm never going to forget it."

The rest of the evening settled down to a torrent of tributes for Janet and Eddie. All Janet's teachers were introduced and credited with the parts they played in making her the girl she is. A delegation from her sorority presented her with flowers and sang the Alpha Theta song: "She likes sorority life, those midnight get-togethers every night. There'll be nothing but sweet dreams for our Alpha Theta gal." And Janet had another surge of tears.

kiss from cinderella . . .

Then, to raise money for the March of Dimes, the m.c. began auctioning off a few autographed pictures of Janet. Dr. Tully Knoles, chancellor of the college, bought the first one—and when Janet gave him a kiss to go with it, the bidding for the rest became spirited. After the Sheriff and several of the town's business men had bought a picture, a gentleman in the back of the room began buying them for the members of the football team. Half an hour later, Janet had been substantially kissed, and the March of Dimes was off to a fine start in Stockton.

It was nearly midnight when Janet and her parents finally said goodbye and went back to the hotel to pack. Half an hour later, they had all their bags in the car and were ready to start rolling down the 400 miles of highway back to Hollywood. Completely exhausted, Janet curled up in the back seat. Before they had passed the city limits, she was sound asleep.

Fortified with coffee, her father drove all night and arrived in Hollywood just half an hour before Janet was due at RKO. She woke up just a few blocks from the studio.

When they drove onto the lot, Janet said a hurried good-bye, pulled her key to the city of Stockton out of the back seat, and dashed for the make-up department. An hour later, she was on the set of Jet Pilot, ready to go back to work.

When John Wayne arrived a few minutes later, he walked over to Janet's dressing room to say hello.

"Well, girl, how did it go?" he asked with a grin. "I hope you didn't disgrace us Morrisons."

"It was simply wonderful," Janet bubbled. "I saw all my old friends and look, would you, at what they gave me!" She ran over to her closet and hauled out her key to the city.

Duke whistled when he saw it. "Say, that's a mighty big one. They must think a lot of you up there."

Duke doesn't know the half of it.

THE END

Suppose you couldn't SEE which shirt is cleaner

Why . . you could tell by the smell! The wonderful, clean fragrance of a shirt that has been washed with Fels-Naptha Soap proves that every bit of dirt and perspiration odor has been washed away—completely!

And for whiteness . . the improved Fels-Naptha you buy today has a new 'sunshine' ingredient that gets white things—shirts, towels, linens—brilliantly, radiantly white.

Yes, use today's improved Fels-Naptha and your white things will actually radiate new whiteness every time you wash them!

REMEMBER—ONLY FELS-NAPTHA GIVES YOU THESE THREE WASHDAY ADVANTAGES:

Mild, golden soap.
PLUS . . Gentle, active naptha.
PLUS . . A new, finer 'sunshine' ingredient that makes white things radiate new brilliant whiteness!

Ask your grocer for Improved Fels-Naptha Soap, today.

MADE IN PHILA. BY FELS & CO.

Fels-Naptha Soap

BANISHES "TATTLE-TALE GRAY"

TONI TWINS Discover New Shampoo Magic

Soft-Water Shampooing Even in Hardest Water

"The first time we tried Toni Creme Shampoo something wonderful happened to our hair," say beautiful blonde twins Alice and Alva Anderson of Evanston, Ill. "Our hair was so marvelously soft . . . as if we actually washed it in rain water. Its softness made it so much easier to manage."

That's the magic of Toni Creme Shampoo . . . Soft-Water Shampooing! Even in hardest water you get oceans of creamy lather that rinses away dirt and dandruff instantly. Never leaves a dull, soapy film. That's why your hair sparkles with all its natural highlights. And it's so easy to set and style.

- Leaves hair gloriously soft, easy to manage
- Helps permanents "take" better, look lovelier longer
- Rinses away dirt and dandruff instantly
- Oceans of creamy-thick lather make hair sparkle with natural highlights.

Enriched with Lanolin

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

The setting was unspectacular—yet here was enacted a vital scene in one of history's most dramatic romances.

BY JAMES McARTHUR

Judge Eugenio Calzada Flores signs Ingrid's divorce decree in her lawyers' presence.

how ingrid got her divorce

■ ON FEBRUARY 11 there was posted on the official bulletin board of the First Civil Court in Juarez, Mexico, under "divorce decrees," the names, Ingrid B. Lindstrom—Peter Lindstrom.

And thus Ingrid Bergman was free to marry Roberto Rossellini, avowed father of her son.

So ended another act in one of the most famous and spotlighted romantic dramas of modern times.

The Juarez scene was highly unusual. In the middle of the action, the spotlight turned from Juarez to Rome—and then slowly and almost grudgingly came back to the Mexican setting. The temporary shift stole the show. But on the local action rested the drama's entire development.

The Juarez scene was unusual in another way—even for a Juarez divorce court. Not a single principal was on-stage during the entire proceedings.

An expected appearance of one star performer, Ingrid Bergman, had to be cancelled due to a prior and more important booking. The co-star, defendant Peter Lindstrom, chose not to appear. A stand-in armed with power-of-attorney, together with the judge, played the principal parts in the ending of the important local scene. Then the action again shifted to Rome. The number of scenes yet to be enacted and the drama's ending no man could foretell. . . .

City Hall in Juarez, Mexico, where the suit was heard.

Despite the many widely-publicized divorces that have been granted in Mexico, "quickie" divorces are not prevalent among the Mexican people. Such divorces can, in fact, be secured only in two of the nation's 28 states—in Chihuahua and in Morelos, the one handy to the border, the other handy to Mexico City. Mexican lawyers will tell you that "the easy divorce laws are just made for the convenience of people from the United States."

Juarez is the divorce capital of Chihuahua, while Cuernavaca—where Faye Emerson recently received her divorce from Elliott Roosevelt—is in the state of Morelos. In all other Mexican states it takes from 10 to 14 months to secure a decree.

Juarez is just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas. It is a progressive Mexican city of 75,000 persons with modern schools, theaters and hotels. It is one of the main points of entry for Mexican commerce.

(Continued on next page)

Its First Civil Court is located in the large and impressive Palacio Municipal (City Hall), which also houses the Second Civil Court, the mayor's office, police headquarters and other municipal offices.

The court, itself, is comprised of a suite of three plain but well polished offices—the reception room, the clerks' office and the courtroom. The courtroom is simply furnished with two desks, one for the judge and one for his secretary. The few chairs stand around the walls. The only adornments are a calendar and a picture of Miguel Aleman, President of Mexico. In this austere setting the court carries on its work.

Thirty-year-old Judge Eugene Calzada Flores is presiding judge. With six years experience in the judiciary and with a professional regard for law and for propriety, he was perturbed at the furore that the Bergman decree was causing in his court, declaring that this divorce was just another case. The world, to put it mildly, did not agree.

The divorce action had been filed in the Juarez court on January 25, but word of the proceedings did not leak to the press until two days later. By that time the wheels of justice had already been thrown into high gear to speed the action and to permit the appearance, if possible, of Miss Bergman in the court at the earliest possible date. But it was not to be.

A special trip by one of the lawyers to Chihuahua City, some 200 miles south, on the same date that the decree was filed, enabled the first legal publication to appear in the official state bulletin that same day.

no contest . . .

Dr. Lindstrom chose to ignore the suit. It seemed that the suit would be granted without contest at the end of the two-week waiting period.

However, on February 4 a possible explosive was placed under the suit. Arturo Castillo Calero, a former state and Federal judge, requested that he be named "official intervenor" in the suit in behalf of the defendant. Under Mexican law an individual may ask to be appointed intervenor without the defendant's permission if he posts bond in an amount set by the court. However, no action was taken on the request and the suit remained uncontested.

The judge set February 6 as the date for a hearing at which Dr. Lindstrom could appear to answer a set of questions submitted in a sealed envelope with Ingrid's petition. When he failed to appear, the envelope was opened. On February 7, Ingrid's attorney asked the court to state that all the questions had been answered in the affirmative—as the law provides in a case in which a defendant, having been advised of a suit, fails to appear.

The court thereupon ruled that Dr. Lindstrom had, in answering affirmatively all the questions, admitted the following to be true:

1. That on July 10, 1937, he contracted marriage with Mrs. Ingrid B. Lindstrom in Stode Medelpad, Sweden.
2. That as issue of the marriage there is a child 11 years old, whose name is Pia Lindstrom.
3. That the minor child is presently living with the defendant.
4. That there is not any common property that can be divided within the jurisdiction of this court.
5. That the defendant has caused ill treatment to Mrs. Ingrid Bergman Lindstrom.
6. That the defendant has failed to support Mrs. Ingrid Lindstrom as provided by law.

For the girl who doesn't like a heavy make-up...

A greaseless foundation fresher, more natural

If you prefer a delicate, pretty make-up—not the artificial look of a heavy foundation—here is your ideal powder base! Sheer and silken-smooth, it takes make-up beautifully. No oily shine. No streaking. Before powder, smooth on a light veil of Pond's Vanishing Cream. It disappears, leaving only an adherent, protective film that suits any skin tone. Over this satiny foundation, make-up is always smooth and fresh—always in perfect taste!

1-Minute Mask—quick Beauty Pick-up

Whenever you want to look your loveliest, "re-style" your complexion with a 1-minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Cover face, except eyes, with a lavish cloak of the snowy Cream. Its "keratolytic" action loosens and dissolves off stubborn dirt and dead skin particles. After 1 minute, tissue off clean. See how vibrant your skin looks, how much softer and clearer —ready for a make-up that stays flawless all evening!

Mrs. George Jay Gould, jr.

The gay and charming young Mrs. Gould has a delicate skin that rebels against a heavy make-up. She says, "My favorite base for make-up is Pond's Vanishing Cream. It's so smoothing and protecting, and keeps my make-up fresh for hours."

Noreen

LONG LASTING, NON-PERMANENT, HAIR COLORING

A Super Color RINSE

that REALLY does what you've always wanted a Color Rinse to do!

You have always wanted a rinse with long lasting, natural appearing COLOR to glamorize and beautify your hair, or blend in gray...Now you've found it! NOREEN SUPER COLOR RINSE will modify, augment, deepen and lusterize the natural color of your hair easily, quickly, safely, and economically. Noreen's abundantly colorful shades can be re-applied fresh and new, or changed at will after each shampoo.

Noreen will effectively blend in the unwanted gray in graying hair without "that dyed look." With Noreen you can achieve results you never believed possible.

Noreen enhances the natural beauty of white and gray hair with light, medium or dark tones of pure, silvery gray. Yellow and other discolorations are eliminated and white hair kept snowy and lustrous.

Try Noreen today... Packed in dainty, easy-to-use capsules for convenient use at home. Choice of 14 colorful shades in 25¢ and 50¢ sizes, at leading cosmetic counters everywhere...or ask your Beautician to apply Noreen Professional Super Color Rinse.

A Rapid Method of Application
for your added convenience

Noreen is so easy to apply in 3 Minutes with the NOREEN COLOR APPLICATOR

The rinse flows on so smoothly, and evenly... gives you a much more colorful result, with so little trouble. Until the Applicator is available in every store, we will accommodate by direct mail. Send 60¢ to NOREEN, 448 Lincoln St., Denver 9, Colo. Satisfaction Guaranteed!

● "You bet the Ayds Way figures for me," says Maureen O'Sullivan, motion picture star, wife of famous director John Farrow and mother of six children. "Every woman wants to keep her figure looking lovely. I know that Ayds will help me lose weight the way Nature intended me to. I look better and feel better while I'm taking Ayds."

"It Figures" says Maureen O'Sullivan

How to Lose Weight and Look Lovelier

Now! Reduce—and look lovelier while you are doing it! Lose weight the way Nature intended you to! A quick, natural way with no risk to health. If you follow the Ayds plan you should feel healthier, look better while reducing—and have a lovelier figure!

This is because the Ayds way to reduce is a natural way. When you take Ayds before meals, as directed, you can eat what you want . . . all you want. Ayds contains no harmful drugs. It calls for no strenuous diet . . . no massage . . . no exercise.

Ayds is a specially made candy containing health-giving vitamins and minerals. It acts by reducing your desire for those extra fattening calories . . . works almost like magic. Easily and naturally you should begin to look slimmer, more beautiful day by day.

Users report losses up to 10 pounds with the very first box. In fact, you lose weight with the first box ($2.89) or your money back. Get Ayds from your drug or department store—a full month's supply, $2.89.

The Loveliest Women in the World take AYDS

7. That the defendant's temperament is incompatible with that of his wife, Mrs. Ingrid Bergman Lindstrom.

8. That due to the incompatibility of temperaments the defendant and his wife have been separated since the 11th day of March, 1949.

If Dr. Lindstrom had appeared and answered questions 5, 6, 7 and 8 in the negative, the divorce would not have been granted.

As it was, the judge signed the decree on February 9, the court finding "the marriage of Peter Lindstrom and Miss Ingrid Bergman . . . is hereby dissolved with all its legal consequence, leaving both parties their legal rights to contract a new marriage." The divorce was granted on grounds of "cruelty, non-support and incompatibility of temperaments existing between the parties."

The 24-hour appeal period having elapsed, the official notice was posted on the court bulletin board. The board on which the decree was posted has listed other prominent Hollywood names—including Paulette Goddard, Merle Oberon and Laraine Day. Only the day before the Bergman decree was signed, John Huston secured a mutual consent divorce from his actress-wife Evelyn Keyes.

But no names appearing on that bulletin board have ever received such world-wide attention as those of Ingrid B. Lindstrom and Peter Lindstrom. And, it seems safe to say, none ever will. THE END

I love a charade

(Continued from page 36) (who's in M and Pa Kettle Go to Town) arrived a few minutes later, Anne announced that for charades the males would be teamed against the females.

(Right here would be a sensible place to tell readers who've never played the game just what in tarnation the game of charades is all about. Well, it's simply this: Both teams go off into separate huddles before the excitement gets under way and write on slips of paper the names of a number of things—all in some classification previously agreed on, such as names of famous plays, or people, or painters. Then each team takes a hat or something, places its slips therein, and the opposing team-members draw from it in turn the name of something they must act out in pantomime for their fellow team-members to guess—within a three-minute time limit for each one.)

Anne passed out pencils and paper. "Ladies and gentlemen," she said, "the classification will be movie titles."

I decided to stay neutral and watch. The boys retired to the hall stairs for the huddle. Peggy Dow, figuring everything was fair in a battle of the sexes, tried to listen in. But, before she could overhear any vital information, Douglas Dick detected her pretty head peeking around the doorway. "Hey!" he shouted. "A spy!"

"Spy?" said Peggy, all innocence. "I'm merely checking on the fire escapes."

"O.K.," said Jerome. "Escape."

She did.

Once the teams had decided on their movie titles, they all regathered in the living room—and the game began. Barbara drew first. She drew I Was a Shoplifter—which happens to be Tony Curtis' new movie. And she was a very dainty shoplifter, indeed. In fact, it took the girls almost their time limit to figure out what she was up to.

Dick Long took the floor next. He indicated that his title contained only one word. But before he'd acted out the first syllable, Peggy forgot which side she was on, and shouted, "Stromboli!"

Dick stopped in mid-gesture. Then he walked over to Peggy and offered to examine her head. "Don't look now," he said, "but your brains are bulging."

It was entirely possible, because Peggy had been across the room eavesdropping when her team had come up with that particular title to confuse the enemies. "Well, here's an easy one," she told the girls and proceeded to take her turn. First, she waved a frantic goodbye, then got down on her knees and began to row across the rug. She did it five times before someone guessed Deported.

Tony thought it was very funny. "That was so misleading, it makes you the best player on our side," he remarked. "You could have been deported to Mexico, you know, and that doesn't require a rowboat."

"Sure it does," said Peggy. "I was going by way of Bermuda."

Jerome followed Peggy. Douglas recognized the first two syllables as "super" and Jerome started to sew furiously. No one caught on, and he had to tell them. "Superstition Mountain," he explained.

Dick Long held his head in his hands. "That was changed to Lust for Gold," he moaned. "Sabotage."

The girls had better luck, when Anne enacted Buccaneer's Girl—her latest flick. But poor Douglas never had a chance. He was about to take the spotlight when he got a call from one of his neighbors. Someone was prowling around his apartment. He had to take time out to play cops-and-robbers—at home.

guess again . . .

And the charades? Well, that game really got out of hand. The kids decided on a new ruling. Whoever guessed the title first, would get to act out the next one.

For a while it seemed as if Barbara and Tony had a monopoly on right answers. Tony always knew Barbara's titles and vice versa. But finally Piper guessed the tough Curtain Call at Cactus Creek. Then she stumped the experts with The Sleeping City—Peggy Dow's in this new one.

The second word was a cinch. Piper curled up on the floor with her head on folded hands. "Sleep . . . sleeping?" cried Barbara.

Then Piper looked toward Mecca, or some such place. "See?" Anne shouted.

Next, Piper sat in a chair and pretended to drink tea. Somehow it always came out Sleeping See Tea.

Finally, Tony, who'd read the Universal-International production chart that day, got it. And so it went. After everyone had a turn—Barbara and Tony having had five turns apiece—they thought they'd try another game. The idea was for one person to go out of the room and let the rest of the group select a word. When the victim returned, he'd attempt to guess it.

Tony was elected. The word was a dilly. It was "naturally." Poor Tony. You've never seen anyone work so hard.

"Smoke a cigarette in the manner of the word," he commanded Dick Long. Dick smoked his cigarette—naturally.

It was a rugged beginning, but 10 minutes later—with a little help from Piper and Anne—Tony came through with flying colors.

Barbara volunteered next—and went into the kitchen for a cup of coffee. The word chosen was "accidentally." Barbara returned, coffee in hand, puzzled look on face. She asked Dick to smoke his cigarette again. He promptly dropped it.

Peggy offered sympathy and aid. She and Dick staged a short skit. "Now—the scene is laid at a party," explained Peggy.

DRY SKIN! "Before I started using Noxzema, my skin was very dry," says pretty Margaret Jeffrey. "Now my complexion looks so much softer, smoother! Noxzema is my regular night cream and beauty aid."

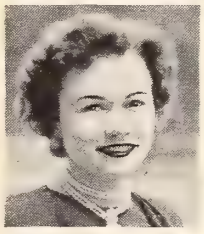
LOOK LOVELIER IN 10 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

Doctor develops new home beauty routine—helps 4 out of 5 women in clinical tests

● If you want a more alluring complexion, if you've suffered from dry, rough skin,*externally-caused blemishes or similar skin problems—here's news.

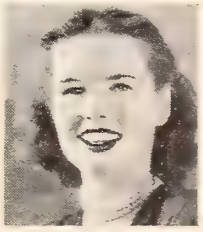
A noted Doctor has now developed a new home beauty routine. He found, in clinical tests, that a greaseless skin cream—famous Noxzema—has a gentle, medicated formula that helps heal such blemishes . . . helps supply a light film of oil-and-moisture to the skin's outer surface . . . helps your skin look softer, smoother, lovelier. Here's what you do:

4 Simple Steps



Morning—1. Apply Noxzema all over your face and with a damp cloth "creamwash" your face—just as you would with soap and water. Note how clean your skin looks and feels. 2. After drying face, smooth on a protective film of greaseless Noxzema as a powder base.

Evening—3. Before retiring, again "creamwash" your face. 4. Now massage Noxzema into your face. Remember—it's greaseless. Pat a little extra over any blemishes* to help heal them.

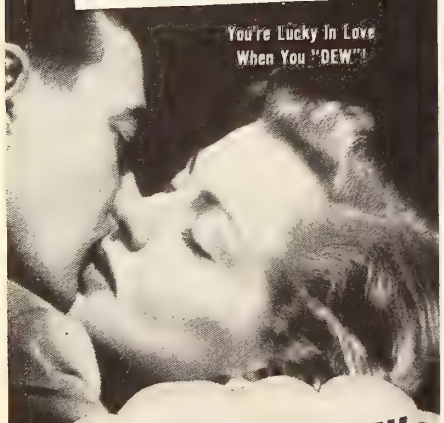


This new "Home Facial" actually helped 4 out of 5 women in clinical tests. The secret? First, Noxzema is a greaseless cream. And secondly, it's Noxzema's medicated formula—in a unique oil-and-moisture emulsion!

Money Back If Not Satisfied

Try this Doctor's new Home Beauty Routine for 10 days. If you don't see a real improvement in your skin, return the jar to Noxzema, Baltimore, Md.—your money cheerfully refunded. That's how sure we are you will be wonderfully pleased with the results.

Protective Cream! "Ever since I've used Noxzema as my powder base I've found my dry skin looked so much softer and smoother. Noxzema's wonderful," says Mary Proctor.



Blemishes!* "I was troubled with annoying facial blemishes*," says Dorothy Johnson. "My girl friend advised Noxzema. In a very short time it helped my skin look softer, clearer."

Medicated Noxzema Skin Cream is the favorite beauty aid of scores of actresses, models, and nurses. See for yourself why over 25,000,000 jars are used yearly! At all drug and cosmetic counters. 40¢, 60¢, $1.00 plus tax.

No other Deodorant gives you this thrilling

6-POINT PROTECTION

"DEW"

SPRAY DEODORANT

JUST SQUEEZE FLEXIBLE BOTTLE! "DEW" SPRAYS ITSELF ON!

Only "DEW" Gives You All 6 Important Advantages

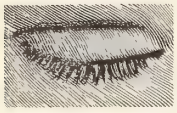
1 STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY! Yet is absolutely safe. Can't irritate normal skin. "DEW" protects you, protects your clothes.

2 CHECKS PERSPIRATION! Keeps you socially secure 24 hours a day.

3 CONTAINS RETSELANE!® Only "DEW" can use this amazing new ingredient.

4 SAVES MONEY! Year's supply only 98¢ plus tax—less than 2¢ a week!

5 DAINTIER THAN CREAMS! Not messy. Never touches hands, nails. Dries quickly. Men, too, like "DEW".



6 MAGICAL SPRAY BOTTLE! Unbreakable, squeezable.

Replacement or Refund of Money Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping If Not As Advertised Therein

WHEN YOU "DEW" YOU DON'T OFFEND

SAFE EYE-GENE

EYE-OPENING TEST THRILLS MANY!

Eyes so tired you want to close them for relief? . . . Clear, expressive eyes are fascinating. 2 drops of soothing EYE-GENE in each eye floats away that tired, strained, irritated look and feeling in seconds—dramatically lights up your whole expression! Safe EYE-GENE is like a tonic for your eyes. Use it every day. 25c, 60c, $1 in handy eye-dropper bottles at Druggists.

2 drops make this striking difference in SECONDS!

Replacement or Refund of Money Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping If Not As Advertised Therein

She turned to Dick. "Hello, darling," she cooed.

A surprised look crossed her face. "Oh—I'm sorry. I thought you were someone I knew."

End of skit.

Sherlock Holmes Lawrence was deep in thought. "Something that shouldn't have happened," she concluded. Her face brightened. "Mistake?"

She was getting closer. Then she did it—spilled a spot of coffee on her skirt. "That's it," screamed Anne.

"It was an—an—well, what was it?" coaxed Piper.

"Gosh, it was an accident," Barbara said patiently. Came the dawn.

Tony, the perfect date, was very tactful. "Our reputation is being ruined," he suggested. "Let's go back to charades!"

Which they did. Lawrence and Curtis, Inc., went into a huddle. "Figure this one out," they challenged.

They escorted Dick to the piano; switched the lights off, then on again; and, while Dick played, began a jitterbug routine. Of course, the title was Dancing In The Dark, but nobody, least of all me, wanted to put a stop to the floorshow by guessing it. When it ended, Anne had still another idea. "How about some refreshments," she ventured—and almost got trampled in the rush to the table.

We were all rushing through the hall when the doorbell rang. It was Douglas—and what perfect timing! He hadn't found the prowler, and had decided to console himself with a sandwich or 10—which he had with him. You've never seen such a table. It was all but sagging from the weight of the food. I'm sure there was enough material for 20 Dagwoods.

Between bites, came conversation. Piper took a lot of teasing. That day a news story had broken which claimed she'd been kissed some 549 times during screen tests to find a leading man for her first picture, Louisa. So Jerome kept wondering out loud if she'd like to play a game of post office. Piper declined, with thanks. "Now look," said Jerome. "Just because I'm The Palomino—I'm not a horse!"

Peggy and Anne got together in a discussion of long-lost mutual ambitions. At one time, they'd both wanted to become doctors. Peggy has a Bachelor of Science degree from Northwestern. And Anne was a pre-med student before she decided to became an actress.

I'm not much for medical terms, so I joined the group listening to Douglas Dick explain his beard. Seems he grew it to relieve the "between pictures" monotony. And presto, he found himself with a part on a television show—a t.v. producer spotted him sporting the whiskers and invited him to his office for an interview. "I need just your be-whiskered type for a role," Doug was told.

I looked around for Barbara and Tony. They were busy working out another charade. "Here's one you'll never guess."

"Oh, no!" said Peggy. "I've got an early call at the studio—and I need some sleep."

She and Dick started for the door. A half hour and six charades later, they made it.

The rest of us sat around watching Jerome and Tony do vaudeville routines, and having hysterics.

I was still laughing when I got back to the apartment. My roommate was up. "You don't look at all soaked in champagne," she commented.

"I'll take coffee and charades anytime," I said. And I was beaming—because at last I'd been to a Hollywood party and it was like I'd never left home! THE END break the bank

by bert parks

a modern screen quiz

Bert Parks, the bright young m.c. of radio's Break the Bank quiz show—which comes over the NBC network every Wednesday night at nine o'clock, Eastern Standard time—has dreamed up these special questions about movies and movie stars for MODERN SCREEN readers. Test your movie knowledge with these brain teasers.

(Answers are on page 99)

1. What actress won an Academy Award in 1948 without speaking a word in her winning role?
2. What MGM feminine star used to work in Billy Rose's Aquacade?
3. What famous Hollywood celebrity has been a pearl fisherman, a boxer, and is still a "great lover?"
4. What anti-war movie won an Academy Award in 1929?
5. What movie was based upon an epic novel of the South? (Clark Gable starred in this one.)
6. What son of the actor who was known as "The Great Profile" made his screen debut recently in The Sundowners?

for girls only—by liz scott

(Continued from page 33) were terrible."

He couldn't have shaken me more if he'd thrown a glass of ice water in my face. I stood staring at him a moment in hurt disbelief—then tore into what I like to think of as one of the greatest unwritten scenes in the history of the theater.

"Why, you self-appointed poor man's George Jean Nathan!" I shrieked. "How dare you tell me I was terrible? You heard that applause, didn't you? What did you think it was for—your last Broadway flop? Why, you're so prejudiced, blind and stubborn you wouldn't admit a woman was good in a part if—if—if your own mother were playing herself in the story of your life! Maybe you think we should all go back to the kitchen! You're no friend or critic—you're an insulting snob!"

My friend bowed stiffly in my direction. "My opinion," he returned coolly, "remains unchanged. You've proved I was right. You were Sadie Thompson on stage. Now you're playing her off-stage." And he turned on his heel and left the room.

I stood there trembling with rage and let him walk right out of my life—simply because I had neither the intelligence nor the courage to take his sincere criticism.

Looking back on it now, I realize that scene was something I needed in order to grow—but the memory of it shamed and hurt me for months.

Later on, when I'd been on the screen about a year and a half, another man I liked and respected, a reporter, ambled onto the set. He waited for the assistant director to call lunch, and then he ushered me into my dressing room.

a dressing-down . . .

"Scott," he said sternly, "sit down."

I could tell by the look in his eye that he had something stern to tell me. "I'll take it standing up," I said.

"I've been hearing stories about you, kid," he said. "And I don't care for them at all. I think it's time somebody who likes you wised you up."

"Oh?" I said—and sat down.

"You're a very warm, friendly girl, Scott," he went on, "but you're alienating people by being so outspoken. I know that frankness is part of your nature—and I wouldn't have you change that part at all. But, for Pete's sake, I wish you'd put a bit in your teeth to keep from blurting out the first thought in your mind. Learn to think a situation through before you open your mouth—before you ever form an opinion!

"When——— (he named an important female star) snubbed you on the lot the other day, you took it like a slap in the face. But did you stop to think why she snubbed you? Scott, I found out she'd just filed suit for divorce against her husband that morning. She wasn't snubbing you—she was too emotionally upset to even see you!

"I'm going to hammer this idea into your head," he went on, "so you won't be hurt by the things people do to you—and so that you won't hurt them: Always remember there's a reason behind everything anyone says or does to you—a reason that usually has nothing to do with you as an individual.

"You know, you have to be like a prizefighter," he continued earnestly. "I don't mean you have to approach everyone as a potential enemy. But just watch a boxer's technique. He doesn't come out of his corner swinging—he sizes up his opponent first. That's what you have to learn to do. In your dealings with the people you work with, you must take their different personalities into consideration. You can't

ARE YOU A MODERN MOTHER in whom your daughter can confide?

There's a womanly offense greater than bad breath or body odor

Isn't it a comfort for a modern mother to help her daughter shake off old fears and inhibitions—to discuss openly the intimate facts of life she should know? A modern mother will explain to her grown-up daughter that there's just as much need for her to put ZONITE in her fountain syringe for hygiene (internal cleanliness), for her health, charm and after her periods, as there is for an older, married woman. A mother will certainly warn about a very common odor which her daughter herself may not detect but is often so apparent to people around her.

And what an assurance to know that no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested for this purpose is so powerful yet safe to tissues as ZONITE!

Principle Developed By A Famous Surgeon and Scientist

Doctors know that much unhappiness can be traced to women using dangerous products, overstrong solutions of which can gradually cause serious damage. On the other hand, what woman wants to depend on weak, homemade solutions? Here's why ZONITE is such a modern miracle yet so inexpensive to use!

ZONITE is powerfully germicidal, deodorizing—so very effective yet absolutely safe to tissues. Non-poisonous, non-irritating. You can use ZONITE as often as you want—without injury.

Gives BOTH Internal and External Hygienic Protection

ZONITE deodorizes not by just 'masking'—it actually destroys, dissolves and removes odor-causing waste substances. ZONITE has such a soothing effect and promptly relieves itching and irritation if present. ZONITE gives daily external hygienic protection, too, leaving you with such a dainty, wholesome feeling. Buy amazing antiseptic-germicidal ZONITE today at any drugstore.

NO OTHER TYPE LIQUID ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE TESTED FOR THE DOUCHE IS SO POWERFUL YET SAFE TO TISSUES

© 1950 Z.P.C.

Zonite
FOR NEWER feminine hygiene

FREE! NEW!

For amazing enlightening NEW Booklet containing frank discussion of intimate physical facts, recently published—mail this coupon to Zonite Products Corp., Dept. MR-50, 100 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.*

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____

*Offer good only in the U. S.

have a
"party hair-do"
all day long

with Gayla
HOLD·BOB
bobby pins

With every hair in place you are glamorous no matter what you do. Gayla HOLD-BOB bobby pins set curls beautifully—keep hair-dos lovely—easy to open—hold better. There is no finer bobby pin.

More women use Gayla HOLD·BOB than all other bobby pins combined

GAYLORD PRODUCTS, INCORPORATED
© 1950 G. P. I. *T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. CHICAGO, ILL.

treat everyone the same way!"

That's probably the most important lesson in human relations I ever had. That dressing-down from my reportorial "Dutch uncle" made a much happier, better-adjusted girl out of me.

My first picture had been released only a few weeks when another man, a perfect stranger, gave my morale a large boost and convinced me for all time that individuality is a girl's most valuable personality trait.

Lunching alone at a Hollywood restaurant one day, I suddenly remembered an important call I'd neglected to make earlier. There was no booth, so I used the telephone at the cashier's desk and stood with my back to the room. As I was about to put down the receiver, a man behind me said in puzzlement—"I know I've heard that voice somewhere before!"

I could have kissed him!

If my voice was the quality that made me so different from everyone else that he remembered it after my only screen appearance, then I was glad I'd made a pet of the frog in my throat!

Until I went to the Alvienne School of the Theater in New York, I never even realized I had a quality that could be classed as "individual." It wasn't until my third day in dramatics that one of the boys sitting near me turned and said, "I hope you don't mind my saying so—but I've never heard such a husky contralto before."

the golden gift . . .

There it was. It may seem strange to you that I hadn't been aware of my voice before that, but few people have the knack of hearing themselves as others hear them.

I'd been criticized before for a tendency to take on the qualities of people I associated with, for coming up from time to time with their inflections and mannerisms. Now I guarded my new-found individuality with loving care.

It was a real chore for a girl like me, with such a "quick ear," to keep the frog in my throat uninfluenced by my classmates' more highly-pitched voices; but I'm glad I took the time and trouble to develop, as I then did, that one characteristic that was peculiarly "me."

Nowadays, too many girls seem to be cut from one pattern. I'd much rather be identified as the girl with "the voice," "the look," or "the legs," than just as—"Oh, you know the one, the third secretary from the left as you enter the office."

One of the major studios recently was casting for an important film, and a close friend of mine showed up for an interview for a supporting role. She was one of six possibilities. The producer, a man well-known in film circles for his frankness, finally selected one of them for the part, and dismissed the other girls—including my friend. She was crushed but stayed behind long enough to ask the producer why he hadn't liked her test.

"Oh, I thought your test was splendid," he told her. "But, frankly, I thought you looked too much like every other young starlet in town. This part calls for individuality." . . .

I wasn't born with a silver-plated script in my hand; I've had to work hard to achieve any small bit of success. So I'm afraid that during a great deal of my Hollywood existence, I've taken myself much too seriously.

One of the nicest guys I've ever met, Victor Mature, is just the opposite; he takes nothing—and no one—seriously at all. And Vic is the man who taught me the most valuable lesson I've ever learned.

We made Easy Living together last year, and Vic seemingly dedicated himself to breaking me up before we did our scenes together. It was fun at first. But I've never been what they call a "quick study." I pore over the script for hours, and work like a horse to get and sustain a required mood. So Vic's jokes were my undoing.

He can hurl himself into any emotion on a moment's notice, and his off-screen levity didn't throw his scenes off-key at all. But I had to beg off. I asked him nicely, sweetly, politely, if he would desist. "Hold your gags until after our scenes," I begged.

He did. For a couple of days. I was congratulating myself on having disciplined the undisciplinable Mr. Mature when, just before a tender and emotional love scene, he pulled another uproarious gag out of his personal joke book. He broke me up completely. But it wasn't until after the fifth take that anything was said.

Director Jacques Tourneur spoke up. "Liz," he said quietly but with great meaning, "you're not getting the feel of this scene at all. Put a little more tenderness into it—now, we'll try it again."

Then I had my say! I told Vic just what I thought of him. "You've made me look like a fool," I wound up, "just for laughs!"

Victor, Mr. Tourneur and I parted coolly at six o'clock.

The next morning, after a very chilly day of shooting, I joined them and the rest of the cast in the projection room to view the previous day's scenes. It was painful to watch all five takes of that one, agonizingly awful scene. The fifth take was even worse than the first.

Then I sat up, puzzled, as a huge head close-up of me flashed on the screen. It took me a couple of seconds to realize what was happening—even after the rest of the "audience" began whooping with laughter. Then, I had to throw my head back and howl right along with them. For there on the screen, blown up out of all proportion, was Lizabeth Scott, screen star, being outraged and hurt and—worst of all—just too righteous for words!

While Victor and Jacques, those maniacal master minds, had maneuvered me into making a darned fool of myself, the cameraman had gleefully kept on grinding!

And, believe me, if you ever want to see what a silly and pompous ass you can be, have someone blow up your angry face twenty times larger than life and make you look at it! If you don't learn from that to laugh at yourself, you're a lost cause.

In one way, a job in Hollywood is like a job anywhere—it takes a sense of humor to get you over the rough spots. And when that humor can be refined to the point where you can laugh loud and lustily at yourself and your failings, then no problem can ever get too tough to beat.

I'm grateful to the man who taught me that—as I am to the men in my life who've otherwise contributed to the education of Lizabeth Scott. And believe me—I'm still an eager student! THE END

"You can't possibly be any more curious about how it all ends than I am . . . I wrote the book."

colleen's flight from hollywood

(Continued from page 24) came to her in the form of a simple realization: She could not go any further working for Christ—or at least it would be difficult—without more training. She wanted to be more effective when she visited missions and jail camps, when she accompanied other workers in special deputations to churches all around Los Angeles. When those she sought to convert asked questions, she wanted to be able to answer them without having to turn to others to help her. And more than anything else, this was the work she wanted to do.

"Why?" asked a friend. "You've been in pictures only three years, you're just getting recognized. Isn't it exciting enough? Don't you like it?"

"I do," replied Colleen. "I love acting. But I find it just as exciting, and much more satisfying, to talk to a person about his life and the way he can come to God. It is more real than acting; it is truth itself."

Colleen has a saying which most of her friends have heard her quote: "You don't know what your future holds, but you know the One who holds your future." And so, as she reports it, "I began to discuss my problem with Him Whom I reach through prayer."

When her decision was made, the first person she told about it was her mother, Mrs. Stella Wilhelm. Her mother had made no comment at all up to that time, although she had long surmised what was in Colleen's mind—or, more accurately perhaps, what was in her heart. Mrs. Wilhelm had known because, ever since Colleen had taken on active church work when she left Brigham Young University for a studio contract, her love for it had been apparent. Also, though Colleen began making a lot of money, she didn't change her mode of life in any manner, and indulged in no extravagances. Save for buying a car to get her around, she lived exactly as before and banked her money. It is this money that is going to pay for the completion of Colleen's college course, majoring in Church doctrines and religious philosophy.

her own choice . .

"I'm glad," her mother said to Colleen when told of her plan. "I didn't want to confuse you by saying anything beforehand."

Colleen's step-father, James Wilhelm, who operates a filling station in Beverly Hills, smiled his acceptance of her decision. Colleen, who calls him "Jimbo" (he calls her "Cokey," as do all her friends), thinks he is the easiest-going man she has ever known in her life. He has treated her as his own daughter ever since he married her mother, but without presuming to impart any parental advice—implying in this manner a respect for her judgment that Colleen feels has done wonders for her.

There was one more person who would be importantly affected by what Colleen had chosen to do—her agent, Mel Shauer. He had labored long to help her to get to prominence in Hollywood, and now, just as they were both succeeding, she was going to quit. But there were no cries of pain from him.

"How could I say anything?" he has commented. "There never was a client like Colleen. Never a complaint from her about the parts I got her—she took whatever I did with a grateful smile. She set me an example I'm glad to follow now. With me, her personal happiness comes before her career."

As soon as Colleen told him what was on her mind, he accompanied her to the

It's the waving lotion that makes all the difference in home permanents

Kit $2.75
Refills $2.00 and $1.50
(PRICES PLUS TAX)

Scientific tests* show Richard Hudnut Creme Waving Lotion (containing 22% more of the effective ingredient) leaves hair springier and stronger...less apt to break...than most other home permanent waving lotions. And what this means to you is a smoother, prettier, longer-lasting wave with more natural-looking curls that spring right back after combing...no frizzy ends, more natural sheen. Regardless of what type curlers you use, make sure your next home permanent is a Richard Hudnut with the waving lotion that makes all the difference.

From the Fifth Avenue Salon

Richard Hudnut

NEW IMPROVED

Home Permanent

with the waving lotion that leaves your hair springier and stronger...less apt to break

*Tests made by a leading nationally known independent research laboratory. Name on request.

PLASTIC
TAMP-CASE

Designed to carry 2 Meds tampons

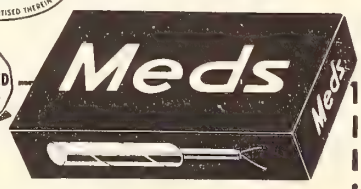
REGULARLY 39¢

NOW ONLY 15¢
plus Meds box top

How often has your handbag opened and the contents spilled out?

AVOID EMBARRASSMENT

Use this Tamp-Case! It can't snap open and spill your tampons. It's smart, compact; fits easily into almost any handbag. It's attractive! Choice of three accessory colors.



Tamp-Case offer expires July 31.

Meds...The Modess tampon

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Send for your Meds Tamp-Case Today!

TESTED AND COMMENDED BY PARENTS' MAGAZINE

Miss Olive Crenning
Personal Products Corp., Dept. MS-5
Milltown, New Jersey

I enclose 15¢ plus Meds box top for a Plastic Tamp-Case. (Check color desired) Ivory ( ), Red ( ), Black ( ). Please print plainly.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____

State_____

20th Century-Fox office and made arrangements for her to step out of her contract.

These were the people to whom she went. There were many who came to her, or wrote. Dan Dailey looked her up in the studio when he heard about it. "I'm sorry because I thought we were going to make another picture together," he said. "But I'm glad you're going to do what you want."

Kay Kyser wrote her immediately, wishing her the happiness he knew would be hers in her new work. Lew Ayres had to phone right away and tell her that there was no more important side to life than the spiritual. Jane Russell, one of her best friends, said again what she's always told Colleen many times before, "If it's right for you—it's right." And Portia Nelson, who sings sophisticated songs in night clubs, wanted to know if Colleen had a good Bible. Colleen did—but Portia expressed her sentiments by giving her another one, big and leather-bound.

There was another man who made it his business to come and see her—the head of one of the largest chains of department stores in the country. He offered financial help in any religious or welfare work Colleen would like to start. "You go ahead with it," he said. "I'll back you."

It was something to think about . . . but she decided against it because it meant either postponing or foregoing the education she felt she needed to best prepare herself for her work. And since it was this feeling that had originally led to her decision, she thought it wrong to deviate from her plans now. She prayed quickly for confirmation and got it.

"Thank you," she replied to the department-store man. "I don't know enough about what is needed to be able to accept such an offer now. When I do, I will come to you."

Colleen's praying is, as she puts it, a sort of "talking to God." She actually talks—as if putting a question to someone she is with. She may pray for quite ordinary things—and do it simply and without stopping whatever activity she is engaged in at the moment. She will quickly pray if someone asks her to—and her ready, guileless compliance usually silences anyone who is tastelessly trying to kid her about it.

voice from within . . .

When Colleen prays, or "talks," she hears no answering voice in her ears—but she does feel a Presence and senses an answer. Many people argue with themselves and are aware of inner promptings. Such promptings are what she receives, but with them a conviction that they come from Him

One night, while still working on When Willie Comes Marching Home, Colleen attended a prayer meeting in Westwood. Leaving late, she was driving home fast on Sunset Boulevard, because she had an early picture call at the studio, when something urged her to slow down. She obeyed and as soon as her speed abated a tire went flat. As she came to a stop, a cab driver ran across the street to her and offered to fix the tire. Nearby stood a little old man waiting for a bus.

The tire was soon fixed. Colleen paid the driver and started off again. Almost immediately she seemed to sense the Presence and became conscious of a prompting to go back and "witness" to the cab driver and the old man—to tell them what Christ had done for her in warning her to slow down and to ask them if she could not help them to accept Him.

"Oh, no!" she replied, talking aloud. "I'm late and I have to get up early. And besides, I hate to go up to strangers and talk like that. How absurd I would look!"

But the feeling that she should return persisted and there was no denying it. Colleen turned her car around and drove back. Just as she approached the same corner, the cab driver jumped in his cab and drove away. Before Colleen had brought her car to a stop, the bus came along and the little old man had hopped on in.

In that moment the parable of Abraham, whom God directed to sacrifice his only son, Isaac, came to her mind. Abraham desisted at first, then finally climbed the mountain with Isaac. But no sacrifice was necessary. God was only trying him out. God—as Colleen interpreted this minor experience of hers—had only been trying her out.

Colleen readily admits that often she seemingly prays in vain. Nothing happens, a problem is not solved. "But through having to face the problem I get strength," she points out. "I may have been lacking in something, and this way I get it. Whatever it is—strength, faith, love—I get it. It is the long-range benefit of prayer."

final fling . . .

Her last picture at 20th Century-Fox, When Willie Comes Marching Home, will not be the last picture in Colleen's career. This summer, while waiting for the beginning of the fall semester at college, she will work as an independent star in several religious pictures, one of them for the Protestant Film Commission. She may even take a theatrical role if it can be over by school time. But after that, the acting days of the blue-eyed, dark-haired beauty, who had only to walk along a downtown Los Angeles street as a 15-year-old girl to be discovered by the show world, will be over.

It was a talent scout for a television station who first brought Colleen to professional attention. But the world in which she was really interested, the spiritual world, needed no talent scout, no special emissary, to win her over. The call came from within her, she knows not how exactly, and has grown stronger over the past few years.

Her mother was a churchgoer but not what is known as a strong or ardent one—still isn't, in fact. There was no special religious background to Colleen's life, no relatives in the ministry or in mission work. As one friend has commented, "She directed her own footsteps towards Christ to begin with—and has kept them headed that way by herself ever since."

Colleen says definitely she will not become a minister when she finishes her course in religious instruction; rather she feels she will turn to Christian education or mission work among the underprivileged—mainly the young. She is quite sure she will marry—"and raise a large family"—and she is very sure the man she marries will be a militant follower of Christ.

"The Lord guides my affections and desires," she says. "He won't let me fall in love with anyone who would place anything else before the church. He will pick the boy for me, I know."

The boys who call Colleen now, and those who take her out, find her a pleasant and entertaining companion—but also a girl for whom night clubs and drinking parties have no attraction. Often when someone calls for a date Colleen will reply that she is on her way to a church meeting—as she generally is. Hollywood being the way it is, this generally stumps the boys. One lad replied, "Well, I won't go along, but when you get to run your own Sunday School I'll certainly send my children."

Colleen thanked him. She really liked the idea. THE END

heartbreak for sinatra?

(Continued from page 27) may have heard to the contrary, Frank's primary interest in life is to make his family happy. When Nancy told him she'd be happier with a separation, he agreed to try it. There would be a simple joint announcement to the effect that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sinatra "have mutually decided to separate for a brief period until such time as they can work out a satisfactory solution to their marital problems."

What happened instead is typical of Hollywood. Nancy went to her lawyer, Arnold Grant. Mr. Grant got in touch with a press agent named Arthur Jacobs. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Jacobs distributed to the press the following statement, purportedly from Nancy: "Unfortunately, my married life with Frank has become most unhappy. We have therefore separated. I have requested my attorney, Arnold M. Grant of the firm of Weisman, Grant and Jaffe, to attempt to work out a property settlement. I do not contemplate divorce proceedings in the foreseeable future."

When reporters then beseiged Frank for a statement, this supposedly emotional firebrand was his usual calm self. "After 11 years of marriage," he muttered, "all I can say is that it's a shame we have to part."

That's all he said—but in that sentence he covered his entire marital life.

A girl reporter who'd been present came out with a remark that gave much food for thought. "In 11 years," she said, "Frank worked his way up from a $15-a-week job to a point where he could give his wife three beautiful homes, cars, furs, swimming pools, three fine kids and all the help and money she wants—and she's unhappy. I wish I were that unhappy."

he could've been a bum . . .

Nancy Sinatra is a fine, sweet girl and a wonderful mother, but friends who know her well have declared over and over that she has never quite understood the miracle of Frank Sinatra. And the miracle is that today this man is a successful and popular actor, an all-time-great singer in the field of popular songs, a man of wealth and position; whereas by background and environment, Frank Sinatra well might have been a criminal, a hoodlum.

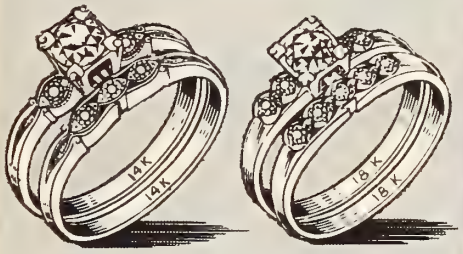
The fact that he isn't is a tribute to his character, his will power, his instinct to do good, and his unshakable integrity. That's pretty high-sounding. But here's the proof.

Frank was raised in Hoboken, New Jersay. The street was a slum. The tenement in which he lived was one of the slummiest. He lived with his parents, Italian immigrants, in a four-room flat that rented for $14 a month. The only heat came from the kitchen stove. The toilet was a community project out in the hall.

When Frank was 10, one of his sweet refined playmates broke a Coca-Cola bottle across his nose. When he was 11, his skull was creased with a chunk of lead pipe. In order to get spending money, he and his pals used to steal building supplies out of condemned buildings. When he was 12, he stole a bathtub with two other kids—that brought them all of 60 cents.

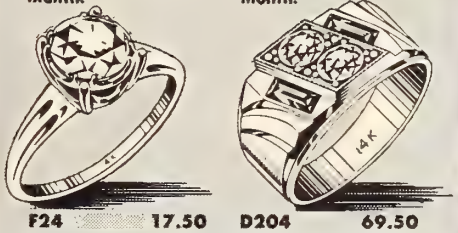
He was raised in a breeding ground for criminals. He used to play hookey from school for 30 days at a time. His father, who worked as a steamfitter in a shipyard, could give him little parental supervision.

Of the kids he played with, one has already been electrocuted for murder, another is doing life for killing his wife, and a third is serving 15 years.



In brief, Frank Sinatra had no advantages. He is a self-made man. Everything he has, he earned—earned by singing his guts out, by getting to the top after years

Send Only $1



WE WILL SEND YOU ANY ITEM YOU CHOOSE FOR APPROVAL UNDER OUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE AT NO EXTRA CHARGE!

Simply indicate your selection on the coupon below and forward it with $1 and a brief note giving your age, occupation, and a few other facts about yourself. We will open an account for you and send your selection to you subject to your examination at no extra charge. If completely satisfied, pay the Expressman the required Down Payment and the balance in easy monthly payments. Otherwise, return your selection and your $1 will be refunded.

A205/C53 59.50
6 Diamond Coupled Bridal Set. 3 Diamond Engagement Ring, 3 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or white Gold. Send $1, pay 4.95 after examination, 5.36 a month.

A413/C201 $100
10 Diamond Coupled Bridal Set. 5 Diamond Engagement Ring, 5 Diamond Wedding Band. 14K yellow or 18K white Gold. Send $1, pay $9 after examination, $9 a month.

F24 17.50
Genuine 2 Carat Zircon of diamond-like brilliance. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay $1 after examination, 1.55 a month.

D204 69.50
Man's Ring. 2 Diamonds, 2 oblong simulated Rubies. 14K yellow Gold. Send $1, pay 5.95 after examination, 6.26 a month.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG

SWEET'S MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Prove to yourself the beauty and unsurpassed value of any article illustrated for 15-day trial under our Money Back Guarantee. If not completely satisfied within 15 days, return it and your money will be refunded immediately.

L. W. Sweet

MAIL ORDER DIVISION FINLAY STRAUS, INC.
25 W. 14th St., NEW YORK 11, N. Y. Dept. D8

SEND $1 WITH COUPON—PAY BALANCE OF DOWN PAYMENT AFTER EXAMINATION

L. W. Sweet, 25 West 14th St. (Dept. D8)
New York 11, N. Y.
Enclosed find $1 deposit. Send me No._____
Price $_____. After examination, I agree to pay $_____ and required balance monthly thereafter until full price is paid, otherwise I'll return selection and you will refund my dollar.
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ STATE_____

Just the thing to ADD fresh COLOR and LUSTRE to your hair after a shampoo or home permanent

For you who do your hair at home, Lovalon is a must. It rinses gorgeous fresh color into your hair. Gives hair sparkling highlights, leaving it attractive, soft and manageable. Blends in yellow, grey streaks. Lovalon comes in 12 flattering shades... has none of the disadvantages of a dye... washes out with each shampoo. 10¢ and 25¢ at toilet goods counters everywhere. Try Lovalon—today.

LOVALON

—the Hair Beauty Rinse

WHEN ASTHMA STRIKES

Here's the easy, proved way to combat asthma's distressing symptoms. The aromatic fumes of Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR help clear up congestion – bring amazing relief. So easy to use, so economical you can't afford to be without it. Powder, cigarette or pipe mixture form – at all drug stores in U. S. and Canada.

use ASTHMADOR

FOR HOME PERMANENTS!

And all your cosmetic uses. Dispenses clean cotton as you need it — special top holds wave lotion. New, practical, inexpensive.

COTTON PICKER ®
Cosmetic and Nursery Cotton

A CURITY Product
BAUER & BLACK
Division of The Kendall Company, Chicago 16

YOU don't need to have Pimples

Just get KLEEREX at druggist and apply this wonderful, soothing, medicated, flesh-colored liquid. Eases sore, raw, itching flesh, hides pimples and blackheads at once and helps make them disappear. Millions praise KLEEREX. You owe it to yourself to try KLEEREX today. Only 49c. If druggist out of stock, rush $1.00 to Kleerex, Inc., Dept. 5-DM, St. Paul 4, Minn. for big Triple Size Bottle

CALLING FOR PRACTICAL NURSES!

EASY TO LEARN AT HOME

Help fill the need for Trained Practical Nurses in your community or travel. Wayne Training Plan, welcomed by doctors, prepares you for experience—at home in spare time. Many earn while learning. NO HIGH SCHOOL NEEDED. Ages 18 to 55 accepted. Nurses Outfit included. Easy payments. Information & sample of lessons Free. Write today.

Excellent Earning Opportunity for Full or Spare Time

Wayne School of Practical Nursing, Inc.,
2525 Sheffield Ave. Desk K-51, Chicago 14, Ill.

BORROW BY MAIL

Quick! $50 to $300

IN THE PRIVACY OF YOUR HOME

Employed men and women. WHEREVER you live, BORROW $50 to $300 BY MAIL. No signers . . strictly confidential! QUICK... EASY... PRIVATE! Send us your name and address and occupation . . . application blank will be sent you immediately in a plain envelope. Repay in convenient monthly payments. WRITE TODAY! Absolutely no obligation.

POSTAL FINANCE CO.
Dept. 32B, SIOUX CITY, IOWA non-slip

CAT'S PAW
Rubber HEELS & Soles
"FINEST MADE"

of being kicked around, insulted, pilloried, rebuffed, but all the time trying, working, singing and sweating.

You don't read about it in his biography, because the studio thinks it's too tough, but when Frank left Demarest High School in Jersey, he went to work in a shipyard as an ironworker's helper. They paid him 40 cents an hour; he weighed 95 pounds, and his job was to carry tools and heavy metal. On several occasions, it was thought he had ruptured himself. Whether he had or hadn't, no one seemed to care.

Then, when he was 16, love came into the barren, dog-eat-dog, slum existence of this thin, bony-faced, unloved and unloving young boy.

His Aunt Jo invited him to her house at Long Branch. In the house across the street from Aunt Jo, there lived a girl named Nancy Barbato. Her father was a contractor.

Frank said "Hi" to this little dark-haired girl one day—the first girl he'd ever known, the first girl he ever met socially—and there came over him a wonderful feeling. "She was the first person I felt I could love," he has told friends.

Frank was married to Nancy Barbato when he was 20. He had no youth. That's the all-important point to remember. He became an adult at the age of 10 when he stole lead pipe to buy himself an ice-cream cone. He met one girl and he married her.

was it a mistake? . . .

Sociologists and marriage experts say this sort of thing is a great mistake. Boys and girls should date frequently before they decide on a life mate. If they don't, the chances are that they will do so after marriage, because they will then feel that marriage has robbed them of companionship and the carefree dating they should have known previously.

But Frank never went to college, and he didn't know sociology. All he knew was that he loved Nancy and wanted her; so wanting her he married her, and not very long after, she gave birth to little Nancy. There was Frank, all of 21, saddled with the responsibility of supporting a family.

There's little point here in going into his fabulous singing career. The one fact to bear in mind, however, is that whatever money he earned went for his wife and children and parents.

First, he bought a house in Hasbrouck Heights, New Jersey; then he bought Nancy a fur coat; then he bought his parents a house and himself a car. When he moved West and began to star in pictures, he bought a handsome home in Toluca Lake. When Nancy got tired of Toluca Lake, he bought another home in Holmby Hills.

Sinatra has always been generous to a fault. You'll read about his escapades in the newspapers, but what newspaper has ever carried the story of Mildred Bailey and Frank?

Never heard of it? Well, Mildred was one of the great singers of popular music. A few years ago, she became desperately ill in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. She lay there, neglected and dying. Frank and songwriter Jimmy Van Heusen had her sent to a hospital and given the best medical care possible. After she recovered, Frank saw to it that she was brought out to California and the mild climate. To date, he's spent more than $5,000 on Mildred.

Ever read a word about it? Never.

There's a little fellow by the name of Frankie Dranda. Used to go to school with Frank in Jersey. Has no folks or anything. Frank brought him out West and put him on his payroll. A few weeks ago, Dranda came down with appendicitis. Sinatra sent him to St. John's Hospital, had his own doctor perform the operation. Cost to Sinatra: $2500.

Several years ago, the high-school kids in Gary, Indiana, went out on strike, stayed away for 30 days. It was a political mess. The Mayor and the Governor called Frank. He gave an anti-prejudice talk. The kids knew he meant it. He'd been the victim of some pretty rotten prejudices himself. Three days later, they returned.

In Banning, California, there's an orphanage, St. Boniface's. It looks after abandoned Mexican and Indian children. It's a poor, out-of-the-way orphanage. Frank learned that the place had no stove. He bought an $1,100 stove from Kalamazoo, the biggest hotel stove he could buy. It was so large, it couldn't fit into the orphanage, so the Brothers got together and staged a huge raffle. The raffle brought in $6,000 and the Orphanage had enough money for several stoves of its own. Every year, Frank sends St. Boniface's about $500 worth of toys. Ever read about that? No.

Frank Sinatra is not the most wonderful, self-effacing person an earth. He's a mortal man like the rest of us. He has his allotment of wild oats to sow, and he's sowed most of them.

But fundamentally, this is a good, kind, charitable guy. Don't let anyone tell you differently. This man's virtues have mostly gone untold. If you look back on the women in his life, you'll find that what attracted him most was the fact that they were in trouble, and he wanted to help.

He became Lana Turner's friend when she was disillusioned, heartbroken, and embittered. He came to her with help and advice and friendship. Hollywood being what it is, the community refused to believe that the relationship was platonic. It was built into a big romance, and the next thing any of us knew—Frank was living apart from Nancy.

But then what happened? Lana got married to Bob Topping. And people never said, "Maybe we were wrong about Frank and Lana." Human nature doesn't work that way. Neither does gossip—those affected and waylaid by it, suffer—those who can recover, go on.

Frank went on. He and Nancy reconciled.

Now, at this writing—it's Ava Gardner. Again, the Grand Romance. Ava is so mixed-up at the moment, it's not even funny. She's afraid of men, afraid of falling in love; afraid that she will suffer what she suffered while in love with Artie Shaw.

And perhaps Nancy has still to understand that this former boy of the streets has a sort of greatness—of which she is part, the inspirational part.

Maybe she'll understand something further—something Frank himself must sadly understand by this time. And this is that the price of eminence in life is heartache—sometimes, indeed, heartbreak.

THE END

I SAW IT HAPPEN

One evening while at the Copacabana in New York, I noticed Dan Dailey sitting a few tables away from me. Nearby I heard a girl say, "Gee, it would make my birthday complete, if I could take a picture with Dan Dailey." Her escort went over and asked Dan Dailey if it might be arranged. He was glad to oblige and posed with her. I never saw a happier person than she.

Olga Havelock
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Most make-ups shout: "Made-up!"— Magic Touch whispers: "Natural beauty"

Replace that heavy "made-up" look with natural-looking loveliness by using Magic Touch. No puff, no sponge.

39c and 1.00 everywhere
6 magic shades

Magic Touch is NEW . . . a tinted cream make-up so sheer your skin glows through! . . . yet it hides each tiny blemish while it smooths and softens and adds glorious color. . . . Apply with fingertips (with or without powder)—so quick, so easy, so naturally lovely!

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED and COLORED IN OILS to size 8 x 10 on double weight paper 89¢

Same price for full length pictures, busts and groups. Your original photo returned with enlargements. Give color of eyes, hair and clothes. Just mail photo, negative or snapshot regardless of size and enclose 89c per picture. Pictures mailed postpaid within 5 days. Satisfaction guaranteed. Payment must accompany order 3 for $2.50

Send your photo NOW.

LEIGH'S Art Studio, Dept. 2
130 West 42nd St. New York 18, N. Y.

ladies Earn UP TO $23 Weekly!

LOVELY DRESS GIVEN TO YOU!

Ladies, here's your chance to earn up to $23 weekly! And besides, take your pick of dozens of gorgeous Spring dresses without a penny of cost. That's what we offer you for representing us in your spare time. Show our popular frocks to your friends, then send us their orders. Collect handsome cash commissions in advance. No canvassing or experience necessary. Get free details of this unusual offer and Portfolio of new styles. Everything furnished FREE. Rush name, address and dress size on postcard. Fashion Frocks, Inc, Desk D5054, Cincinnati 25, Ohio.

THE OAKEN BUCKET

from Jane Powell's Ranch

You'll use this adorable gift forever, and Janie will personally tell you of all the uses that she and her friends have found for it.

Beautifully trimmed in brass, these 3½x5-inch oaken buckets will arrive filled with choice assorted nuts, and will thereafter grace your vanity, living room or patio as a special remembrance from Janie Powell, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star of "Nancy Goes To Rio." Better hurry up and send one dollar plus 25c for postage to Jane Powell's Ranch, Box 238, N. Hollywood 28, Calif.

DO YOU WANT LONGER HAIR?

MAKE THIS EASY 7-DAY TEST!

Just try this SYSTEM on your hair 7 days and see if you are really enjoying the pleasure of ATTRACTIVE HAIR that can so very often capture Love and Romance for you.

MARVELOUS HELP for DRY, BRITTLE, Breaking-Off HAIR

WHEN SCALP and HAIR CONDITIONS are normal and dry, brittle, breaking-off hair can be retarded, it has a chance to get longer . . . and much more beautiful. Amazing. The JUELENE System is not a hair restorative.

SEND NO MONEY—Fully Guaranteed

Just try the JUELENE SYSTEM for 7 days. Then let your mirror PROVE the thrilling results. JUELENE comes in 2 Forms ☐ Pomade ☐ Liquid. SEND FOR IT TODAY! C. O. D. $1.00 plus Government charges. It is fully guar-

POLIO Insurance

EVERYONE CAN AFFORD

Pays UP TO $5,000 for EACH CASE

Covers ONE PERSON or ENTIRE FAMILY!

Only $10 for 2 Years For ENTIRE FAMILY! Husband, Wife and all unmarried children under Age 18, including children born during policy term.

INDIVIDUALS—$5 for 2 Years

No Age limit for adults. Children to age 18.

Pays HOSPITAL BILLS when in Any Hospital; including Board and Room, all service of regular hospital attendants, and any hospital apparatus or medicine used in treatment including X-Rays, Operating room and Physiotherapy.

Pays for IRON LUNG Rental or other similar equipment. Also for necessary braces and crutches and charge made for all drugs and medicines used in treatment of the disease.

Pays DOCTOR BILLS for medical care by any Licensed Physician, Osteopath, Physiotherapist, including Kenny Treatments if available.

Also Pays for NURSE Expenses, AMBULANCE to or from Hospital, and for PLANE or RAILROAD expense of transporting insured to a specially qualified hospital or sanitarium.

IMMEDIATE FIRST DAY COVERAGE

Pays from First Day Poliomyelitis manifests itself and thereafter subject to policy provisions, with benefits for 3 YEARS Treatment. Policy becomes effective on date of issue and continues in force for 2 years.

10 DAY INSPECTION PERIOD

This Low Cost policy is issued by mail for your convenience. If interested, complete "coupon application" below and forward with check or money order. If you are not completely satisfied return policy within 10 days for full refund.

This policy issued by the Service Life Insurance Co. Thousands of policyholders throughout the 48 states, Alaska and Hawaii.

DON'T WAIT! Remember, the cost of polio can quickly run into thousands of dollars. Every family should have this protection NOW!

COUPON APPLICATION

THE SERVICE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
(624A) Service Life Bldg.—Omaha 2, Nebr
APPLICATION FOR POLIO INSURANCE

Please mail me policy as outlined above. If my application is not accepted, I understand my money will be returned. Likewise, if I am not satisfied and return policy within 10 days, I understand a refund in full will be made to me.

Are you applying for ☐ Individual policy and attaching $5.00 for 2 years?

☐ Family Policy and attaching $10.00 for 2 years?

If applying for family policy list names and ages below: If not sufficient space write names on separate paper.

.....

.....

.....

Have you or any member of your family had polio within the last 90 days? Answer.....

Dated....., 1950

Signature of head of family.....

Address.....

City..... Zone..... State.....

Occupation..... Age..... Date of Birth.....

no time for love

(Continued from page 43) won an Academy nomination two seasons later for Mildred Pierce. Since then, Ann's piled up a dozen hit movie jobs. Now, at 21, she finds herself the undisputed queen of Universal-International and one of Hollywood's very best bets for a marathon stardom.

Along that professional path to fame, Ann Blyth has had more than her share of rocky going, including scattered schooling, shattering Hollywood disappointments, a broken back and, in her teens, watching her adored mother die.

She's earned her own living since she was 12. She bought the first house she ever lived in and fixed it over, survived four nasty automobile accidents, traveled 150,000 miles playing scores of benefits for church schools, t.b. camps and veterans' hospitals. She's worked devoutly at her religion and for her church, served energetically as mayor of Toluca Lake, where she lives, and learned to bake terrific but unpredictable blueberry muffins.

About the only thing she hasn't done is fall in love—not once.

And that's why Hollywood just can't figure out Ann Blyth. That's why she's its prettiest picture puzzle on two trim feet, and a curiosity in a place where you see all kinds of strange things ambling around.

nobody's sweetheart now . . .

Annie baffles the most brashly inquisitive community in the world by staying out of love, out of the gossip columns, out of nightclubs, out of easy-come-easy-go engagements and marriage—which in the Hollywood book are what prove you're a grown-up woman of the movie world.

But she hasn't a sweetheart. Yet, if lovely Ann is in love with nobody, you certainly can't twist that one around. For everybody's in love with her. She's the darling of a rugged business which ordinarily shuffles pretty young actresses callously around like so many playing cards.

"Ann has more guardian angels than any girl this side of Heaven," says Bob Cummings, who's on that privileged flying squadron, along with Bing Crosby, Sam Goldwyn, Barry Fitzgerald, Nunnally Johnson, William Powell and practically everyone, great or small, who has ever been exposed to Annie.

"If any Hollywood wolf ever even got fresh with Ann," thinks Dan Duryea, "he'd get run out of town, or maybe murdered!"

Rules, business or otherwise, simply melt the minute they bump up against the warming, disarming Irish miss with the gentle manner and winning ways. When Ann was making Free For All, she fell hard for a helicopter they used in some scenes. The whirligig was parked on a hill overlooking the U-I lot and there were ironclad orders from the studio chiefs: No one at no time for no reason—no sir—was to ride in that buggy. Everyone wanted to, of course—particularly Ann. She has no more guile than a goldfish, but she doesn't need it. To get her ride, Ann simply went up to Jim Pratt, production head, and said, "I'd really like a ride, Mr. Pratt. I really would."

That did it. Next lunch break, Annie was whirling through the skies with the delighted pilot, cruising over the San Fernando Valley and dipping down at her own roof to thrill Aunt Cis and Uncle Pat, with whom she lives. Jim Pratt doesn't know yet how he happened to say yes. "For Ann," he thinks, "it's just different."

The truth is, Ann Blyth is different. She's different, because in a hardboiled, unreal world she's stayed soft yet successful and very, very real. How come?

The reasons are that Ann is dedicated to three faiths: to her faith in herself and her future, to the faith her mother had in her, and to the faith of her church, which is a living part of her every day. She's been that way almost since babyhood.

Ann Marie Kathleen Assumpta Blyth was born in Mount Kisco, New York, on August 16, 1928. She was in a hurry then to get going, as she's been ever since, because she picked four o'clock in the morning to make her entrance and her mother made it to the Westchester hospital in the nick of time.

When Ann was a mere baby, the responsibility of raising the two daughters fell upon her mother, Nan Blyth. It meant she had to toil at tough New York jobs endlessly, doing sewing and laundry and dressing hair. But Dublin-born Nan Lynch wasn't the kind of girl to shirk responsibility.

Nor was she one to overlook any talent a child of hers might have. Right away she saw the talent in Ann—not the prettier of her two daughters, for Dorothy was and still is that—but obviously the one with the golden gift.

"I was a show-off," Ann confesses. "I was always putting on Mother's dresses and singing, dancing or trying out some kind of an act—even before I knew what an act was." These amateur theatricals began in the cramped fourth-floor flat on 49th Street near the East River in New York City that she first remembers as home, and were continued in her next apartment home on 49th near Second Avenue.

Everyone who saw her, including the sisters at St. Patrick's School where she went, thought Ann was one terrific tot. Especially did her mother's sister, Catherine, and her husband, Pat Tobin. It was out on their Mount Kisco farm that Ann spent all her summers and holidays. Aunt Catherine—or "Cis," as she's called—reminded her sister that the Lynches had been Irish story-tellers from away back and that some of the Lynch girls had won national prizes at piping and the Irish dances. Everybody agreed Ann must be an actress—especially Ann. "I wasn't backward about it at all," she says. "I may look it—but my record proves I'm not a shrinking violet."

She certainly wasn't the day she bucked up against 40-odd show-sharp moppets for a kiddie audition on WJZ. Yet, being no smart-alec brat projecting her personality precociously about the room, Ann looked the least likely to succeed. She simply didn't know how to slap on a phony act. (She still doesn't.) She just got up and beamed her Blyth smile and sang a Shirley Temple ditty—"The Codfish Ball," Ann thinks it was—and she got the job. She also got her picture in Billboard, the entertainment-world trade magazine, along

HOW TIME FLIES!

■ Word comes from Olivia de Havilland's studio that she's caught the biggest swordfish of the season on one of her weekly deep-sea fishing jaunts. Imagine landing the biggest fish and Jimmy Stewart in the same season. —April, 1940, Modern Screen with the prediction, "This child will go far."

She had so many singing jobs right after that along Manhattan's radio row that her proud mom knew there was only one thing to do, whether she could afford it or not. She trotted Annie right into Ned Wayburn's famous talent-training school, where pictures of ex-pupils like Eddie Cantor and Fred Astaire beamed from the wall. To pay the fee, she worked twice as hard, and Uncle Pat and Cis helped on the tuition. Those are things Ann doesn't forget now that her mother is gone to her reward, and she's carrying on with Cis and Pat, the dream they all fostered.

At Wayburn's Ann bore down on dancing and singing (she had a contralto then and, now that she's grown up, it's soprano). Before she knew it, she was warbling away in the San Carlos Children's Opera at the Center Theater, the while boning up on dramatics. Soon thereafter she was playing kid dramatic parts on the radio and switching to the Children's Professional School, where she could skip classes for jobs and still carry on her lessons. That's where Fate yanked her one fine day right to a Broadway hit—and a through ticket to Hollywood.

Ann, dressed in a jumper and blouse, was filling up on chop suey in the cafeteria one noon when a teacher tapped her on the shoulder and whispered, "There's a big Broadway producer who'd like to see you." His name was Herman Shumlin, a very big one indeed, and he said he had a new play with a part he'd like Ann to read for him. All he'd done, Ann found out later, was walk in, look around the room and point to Annie pronto.

it's a long road . . .

She had her first dramatic reading, nabbed the part and was off to the races in Watch on the Rhine as Paul Lukas' daughter. It ran 11 months at the Martin Beck on Broadway and nine more on the road, including a command performance in Washington for President Roosevelt at the White House. When Ann's road tour took her to Los Angeles, a Hollywood director named Henry Koster saw her there. Before she left town Ann took a bus out to Universal City, calmly played a monologue from Peg o' My Heart for a Koster test, and hopped the bus back to her hotel. Then the chase began.

By the time Joe Pasternak, Henry Koster and other Universal big wheels got around to viewing Ann's test and picking her for Hollywood with one fast look, Ann was gone. They almost caught her in Arizona, just missed her in Oklahoma, trailed her through Chicago and Detroit and finally caught up with her in Birmingham, Alabama, bedded down with a cold. "I had a sore throat, a red nose and a bark like an airedale," says Ann. "But I got well pretty fast when I saw the contract."

When Ann stepped off the streamliner in Hollywood she was 14 years old and swelled with high hopes and bright promises. She got deflated fairly fast.

First off, there wasn't any place to stay in war-jammed Hollywood and she had to jump between five-day rooms in hotels. Then at the studio, to her dismay, she discovered both Joe Pasternak and Henry Koster had departed U-I for MGM, and the grooming she'd understood she was in for, to take over grown-up Deanna Durbin's girlish place, was out. Pasternak and Koster were the wonder-workers for Deanna, as everyone knows. There wasn't anything for a girl Ann's age left to do. It made her impatient—and when there finally was, it was as a colorless, nice girl in those snappy, gee-whiz, adolescent musicals Donald O'Connor used to make with Peggy Ryan. Ann did three of them, but she wasn't happy—she or her mother

Veto—Colgate's Deodorant—Gives You

DOUBLE PROTECTION!

1. CHECKS PERSPIRATION . . .
Rubs in easily, goes to work at once! Women who know use Veto daily after bathing—to safeguard their daintiness night and day. Yet Veto is mild, gentle for normal skin, safe for clothes.

2. STOPS ODOR INSTANTLY . . .
Veto's scientific formula was perfected by famous Colgate laboratories. Veto works like a charm, is always delightfully smooth and creamy. Doesn't dry out in the jar. Let Veto give you double protection!

Veto Lasts and Lasts From Bath to Bath

TOOTSIE ROLL is the perfect candy to enjoy while at the movies. Long lasting chocolaty TOOTSIE ROLL will add to your movie pleasure.

A bigger, better delicious TOOTSIE ROLL. At your favorite movie theatre or candy counter.

THE SWEETS CO. OF AMERICA, INC. · HOBOKEN, N. J.

Advertisement

Have You Heard?

JOAN LANSING

It's a fact! More women than men listen to mystery shows on the radio . . . which just proves that we girls really know a good thing! But it's no mystery to me that American Broadcasting Company programs lead the ladies' lists of "preferred" spine-tinglers.

Right through the week chills and thrills come thick and fast via your local ABC station with mysteries and adventures sponsored by alert advertisers who know we've a sweet tooth for sleuthing! For instance, on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7:30 PM (ET) DAVID HARDING, chief of the Counter-Spies, keynotes dashing adventures on "COUNTER-SPY," sponsored by Pepsi-Cola.

The mood of mystery is maintained on Wednesdays at 8:30 PM (ET) when MARTIN GABEL recounts amazing tales culled from "THE CASEBOOK OF GREGORY HOOD." Hard on HOOD's heels is my favorite man of mystery fiction, the bard of Baker Street, with "THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES." The great SHERLOCK unlocks the doors to his famous detective domain at 9:00 PM (ET) for Petri Wines.

Friday, of course, is the night of nights for nifty, top-notch shows . . . with three thrillers, interspersed with a half-hour of comedy—our good friends OZZIE AND HARRIET, heard at 9:00 PM (ET). The prize-winning parade leads off with Norwich Pharmacal's "THE FAT MAN," the corpulent contender to the helm of the crime realm. Following the portly private-eye is one of the great radio programs of our time (and not really a "mystery") . . . "THIS IS YOUR F.B.I.," an exciting and authentic dramatization of cases from the official files of the F.B.I. This dynamic documentary is sponsored by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U.S. At 9:30 PM (ET) "THE SHERIFF" winds up mystery-filled Fridays as he pursues hunted hombres relying on modern methods—rather than old-fashioned, shooting-tooting tactics. "THE SHERIFF" is sponsored by the Pacific Coast Borax Company.

Secret missions to far away places make "CHANDU, THE MAGICIAN" stimulating fare at 7:30 PM (ET) on Saturday nights. Yes ma'am, when it comes to suspenseful listening and high adventure, intrigue and romance . . . CHANDU is the man for you—and me!

Off-the-cuff-crime-stuff:

From coast-to-coast the girls all agree
The great mystery shows are on ABC!!

Joan Lansing

either. Their eyes had always been on higher things for the golden gift. And after all, hadn't New York critics tagged Ann Blyth as one of the season's finest young actresses in Watch on the Rhine?

She began to think everyone had forgotten about that until that prize part in Mildred Pierce came her way.

Ann bucked at least a dozen other young stars far better known than she was, but Joan Crawford made Ann's test with her in person and—well, Blyth is tough competition when she's made up her mind. Joan told her after she'd played her trial scenes for that Crawford Academy Award comeback, "I wouldn't bet on who'll come out on top in this one, you or me."

Curiously enough, the part that won Ann her first important Hollywood fame was playing an ungrateful daughter—certainly the opposite to what Ann Blyth was in real life. In fact, the thing she's most thankful for today is that her mother lived to see her sacrifices and devoted faith in her daughter justified, almost crowned with Hollywood's highest honor. She died not long after Mildred Pierce. Not long after, too, Ann had her own tragic crack-up.

Ann was only a few days into Danger Signal (appropriately titled) when she drove up to Snow Valley in the mountains on a day off to show the wonders of California to some visiting New York friends. It was April and the snow was mighty thin. Tobogganning down a mountainside, they slammed into an exposed hunk of granite. The next thing Ann knew, she was lying face down in the snow and it felt as if her legs would never move. They did—enough to carry her to the cabin where her mom was—and even though she could have screamed with pain, she rode in the car down to a San Bernardino doctor. He told her right away what was the matter: She had a broken back.

They kept Ann in a plaster cast for seven months, and in a brace seven more after that. She lost out on Danger Signal, of course, and her extra-picture contract at Warners was canceled. But no one has ever accused Ann Blyth of feeling sorry for herself. While she knew she couldn't act in a cast, she could graduate from high school—and she made up her mind to. Soon as she was propped up in bed, Gladys Hoene, her studio teacher, came out three times a week. Ann worked, and she prayed to get well, and she graduated right along with her class in a wheelchair at University High, with her mom in the audience.

spunk of the irish . . .

Ann's pretty proud of the diploma that hangs on her wall at home today—also the discarded cast, still out in her garage and scribbled with autographs of the hundreds of Hollywood friends who pulled for her to get well. She didn't miss the preview of Mildred Pierce either, although she had to see that triumph lumpily in her cast with the biggest dress she owned—a corduroy jumper—squeezed over it.

That spirit and courage to carry on, no matter what, has never deserted Ann. Her mother was dying when Ann made her comeback, stepping from her back brace right on to the set of Swell Guy. Even though Ann disappeared into her dressing-room between scenes for her tears, she had them dried when she came out to work again, smiling bravely. That loss left Ann all alone at 18 to carry on the high aim her mother had set for her.

Ann hasn't failed her. Through a string of swell performances in Another Part of the Forest, Mr. Peabody and the Mermaid, Top o' the Morning, Once More, My Darling and Our Very Own, she's climbed steadily to the top in a manner that would have made Nan Lynch mighty proud of her girl. She'd be just as proud, too, of the spunky way Ann has met her disappointments. But more than of Ann's movie maturity, she'd be proud of the widely-respected, worthwhile young woman her daughter has made of herself in the confusing world of Hollywood—without guidance in the years when a girl needs a mother most.

Of course, Ann has had Uncle Pat and Aunt Cis, who came out from New York before Mrs. Blyth died to make a home for Ann. They live with her today in the little white house out in the Valley with shamrocks cut on the entrance gate. "It's the first home I've ever had," says Ann wistfully, which explains why she loves it so much. She found it herself, drably decorated inside, and covered with gloomy vines, but it had "possibilities"—and the price was right. Ann sewed the draperies, pitched in on the painting, papering and general brightening-up. Today it's cozy and warm with all the family things from Ireland that Pat and Cis have hoarded along with sentimental Ann's personal treasures—Christmas cards stacked high from seasons past, all her play-scripts and movie-scripts, the jumper she wore when Herman Shumlin spied her, programs of her kiddie radio and opera shows, and the Watch on the Rhine scrapbook—of course. Even her sturdy cast, back brace and the bone sliver out of her baby arm! "I'm a pack rat," explains Ann. "I'd like to save everything that ever meant anything to my life, and I almost have." the power of prayer . . .

On her wrist she still wears the watch Uncle Pat gave her when she graduated from high school. And always around her neck is her guardian holy medal. The only time it came off was when Ann crashed on her toboggan ride. Even then as she dropped her numbed hand into the snow, it touched the medal, and she clutched it to her and prayed. She's sure that's what kept her from being crippled or worse.

Ann's faith in her religion is a working faith. No girl in Hollywood pitches more than Ann for charities and causes. The Producers' Association calls her, "Hollywood's Number One Good Will Girl." Not long ago the Mayor of Vallejo, a Northern California city where she'd gone to help put over a Navy Day rally, told Ann, "If you are a representative of Hollywood, Miss Blyth, they've got a mighty fine city down there!" That's the impression Annie makes wherever she goes, working hard and giving of herself unstintingly.

She's Father Pat Peyton's ace-in-the-hole for radio's Family Theater, on which she's played, free of course, more than any other star in town. In fact, it was pinch-hitting on that religious radio show one night, when another actress was sick, that Ann met Bing Crosby and Bing fell for both her voice and her wonderful face. The next day he called to ask if she'd consider playing his leading lady in Top o' the Morning—so Ann knows that, as the variation on the Biblical saying has it, the bread she casts on the waters comes back buttered.

But that's not why Ann does it. Her real reward is knowing she's helping others as hard-pressed as she and her mother once were. Her only regret is that "there's not enough of me to help more." She's convinced there's an obligation tacked to her fame.

Even when Ann got appointed honorary mayor of Toluca Lake—ordinarily one of those semi-joke jobs which lots of stars have had—she took it dead seriously and did something about it. Mayor Annie started a campaign to beautify Toluca's streets, organized a get-together for business men of surrounding Valley communities, started a get-acquainted movement for Toluca citizens and promoted a community square dance, roping off the streets and enlisting every movie star for miles around, including busy Bob Hope, to put over the festivity. When she walks down the streets of her home town now and the kids yell, "Hi Mayor," they mean it. What was once purely a publicity honor, Ann made a real office.

That's typical of Ann Blyth and everything she touches. The golden gift in Annie's case is more than a talent for playing parts. She's brought it right into her private life. And maybe that's why she hasn't time for heart affairs and Hollywood romance. She's too busy making good the promises she vowed to herself, to her mother's memory and to her religion. She's too urgently anxious to be someone important to herself and to the thousands of people her fortunate fame can help. She's convinced none of this could have happened but for Something beyond the power of just one little girl, and she's determined to repay in kind and in kindness.

Since having her own home, Anne's learned to sew and knit and cook and she has Aunt Cis teaching her all the family recipes, especially puddings and desserts and her favorite blueberry muffins. She's saving her money thriftily, drives a small car (which gets smashed up fairly often because she's the worst or the unluckiest driver on wheels), and is socking her savings away regularly to give herself, Aunt Cis and Pat a trip to Ireland.

Ann does hope to fall in love someday, get married and have kids. But right now Ann's escorts around town are all on a strictly friendship basis. Boys like Roddy McDowall, Dick Long and Lon McCallister take her out most often, and half the time she calls to ask them to beau her to this and that, with no shy feelings whatsoever because, in her friendship with them, there's nary a heart flutter. She loves to get dressed, with French perfume and gold jewelry, and go dancing—the Cocoanut Grove's her favorite in Hollywood—but she doesn't smoke or drink. She had her first sip of champagne last August on her 21st birthday.

